HILL and BULKELEY

The Connecticut Governor Returns His Compliments.

HE SENDS A LETTER TO ALBANY

Two Hundred Convicts Ready to be Turned Over to New York.

The Political Situation Remains Complicated—Prisoner Fardon Still Held in New York—Why He Changed His Name. It is believed the United States Court has jurisdiction.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 26.—The refusal of Gov. Hill, of New York, to honor a requisition for Charles Fardon, of Waterbury, accused of theft, on the ground that Morgan G. Bulkeley, who signed the requisition, is not Governor of Connecticut, is the sensation of the week in Hartford and throughout the State. Everybody is talking about it, and it was the subject of conversation on all incoming trains.

When Gov. Bulkeley received official advice and the New York papers, and read of the rather outspoken statements by Gov. Hill explanatory of his action, he was thoroughly aroused, and instructed his clerk to mail at once the following letter:

Gov. Bulkeley's Reply.
Governor DAVID B. HILL,
Albany, N. Y.—I am glad to hear from your official action, as reported to me officially, that criminals from sister States and especially from Connecticut, are safe from arrest and return for prosecution when they have entered the gates of the City of Refuge, embraced only in your jurisdiction. I desire to inform you that there are now in Connecticut State prison about 200 convicts that Connecticut can safely and with propriety turn over to you.

I have no doubt that every one would prove a loyal subject and rejoice to avail himself of the freedom of the State of New York and the protection of the Executive.

Express trains are here frequently. Awaiting your orders to forward such available reinforcements for your service, I have the honor to remain, respectfully, MORGAN G. BULKELEY, Governor.

Political circles are busy with this letter with opinions varying according to party feeling as to whether it was judicious. Speculation is rife as to what Gov. Hill's reply will be.

The question is: What can be done? It is believed that the United States courts have jurisdiction. But if taken there, it would incidentally carry to court the whole question of Connecticut's struggle over her State officers, and this is an issue no United States court would care to pass upon.

The Political Situation.
HARTFORD, Feb. 26.—Both parties will hold general caucuses to-day to consider whether general business or final adjournment shall be the line of action. The deadlock has reached a stage where a speedy decision of some kind appears inevitable.

FARDON STILL IN PRISON.

He Denies His Guilt and Tells Why He Left Waterbury.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Charles E. Fardon still occupies a cell in the Essex Market prison, and seems utterly unconcerned as to how the interstate row may terminate. He is about 28 years of age, and was employed by Elkins & Wake of Waterbury, Conn., whose safe was broken open a few weeks ago.

"I haven't the slightest objection," he said, "to going back there and meeting the charge, whether extradition papers are sent or not. I am entirely innocent, and there cannot be a particle of evidence against me. Suspicion was probably excited by my leaving Waterbury two days after the burglary, and afterward living in this city under an assumed name. As I explained before, I did this only to escape from a woman whom I had married without knowing her real character. I changed my name to throw her off the scent and prevent her from following me."

Calling Out the Police in Times of Riot.

THRENTON, N. J., Feb. 26.—The debate on the bill authorizing the Governor to call on any city police force squad to put down riots was bitter. The Republicans attacked the bill as investing the Governor with powers dangerous to the State at large and to those cities which might be stripped of their police forces to quell riots in different sections of the State. The Democrats replied that it was ridiculous to suppose that the Governor would withdraw enough police from any one city to cripple its home force, and that in case a riot assumed such large proportions, the military would be called out. The bill was passed by a vote of 32 to 22, party lines not being strictly drawn in the vote.

An Unknown Man's Body Found.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—About noon the body of an unknown man, about 25 years old, was found in a lot at the corner of Sedgwick and Boston avenues. Near by lay a revolver with one chamber discharged. There was a bullet hole in the head. In one of the pockets of the dead man an envelope postmarked "Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 9, 1890," on which was the name "William F. White, General Delivery, Savannah, Ga.," was found. A horrible feature of the case was the discovery that one side of the body had been eaten away. It is thought by the dogs of the neighborhood.

An Alleged Murderer Arrested.

PUTNAM, Conn., Feb. 26.—Officer Roberts, of Inspector Byrnes' staff, arrested in Ironston, Mass., William Lloyd, who is alleged to be wanted in New York for the murder of a companion in a saloon last month.

