EIGHT LIVES LOST

The Bark Dictator Goes Ashore on Virginia Beach.

SEVEN OF THE CREW RESCUED.

The High Seas Impelled the Work of the Life Savers.

The Captain's Wife Refused to Leave the Vessel—A Life Boat Could Not Live in the Surf—The Unhappy Sailors Taken Ashore by Life Lines—The Beach Lined with Spectators.
NORFOLK, Va., March 28.—The Norwegian bark Dictator was driven ashore near Life Saving Station No. 3, on Virginia Beach, at 10 a. m. Of the crew of 15 seven were rescued. Including those who perished were the captain's wife and little child. The captain swam ashore and was picked up senseless. The bark was bound from Pensacola, Fla., to West Hartlepool, England, with lumber. She is fast going to pieces.

The weather was so thick that the vessel was not seen until mid-o'clock, and then she was in the breakers, broadside on, within a quarter of a mile of the shore. Full crews from two life saving stations, those of Cape Henry and Seaboard, under command of Capt. Drinkwater, were promptly on hand and began firing lines to the ill fated bark. The guns could not deliver the lines so far, though they were repeatedly fired.

A Line Ashore.
The ship finally succeeded in getting a line ashore to the barrel which the surf carried to the life savers. The breeches buoy was quickly rigged and sent to the vessel, but unfortunately the bark's crew were ignorant of its use and the rescue was delayed until Capt. Drinkwater wrote instructions, and put them in a bottle and sent it to the Dictator by the line connecting the vessel with the shore.

The men on board broke the bottle at once, as could be seen by glasses from the shore, and proceeded to carry out the instructions. The first man was delivered ashore in eight minutes and six others were rescued in a short time, four of whom came ashore in a lifeboat, which was capsized by the surf, and the remaining three reached the shore in a half dead condition, one man having his arm broken. The ship rolled and pitched terribly and made the work of rescuing the unhappy sailors exceedingly difficult and slow as the life line would tighten or slacken in response to the motion of the vessel. Once the line broke with a man midway to the shore, and he was hauled back to the bark half dead. The line was mended, and the same man was safely landed.

The beach was lined with people who came from the country houses and the hotel, and to the spectators the anxiety and suspense was awful, as they could plainly see the people on the bark and could also hear their constant cries for succor.

Devotion of the Captain's Wife.
The captain had urged his wife to take the buoy and come ashore, but she steadily refused, as she would not leave her husband and child, and only one could take the buoy at a time. The wife and child were already greatly exhausted, according to the report of the sailors. The work of rescue was continued, and the captain, after vainly beseeching his wife to make the attempt for life, took his half dead child and climbed into the buoy. The father reached the shore, but the son was lost.

The life savers worked with great diligence and heroism. The apparently slow progress of their work is due to the fact that a lifeboat could not live in the surf and that the guns would not reach the bark and crew could not use the breeches buoy until they were instructed from shore, which caused great delay.

FOOLED TWENTY GIRLS.

Speedy Departure of a Young Man Named Oliver Deacon.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., March 28.—Twenty young ladies are to-day in various towns in Cabel County mourning the speedy departure of a young man named Oliver Deacon. He was gay, witty and wicked; had a handsome form and taking address, and during the past two years has been engaged to no less than twenty girls, all living in the same county. Nearly all Deacon's victims claim that he had promised to marry them. On April 20, and the others say no time was fixed, but it was to be "very soon." One girl, Mary L. Hash, had made all preparations, and, getting word that Deacon had been keeping company with other girls, took her father into his confidence. The old gentleman, armed with a revolver, went to Deacon's boarding house and ordered him to immediately come with him and marry his daughter. Deacon consented, and to show the sincerity of his promise, he secured a marriage license. He then left the State and went to Kentucky, and he has written back: "Get me if you can; they don't hang gentlemen in Kentucky."

THE SEALER SAYWARD CASE.

