The Farmers' Exchange, and Agricultural Warehouse,
AT MATAWAN.

is acknowledged now, by all parties, to be the place for the citizens of Monmouth and Middlesex counties to spend their money, and get an equivalent for the same. In addition to the former extensive department of Farmers' and Housekeepers' Supplies,
THE LARGEST STOCK OF

CROCKERY

In the county has recently been added.
The LADIES are especially invited to call and examine the same, without money and without price. Persons about commencing housekeeping, can purchase their CROCKERY, and many other articles both useful and ornamental, on much better terms and prices than at other places, where, from their extensive showing and mammoth advertisements, the public are led to believe that a large business is done. All kinds of reliable

FERTILIZERS, SEEDS AND IMPLEMENTS, constantly kept, in full assortment. We shall continue to furnish the people, as heretofore, with COAL, AT FAIR PRICES,

regardless of all strikes and high prices at the mines. In fact, the better business done at this establishment shall be conducted on the principle,
"LIVE AND LET LIVE."

How Sambo "Bun-blee" and Noo?"

The partiality of the deity for the cool is proverbial. At noonday, with the sun rays shining down on his bare head, the mosquito singing around him, and the fire making amorous dalliance with his nose and lips, he sleeps and dreams. One old darkey, in the Fourth District of New Orleans, has daily, for some months past, collected the door-step of prominent residents for his noon-day nap. Being driven off one day he comes the next. With his head thrown back and his mouth wide open, he swears away to the exceeding discomfort of the inmates. Called to the door by the novel diapason, a few days since, the lady of the house concluded she would try an experiment. For this purpose she prepared a small piece of ice and dropped it into the huge orifice that served as Sambo's mouth. It disappeared like a shot, and with a cough and a snort Sambo started to his feet.
"Ugh!" he grunted, as the ice went violent thrills through his stomach. "What die?" and his fingers clutched nervously the afflicted parts.

Just then some one in the house cried out that a big cat had been seen. "Well, Sam!" he roared. "The cat-a-come to his pain. He rolled on the banquet and called lustily for help."

"How 'bout, miss, he's growin' out 'me. I feels him. Oh, golly, he's killin' me!" and the whites of the darkey's protruding eyes, like hammers, and the convulsed and anguished face, showed that real pain was strongly enhanced by his imaginary terror. "Oh, golly, how he do jump, and tick about!" and Sambo again gave himself up to a paroxysm of lamentation.

"Drink warm water, Uncle Sam, and drown him," the lady suggested.

Without a moment's hesitation Sam started for the water-plug. He turned on the crank and the water started. Sam glued his lips to the nozzle until his sides were puffed out like an inflated balloon.

"How do you feel now, Uncle Sam?" the lady inquired, as Sam staggered back to his feet.

"I guess he's drowned, miss; but here's what's trouble'n' de child; how'd dat rat gwine to git out'n' dere?"—Phrenological Journal.

Two Yankees strolling in the woods, without any arms in their possession, observed a bear climbing a tree, with its claws clasped around the trunk. One of them ran forward and caught the bear's paws, one in each hand.—He then called out to his comrade "Jonathan, run here and bring me something to kill this varmint, and mind you don't stay, for I'm in a fix."

Jonathan ran off but stayed a long time. During the interval the bear made several desperate attempts to bite the hand of him who held it. At length Jonathan came back.

"Hello! What kept you so long?"

"Well, I'll tell you. When I got home breakfast was ready, so I stayed to eat it."

"Well," said his comrade, "come, now and hold the critter, till I kill it."

Jonathan seized the bear's paws, and held the animal.

"Well, have you got hold of him?"

"I guess I have."

"Very well, then. Hold fast, for I'm off for dinner."

A WASHINGWOMAN who has been suffering from an attack of the tender eyes has poetical allusion to her ill and trials:
Oh, cramp and passion!
I often has 'em,
Naturally, 'em, and 'em,
And remembrance to my Which I rubs in the
With opped-dolly-dish!

