Cat licensing, noise, group home acted upon by Municipal Council

by Pat DiMaggio
The municipal council failed to make a motion to override Mayor George Nucera's veto of an ordinance calling for the licensing and inoculation of cats at the regular council meeting held on Nov. 17.

The ordinance, introduced by Councilwoman Ruth DeLuca, was vetoed by the mayor who called it "unenforceable" at last month's council meeting. It called for all cats in the township to be licensed and inoculated by their owners. Mrs. DeLuca tried to introduce a new ordinance under new business but was defeated by Councilman William Carson, Fred Ekel, Bernard Hayden, Joseph Poznack and Raymond Krov who voted against placing it on the agenda.

An ordinance to amend an ordinance entitled "Noise" was also defeated by the council with a vote of three in favor, with Councilmen Ekel, Poznack, Krov and Carson upping Councilman Hayden and the new ordinance would "assure the people of this town that they will free from the pollution of noise."

Introduced by Hayden, the new deleted ordinance is one used and recommended by the state. He called the present ordinance "not enforceable" and very biased."

A resolution dismantling a law and on behalf of the township regarding the opening of a "group home" on Oak Ridge Road was approved by the council. The resolution stated that the council felt it is not prohibited to disposal of solid waste.

Library celebrates 25th anniversary with accolades to supporters

by Pat DiMaggio

Thanks to the interest of and hard work by various people, groups, organizations and local government, the public library is alive and well.

In November, the Clark Public Library, located at 303 Westfield Ave., celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary and its history over the years includes the dreams and ambitions of many people.

The Hilcrest Women's Club began a lending program in the late 1950's, for the children of their area.

Interest in the program and expansion led to the establishment of the Friends of the Library Services in Clark, numbering over 100 in membership.

Through their efforts, the question of a library was put on the ballot on the November 1960 election.

It was approved by a vote of 3,763 to 975.

John O'Connor, then the mayor of Clark, appointed the first Board of Trustees, which consisted of Edward S. Avers, Robert Dwyer, Virginia Robinson, Harry Strickler, Charles Dickens, the superintendent of schools, and the mayor.

The first library was opened on November 1, 1961 in a small stone at 17 Lincoln Blvd. Immediately realizing that this building may be small, the library moved in April, 1963, to larger quarters on Rainan Road.

Earlier, in November of 1966, the Municipal Council had set aside a piece of land next to the Municipal Building for a permanent library and in 1962 an additional plot of land adjacent to the first was purchased.

The council appropriated the necessary funds and with a federal grant of $45,000 the library moved into its present building in August of 1966. At that time the library had a shelf capacity of 30,000 volumes and seating for 38 reference patrons.

Sandra Jones, Director and Head Librarian, said that the Clark Library presently holds more than 45,000 volumes and numbers between 20 and 30 percent of residents as registered borrowers.

Sandra is quick to point to the improvements made by the board. "Some of the things the board has done this year have really moved us forward," said Sandra.

She listed newly installed ceiling fans, a book drop and a video cassette service as the most popular additions to the library. "We've added to our large print collection, we have a public electronic typewriter, which is free, and a staff person who is a Notary Public," said Sandra, calling the board "a delight to work with."

Staff includes one full-time director, a part-time children's librarian, three full-time and three part-time assistants and volunteers and high school pages to help with shelving.

One area Sandra hopes to see an improvement in is the children's library.

"Because we have only a part time children's libranarian, we have a part time program. We hope to do more," said Sandra.

The library is presently waiting for news of a construction grant application submitted to the State Library for repair of a leaky ceiling and an out-of-date heating and air conditioning system.

The meeting room at the library is booked solid, according to Sandra, and plans are underway for a book sale to be held on Nov. 22 and 24. The library ran a blood drive in November and also hosted the

Roslyn Artists String

Quartet on Nov. 16. "One of the aims of the board is to improve the number of programs we can offer," explained Sandra.

To all the dedicated individuals and organizations who have worked to make the Clark Public Library a success. "Happy Twenty-

Fifth Anniversary!"