It Is Probable that the Famous Suit Will Not Be Called for Trial.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—It is stated that it is probable that the case of the Canadian sealer Sayward will not be called for trial in the United States Supreme Court as originally intended. This is said to be the result of a conference that recently took place in New York between Mr. Chauncey, the leading counsel for the Canadian government, and a member of the present administration. The subject was discussed at length, it is said, and it is understood that when the representatives of the two governments met, they were clear to an amicable adjustment of the difficulty. The Attorney-General is not in a position to make any pretence in that direction, except under certain circumstances, and in the meantime he proposes to prepare for trial. Under any circumstances a continuance of a week or more will be requested, as the Attorney-General cannot until then obtain the necessary documents from the Alaskan court.

Happy Elliott was the first victim, she being shot in the left breast and instantly killed. Another bullet struck Charlie Smith in the back, inflicting a fatal wound. Elliot then shot himself through the head, dying instantly. His shots were aimed at Lulu Durand, one of the performers, but she escaped injury. Jealousy was the cause of the tragedy.

ORDERED TO WORK

A New Move by the Knights in the Rochester Labor War.

THEY WILL MAKE A TEST CASE.

If Their Members Are Refused Employment They Will Sue for Damages.

A Belief that the Clothiers Will Discriminate Against the Officers of the Local Assemblies—Employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad Petition for an Increase of Salaries—A Strike May Follow.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 28.—At the clothing workers' meeting to consider what course to pursue with reference to the lockout, the opinion of the National Executive Board was submitted to the meeting and created a great sensation. It is as follows:

"To the officers and members of L. A. 1,773, 1,930, 1,930, 2,558 and 2,743 attached to National Trade Assembly 381, K. of L. Garment Workers of America: We, your national officers, desire to make the following report and recommendations: After hearing an expression of opinion from the officers of the above mentioned local assemblies, we recommend that all locked-out members of the Knights of Labor apply to their former employers for their former positions."

"We take this position for two reasons. First, that any employee that is refused employment has reasons for an action against the employer who so refused, which will be pushed to the strict letter of the law, with the understanding that we know a clear case of conspiracy. Second, the reason we take this unprecedented move is because we desire to give the consumers of Rochester clothing the opportunity to know the kind of men who conspired against American workmen and women of the city of Rochester, and as it will take several weeks to notify the consumers of Rochester clothing, it would be unprofitable and inadvisable to remain out of work during that time."

The men against whom the Executive Board thinks there is discrimination are the officers of the local assemblies. It is on behalf of these men that the board proposes to commence suits for damages, in case they are refused employment.

WANT MORE WAGES.

Pennsylvania Railroad Employees Petition for Increased Salaries.

JERSEY CITY, March 28.—The employees of the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are signing a petition asking that their wages be increased nearly 15 per cent. When all the signatures have been secured the petition will be presented to General Manager Hugh D. Smith. The men ask for a general increase for all who run on passenger trains between Philadelphia and New York. The round trip is fixed at 188 miles, and the pay now is as follows: Conductors, $2.25; baggage men, $1.90; brakemen, $1.65, for each round trip. The men ask that the wages be increased as follows: Conductors, $3.50; baggage men, $2.10, and brakemen, $1.90.

The men on the same branch, who are nearly all members of the Brotherhood of Firemen, have also presented a petition asking for an increase which will make their pay $2.25 for a round trip.

The men claim that when President Thomas A. Scott reduced the wages in 1890 he promised to restore them as soon as the earnings of the road would increase. Wages were restored on all divisions except the New York branch, the men further state.

If the demands of the men are rejected, a strike may follow.

ANOTHER BRUTAL MURDER.

A Woman Found Dead in a Cane of Trees at Camden.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 28.—In a clump of trees near Eighteenth and Federal streets, the dead body of Nellie Ryan, a woman about forty years of age, was discovered at an early morning hour by Peter Meyer, who was on his way to work, and the appearance of the dead woman led to the belief that she had been knocked down, outraged and left dead.

Coroner Jeffers, drove immediately to the scene of the supposed murder. The body could only be reached by the Coroner forcing himself through a crowd of a hundred men and women who had gathered around the body.

