TRIP OF A PLAINFIELDER.

North Found in Some Places Enterprise in Other Human Nature in All.

Chas. Knapp of Westfield street, corner of Plainfield avenue, left this city for Texas the 26th of last May. Since then he has written the following interesting letter:

On my arrival in New Orleans I was quite like, although we experienced a rough passage, and shower in a moment at that season of the year. On reaching the Southern coast we were made to feel the effects of climate; the contrast was as sudden as if we had been taken to a different world.

A DROUPEY FARMING PLACE. At a distance of about 10 miles from the city the old irrigation grounds and buildings are not nearly so large as those of the Central and other large plantations.

THE OLD LOG CABIN HOTEL. I left New Orleans by ferry to Algiers and took the Southern Pacific for Ballinger. The hotel had been built in a very shabby style in comparison with those to which I was accustomed.

THE RAILROAD COMPANY. The railroad company has to pay for every animal killed. Sometimes serious accidents occur. The asphalt road which I had heard so much of was not so good as I had expected.

THE BROWN AND BLOOD-TRIED MEN. We crossed the Colorado river, which is a large body of water, and reached San Antonio, although only six years old and forty years of age.
