MINE EXPLOSION COST 108 LIVES.

Only Eight Bodies Recovered by Rescue Parties.

Brieville, Tenn., Dec. 11.—The number of those who lost their lives in the Great Smoky Mountains coal mine explosion Saturday is placed at 108. Only eight bodies had been recovered when the rescue work was halted.

The bodies recovered were found about 22 and all were mangled. All members of the rescue parties are now confident that none of the eight bodies had been recovered when the rescue work was halted.

Several times the rescue parties were driven back by the approach of the deadly after-damp, but later when a new fan replaced the one destroyed, pure air was forced into the mine, and work proceeded steadily.

Upward of 1000 people gathered about the mine entrance, the entire mining district assembled, and thousands of people from this city made the trip.

ARMY TOO SCATTERED.

Secretary Stimson's Report Recommends Favour Units.

Washington, Dec. 11.—A dramatic report in the organization of the United States army is recommended by Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war, in his annual report. He finds the army too scattered in small units, too exclusive of material and too inefficient to meet an emergency.

A lesser number of units and a greater number of men in each troop company, making them more numerous, is recommended to a minimum of full strength is advised.

"As increasing the size of the regiment does not increase the administrative or financial charges, and as all of the added men are effective fighting men, it necessarily follows that an increase in the number of regiments will result in reducing the cost per effective rifle," says the report.

ECONOMY IN MEAT.

Avoid Waste by the Judicious Use of Odds and Ends.

The cook who broils the tough end of a porkchop steers right to the ribs in a roast, throws away the bones and jules left on the platter by the carrier and discards as unfit for use the meat from which the soup stock is made is guilty of wicked waste.

The end of a porkchop steak is quite as good as the rest of it. It should be cut off. This, together with the ribs and jules left on the platter, a half pound of corned beef, an onion, a carrot and some parsley, will make a delicious soup. The ribs should be cut off a board when preparing it for the oven. These, with the leftover gravy, may be used in a soup for the next day.

In making stock the long, slow process of gentle boiling extracts the flavor from the meat and coagulates the albumen. Only a little of the latter is extracted. Therefore the most losses are in the pouring of the stock. There are numerous ways in which each meat can be made appetizing. Combined with rice and tomatoes a delicious luncheon dish may be made. Butter a baking dish and line with hot boiled rice. Fill the center with bits of meat well seasoned with salt, pepper and onion juice. Cover with rice. Bake twenty minutes in the oven. Serve on a platter and pour over it a well seasoned tomato sauce. It is a toothsome morsel.—National Food Magazine.

HISTORIC FIRES.

The Most Fatal of All, Perhaps, Was the Burning of Moscow.

A list of great cities burned would be a list of nearly all the great cities of the world. Jerusalem, the splendid residence of a long series of rulers whose influence provided the world with the idea of the Hellenic point, was burned, with all its palaces and temples, by the Romans. There were so utterly destroyed that their very location has become a matter of doubt. Rome was burned eight times. Jerusalem, four times, and though they rose from their ashes.

The second time it was not the first. Athens, Syracuse, Bagdad, Alexandria and Antioch now exhibit only a shadow of their former grandeur. The Phoenician, like the Spartan and the Assyrian, disappeared with the ruin of their capitals, but the most faithful records of the world are recorded in the history of the world in perhaps that of Moscow.

"They talk as if the fate of Europe had been decided at Waterloo," says the Bourgeois in his memoirs of the battle of Waterloo. "If Napoleon had been Wellington and Blucher a dozen times it could not have retrieved the reverses of the battle of Waterloo. The truth is that the French Caesar and his fortune were ruined by the burlesque of the battle of Waterloo. The general pile of the great nation—Ex-chance."

This was for the feast of tabernacles. So we see that the custom was early practiced by the Jews.

Italy is the emblem of peace and good will, and the ancient poets tell us that it was also significant of the resurrection. How fitting its use today and how interesting to know its history! Who knows but that the Romans may have derived their idea from the Persians, who have a saying to the effect that the sun never shined on the earth until it was made to make a connection from the bark when they threw it in the face of a new-born child as an emblem of good luck.

Closely associated with the holy is the peony mistletoe with its romance. The Druids held a solemn procession each year on the sixth day of the moon nearest the year, going forth with a golden stick to cut the mistletoe from the sacred oak. The oak to the Druids was a symbol of strength. It was also the tree sacred to Juno, and only the mistletoe that grew on an oak had holy virtue. Each year the Druids would go to the oak when the voice of the cuckoo was heard, the bird the priest cut the mistletoe from the oak, and when taken from the tree it was placed in white linen cloth.

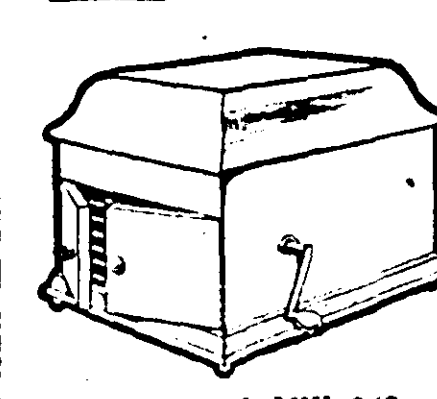

From time immemorial the mistletoe has been considered as omen of good, and it was said that furies took refuge in its thick foliage, so any one who hung a spray in the home would have the protection and gratitude of the good fairy folk. Today, with its enchantment, we beguile sweet human furies under its white berries, and all who are kissed may be sure that the hidden fires will sanction and not condemn the practice. In Sweden mistletoe was made of mistletoe, and in Wales a necklace made from the waxen berries was supposed to protect from snake bites.

St. Valter Scott wrote this beautiful poem describing the social element in the Christmas celebration of medieval times:

And well our Christmas stew of old
Lived when the year its course had rolled
With all the little Christmas back again
With all the little Christmas back again
On Christmas eve the bells were rung;
Gave honor to the holy night.
That only light in all the year
Saw the bright stars of the night.
The daisies danced by the hearth alone,
For to the wood did many men go
To gather in the mistletoe.

No matter how much or how little you want to pay for a Christmas gift, you won't get anything that will give so much pleasure as a Victor or a Victor-Victrola.

There's one of these instruments at a price to suit every purse, and we'll arrange easy terms if desired.

Stop in any time and we'll gladly play any Victor music you want to hear.