The woman lay on her back, and on her left cheek was a bruise, which evidently had been recently made, while her forehead was much discolored. Her clothing was disarranged and her red hair and head were thrown a few feet away.

Pending a postmortem by the county physician, the body was removed to the morgue.

The constable is busily engaged in investigating the case and will probably have several persons under arrest in a short time.

Several persons are willing to swear that they saw a negro lead the woman up to the spot where she was found dead, and he is now missing.

It is a fact that the woman was in company with a negro, but whether he killed the woman remains to be proved.

BROKER LINCOLN'S CHARGE.

He Accuses a Popular Long Island Man of Wronging His Wife.

NEW YORK, March 28.—It is said that Alexander L. Thorne, of Great Neck, L. I., is the man charged by William C. Lincoln, of Chicago, formerly a Board of Trade broker, with having wrecked his home and happiness, and in the pursuit of whom he spent his fortune.

Mr. Thorne denies that he ever knew the woman and thinks Lincoln is either crazy, or that he is attempting to blackmail him. Mr. Thorne and his family move in high society circles, and all their friends think it utterly impossible that Mr. Thorne can be the man that Mr. Lincoln imagines him to be.

Mr. Lincoln left yesterday for Massachusetts, but his friends say he is determined to follow up the case.

Miss Gayton is a woman of about 35 years of age. She was born in Madrid, Spain. Her real name is Zorka Lopez.

Decided Against an Investment Order.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28.—Judge Davis gave a decision in the United States Court on the status of the Universal Order of Co-operation. The order is one of the investment body schemes which have recently sprung up. The judge held that it is illegal for the order to enter into any contract with members unless there is sufficient funds on hand to warrant the carrying out of the contract entered into. He advised that the order through its counsel should take steps looking to the appointment of a receiver for the purpose of winding up its affairs. Steps will be taken to this end on Tuesday next.

A Wise Choice.

New York, July 23, 1890.
All other reports on Baking Powders signed by me or purporting to be signed by me are based on investigations made several years ago.

In view of the present controversy as to the purity and wholesomeness of baking powders, I have been requested to make a chemical examination of the leading brands found in the market.

My analysis of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder verifies the statement on the label, that the only ingredients used are cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda (both of the highest purity), and a little flour to preserve the strength.

My analysis also shows that "Cleveland's Superior" is free from ammonia, alum, or other substitutes.

Owing to the purity, strength, effectiveness, and constancy of composition of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, I have adopted the same for use in my home.

MORE WAR RUMORS

The Powers Informed of a Russian Scheme of Attack.

ENGLAND TO PROTECT BELGIUM.

Lord Salisbury Promises an English Fleet to Defend Antwerp.

An Unusual Feeling in Berlin Over Alarming Rumors—Sofia's Minister of Finance Assured—The Shot Was Meant for Premier Stambouloff—The Irish Factions Meeting in Galgo.

LONDON, March 28.—Something occurring behind the scenes of European diplomacy sharpens apprehension that the final move in the long game prelude was will not be long delayed.

Lord Salisbury, just before starting for San Remo, held a long conference with Lord Knutsford and Mr. Currie, the permanent Secretary of the Foreign Office. A work of apprehension difficult, regarding the most delicate handling, was intrusted to Mr. Currie, relating to engagements of England to protect Belgium.

King Leopold during his recent visit pressed for an answer as to what practical co-operation England would give under the existing treaty for the defense of Belgian neutrality in the event of war. Lord Salisbury, according to a report received within the Foreign Office, promised English aid by a fleet and contingent troops, if demanded, to defend Antwerp, leaving the Belgian army free for defensive operations in the forts of the Meuse.

Apart from the removal of the concentration of troops on the Russian-Austrian frontiers and the Czar's demonstrative friendship for President Carnot, it is reported that an agreement has been reached between the French and Russian governments in regard to the simultaneous mobilization of troops and other movements in the event of war. The heads of the European Powers seemed to be informed of a Russian scheme of attack, which is likely to decide itself in the autumn.

ASSASSINATION AT SOFIA.

Minister of Finance Batschoff Shot While Entering His Residence.

