

COWARDLY REVENGE

Mrs. Schindler Makes Charges Against an Old Lover.

TRIED TO HURT HER CHARACTER.

Wrote Letters to Her Husband Warning Him to Be Watchful.

Sent Numerous Well-dressed Agents to the Schindler Residence That the Husband Might Think That There Was Something in the Charges Against His Wife—Mrs. Schindler Had Waited Four Years for Dr. Dickinson to Wed Her.

New York, March 16.—A prominent physician of Chappaqua, Westchester county, Dr. Henry Dickinson, jr., was up before Justice Grady in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday morning charged by Mrs. Frederica Schindler, wife of Charles A. Schindler, a hatter, with writing her husband letters which reflected on her character.

The arrest brought out a queer story. For four long years Frederica Schindler, rather pretty and petite, lived Dr. Dickinson. The two had known each other for many years previous to the time that Dickinson declared his love.

She said that she loved him, too, and they became engaged. They were to be married immediately, he said, but he put it off from day to day, from month to month, until the weeks grew into

All this time the girl remained faithful to him only once in while asking him why he did not marry her. He put her off, telling her that he was waiting for the proper time, but she faithfully believed he would get it.

After they had been engaged for four years, she wrote to him one day, telling him that she did not intend to marry him. She told him that she had been thinking and reflecting for him, and she had refused many good offers of marriage from respectable men, and she had again when he intended to fulfill his promises.

"Oh, what a little," he answered. But she didn't. She received an offer of marriage from Charles A. Schindler, who lives at West Thirtieth street, this city. She decided to accept him as her husband, and wrote Dickinson to that effect, telling him she had been engaged to him long enough, and she felt certain he did not intend to keep his promise.

She told Dickinson, and he stormed and threatened, but to no avail. The girl had had enough of him and his promises, she said. Mr. Schindler was married on May 30 of last year, and after long honeymoon settled down to housekeeping.

They were very happy, they say, until one day the wife noticed that her husband was becoming gloomy and that he did not seem to trust her so implicitly as he had before.

She immediately suspected something; more because of late numerous well-dressed agents and agents for sewing machines and agents for nearly everything under the sun had been calling on her.

These men had all told her that they had received orders to call on her and her husband, apparently from her husband, and had been told that she was wanted to get into the house and wanted to purchase sewing machines and all the other articles they wished to sell.

She had not sent such orders, and so she asked her husband about it, and he denied having ordered the men to call. The next time the next insurance agent called upon her she got a letter from him, and she told him to call at her house.

The description fitted her old lover, Dickinson, exactly, and then she told her husband that she thought it all very strange. Mr. Schindler did not answer his wife.

He merely took from his pocket a number of letters and other papers, and handed them to her. She read them. They were letters from some person who called himself Charles A. Schindler. With one of the letters was a personal from a paper published in this city: "Call at once. Call any day, any time. Not after 4 p. m. FRANK."

With the personal was this note: "Charles A. Schindler, your wife has been told to you and is deceiving you. Keep cool and you will catch her with her own net. (See personal)." With the personal and note was the card of H. Dickinson, jr., who lived at West Thirtieth street, this city. Mr. Schindler then told her that he had received letters telling him to watch her, that she was untrue to him.

He said that some of the letters had told him to change his mind, and so that he could go home and catch her when she was not expecting him. He began to suspect her, more so as there were numerous well-dressed men—agents of all kinds—calling on her. Then the wife told him how she had been engaged to Dickinson and had written him over after four years of waiting.

The husband put the matter into the hands of the police, and Dickinson was arrested. He pleaded not guilty, denied the whole story and said it was not his wife who told the story in court. The prisoner was held in $1,000 bond for examination on Friday.

Not one of the bridegroom's family appeared, and the guests at once departed.

Five minutes before the time appointed for the ceremony arrived, a deputy sheriff appeared at the home of the Perry and placed the prospective bridegroom under arrest on the strength of a telephone message from the bride's home at Galena, where a young woman had preferred a charge of illegitimate birth against the bridegroom. It is just like going out in the road and finding $50,000 to meet him. That's how easy I regard him. Why the boy has never made a first-rate man yet. It took him twenty-five rounds to settle little Joe Choynski and he fought Jackson to a draw when the nigger had but one leg to stand on."

"When I sparred for his benefit in 'Frisco he came into my room at the hotel, and begged me not to hit him hard. He is a boxer and not a fighter and it is in the same class with Mitchell, and everybody knows how sneaky and tricky the Englishman is. But it is not Corbett who is really doing the talking. Corbett is behind him pulling the strings and Corbett damn like a pup to his master."

"I hope that Corbett will not sink and that we will win together. 'Sullivan and Mitchell are running away as fast as their legs can carry them, and they will soon seek help from the old country. If Corbett sinks I see no prospect of a match. I want just one more battle and it will be my last.'"

DYNAMITE IN PARIS

Bold Attempt to Blow Up the Lobeau Barracks.

POLICE ACCUSE ANARCHISTS.

The Building Was Considerably Damaged But Luckily No One Was Injured.

Fear of the Anarchists Has Almost Become Paria in the French Capital—Thought That the Hotel de Ville Will be the Next Scene of Attack—A Bill Introduced in the Chamber to Make Dynamiting Felonious by Death.

PARIS, March 16.—Fear of the Anarchists has almost become a paria in the view of the French people. The Hotel de Ville will be the next scene of attack. A bill introduced in the Chamber to make dynamiting felonious by death. The Lobeau barracks, formerly occupied by the Republican guard, and in the rear of the Hotel de Ville. If the dynamites intended the destruction of the barracks, they did not use a sufficient quantity of the explosive, as, while many windows were shattered, the damage was otherwise slight.

The barracks have for some time been used by municipal functionaries for whom there is not accommodation in the Hotel de Ville, and many valuable records are stored there. It is believed that the dynamites intended to blow up the barracks as a menace or warning that the next attempt might be upon the Hotel de Ville itself.

The authorities have been busy all day endeavoring to ascertain the cause of the explosion, as there is not yet positive evidence of its character. No doubt, however, is the destruction of the barracks, the work of the Anarchists.

A large crowd assembled at the building as soon as the facts became known through the city, and the police had difficulty in making a way for those assembled in investigating the damage. Later the authorities announced positively that the explosion was caused by dynamite. The explosive was in a box which was placed on a window sill, and the box must have contained a large quantity of bullets, as many bullets were imbedded in the walls. This removes any doubt that the explosion was the work of Anarchists.

It appears that, while a portion of the building occupied for the staff of the about eight hundred of the Republican guard also occupy barracks in the building.

The explosion excited the great consternation, and for a moment the men of the barracks were about to rush down upon them. They made a rush for the street, but no one was injured. The men of the barracks were all of which the dynamite had been placed, was completely wrecked, and had the men of the barracks been present, the explosion would have been a disaster.

Many of the windows of the Church of the Invalids near the barracks, were smashed by the explosion.

His Property Bequeathed to the Youngest Child of Mrs. Deacon.

PARIS, March 16.—The news that Mr. Abille has left a will bequeathing his property to the youngest child of Mrs. Deacon has considerably astonished Mr. Deacon's case in public opinion, as this is considered a virtual acknowledgment on the part of Abille.

It is a very curious thing to overthrow a will in France, and the general impression is that the legacy will have been left to the youngest child of the relatives of Mr. Abille may take in the matter.
