"I Dearly Love a Bargain

"And that is what I got in my new Macey Book Cabinet. In it I possess a piece of furniture for my home that radiates the style, the good tasts, and the genius of an Old Master; and my enjoyment is all the greater because it actually cost less than I would have paid for an ordinary Bookoase.

"To have in my home and before my children constantly the influence of a mind like Thomas Shotaton, Robert Adam, Fra Junipero or Chippendale, who were among the world's greatest Masters in Furniture, and to realize that such golden gifts of good tasts and harmony were to be mine without costing something extra, was indeed a new and pleasing exper-

they are. They have been designed and wrought out as the Old Masters would have built them. They are made in such a variety of styles, grades and sizes, and all at such popular prices, that every tests may be estimated every expectation realized.

The bold but graceful Colonial patterns; the delicate and chaste Sheraton; the graceful and pleasing Chippendale; the quaint Arts and Craits or more rugged Mission made of mahogany or oak in all the popular finishes, afford such a appointment to you afterwards.

Every new Macey Book Cabinet has the perfect non-binding doors which add so much to their value and are fatted with moveable and interchangeable feet—an exclusive feature of Macey Book Cabinets without which the correct styles of the Old Furniture Masters could not be carried out When you see the Macey Book Cabinets, your eves wi convince you that their exquisite style costs you nothing entra and that these sectional cabinets can be extended, re-

The prisoners will be arraigned before Judge Tompkins at White Plains today to plead to the indictments, and Sheriff Hartnett obtained a confession from Lorenzo Cali, fifth member of the gang, who was arrested in Griffen farm and took part in the holdup of Mrs. Ray and Miss Griffen, but he denied knowing anything about the murder. The most damaging evidence obtained against him by Sheriff Hartnett is a small handkerchief which was found in one of his pockets and which. it is alleged, belonged to Mrs. Hall.

INSANITY TO BE DEFENSE.

Attorney For Alleged "Gentleman Burglar-Slayer" in Opening Statement Bketches History of Client's Life, Deplaring That Ancestors Generations Removed Exhibited Insanity.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 16.—Betram 3. Spencer, on trial for the murder of Martha B. Blackstone, disturbed the aufet of the superior courtroom here Turing the testimony of Massachusetts police officers. Spencer sprang to the front of his care and cried:

"Why don't he tell the truth?" The officer was detailing Spencer's alleged confession. His whole body shook, his face twitched and his long, sticky hair fell down over his forehead. It took a strangle hold to force him into his seat, and then, as the paroxysm passed, he sat there in a heap, whimperink like a cold puppy. Again he asked, this time querulously. didn't be tell the truth?"---- »

A little later on the attorney assigned by the commonwealth to defend Spencer made his opening address. He referred to the incident which by its unexpectedness had shaken the nerves of the courtroom as an example of the outburst to which the man known as the "gentleman burglar" had been liahie all his life. But it wasn't upon these impulses alone that the insanity plea was advanced. "And that is what I got in my new Macey Book Cabinet. In it I possess a piece of furniture for my home that radiates the style, the good taste, and the genius of an Old Master; and my enjoyment is all the greater because it actually cost less than I would have paid for an ordinary Bookcase. "To have in my home and before my children constantly the influence of a mind like Thomas Sheraton, Robert Adam. Fra Junipero or Chippendale, who were among the world's greatest Masters in Furniture, and to realize that such golden gifts of good taste and harmony were to be mine without costing something extra, was indeed a new and pleasing exper-

They are made in such a variety of styles, grades and sizes, and all at such popular prices, that every taste may be satisfied, every expectation realized.

The bold but graceful Colonial patterns; the delicate and chaste Sheraton; the graceful and pleasing Chippendale; the quaint Arts and Crafts or more rugged Mission made of mahogany or oak in all the popular finishes, afford such a variety to select from that your choice will not prove a dir appointment to you afterwards.

Every new Macey Book Cabinet has the perfect non-binding doors which add so much to their value and are fitted with moveable and interchangeable feet—an exclusive feature of Macey Book Cabinets without which the correct styles of the Old Furniture Masters could not be carried out When you see the Macey Book Cabinets, your eyes will