How to pass away in a Cold Night.—
 Reader, in winter's storm, and thou in bed, hast ever said: Good gracious! I shall freeze to death, my back, my toes, my nose; and then in great distress by frost, hast tossed? Then let me tell thee how to warm the chilling blood throughout thy form; if thou'st a man, and sleep'st alone, then he it knoweth, that if thou'st old, and feel the cold, or even young, and tender, the way to render a cold night comforting, a hot sing is not the thing; but rub thyself with cloth and flesh—don't think it odd, for I know, it is not so, but gives a glow, from head to toe; then jump between cold feet sheets, thou'lt soon be 'customed to such foets; next roll thyself (in this there's knock) on one side and t'other, till mag thy back fits well the covering; like wings of hen o'er chickens hovering; this, in most cases, keeps one warm, from nine at night till next day's dawn; yet if in comfort you would lie, you should be sure to call and buy, the bedstead on which you would rest, where you may cheaply buy the best; the place which we would recommend, to you my much respected friend, e'er we this prosy rhyme have done, is Martin Bissell and his Son; they'll sell to you at early dawn, from their new store in Matawan.

A WEXFORD editor, complaining that he could not sleep one night summed up the causes: "A Walling babe of sixteen months old, a dog howling under the window, a cat squalling under the alley, a colored serenade in a shanty over the way, a tubbitch, a pig trying to get in at the back-door, and a broken sial in the bedstead. He didn't buy that bedstead of M.

Patrick saw a bull pawing in the field, and thought what fun it would be to jump over, catch him by the horns, and rub his nose in the dirt. The idea was so funny that he lay down and laughed to think of it. The more he thought of it the funnier it seemed, and he determined to do it. He was quickly tossed him over the fence again.
 Somewhat bruised, Patrick leisurely picked himself up, with the consolatory reflection,
 "Well, it's a mighty fine thing I had my laugh first!" That was were the laugh came in; but it wasn't a circumstance when

(From the New Haven Register)
ONLY AN ACTOR.

"For charity shall cover a multitude of sins."
—S. Peter, 4.
Only an actor! let him go—
Bury him 'neath the snow;
"Take him away!" cried the misty seer—
"They may bury him 'round the corner,"
But my church holds too high a position
To bury a man in such low condition.
Dear sir! our church has too much pride
To bury here an actor who died.
He's only made of common clay,
Such deaths are not every day—
"Only an actor!" take him away!"
"Only an actor!" oh! disgrace,
For a minister of a Christian race
To give in his heart such thoughts a place,
Charity! say, but show a part;
Hast thou a place in this worldly heart?
Dost such harsh words come from the heaven
Of the Book of Gods, the guide to Heaven?
Beware, proud man! Ah! and detractor,
He has a soul, tho' "only an actor."

Gen. Lee's Death Caused by Broken Heart.
Dr J. S. H. HANLARR, M. D.

For some time previous to his decease, in October last, Gen. Lee's medical advisers had been painfully impressed with the conviction that depressing moral causes were slowly but steadily undermining his health, in a ratio far exceeding the incursions of mere physical disease. In reference to the remote cause of his death, his physicians affirm that the terrible strain upon him during the momentous campaign of 1863-4, the agony of mind endured at the Appomattox; the wall that went up from widows and orphans all over the desolate and ruined South; the bankrupt condition of his native State; the mute and eloquent woe appealing to him on all sides; were enough, and more than enough, to bow his mighty spirit and to crush out, with fatal tread, the energies of his life.

With regard to the proximate cause of his death, they were of opinion that it was due to "passive congestion of the brain, not proceeding far enough to produce apoplexy or effusion. There was no positive evidence of acute softening of that organ; no paralysis of motion or sensation; but marked debility, from the first. His symptoms, in many respects, resembled concussion, without its attendant syncope; and they pronounced that "Gen Lee died of a broken heart."

Now that this prominent man has passed away, and his acts have become matters of history, it might not be amiss to scan, for a moment, the motives which actuated him, as well as such a man as "Stonewall" Jackson, whose integrity of character was without blemish, to undertake the dismemberment of their country. The doctrine of "State's Rights" was considered an open question by a large portion of the country composed of the different States that voluntarily formed themselves into a compact or confederation for mutual support, protection, and union of interests. At the time of its consummation, no thought was taken of any embarrassment or trouble that might arise from such a union. The different States came in on the principle of reserving their own laws, customs, and peculiar institutions, subject to a common government, in which each State bore a part. It was not conceived that there was any yielding of inherent rights; and whilst there was no provision made for rescinding the contract, at the same time there was no restriction so binding upon a State, that it could withdraw from the compact, and resume the original status that it held before entering into it, if the interest or wishes of its people so counselled.