NO TARIFF ON MARRIAGES.

Eloping Couples Will Not Be Interfered With in the Future.

THRENTON, N. J., Feb. 26.—Camden's reputation as the Great Green of Pennsylvania couples has been saved. A school teacher at Cape May had a bill introduced in the Legislature which compelled the couples intending to marry to go before the clerk of the Common Pleas Court and swear to a lot of inconvenient questions. They were to pay a tax, too. Assemblyman William C. of Camden, rose to the rescue of the blushing couples and the Camden clergyman. He asserted that the bill restrained the liberty of private citizens. Elopings might do worse than go to Camden and get married. He protested against taxing couples for what their grandparents had done with impunity. The bill was aimed at one of Camden's best industries, and he didn't want the industry of marriage interfered with. Assemblyman, Egan, also defended Camden, but Assemblyman Mallons, of Hudson County, put himself on record against the Great Green industry. The result was the defeat of the bill by just five votes.

ANOTHER MURDER CHARGED.

To be Arrested at the Close of a Long Imprisonment.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—James Ward, who on Saturday will end an 11-year term at the Western Penitentiary for the murder of Jane Meane, in Westmoreland County, will be arrested as he steps from the door for the murder of Ellen Meane, a sister of his previous victim.

On the night of Nov. 13, 1881, Ward attempted to rob the residence of these two good sisters. Ellen was 38 years old and Jane somewhat younger. They resisted and were so desperately beaten that Jane died a few months afterward. Ellen lingered until 1886, when she died at the residence of Mrs. McLean, 189 Tenth street, Allegheny. The warrant has been prepared for the arrest.

HORSEWHIPPED BY A GIRL.

A Young Woman Takes Revenge on a Connecticut Hatcher.

NORWALK, Conn., Feb. 26.—Miss Kittie Moore, accompanied by her fiancé, Alonzo W. Smith, walked into David R. Swett's meat market last evening and gave him a severe whipping with a heavy rawhide whip.

The cause of Swett's chastisement was that he was supposed to be the author of an article which appeared in a local paper reflecting upon the character of Miss Moore.

The only resistance made by Swett was to strike a clever and threaten to strike Smith if he should interfere. Miss Moore is employed in Beth & Goldsmith's corset factory and Smith is a well-known hatter.

Paying Dollars for Dollars.

PLAINFIELD, Pa., Feb. 26.—Senator William A. Wallace is now paying off dollar for dollar to the depositors in his bank who were preferred creditors. The amount paid out to these depositors is about $3,000. The balance of $5,000 under this head is not expected to be paid in full as soon as it is. Mr. Wallace has turned over his half interest in the Maschio building here to an unsecured creditor. It is now generally believed that Senator Wallace will be able to meet every obligation in full.

Senator Chandler's Charges.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 26.—Senator Chandler, in a double-column editorial over his own signature in the Monitor, yesterday his charges against Hallinger, W. H. Green and other publicans entered into a series of bargains with Hon. Frank Jones (Hon. C. A. Sinclair and other prominent Democrats) and further stated that the truth of the charges would be soon endeavor to satisfy the public.

Sixteen Thousand Men Out.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—Fifteen hundred men of the Hostetter Cake Company have joined the strikers, making the total number out in the Connelville region 16,000. Both sides are very firm, and there are no prospects of settlement until there is improvement in the iron trade and a renewal of the demand for cake.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Six Persons Killed on the Pan Handle Railroad.

OVER FORTY PEOPLE WOUNDED.

The Cars Roll Down an Embankment and Are Soon on Fire.

The flames were quickly extinguished. All the killed were in the smoking compartment of the sleeper. The train was running at the rate of forty miles an hour when the accident occurred. Division of the Pan Handle Railroad at Hagerstown, 15 miles from this city, last night, in which six persons were instantly killed, one mortally wounded, two seriously, possibly fatally, and a large number more or less injured. It was the fast train between Chicago and Cincinnati, which was coming down a steep grade into the town, when the framework of engine No. 494, in charge of W. W. Bartlett, engineer, and Noah Dunn, fireman, broke and derailed every car. However, they passed the station and came to the canal bridge, where there is a 15-foot fall, and where it came near proving even more terrible, as the cars caught fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

The smoker first turned on its side and the day coach and parlor car followed. The smoking compartment of which contained all the killed, breaking away from the smoking car, but holding together, rolled over twice in their descent of the embankment. Meanwhile the derailed baggage car had hung to the engine and away beyond the other cars had struck a guard at the road crossing, again mounted the track and escaped almost uninjured, but the engine, though holding the rail, was about as badly wrecked as the parlor car and day coach.