SOFIA, March 28.—A dastardly attempt was made last night to murder M. Stambouloff, the Bulgarian Premier, another being murdered by mistake. Stambouloff and Batschoff, Minister of Finance, live in houses near each other. About 8 o'clock Batschoff was entering his house when a man fired three times at him point blank with a revolver. Batschoff fell dead, and in the confusion the assassin escaped.

Spectators of the tragedy state that three accomplices assisted the assassin. The police are scouring the city for the murderer. No doubt is felt that Batschoff was shot by mistake for Stambouloff.

Thrilling Scene in a Court Room.

COURT, March 28.—A thrilling scene occurred while the Judge was summing up in the Tipperary riot trial. The court room was crowded when a barrister present noticed the reflection of flames in the glass of the dome overhead. He at once gave notice as quietly as possible to the Judge, who, without any display of excitement, adjourned the proceedings. During the exit the police maintained perfect order, and the room, which had been packed, was emptied without a sound. The flames were afterward extinguished. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

Healities Leave Farnell's Hotel.

DUBLIN, March 28.—Soon after the arrival of Mr. Farnell at the Imperial Hotel in Sligo, the Healities, including Maurice Healy, Sexton and Tanner, secretly removed their luggage to another hotel from the Imperial, and also left themselves. When Farnell and his friends were informed of the fact at breakfast, in the morning, they chuckled considerably, and Farnell asked the waiter if the Healities had paid their bills. To-day both parties have been resting on their arms.

NURSE PRICE'S STORY.

He Decries the Hospital Superintendent's Charge That He Left Mr. Wood to Kill Himself, and Says the Patient Was Eating in the Dining Room With Mrs. Walrod, When He Went.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of the 25th, reporting the suicide of Capt. Wood, you say he was deserted by his nurse, which is untrue. The facts of the case are these: I was taken to the hospital by Capt. Grant to act as nurse. I was directed by Mrs. Walrod to the room of Mr. Wood, who in a rational manner asked me who I was, and what I wanted? When I told the object of my visit and who had sent me, he said he was sorry I had been put to the trouble, as he had made arrangements with his physician for a nurse.

I waited for Dr. Boone to come to the room. He confirmed Mr. Wood's statement, saying he had employed a hospital nurse, and asking me as a favor, if I would stay long enough to help Mr. Wood to dress as they were to remove him from the room he then occupied to the one on the first floor. I did so.

While Mr. Wood and myself were sitting in the hospital office, the matron, Mrs. Walrod, came in and invited Mr. Wood to partake of a light supper in the dining room. Mr. Wood before going, said, "Mr. Price, I will not keep you any longer, as you have a long way to walk. I am sorry you were put to so much trouble. My nurse, whom I know, will be here by the time I have finished my supper." He then shook hands, with me and went to the dining room.

This was about 5:30 o'clock. I was at Mr. Sawyer's store on East Front street, at 6:15. The conversation attributed to me in your issue of the 25th, I would not say it was entirely untrue. The only words I addressed to Mrs. Walrod, was a request to send Dr. Boone to me, as I wanted to know from his own lips if Mr. Wood's statement about the engagement of a nurse was true, although from his manner I had no reason to doubt it. When I left the hospital Mr. Wood was in the dining room in the company of the matron. Had I known he was in the condition he was (which his appearance did not indicate) I would have staid with him at all hazards.

The Difference.

"The Easter bonnet is now all the rage," saith the scribe, but he forgets to add that the rage is all with the chap that has to pay for one. This sensation is unknown to the inventor at Colliers', for the jewelry there is as reasonable in price as in excellence and variety it is unsurpassable.

At a meeting of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, Thursday night, the charge made against policeman Kieley, that he had clubbed one of the members, was considered. It was agreed to drop the matter provided Mr. Kieley would write a personal letter of apology, which he promised to do. In this connection the Board of Engineers wish it stated that they have always found Mr. Kieley a courteous, efficient and faithful assistant at fires.