Under the teachings of Mr Calhoun, the South was educated up to the point of reserving this right, as implied in the doctrine of State sovereignty. Owing to the complication of political affairs in 1860-1, the South demanded the privilege of exercising this conceived right. This the North decidedly refused to accede to, as a subversion of the interests of the country at large. Hence arose the momentous question of the day. It became evident that this question would have to be settled by the arbitration of the sword, which placed the two sections of the country in hostile array against each other.

Then commenced the severe mental struggle on the part of such men as Lee and Jackson, between disloyalty to the Federal Government and disloyalty to their native State; which tried their souls to the utmost; for in any other cause, both would have fought to the death in defense of the National flag.

It is told that Mrs. Lee said, "no one knew the tears of anguish which this terrible struggle caused her husband to shed in secret, before he could decide upon a course which would bring him in conflict with the government and flag he had always looked upon as his own, and with the men whom he had always considered friends and fellow-countrymen; that, to him, they were as tears of blood."

The same ordeal is said to have been passed through by "Stonewall" Jackson, before he could conclude to cast his sword into the scale which contained the fortunes of State. In the meantime Virginia was carried by the politicians out of the Union, and these brave men seemed constrained to follow the only course, which the doctrine of State's Rights appeared to leave open to them. They both may have been actuated by mistaken notions of duty, though it cannot but be admitted that no base or unworthy motive influenced their actions. Both were upright Christian gentlemen, and worthy representatives of the two religious persuasions to which they belonged.—Lee, a firm Episcopalian, and Jackson, a strict Presbyterian, who made frequent and fervent prayer a part of the business of his daily life. That such men may entertain mistaken views and err in their conclusions, is but human; but the purity and sincerity of their motives cannot be impugned.

Ambition, or self-aggrandizement, played no part in influencing their actions, as both were above unworthy or avaricious considerations, in every respect, and both were lovers by the course which the circumstances of the case seemed to impel them to adopt. The one lost his life in the full flow of health and manhood, on the battle-field; the other had his crushed out, by the terrible strain upon him during his campaigns, and the consequences resulting from the failure of what has not inaptly been termed the "Lost Cause."

That Lee possessed generosity of character, was evinced by the readiness with which he was willing at all times to attribute any reverse that he sustained to some fault of his own, rather than that another should incur blame. That he was insensible to the promptings of self-interest, was shown by his refusal of the flattering offer extended to him, after the close of the war, by the Emperor Alexander, of a high command in the Russian army, where honors and emolument would evidently await him. He preferred to share the fortunes of his much loved State, as he had already done during the four previous years of cruel and devastating war.

A short time previous to the outbreak, Lee, then a Colonel, was in command of the important military post at Fort Hamilton, in New York harbor, and we have since heard the citizens of that locality revert with pleasure to the time when he dwelt amongst them, and they remembered with fond regret, the kindness and gentleness of his disposition.

It can be said with truth that Gen. Robert E. Lee was a foeman "worthy of Northern steel," and to whose charge no act of cruelty, nor anything unbecoming a man and a Christian, could be laid. And since time has softened the severity of matters which now belong to the past, we think there are but few who, on hearing all that can be said in his praise, could restrain an unbidden pride of feeling, when they recollect that he, too, was an American.

A gentleman named Rose, having a daughter, named her "Wild Rose," which was a pretty conceit for a name. But when she grew up, and married a man named Bull, the combination of her Christian and surnames took the conceit out of the old man.

Many suffer rather than take nauseous medicine; and this is not to be wondered at, as the remedy is often worse than the disease. Sufferers from coughs, colds, influenza, sore throat, or tendency to Consumption, will find in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effective in relieving disease.

GREENWOOD INSTITUTE. — Pursuant to call, the meeting was held for electing a new board of directors for the Institute, on Wednesday evening, March 15th., at the Institute buildings. The following board was elected: — G. P. Coover, H. W. Johnson, G. D. White, Wm. L. Tordane, Chas. W. Fountain, Edward Black, D. B. Strong.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, held on Tuesday evening, March 21st., the following officers were chosen from the board: — Pres., D. B. Strong; Secretary and Treasurer, Chas. W. Fountain.