The train was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour and the cause of the accident is in doubt. So far as known the killed are: C. E. George, engineer; O. F. Deal, fireman; George Neidham, attorney for the Pan Handle; M. E. Reeves, president of the First National Bank, Richmond, Ind., and two unknown men.

The cause of the accident was that there were over 40 persons wounded, several of whom will die. The worst of the flood was at Downey and vicinity. The old and new Gabriel Rivers broke their banks and ran together, making a great inland lake, six to 10 miles wide and 17 miles long. Many houses have been swept away and their occupants are missing.

THE ENGINEERS READY.

If There is a Strike on the Pennsylvania All the Trains Will Go Out.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The conference of the Pennsylvania officials to arrange a schedule of wages is still in session, and will not adjourn until this afternoon. The men are awaiting the prospect of a settlement, and nothing will be done until after it has been presented.

The company does not anticipate that the new operative schedules will be satisfactory to all the men, for the reason that the contemplated equalization will reduce the pay of some of the men. This may have the effect of creating differences in the councils of the grievance committee.

While the company appears to feel secure of the strike question, the attitude of the men is directly opposite. They are as firm in their sentiments to-day, even more so, than they were a week ago.

Carrot's Nail's Funeral.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The city during the afternoon was the scene of a most remarkable spectacle in the funeral of the Colles woman, otherwise known as "Carrot's Nail," whose murder has created such excitement. The woman, who could not have murdered half a dozen friends before the tragedy, was followed to the grave by an enormous multitude of mourners. The crowd made an angry demonstration against the police, whom they seemed to regard as some way responsible for the crime, or at least for not having captured "Jack the Ripper" before he had claimed so many victims. The woman's coffin was deluged with flowers. It was with difficulty that the police prevented a serious demonstration of popular anger.

Another Gun for the Diamond.

LIMA, O., Feb. 26.—The Standard Oil Company has purchased the refining plant and oil territory of the Ghyser Oil Company for $900,000.

SIR JOHN'S LAST SCHEME.

An Appeal for Votes is to be Made by the Quebec Bishop on Sunday.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—On Sunday next Sir John Macdonald will play his trump card in the Quebec section of his electoral contest. It is stated on reliable authority that the Roman Catholic Church has as yet only received the first note, and that a collective pastoral letter signed by all the archbishops and bishops in Quebec, defining their attitude, will be read in all the Catholic churches of the province on Sunday. It is believed that this letter will powerfully influence the whole Catholic electorate of the province. It is also claimed that every Conservative candidate will be authorized to assure his supporters that after the elections, and within the statutory time, the legislation of the Manitoba Assembly regarding separate schools for the French and the dual language question will be disallowed. This is said to be the price the church has demanded for its support of the government.

A CASE OF LEPROSY.

Four House Officials in Pennsylvania Want a Foreigner Sent Home.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The poor house officials of Lima, Pa., have made application to the Treasury Department for passage for a foreigner now in the Lima poor house with leprosy, so that he can be returned to his native country in Europe.

The officials state that the man is in an advanced state of the disease and the health of the community is menaced by his presence in their midst. No information is given as to how long the man has been in this country, nor the country from which he came is not stated. The Treasury Department has directed an investigation of the matter and if possible will compel his return home. In the meantime measures will be taken to secure his isolation and protect the citizens of Lima from contracting the dreaded disease.

SWEEPED AWAY BY FLOODS.

Several Lives Lost in California and Many Homes Destroyed.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 26.—Reports received up to noon show that at least six persons have lost their lives in the floods of the past few days, and perhaps many more who have not been accounted for. Among these is the family of Charles Watts, who lived near Downey. The Watts family, consisting of three persons, was drowned at Duart, and the bodies of two Mexicans were found in the same neighborhood. E. Laurens was drowned at Wilmington.

