Life-Sketch of the Man Whose Marvelous Acquisition of Fame and Fortune Has Been the Wonder and Envy of the Civilized World—His Remarkable Abilities as Applied to the Art of Money-Getting—His Fortune Acquired from One to Two Hundred Millions.

New York, Dec. 3.—Jay Gould, the great financier, died yesterday morning at 9:15 o'clock. The news was not made known to those outside the house of the millionaire for a half hour after the report. The first and most vivid notes of the event came from the colored butler, who came to the door of the Gould mansion, and in response to a question said, in a choking voice, "Yes, Mr. Gould is dead."

At daylight Mr. Gould's condition became more alarming and gradually the members of his family again assembled at his bedside. It was apparent to all that the end was fast approaching. Mr. Gould was lying on his back, his head resting on a pillow, his eyes closed, his hands clasped in prayer. He was surrounded by his family, who were all weeping. The room was filled with the sound of sobbing and the smell of flowers. The atmosphere was one of deep sorrow and grief.

Having left the Beechwood seminary Gould entered his father's store as clerk and general utility man. After a short stay with his father he entered the employ of Squire Barnham, who kept a small store across the street from the elder Gould's establishment. In this place the young man learned bookkeeping, and also studied land surveying. While he was in Barnham's employ Gould arranged to make a survey of Delaware and the adjoining counties and publish maps to sell to the farmers. He eventually into the business of land and assisted in the survey.

WHERE MR. GOULD BORN.

Young Gould's business and accuracy in this work attracted the attention of John Deland, who obtained from the legislature a grant for a topographical survey of the state and engaged Jay Gould to assist him. In 1856 he published his "History of Delaware County," and this two or three years before reaching his majority. In 1858 he published his "History of Delaware County," and this two or three years before reaching his majority. stocks and bonds to be printed, and the supply was simply inexhaustible. His favorite method was to buy two or three unprofitable properties at very low prices, sell them into one larger company, and upon the completion of the property issue bonds and stocks and offer them to the public. The Goulds started in this way, and began paralleling the lines between large cities of the Western Union and cutting rates. The property of the big company were seriously impaired and the stock declined in the market. Suddenly it was announced that Gould had acquired a controlling interest in Western Union. The two companies were consolidated, and Gould has retained control. His favorite properties seem to be Western Union and Missouri Pacific. His fortune is estimated at anywhere from one hundred to two hundred millions of dollars.

The firm of brokers, W. E. Connor & Co., with which Mr. Gould had been associated for many years, and to which his son George and his man of law, Morison, belonged as active partners, was called and Jay Gould was seen in his retired. His office was now removed to more spacious quarters in Western Union building and since then, except when one of his various properties has been attacked, Wall Street has known him as a speculator. Since 1881 and 1888 Gould has been engaged in the purchase of land and other property which by this time he had acquired.

Mr. Gould's marriage was a love match, and the affectionate relations lasted till Mrs. Gould died in 1888. Neither Mr. Mrs. Gould appeared ever to have had any social aspirations—that is, aspirations to move and shine in that society of rich people which was the domain of the Astors and Vanderbilts are prominent. It is not certain that if they did have such aspirations they never tried to gratify them. For the doors open easily to golden keys, and Mr. Gould could have afforded a whole branch of such keys any time these many years.

For some time more of this domestic couple made their winter home in the house built by ex-Mayor Ogdysie in 1875, on the corner of Fifth and Seventh streets from the Windsor hotel. The family occupied the country, and at Irvington each summer from the beginning of June till late in October. For the last few years Mr. Gould used his flat steam yacht the Atlanta.

The house at Irvington is large and commodious, and was evidently built with every regard for summer-time comfort and unpretending home life. The glory of the place is the greenhouse, of which there are seventeen. In these there is a wonderful collection of rare and beautiful plants. These may not be the finest in the country, but they are no less interesting to the eye.

His eldest daughter, Miss Helen Miller Gould, had been about 30 years of age when she died. She was a very beautiful woman, and her death was a great loss to the family. She was married to Mr. Miller, and they had several children. She was a very kind and generous person, and her death was a great loss to the family.

The second son, Edwin Gould, has also been a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The third son, Howard, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The fourth son, Charles, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The fifth son, John, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The sixth son, William, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The seventh son, George, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The eighth son, Henry, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

The ninth son, Thomas, is also a very successful man. He was married to Miss Annie, and they had several children. He was a very kind and generous person, and his death was a great loss to the family.

A Charming Society. We have received recently a little Souvenir Book, illustrated in colors and devoted to the description of the business of The World's Companion, and especially illustrating the new building, which is just completed and occupied. Every one who is interested in the paper will know that the number of families in our vicinity who take it increases year by year, will desire to see and read this bit of history concerning a favorite paper.

While The Companion is one of the oldest papers in the country, having been started in 1827, it is one of the freshest and most vigorous of all our publications and has attained the unequalled circulation of six hundred thousand copies weekly. Its prospectus containing the announcements of authors and articles for the year 1893, shows that the coming volume will be, if not better, at least as good as its predecessors.

Any new subscriber may obtain the Souvenir book free by asking for it at the time the subscription is made. The paper will be sent free to January 1st to all who subscribe now, including the Double Holiday Numbers. Price $1.75 a year. Boston.

The Tribune Buries the Party. The New York Tribune is a newspaper to which the people of this country in general and especially the Republican party have always turned, instinctively, in public emergencies, for calm and courageous counsel, and a brave rallying cry. Never losing its head, never misreading the public mind, it has many times calmed the public mind in times of disaster and led the way out of difficulties by sound advice and its own patriotic and well directed efforts. The Tribune does not, for a moment, yield to the point on which the presidential campaign was fought. It believes that the working men of this country have been deluged by demagogues; and that they have struck blindly the very system under which they are prospering so that they have done before in their lives. The Tribune's prospectus in another column tells the story of its publication in this country. It will do well to subscribe for The Tribune this year in combination with their own local papers.

Mr. J. P. Blake, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of that state during a recent visit. Mr. Blake, who is now in New York, has had occasion to derive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blake sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and in short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and the next day was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blake regards his cure as simply wonderful. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.