The board resolves the same as before, except the election of Mr. Edward Black, in place of Dr. A. B. Dayton, deceased; and Mr. Chas. W. Fountain, vice Asbury Fountain, resigned.

A dividend of 6 per cent, was declared on the capital stock.

Dr. John H. Coover, former surrogate of this county, died at his residence in Freehold, on Tuesday evening, in the 56th year of his age. Dr. Coover had been for many years prominent in public affairs in this county. He was member of the Assembly in 1842, and in his township held prominent positions. He was born in Monmouth township (then included in Freehold) near the Old Testament Church, May, 1815. After his father's death the family removed to Western New York. After his marriage he settled at Red Bank, and built up an extensive and lucrative practice, and resided there until he was elected surrogate. He studied with Dr. Hoagell, of Princeton, and graduated at a Medical College in New York City.

OBITUARY.

At Matawan, on Monday, March 27th., of Typhoid fever, James Morton, aged 84 years.

The subject of this notice was born at St. Helens, England, on the 27th. day of February, 1817. At the age of fifteen he was confirmed in the Episcopal church, and continued in this communion until he came to our village. When he reached here, he found there was no service in the church of his youth, and, desiring to be associated, with some branch of the Church of Christ, he united with the Presbyterian Society in this place, in the year 1847. Up to his death, however, he maintained the same religious views that he held when a youth, and his whole life adorned the cause he so early espoused. The funeral services took place at his residence, on Wednesday afternoon, 27th. ult., and his remains were conveyed for interment to Howe Hill cemetery.

The steamer Matawan, on and after Monday next, will leave Keyport for New York at 7 o'clock, and returning leave New York at 4 o'clock.

We have the pleasure, again, this week of referring our readers to the mammoth advertisement of M. Bissell & Son, occupying the whole of one page. The fruits of this generous bestowment of advertising patronage are already being reaped by this enterprising firm, and large sales have been made. It gives us pleasure to see their waggons pass our office, heavily laden with furniture, for we know that they are exponents of the sentiment "live and let live." We give the following extract from the Abraham Democrat of March 27th: —

"The largest advertisers at Matawan are M. Bissell & Son, the furniture dealers. They occupy a full page in the Journal, with their advertisement."

The King of France, with twice a score of men, marched up the hill, and there — perished once again.

And the forest of this grand marsh amounted to just as much as has the effort of the Waddy, to overcome the criticism that it made out of its articles. We fancy the mighty obstacle, amounting with pomp and bluster to the attack, on had the Waddy to the charge against us; but, on reaching the summit, as the editor upon the name of his effort to vilify us, he find that he has been making a futile endeavor to rival Shakespeare, in a "high-toned drama, the plot and execution of which may be summed up into "Moss and Snowy Mountains." Seeing this himself, he now politely backs out by saying that he is "sorry to have lashed upon his readers that which did not interest them!"

As proof that we have made no impression upon the Waddy, he tries to make his readers believe that the Journal had set the ball in motion by criticizing the "mechanical execution" of the Waddy, while all who noticed our criticism, knew it to have had reference solely to certain French words, misspelt or mis used, and not a word was said about the mechanical execution of the story. Indeed, we will say that the mechanical appearance of the paper is attractive, and exhibits taste in its arrangement. It is the editorial opinion and proof correcting that we have seen fit to oblige.

Now, doctor, having had "no desire for controversy," take our advice and seek to your readers not to again be "strayed into that impasse" of which you speak.

In consequence of an increase of advertising patronage, we are under the necessity of issuing a supplement. We are determined not to slight our patrons in reading matter, unless an absolute necessity forces it upon us.

Answers to the "Anaphorism" have been received from S. T. H. and E. M. L. Science, in business hours, resulting in its solution by E. P. D. and G. H. The answer is "Subscriber for the Journal."