The Vassar College Case.

POCONO, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Cyrus Swan, counsel for the Vassar College, said that the report that the executive board of the college met in New York and ratified an agreement with the heirs-at-law of John Guy Vassar to settle a suit against the college involving $700,000, was untrue. Mr. Swan said that the college has no power to act in the matter. Mr. Swan said the case had not been settled and nothing will be done until the board of trustees consider the proposition to settle at their meeting on March 1.

RUSHING THE WORK

Night Sessions Now for the Senate and House.

THE SHIPPING BILL UP TO-DATE

The Senate is Behind the House With the Appropriation Bills.

Revised Prediction of an Extra Session—The Late Secretary Windom's Will Filed—His Estate $917,000 to His Family—Mr. Foster in Charge of the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Senate adjourned upon the completion of the death of Senator Windom, of Maryland, chopped off one of the few remaining days left the Senate to transact its business that it must get through with before March 4 if an extra session is to be avoided.

The Senate is much behind the House in work upon appropriation bills. This condition of affairs has brought out renewed predictions of an extra session. Their character, however, purely speculative.

Mr. Allison, the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Mr. Cannon, the chairman of the House Committee, both of whom would require pretty close work to get the business they have on hand done, are, however, not at all discouraged. There will, however, be no session of the Senate to-night, and the House will adjourn to-night. By means of them, it is said, 12 o'clock on the night of next March will find Congress ready to adjourn.

The only business possible outside of the appropriation bills is the Shipping bill, which has made a special order for to-day and to-morrow. The bill differs materially from the bill that has heretofore passed the Senate.

The House bill, which has been abandoned, is the same as the Senate bill, but in its stead, the House will be remembered, proposed to subsidize both steam and sailing vessels. The Senate bill subsidizes only steam vessels.

MR. WINDOM'S WILL.

The Late Secretary's Family Left an Estate of $917,000.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—A dispatch from Minneapolis says that the will of the late Secretary Windom has been filed in the Probate Court at Winona. The instrument gives one-third of all the testator's property and the family residence, in addition, to the widow. The balance of the property is to be divided equally among the testator's three children.

Mrs. Windom's estate as executrix. The gross value of the estate will be from $100,000 to $125,000, which, when all debts are paid, will probably yield an annual income of $5,000.

Mr. Windom held an interest in the Windom Block in Minneapolis, and owned land in the Red River Valley in Dakota. He sold some of the land, noting being taken in payment. In connection with Senator DeWitt, of Winona, owned some property in the coal regions of West Virginia. There he had a small property in Colorado and a little at Rochester, Minn. He also held stock in the Winona & St. Paul Railway, and in the St. Paul & Northern Pacific.

IRISH POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

The Inactivity of the Factions Bothering the Tories and Liberals.
LONDON, Feb. 26.—The inactivity of the Irish party is the subject of some anxious discussion in the offices of the House of Commons. There are no signs that the Dublin Journal, organ of the anti-Parliamentaries, will not be ready for publication in March, as promised.

The Radicals in Parliament have decided to oppose by every method in their power the final passage of the four Land Purchase bill, on the ground that it means a large gift of money to the landlords at the expense of the British treasury. Mr. Parnell, on the other hand, approves the bill in its general outlines, and wishes to see the land question settled by making every farmer an owner.

The government has decided not to retreat the ball of Dillon and O'Brien's surrender. Parnell's friends say that if he decides to send delegates to America they will represent his personal policy, and the funds they collect will be subject to his control in inheritance thereof. He is being strongly urged by friends to send such a delegation.

A TWILIGHT STORY.

"Aunt, why're you tell a story?" said my little niece of three.
As the early twilight fell around us
No answer to her pleading: "Once, when I was very small,
With my papa and my mamma I went out to make a call.
And a lady, pleased to see us, gave me quite a large box of Which I carried home, smiling all along the way.

"Soon I met two other children, clad in rags and sad of face,
Who grew strangely wilder as I neared their standing place.
"Twas so good to see the children 'GIVE me one
—oh, only one!" they cried.
I passed them without speaking; left them with their wish denied.
But the memory of their asking haunted me by night and day.
"Give me one!" I heard them saying, even in my mildful play.

