

DISORDERLY DOINGS.

FISTS AND A KNIFE USED IN ROWDY SHINDIES.

Notorious Jim Frieble Knocks Out an Irishman—Joe Green Kicks John Morecraft—A Drunken Painter Takes a Nap in a Brook.

Ex-dogcatcher Frieble "laid out" Dinna Murray in the Arlington Hotel Saturday night at 11. The fight between the Negro and the Irishman was rather one-sided. It started from an encounter a short time ago, when Dinna was seen upon and his face washed with a black stain. A short time after that, says Frieble, Murray asked the dogcatcher if he had done it. Frieble said "Yes, just for a joke." The two have not been friendly since. Murray has been drinking Saturday night, and called Frieble out of the bar-room and began to talk to him, being supported by four other white men. Then they followed Frieble back. After more conversation Frieble got mad, and claims that he made a strike for William Emmons's head. At any rate Murray received the blow on the chin, and was made inebriated. His chin was badly cut. He came to shortly. Frieble ran out and went down Somerset street. Officer Wilson met him, but knew nothing of the fight and so did not arrest him. Special Officer William Wyckoff arrived too late to catch the dogcatcher.

Charles Boynton, a colored man who lives on Plainfield avenue near South Plainfield, was arrested by Marshal Lines yesterday morning at 2. He was found drunk and disorderly on Westcott avenue near the house of Alfred Hankerson. Hankerson promised to go to court this morning and make a more serious charge against Boynton, but did not appear. It is said by some that Hankerson was to blame in the matter, not Boynton. This morning in the borough court, Boynton acknowledged that he had been intoxicated, and was fined $5 with a choice of ten days in the County Jail by Borough Marshal Line. He had $2.50, and thought he could raise the rest, so he was held in the lockup, awaiting the coming of the money.

John Morecraft, Thomas Stevens and Joseph Green became engaged in a row on Somerset street, on the borough side of the bridge at 9 yesterday morning. Everything had been quiet at 8 when Acting Chief Marshal Van Horn was there. Morecraft was stabbed in the left breast with a pen-knife which Green used in the struggle. Chief Grant appearing on the city side of the bridge the three men ran away. Morecraft was caught in the city later in the day and turned over to the borough police. His stab-wound was a gash an inch long and about two inches deep. This morning he was released, as it could not be proved that he was the offender in the fight. Those who witnessed the affair could not be found in time to testify in the borough court this morning.

Charles Oshen was in the City Court this morning, and later went to Elizabeth for a stay of 30 days. He was arrested late last night by Policeman Frederick for being drunk and disorderly.

Peter Dunn of Brooklyn came to town with Robert Spooner yesterday. At 11 last night Policeman Conroy from the corner of Front and Somerset streets heard swearing in the distance. He went to Jim Babbitt's pool room on East Front street, and found Spooner and Dunn on the piazza. Dunn was doing the swearing, and was promptly gathered in by the policeman. This morning Spooner paid Dunn's $3 fine.

A Plainfield painter who wandered along Stiger's late Saturday night became weary, and walking into the city, went to sleep in the water. The alcohol on his breast floated him, and Good Samaritans: Miner of the alley saw him and pulled him out before he had time to get restless and roll under. Mrs. Kate Vermule then cared for the tired painter and directed him to his home.

HIS TOOLS WERE GONE.

And Even Payment for Them Did Not Satisfy.

This morning at the Climax Bottle Stopper factory while C. T. Nightingale was giving directions to the working force, Ralph W. Jones who had until recently been employed there appeared and demanded the return of some of his tools which he had left. Mr. Nightingale disclaimed any knowledge of the tools, and asked Jones how much they were worth, and, learning he paid Jones the amount asked for, Jones thereupon abused and threatened Mr. Nightingale.

Judge Moore happened to be present and heard the threats, and on his affidavit, substantiating Nightingale's complaint, the offender was apprehended by Chief Grant and on a hearing before Justice Mosher held in $200 bonds to keep the peace and appear before the October Grand Jury. John Vetterlein gave security.

Had Heard of the Netherwood Yacht Club.