The fire was started by the same incendiary who has been operating here for a year. He has been finally detected. ## RELIGIOUS MATTERS

ALL-REPAYING LOVE.

Through the long, tolling day she went
With quiet sweetness, everywhere
A sweet her tender, lifeless hands
Caresing him, relieving them
No recompense, no answering smile,
No words of cheer were hers the while.

"Tell me, thou patient one," I cried,
"What secret hope sustains thine heart,
That through a thankless ministry
Thou gentle unto all thou art?"

She turned on me her soft eyes light:
"Heed them not. He comes to-night."

Behold an all-repaying love!
That matter, when the day is past,
The burdens others on her laid
In his arms she rests at last!

The darkest way to her is bright
He who loves her comes at night.

O sweet, whose hope is high as Heaven,
These things unpardonable! plaints
A watcher, waiting for thy Lord,
How canst thou grieve, how dar'st thou
Work on, rejoice, while yet 'tis light!

The Bridegroom's voice may call to-night.
A day of toil—what matters it?
No short, this life of tears and pain,
Lift up thy face! Who lovest thou fair?
Thou hast not given thine all in vain,
From now thou shalt walk with Him in white.
Who knoweth? It may be to-night.
—Adelaide Allen, in Inter-Ocean.

THE RELIGIOUS BEE.

All the hive with workers and Queens,
And Not with Drones.

The bee is a universal emblem of industry. With tireless activity the little worker flies hither and thither, lighting on every fragrant blossom, and eagerly extracting the hidden sweetness that there may be an abundant supply of food stored up for the cold months of the winter. Small though he is, he not only supplies his own needs and provides for a numerous family, but he furnishes a delicate luxury for man. What more natural, therefore, than that "busy as a bee" should become a proverb in all languages?

The bee is in some respects a good example for the Christian. Every church ought to be a hive of bees. But we must be careful that we select the right kind of a bee for our pattern; for there are several kinds of bees, and they are not of equal value.

First, there are the drone bees. They are the best-looking bees in the hive, large, round and sleek; and they bustle about and make a great deal of noise. As you watch them, you might easily believe that they were the busiest of the hive's busy inhabitants. They rush here and there with an air of great importance, and each one makes more noise than ten workers; but it is all humbug. They never do any work. They do not even gather their own food from the flowers, but lazily gorge themselves with the honey that others have gathered.

Then there is the worker bee, a quiet, unpretentious little fellow, who wastes no time and makes little noise. He feels that he has an important work to do in the world, and he does it as rapidly and as diligently as possible. When he flies, he goes in straight lines, that he may accomplish his purpose the more quickly—whether it be to extract the sweetness from some flower, or to plant his sting in the most vulnerable part of some enemy.

Most important and valuable of all bees is the queen bee. She is a great stay-at-home. No one ever sees her outside the hive, nor does she make any noise unless a special occasion calls for it. Yet all recognize her superiority. She is the mother of all. Without her the hive would soon be empty. In her seclusion she exerts a controlling influence and receives universal homage.

In studying the bee as a model, be sure you do not select a drone. We have enough of them in the church already. You may easily recognize them. They are the disciples whose sole office in the church is to bustle about and talk and criticize. They never feel any personal responsibility. They are perfectly satisfied to let others do the work and take all the responsibility, while they enjoy the fruits of their labor. Whenever found, drones are a pest. Their numbers are not a source of strength, but may prove a fatal weakness.

Much more to be desired are the workers, the people who say little but are always busy. Whenever an opportunity presents itself to do some good work, they eagerly seize it. No duty is neglected; no responsibility is dodged. The work which is laid upon them they perform faithfully and well; and each one feels that he must do his part, not only in sustaining the spiritual life of the Christian hive, but in giving food to those who are without. There is an important place in the kingdom of God, and we never can have too many of them. Initiate them, by all means, especially in one thing—the bee line. Don't waste time by roundabout methods.