"But I mourn, because in childhood I refused to give a flower:
Did not know those others happy when I had it in my power."
Suddenly I ceased my story. "Tear me in my niece's eye—
Tears of tenderness and pity—while she planned a sweet surprise:
"I will send a flower to-morrow to those little children dear."
Could I tell her that their childhood had been gone this many a year?

TOLD BY A FAKIR.

The Many Tricks in the Street Man's Life.

Last evening, says a writer in the New York World, a thin stood in a busy street, selling prize packages by the blaze of a large paraffine lamp. He wore a frock coat, a shiny silk hat, clean linen, a benevolent smile and half a dozen badges.

"I've been faking for twenty years," he confided to a reporter after he had replaced prize packages with $45 and thrust it into his inside pocket.

"I've traveled the country from Maine to California," he continued, "and I know every city, town and village where there's a dollar. I either get a permit or a license at each place, and so I'm known to all the mayors and chiefs of police from Florida to Oregon. I'm 40 years old, and have been a street man just half my life.

"No, it doesn't matter what a fakir has to sell, I'll sell it if he only knows how. It's the gift of the gab, a solid front, nerve and judgment, that succeeds; and the goods have nothing to do with it. To be successful you must be grammatical, newsworthy and brief. If a man will only wait until I get through talking I'll have his quarter. If he goes home he misses my breezy conversation, and his wife gets the money; mine does with me. I know, I know."

"In prohibition States I advocate free license, and in Chicago high license for saloons. If I strike a town where there has recently been an epidemic of cholera, I tell them an epidemic story, and get 'em laughing. If it's a plous town I look austere; tell 'em pathetic stories, and stealthily wink at the policeman, who usually goes away and chokes. If the town is Democratic I talk Democracy, or if Republican I advocate the principles of the G. O. P. and nod to the Democratic cornerer.

"Some audiences I have worked with a carriage and pair and with a colored driver. An hour later, in the same town, I am selling to a different crowd, mounted on a soap-box, with a soft felt hat, a blue flannel shirt and a dollar and the latch-string hangs out to my friends and my wife's relatives. I've a dollar for charity, one to loan on good security, one to spend for the benefit of my family and another for my own cigars. No, never mind my name. All the first-class fakirs and most of my country customers will recognize me from what I have said."

SWISS UNIVERSITIES.

They Are Run Upon a Co-Ed Educational Basis.
The Swiss universities are broad and liberal in the highest degree. Statutes are passed in their senates with simple reference to elevation of character and usefulness, and with no apparent thought of the sexes as separate. These statutes, when presented in council, are treated in the same spirit, and the question as to the advisability of co-education came first in every university after women had already entered and studied. The original statutes excluded no one, and consequently when—women applied for admission, their names were taken exactly as those of their brothers were taken; they took their places among these and worked there undisturbed until some other consideration brought the question forward. It is difficult to see why it should have been so long after the establishment of the universities before the admission of women which caused the indifference on the part of women toward them. However that may be, when in the sixties women applied for admission in Zurich—the first one was a foreigner—no question was raised; she entered and took her degree. Ten years later, when so many, chiefly Russians, came with insufficient preparation, a new law was passed requiring the admission of "students" into the university, and formally recognizing women. Flora Bridges, in Popular Science Monthly.

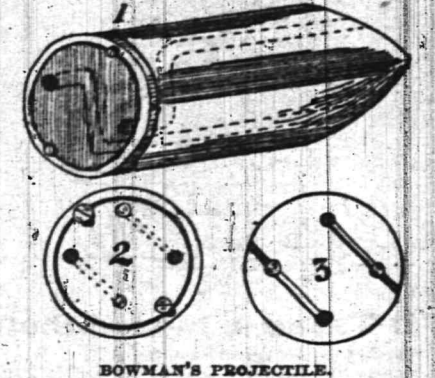

"At the Dressmakers—"So you say you want seven buttons on this waist, Miss Sney. Must I put another on?" "Well, yes, I think so. You see, with six, it never comes right when I say 'I love me—he doesn't love me.' I think I must have one more button."—Fliegende Blätter.