The New York Herald gave an entertaining letter from the pen of the resort prince, Col. J. Aug. Hinchman, Sunday, chronicling the season's successes of the hotel prince, F. E. Miller. This was all very fine, as becomes Col. Hinchman and the famous hostelry where the wealth and fashion of the metropolis assemble each Summer. But the Herald head-writer must have been hearing some of the tales of the Netherwood Yacht Club, or possibly the rumor that the Helgins were to be made a part of entry for star-ture sea-going mails, for as an initial letter he inserted the picture of a man with her skirts rolled up to her thighs, to save them from the wet waves surging over the Netherwood beach where lay her inn, shovels, and play pile of sand.

Endured, soaked, shot.

A dog ran through Spooner avenue yesterday morning at 10, frothing at the mouth and acting as if he was mad. It ran into the yard by Ayres Brothers' vegetable market, where a pair of water was thrown on it. Running to the avenue again, the animal was shot by A. Q. Finn.

CHASING A DERBY.

An Employer Unwillingly Pays for His Strid Man's Vacation.

Charles Derby, a driver who has lived in Plainfield and vicinity for many years, is being sought for by his late employer, Elias Williams of Washingtonville. For several months Derby has worked for Williams as a teamster. No money was due him for his work Saturday night, but he prevailed upon his employer to advance him $10. He said he wished to buy clothing.

Then he hastened to Plainfield, and took upon himself the job of making collections for Mr. Williams from people who he knew owed him for carting. Soon he had about $50, as near as Mr. Williams can calculate from investigation among his customers. Then, finding himself with $50 in his possession, Derby left town. Mr. Williams says he is as anxious to find him as he is to recover his money.

NEW LIGHT ON THE REVOLUTION.

Jerseyman and New Yorkers Snored at Washington, and Regarded What Independence Cost.

Historian Appleton Morgan has been asked to answer the "Westfield" letters published in The Daily Press, and cleverly evades replying while giving a scholarly and interesting statement of local events in the Revolution. He concludes: "It interests me to know that our town is mentioned in the only account we have of the last affair between armed parties on New Jersey soil, and that the name was spelled, in 1780, as it is now, 'Westfield'."

"In conclusion, I should like to say that there two very common errors in regard to our Revolution. One of them is that the whole country at the outbreak of the Revolution was poor. It was not. In this vicinity, especially New York City, the State of New Jersey and Philadelphia, there was a great deal of wealth. Indeed, you remember, that Lord North's first project to tax the Colonies was urged on the fact that the Colonies were rich, and that they ought to help bear the expenses of England's continental wars. "The second error is that the war of the Revolution was a popular war—that everybody went in for it. On the contrary it was a very unpopular war. There were some 2,600,000 inhabitants in the Colonies at the beginning of hostilities. But the largest army Washington ever commanded was 25,000 men, and in a week or two this dwindled to 17,000, and for the rest of the seven years it is doubtful if he ever commanded more than 3,000 or 4,000 men at once. The fact is, that almost everybody hung on to their possessions, and even to the date of Yorktown either spoke of Washington's troops as raggamuffins and tattered rebels, or else carefully concealed their opinions. Up to the last, Washington fought a fire in the rear, which belittled his success, hooted at his defeats, and almost the entire press was Tory, and jeered and prophesied daily, that he would be 'hung as high as Haman.' All the more honor, then, to the faithful few who followed him in faith and hunger and rage, to the end."

SPREADING HER FAME.

The Old Bay State Learning of Plainfield's Glories.

The Revere, Mass., Journal in its report of the National Editorial Convention says: "Plainfield is one of the wealthiest towns in New Jersey and many New York business men reside there. It is a city of beautiful homes, fine shaded streets and splendid drives. It was settled by the Quakers in 1735 and during the Revolution General Washington used 'The Rock,' a prominent point on the Orange Mountains, just southwest of the town, to make observations of the movements of the British Army."

"The Walter Scott & Co. printing machinery works are located here and it was a treat to most of those present to inspect the many fine pieces of printing machinery on exhibition. Luncheon was served in Scott's new building, after which a delightful drive about the town was given all who desired."

COMMUTERS COLUMN.

Jersey Central commuters have a Summer blessing that is denied all others—the refreshing trip across Newark Bay.

What makes a man mad is to find that his train has been baking in the sun in the yards all the afternoon and that the windows are all glued fast.

