Is it about time that old gray-headed Winter got up out of that lap?

The crown of Queen Victoria weighs two pounds. That is worse than a pig's hat.

DAVID's sling was a good one, and Goliath was much struck by the way in which he used it. But it would not compare with the gin sling for knocking people over.

JAY GOULD has resigned his position as a director in the American Bank Note Company. You must not infer from this that Mr. Gould has lost his interest in bank notes.

THE Duchess of Albany has some inventive talent and has patented a school desk and desk. Our own bald-headed Duke of Albany scarcely knows where his own seat and desk are.

THE New Orleans lottery is to be removed to Greytown, Nicaragua, and conducted on a grander scale than before. Every facility for financial ruin will be furnished its patrons, and it is intended to make it the Monte Carlo of America.

"ARE women declining?" That is a subject which is engaging the attention of the scientific fellows somewhat. As a hundred American girls are to marry English gentlemen within a month, we should say that women are not declining to any appreciable extent.

FERDINAND WARD, who has just completed his term in the State prison, has had a somewhat varied career. He was a student at Princeton, a carpenter, a printer, and a Napoleon of finance. All the rest was comparatively easy, but being a Napoleon brought the greatest trial of his life.

THE Russian reformer, Count Tolstoy, thinks that "large towns should be swallowed up by earthquakes." All right, Tolstoy. We are already working on that line, but earthquakes are not easy things to handle, and it will be some time before we shall be able to swallow up cities, as you suggest.

It has long been a bad with members of the Four Hundred to visit the slums to see how the poor live. Now it is seriously proposed that these same poor shall go slumming on Fifth avenue to see how the rich manage to keep the poor from the door. "Turn about is fair play," but the gentlemen and ladies of the East side will see only the bright phase of aristocratic life. If they could see the dark side they would find that in many cases the difference between the slums and the palaces is more apparent than real.

THAT two-headed boy who was recently on exhibition in New York city, was a unique specimen of humanity. It used to be thought that the Siamese twins were exceedingly intimate. They were always together, united in life, though in death very much divided, being in fact completely cut up by the surgeons. But these Italian boys are far more intimate. With two heads, four arms, a single body from the seventh rib down and a single pair of legs, they are yet two utterly distinct personalities, bright, intelligent, speaking very fluently several languages, and each thinking his own thoughts and indulging his own tastes irrespective of the other. It would be interesting to know more of their mutual mental influence, what would happen in a conflict of wills, and how irreconcilable their tastes might possibly become. Suppose one of the heads wanted to take a glass of whiskey and the other detected it; what would the single pair of legs do? Would one brother go thirsty, or would the other get drunk against his will? Or suppose one wanted to take a walk with the partnership pedal extremities and the other was determined to stay at home and read; what then? People so intimate as these young fellows are ought to let nothing come between them, for they are friends that stick closer than the ordinary brother.

The Duke of Plainfield.

The Duke of Plainfield and the Countess of Somerset walked arm in arm in one of the parties of Plainfield's Four Hundred.

"You look bright and happy, my Lord Duke," said the Countess. "Yes, I have been out of town, but now I feel like a sparkling dewdrop on morning's fair Aurora. And you, my lady Countess. Art thou a possessor of the bloom of health?" "Yes, indeed," said the Countess. "I will give you the secret of it." Between the nose of her fan and face she whispered: "Every morning and night take Dr. J. D. Herd's Arabian Blood Tonic. This keeps my blood, liver and stomach in good order."

VICTIMS OF THE THEATRE FIRE.

Four of the injured at the Hospital May 2.

Philadelphia, May 2.—The Pennsylvania Hospital is announced that all the victims of the fire who had been brought to the institution were doing as well as could be expected. Four of these, however, are in a very serious condition, and while the physicians say they do not anticipate at the present time any fatal results, they also admit that it is possible for some of their patients to die of their wounds at almost any time.

Those most in danger are: John Ward, Richard Murray, Edward Holmes and Henry McClary, a boy.

At the Jefferson Hospital all the patients, especially the two Quinny brothers, Fred Evans and Ambrose A. Chambers, who were supposed to have been fatally burned, are on a fair way to recovery. They will be removed to their beds in the hospital for several weeks, but after about a dozen days, it will probably be able to leave the hospital in a day or two.

Miss Conners, whose body was taken from the ruin, was to have been married to William Henson of New York, the wedding having been fixed for next Monday. Mr. Henson left her but an hour before the theatre burned.

Safe Post Boyney was a Rigmaster.

New York, May 2.—A letter has been received from a woman in Birmingham, England, in which she claims to have known the legal wife of "Pat" Rooney, the well known comedian who died in New York last Thursday morning.

The woman, who is now in Birmingham, is a widow, and she was married to Rooney about a year ago, when he was twenty-one years old and with whom she accompanied him to this country during the first year of their married life. The actor, she says, subsequently deserted her.

It is also stated that Girard will sue the "Courier," the "News" and the "Times" of Buffalo, N. Y., placing the damages at $5,000.

Towns, the absconding freight cashier of the New York Central at Suspension Bridge. It is said now on good authority that Towns's shortage will reach between $10,000 and $15,000.