The queen bees are as few as the workers. They are rare souls. Deborah, the bee of the Scriptures, was one of these. "A mother in Israel" was her chosen title. And the queen bees are usually "mothers in Israel." They are not the women who shine on public occasions. They are only workers. The queens are busy in the home. They are those blessed motherly persons who attract young people to them, and in their quiet way exert a sanctifying influence throughout the entire community. They are always enough discipline ready to administer, and are ready to make a great noise, and to be conspicuous work. The church has no lack of these. But to-day, as ever, there is need of those who, in the quiet seclusion of ordinary life, amid the cares and duties of the home, set an example of tireless godliness, sending forth a spiritual influence that reaches many hearts about them, and becomes a power for good in many lives.—Rev. G. H. Hubbard, in S. S. Times.

HALLOWED REST.

God's Place of Observation for the Christian Sunday.

The rest which God entered upon as the sequence of His creative activity is man's model of rest. His model, not merely for the weekly abstinence of the Sabbath, but for all His seasons of rest. How did God rest apart His own rest, lifting the period of its duration into a holy prominence, exclaiming the periods that had preceded it? What is it that hallowed His rest? Our Lord's defense of His Sabbath service rendered to man by the assertion of His Father's continued activity throws much light upon the question. "My Father worketh until now, and I work."

He, then, misconceives the facts who construes God's rest as inaction. The great Father has not been idle these ages that have elapsed since His creative energy culminated in the production of man. God's long Sabbath, still in progress, has been one long season of the activity of love. When the work of creation was consummated then especially began love's opportunity to serve. Thenceforward Divine energy spent itself in sustenance; Divine wisdom in oversight. Immediately thereafter arose the necessity that love should redeem or man be lost. Never has the Divine energy of the Father ceased to manifest itself as love. Redemption is the first fruit of God's rest. It was the foremost sign of His Redemptive activity. For that God that His love was never idle. Even as a Jew, loyal to the law of the Sabbath, He never ceased, on that and every day, to render such service to others as only love can prompt. It is love, then, and the service which is love's energy that alone hallow rest.

He who would lift the first day of the week into an exalted place in his life must make it a day for the promotion of redemption. An idle Sunday is in no sense a Sabbath. To lounge, to relax the mind with the trash of social and political gossip, or to inflame the mind with the last sensation, to spend the day in selfish ease or in dull inaction—all this is the day's desecration. Such lazy inaction sink the day to a level lower than that of those days which are of necessity filled with the compulsory service and the stimulated sacrifices of business or household life. To turn the thoughts from self to God; to use the cessation of energy from material objects as an opportunity for its transformation by turning it to spiritual ends; to think of others and to act for them, from choice and not because we must, whether this be done in the great ministries of home or in the fellowships of God's house; to live the life of love to a degree for which other days allow no opportunity—this is the hallowing of the Lord's day, its assimilation to the Sabbath of God.—Christian Inquirer.

"There Is But One Book."

The midnight sky adorned with stars is regarded very differently by a peasant to what it is by an astronomer. The former has no such conception of the glory of the heavens as the latter has. He has visions of magnificence through the dimly lighted windows of his telescope utterly incomprehensible to an untrained eye. Thus it is with the Bible. Only by study and familiarity with it shall we know its treasures of instruction and comfort. As we make it our daily meditation we shall understand how truly the great novelist spoke when dying: "There is but one book."—Christian Inquirer.

Bound to Rise.

You can not keep a good man down. God has decreed for him a certain elevation to which he must attain. He will bring him through though it cost him a thousand worlds. There are men constantly in trouble lest they shall not be appreciated. Every man comes in the end to be valued at just what he is worth. How often you see men turn out all their forces to crush one man or set of men. How do they succeed? No better than did the government that tried to crush Joseph, a Scripture character.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

—The most beautiful thing on earth is a Christian character.

—No one can be happy who is not doing something to help other people.

—No greater question can concern us than the question of our standing with God.

—No man can do a good deed with a good motive without being lifted up by it toward God.

—If you want to make yourself miserable, the easiest way to do it is to become a fault-finder.

—You can not expect your children to be religious unless you make religion attractive in the home.

—People who have learned to be patient, have learned something that will cause the devil a good deal of worry.