"LITTLE ON SPITTLE. HONOR IN A COINER." — Isn't that the height of refined language? Rather, isn't it about as low in vulgarity as we would like a friend to descend, when speaking of the State Gazette, from Monmouth? Yes this is the language of the Keyport paper, in its last issue, because, firsrnth, these two representatives were not as active as that Journal set out to think they should be, in pushing through the new school bill for that township. He says, further, "Because little took his way, gingerly, across the rattle-covered ball, &c." Very complimentary to the Capital Building of his adopted state! We have visited that ball, and their co-ordinated content reflected credit upon the journal.

We thought the Waddy "had no desire for controversy." Some men don't have the same mind two weeks in succession. The idea of Mr. James S. Yard, the senior editor of Monmouth Co., and a man who never stoops to low personalities, and "being bold enough to say" that he "sawed the treatment you" of the Journal, — (I he did fear it). We have never discovered the hump of fear to be much developed in his conception. As regards the play upon the term, "Anaphorism," we have no objection to its use, for if the Waddy will borrow a Webster's dictionary, and turn to a p. he will there find the word defined. The Waddy tells the Democrat his article is a "wall." How does he know? We accept the Waddy's true location of the incident from Keyport to Matawan, for, of course, it knows. Some folks think it a disgrace to be "ambon point," but we don't.

LARRY FROM FLORIDA,
Jacksonville, Florida, Feb. 15th., 1871.

Mr. Editor,
Perhaps your readers would like to hear from a Monmouth County boy, enjoying for awhile in this extreme part of the United States.

We had an elegant time a fortnight or so since, enjoying an excursion that we had been anticipating for several days. The morning of the 28. of February awoke, with a Southern sun sending down his piercing rays and making all nature blush by his halloes. This was the day appointed for a trip up the Black Creek, so renowned among the places of local interest to the Florida tourist. Our party, comprising some half dozen, together with about thirty other passengers, embarked on the little steamer, or rather steam-propeller, M. D. and had our souls full of anxious expectation to drink in the wild scenery that abounds here, and float among fishes and alligators. We set sail with as great an amount of pomp and air, as though we were on a vessel of the minor class. Hardly were we aware of having left our mooring, when the little propeller seemed to have taken us far from sight of our temporary home, and we were sailing quite rapidly along on the bosom of the St. John's river, toward the mouth of the stream whose waters we were making.

(There is somewhat more of this letter, which will appear in our next issue. We have not the room, in this paper to give it entire.)

Marriages.
March 22d., at Matawan, by Rev. A. Matthews, Mr. Edward I. Brown, D. D., to Miss Kate I. Bissell, both of Matawan, Monmouth Co., N. J. This most beautifully ornamented piece of cake we have ever realized, was just heartily enjoyed by us. May their lives prove a more beautiful monument to each other, and to the society around them.

Deaths.
At Matawan, on Monday, March 17th., of Typhoid fever, Mr. James Morton, aged 84 years.

JOURNAL AND ADVERTISER. Wisdom & Wit.

The coal troubles remind us of an old story. Boston: time-morning. "It is cold, Billy?" "Werry cold, father," says the gatters frower, Billy? "Werry hard, father." "Dear, dear! Put up the coal, two-pence a pair, Billy. God help the poor!"

It seems out that the women who been't spoken to her husband for twenty years after had one to speak to.

Early Surden.—A young gentleman from the country stepped into a store and informed the proprietor that his occupation was that of a carpenter, and that he desired to get a boson pin cabinetmaker of that name. The obliging jeweler looked over his stock, and, finding nothing else, showed him a very fine Mosaic pin. The young man looked at it carefully.

"Yes," said he, "that is it.—There's the compass and the square. I was both of them, but why didn't they put a saw in there's a Q there—what does that stand for?"

The jeweler didn't know. The man studied it carefully for a moment, and a bright idea struck him. His face brightened as if he had made a discovery. "I have it," he said, "it's all right. Q stands for gimlet.—Compass, square and gimlet. That will do; I will take it." The man took a little touch of sadness in his eyes, and the minister attended to the job. He was of the "Transfiguration," and became very excited, unwilling to show how readily Mosaic was recognized by the disciples. Thinking himself in the supposed position of the disciple, he rubbed across the plate with arms outstretched, exclaiming, "John! John! Upon my word, there's Mosaic!" The effect upon the audience was remarkable, and will not soon be forgotten.