The Press has prayed repeatedly for the reform which Westfield's Peasall now hammers at:

Unquestionably the Jersey Central Railroad is one of the best roads in the country. We think, after traveling over almost every road in the country, that it is without exception the best road, as far as it goes, in the United States, which is another way of saying that we think it is the best in the world; since the United States is acknowledged by world travelers to have the best roads in the world. Yet it is not passing strange that the Jersey Central officials (Mr. Olhausen is the man, really) should be so short-sighted as to treat their patrons in the Jersey City train house, all for the want of opening the great windows that line the train house on either side for a thousand feet, coxing the sun blasts and shutting out God's fresh air that blows up from the bay.

PUFFED-UP PEOPLE.

DEPEND ON WIND, AND LIKE A GOOD BLOWING-UP.

Crescent Cyclers Find Rocky Racing Away from Home—Changes in List of Events—Familiar Course of the Labor Day Race—Track Talk and Wheeling Gossip.

Entries for the handicap races of the 15th close August 11, and for the other events August 15.

An Italian laborer who couldn't tell the difference between a membership ticket and a single admission pass was in sole charge of the Crescent track Saturday afternoon.

A cyclist from Newark who tried to cover Union and a large portion of the district yesterday on his wheel was overcome with the heat when he reached Plainfield, and had to be taken home by train.

Henry Scott was attending to the injuries of his brother Monte at Manhattan Field Saturday, when the finale of his races were run off, and so did not ride in either. He had qualified in both the mile and the half-mile handicaps.

The Crescents have changed the order and the events for their meet of August 15. The corrected list is as follows: 1-mile novice, 1-mile handicap, 2.3-mile scratch, 1-mile scratch (boys under 16), 3-mile lap race, 1-mile 2.30 class, 2-mile handicap.

A number of Crescent members witnessed the racing of Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs on Manhattan Field Saturday afternoon. The difference in safety and speed of the New York track and the Plainfield course was the most noticeable thing about the racing to all of them.

The Associated Cycling Club's twenty-five-mile road race Labor Day is to have a peculiar course. It will be started from Elizabeth, on Morris avenue, ride to Springfield, to Westfield, to Rahway, and back to Elizabeth, then make a turn on Rahway avenue, near Cherry street, and return to Rahway, to the finish line. This will necessitate transferring the officials from Elizabeth to Rahway after the race has started. The start will be made at 11 a. m.

Ex-President John Traynor, William O'Connor and Matthew Oshen of the Lyceum Cyclers went riding on their wheels yesterday afternoon. When near Bound Brook Traynor's tire struck a spike. No repair traps were at hand, and Traynor walked home alone. The others rode. Traynor is in training for the Diocesan Union field day events of August 11, and is now thought to have a good chance in the walking match as well as in the bicycle races.

In Port Jervis Friday, Monte Scott of the Crescents, Frank Doupe of the Kings County Wheelmen and E. L. Blauvelt of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, who were on a trip with Secretary Teel, each won a first and a second prize. Blauvelt gave a complimentary exhibition mile in 2:19, and Scott an exhibition half mile in 1:03. The track was an old trotting track which had not been used for five years. The cycling spirit having been aroused, the local sports pulled the weeds from the track, hauled it down, and started in as promoters of wheel working. Scott's and Blauvelt's performances are records from which the racing there will start.

On the wretched Manhattan Field track Saturday Monte Scott of the Crescents took third prize in the one-mile scratch, 2.30 class, finishing half a length behind Fred Boyce. Scott was third in his heat in the one-mile handicap, but did not ride into place in the final, as he fell with 16 others and was quite severely bruised. Rydell rode without being successful in the one-mile and the two-mile handicaps. In the two-mile handicap Oumling from 130 yards rode a good race, and thought he had a place in the final, as he had saved himself and finished fourth. It was decided that the condition of the track would not permit of the safe riding of more than two from each heat, so he was not allowed to try in the final heat. Line rode in the mile handicap, but he had not practiced on the track, and did not understand how to reach the comparatively safe portions of it, and soon dropped out.

GONE ON A BAT.

Plainfield Boys Who Are Fond of the Game with a Stick in It.

The Young Eagles are anxious to find teams that will consent to play ball with them. The only requirement is that the players of the challenging team will be, like them, all under 16 years of age.