—So long as the devil can have the first chance at the children, he don't care how high we build our church steeples.

—The less religion people have, the better they are satisfied with themselves. The more they have, the better they are satisfied with God.

Sign of the Three Bells in Peru.

Pawnshops are incredibly numerous and packed with treasures of every description: diamonds, pearls, emeralds; splendid laces, articles of vertu, table service, and toilet sets of solid gold and silver (including pieces for all the common uses of the bedroom, betokening the extravagance of an age when the Andes poured out streams of precious metal that were thought to be inexhaustible); for since these latter days of poverty the wolf has been kept from many doors by the surreptitious sale of household treasures, heirlooms, keepsakes, and even rich, old-fashioned garments which their dead grandmothers wore. It is quite the fashion here to visit pawnshops; and the tourist can not do better than go on tours of inspection and perhaps convert some choice silver into jewelry in antique settings, which may sometimes be bought for a tithe of their real value.—Lima Letter.

THE DOLL-LADY.

Once there was a sweet Doll-Lady,
Came from Paris o'er the sea,
Wore a cloak of satin
And a velvet hat in Ostrich plumes her
And a gown all
"boudoir."

And her manners
Were so charming!
She could sing and curtsy low Walk and dance a minuet—
Sweetest, tell you
ever met,
You'd have surely
said, I know.

But alas, this sweet doll-lady
Came to visit
small Miss
Rose!
First she lost her
golden tresses,
Then she lost her lovely dress,
Then she lost her eyes and nose.

She was soon a helpless cripple;
She was never put to bed,
Could not sing she was so jaded—
All her wares were faded,
And at last she lost her head.

What this pretty, sweet doll-lady
Must have thought, is plain to me,
Just before her execution—
That a new French revolution
Had arisen this side the sea.

SQUEAKIE AND KITTY.

A Couple of Queer Friends Who Had a Very Good Time.

Dinah was a little black kitten, and Squeakie was a pretty gray mouse.
Squeakie was not afraid that Dinah would eat her up, because they were very dear friends.

Did you ever hear of a cat and a mouse that were dear friends?

Well, it happened this way. One evening little Donald Duncan lay upon the rug in front of the open fire watching the sparks snap out and sail up the chimney. Mamma sat near by writing letters. Just as Donald's eyes were getting sleepy he heard outside the low window a weak little "Mew! Mew!"

"Mamma, I hear a kitty!" he exclaimed, jumping up, his eyes wide open.

"Yes, I hear it too," said mamma.

"Open the window and see if it will come in."

Donald did so, and, sure enough, there was a tiny black kitten shivering with the cold. He brought it in, gave it some warm milk, and made it a comfortable bed in the woodshed. The next day Donald tried to find the owner; but nobody claimed the little wanderer, and so it came about that the kitten was his.

One morning, soon after this, when mamma went to the pantry, she found a young mouse caught in the trap, but in such a way as not to be hurt.

"Oh, don't kill the dear little thing!
Let's keep him, mamma," said Donald.

"I can tame him; I know I can mamma!"

"Squeak! Squeak!" said Mousie; and that settled it.

Donald had an empty bird cage, and he put Squeakie into that at first. Of course Mousie felt very strange at first, but he soon became so tame that he would eat from Donald's finger, and it was not long before Donald could take him out and feed him from his hand.

After awhile little Dinah was allowed to come in the room, and he introduced to Squeakie, but was taught not to touch him. She soon learned that Squeakie was to be her playmate, and so it came about that they ate from the same saucer, played hide-and-seek, and often took a nap together. But the funniest sight of all was to see Dinah walking proudly about with Squeakie on her back. That always made Donald laugh. Would you have laughed too?—Amelia A. Frost, in Our Little Ones.

What the Others Would Have.

Little Carl was calling on a friend a few days ago, and in the course of the conversation the little man remarked enthusiastically: "I wish I had all the dollars there are in the world!"

"Why, Carl," his host exclaimed,
"what would all the other folks do if you had all the dollars?"

Promptly the reply came: "Oh, they'd have the cents!"—Harper's Young People.