"Cheese your weapon" might be a proper form of invitation to one of the old-fashioned, melodramatic duels in which poison pills are used.—Washington Post.

THE LATEST PROJECTILE.

It Is Related by the Explosive and May Prove of Great Value.

In the projectile shown in the illustration, which has been patented by Mr. William Bowman, of Atchison, Kan., it is designed that a portion of the gases generated by the explosion shall pass through transverse and horizontal passages of the projectile, and, bearing upon the walls of the passages, act to turn the projectile, on the principle of the Barker mill. Fig. 1 is a perspective view, showing in dotted lines the passages through the projectile, Fig. 2 representing the butt end of the projectile, in the edges of which is the usual gas check, held in place by set screws. Two or more bores are made from the forward end of the projectile to a point not far removed from its base, where they are intersected by smaller transverse bores, tangential to an imaginary circle concentric with the peripheral face of the projectile, the other end of the smaller bores opening into bores extending forward from the butt of the projectile. The transverse bores may be made, as shown in the cross sectional view, Fig. 3, by boring in from the outside of the projectile, and afterward in-serting pins to close the exit of the gases except through the longitudinal passages, or such transverse bores may be made diagonally from openings in the base, thus avoiding the use of plugs. The necessity of rifling or grooving gun barrels is designed to be obviated by the use of this projectile, to which the necessary rotary motion may be given by the force of the gases of explosion acting on the walls of the passages.—Scientific American.

A SIMPLE EXPERIMENT.

With a Little Care You Can Make It Very Accurate.

Choose six keys of graduated sizes, says the Boston Globe, which we will number from one to six, so as to facilitate explanation. Place on the table the bits of the two larger keys, No. 1 and No. 2, and put in the ring of key No. 3, as shown in the illustration. These two keys, 1 and 2, will form a very wide angle, and in proceeding to open the door you must be sure that they stand so firmly that they will not topple on the table, as they are to serve as a base. Then put the bit of key No. 3 into the ring of key No. 2; after that, in succession, the bits of Nos. 4, 5 and 6, into the rings of keys No. 2, 3 and 4. Look from the top to see that the axis of your several keys are in a vertical position. If the hooking of the bits in the rings has been carefully done, which you can be sure of by pressing on the last key (No. 6) nothing will be more simple than to place on the rings of keys Nos. 5 and 6 (the last one being horizontal and almost flat) sundry articles of the most fragile kind, so as to make the experiment more attractive, plates, bowls, decanters, bottles, etc.

If a bottle, it must be half full of water so that its center of gravity may not be too high, which increases the steadiness of the combination, or, rather, decreases its unsteadiness.

To Test the Quality of Belting.

A London journal says that to test the quality of belting, a sure method is to take a piece, say, two inches wide, and cut it down four inches into two strips, each one inch wide, and submit the leather to a tearing strain; if of the best grade with respect to quality of hide and quality of tanning and currying, it will have great power of resistance, but if torn, then most of the fibers will not pull out, but will break, because they are thoroughly united to each other by gummy oil; and if, in the tearing strain, the fibers pull out to a great extent, that is an indication of imperfect or incomplete currying, though the original quality of the tanned leather may have been good, for a poor piece of leather tears easily and a majority of the fibers break short off. A final and conclusive evidence consists in testing the fibers themselves, by twisting them with the fingers, the place of rupture and subjecting them to a breaking strain. In a piece of material which is of really poor quality the fibers have little strength, and this is easily perceptible.

Neutralizing Lightning Pains.

A singular phenomenon of the lightning flash is that its chief effects are observable only at the point of its entrance and exit. Thus a flash which entered a school-room injured only the first and last child on the form, those between escaping unhurt. The most effective treatment of lameness and other ailments due to lightning is the application alternately to the head, trunk and limbs of a large horsehair magnet. In case of a quite recent stroke the clothing should be unfasted, the patient laid with the head high and quipped and fresh air should be secured. If consciousness does not return the head should be exposed to a stream of cold water.

DIDN'T SURPRISE HER.

She Got Onto His Jag and Was Prepared for the Worst.

The suddenness of my avowal, Miss Pinkie, the young man said, feverishly, "may have taken you by surprise."