LUCILLE GREGG'S MISTAKE.

She Had a Good Time But Eventually Lost Her Self-Respect.

Lucille Gregg was a pretty girl, and fond of a good time. Whenever there was any fun or mischief afoot, Lucille was a leader. She liked to do things a little daring, just a bit "shocking," and enjoyed seeing some of her friends open their eyes, and hear them exclaim: "O Lucille, how can you!"

"I'm not a Miss Prim," she would reply. "I'm not too small-faced to have a good time."

Lucille had many admirers with whom she had what the termed "summery flirtations." "That's no harm in it," she said. "It's just for a good time."

Last summer Lucille went to a fashionable resort in the White mountains.
While there she made the acquaintance of George Martin, a young man of good family in New York. He showed Lucille attention, and sometimes she thought, with a little fluttering of her heart, that this might be more than a "summery flirtation."

One day George was joined by his mother and two sisters, and Lucille looked forward with mingled pleasure and anxiety to meeting them; but a whole day passed, and George did not offer to introduce her to his relatives.
Lucille was somewhat annoyed at this omission, but did not suppose it was intentional until, just at dusk, she was sitting alone in a sheltered corner of the balcony, when she heard voices in one of the rooms.

In answer to some question, she heard George Martin say: "Oh, that's Lucille Gregg."

"Why, then, she must be Belle McNeill's cousin," responded a lady's voice. "You must introduce us. You know Miss Gregg, of course?"

"Yes, I know her," George answered,
"but I don't believe you'll care to make her acquaintance."

Lucille ought to have left without hearing more; but the temptation to learn more was too great, so, with burning cheeks, she lingered and listened.

"Why, she belongs to one of those old Boston families," the lady exclaimed, "and why shouldn't we care to make her acquaintance?"

"Well, she does well enough to talk with and treat to ice cream and confectionery, but she—well, she isn't the girl a man would like for a wife, or would like his sisters to choose for a companion. She's a little too loud."

Lucille waited to hear no more. Hot with angry shame and humiliation, she fled to her room. And she had thought that George Martin esteemed her. She knew his real opinion of her now.

Wave after wave of wounded pride and mortification went over her as she recalled certain acts of her own; twice she had smoked cigarettes in George Martin's presence, and he had pressed toward her "splendid independence," and all the while he was thinking her loud!

Lucille did not spare herself in this humiliating retrospect. "I never will do so again!" she cried at length. "No one shall ever have a chance to call me loud after this kind of a lesson."

Whether she keeps her resolution, or not Lucille Gregg will never think of certain events of that summer without a thrill of shame.

Without a thought of wrong, save in merry pursuit of a good time, many a young girl has been led to some foolish act which has left a stain on her reputation and caused her hours of humiliation afterward.—Youth's Companion.

THE CHAMELEON'S SKIN.

The Creature Can Change Its Color When ever It Wants It.

The chameleon is to many people as mythical as the salamander, but it is a real creature, although its natural history is burdened with many fables of antiquity. It supplied some of the medicines to which absurd credulity ascribed the most marvellous powers, and having the power of fasting for a long period was credited with the faculty of living on air.

The phenomenon of changing color is, however, a scientific fact, and is thus explained.

If we take three pieces of glass, and distribute over one several small drops of brown paint, by preasing on the other glass, the little paint collects in drops and the third piece disappears. If we take the third glass and place on it a few drops of green paint and then press

it against one of the others a green tint will show through the layer of brown dots.

The skin of the chameleon is, roughly speaking, made up of three such layers, with dots of pigment called chromatoph-ores between them. These dots may be contracted or spread out in thin layers, the result of the color depending on the color of the chromatophores affected.

The power of adopting color to surrounding objects is known to naturalists as "protective resemblance," and many cases of it are to be found in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms.

As an interesting fact—
"Johnny, six from 8-85 leaves how many?"

"005."

"Go to the blackboard and show how you get that result."

"8-8-5," wrote Johnny. "Six out of rubbing out the six."—Leaves 8-8-5, which equals 005.—Harper's Young People.