"It is true I had no right to address you in such terms. You had given me no reason to hope that you looked upon me in any other light than that of a friend. Yet I was carried away. I acted on impulse. I—made a fool of myself."

"The young woman nodded. "Yet I did not surprise you?" "She shook her head. "H'm! I am at a loss to understand you, Miss Pinkie. Maddened by your intoxicating beauty, I lost control of myself. I presumed upon an acquaintance of only a few weeks and declared a passion that I ought to have held in check. Your prompt rejection of my suit is a merited rebuke to my audacity. Yet I have endeavored to soften the blow by the reflection that I was only premature—that I took you unawares—that I surprised you. And you say I did not?"

"You did not," "Then, Pinkie Billmore," he exclaimed, "have you been trifling with me? Have you artfully led me to a declaration for the sole purpose of rejecting me scornfully? I never breathed a word of love until this evening. I have studiously concealed my feelings. How does it happen, he went on, holding tightly to the back of a chair as if to steady himself, "that my sudden burst of passion did not take you by surprise?"

"Because, Mr. Longshot," gently replied the young woman, in whose lovely blue eyes, moist with a tender sympathy, there shone the clear light of truth itself, "because I saw when you came in that you had a tremendous jag on."

Distressing thought. The most famous view in the Yosemite valley is that from Inspiration point, where the traveler gets his first sight of the whole valley. It is a splendid bird's-eye sweep, in which are gathered more scenic wonders than are contained in an equal space elsewhere in the world.

A gentleman who has recently visited the Pacific coast describes the hush which fell upon the occupants of the stage-coach as the driver pulled up his horses at this point. Their delight and enthusiasm were too keen to be put into words.

The silence lasted for a minute or two. Then a woman on the back seat suddenly exclaimed, with a mighty sigh, expressive of the deepest feeling: "Oh my, I wonder why they don't have lace curtains at the Wawona Hotel!"—Youth's Companion.

Business. Slick (to Blossom)—Is this Mr. Bloomer's office? Blossom—No. His office is across the hall.

Slick (leaving the door open as he walks out)—Thank you, sir. Blossom—Hey! Come back and close that door! Haven't you any doors in your house?

Slick—Yes, sir, but they all have springs on 'em. Allow me to show you, sir, my patent, double-back-action door spring. It closes the door without a bang, and is warranted to last a lifetime.—Life.

A Series of Explosions. Mrs. Fatwood—I can not allow you to light the fire with kerosene.

Biddy—Sure, sir! I always used it in my last place.

Mrs. Fatwood—And did you never get blown up?

Biddy—Yes, mam; most every day—by the missus, mum.—Puck.

USED TO PUBLICITY. Uncle St. Lowe—Well, well, Furby! Ah, these town folks gettin' pretty bold, to have their bedrooms so everybody can see right into 'em, like that.—Puck.

True Enough. Cuzco—I think it must be true that women exert a refining influence on men.

Mrs. Cuzco—Of course it is. Cuzco—Now, then, I wish my wife's scolding had driven him to drink, and he'd been fined and refined for disorderly conduct.—West Shore.

An Extensive Collection. Miss Olinde—Your room is very pretty, Miss Rosebud, but I wish you would drop in and see mine. It's a perfect museum of curios. All presents, too.

Miss Rosebud—Birthday presents?—N. Y. Weekly.

More Fragrant Than Guns. Friend—I should think you would find hard wood rather an expensive fuel these days.

Suburban Resident—That wood-pile is not for fuel. It's for protection against tramps.—Good News.

PASTORKE'S NERVE TONIC
Two Bottles Cured Her. 6
CARRIZO, La., July, 1889.
I was suffering 10 years from shocks in my head, so much so, that at times I didn't expect to live. I took medicines from many doctors, but didn't get any relief until I took Pastorke's Nerve Tonic. The second dose relieved me and I feel cured now.

Spent a Small Fortune.
24 Mahony City, Schuykill Co., Pa., May 20, 1890.
My son, who is now sixteen years old, had epilepsy for over four years. I spent a small fortune for doctors and medicine to get him cured, but to no avail until I took Pastorke's Nerve Tonic. He is a year now since he is perfectly cured, has not had the symptoms of a spell since. I am therefore very thankful for this medicine, and recommend it to all sufferers.
