By WASHINGTON IRVING. Tho stranger was on this evening in a more than usually communic tivo mood, and was narrating a number of astounding stories of plunderings and burnings upon the high seas. He dwelt upon them with peculiar relish, heightening the frightful particulars in proportion to their effect on his peaceful auditors. He gave a long swaggering detail of the capture of a Spanish merchantman. She was laying becalmed during a long summer's day, just off from an island which was one of the lurking places of the pirates. They had reconnoitered her with their spy glasses from the shore, and ascertained her character and force. At night a picked crew of daring fellows set off for her in a whale boat. They approached with muffled oars, as she lay rocking idly with the undulations of the sea and her sails flapping against the masts.

They were close under her stern before the guard on deck was aware of their approach. The alarm was given; the pirates threw hand grenades on deck and confusion some were shot down, others driven overboard and drowned, while others fought hand to hand from the main deck to the quarter deck, disputing gallantly every inch of ground. There were three Spanish gentlemen on board with their ladies, who made the most desperate resistance; they defended the companion way, cut down several of their assailants, and fought like very devils, for they were maddened by the shricks of the ladies from the cabin. One the Dons was old and soon dispatched. The other two kept their ground vigorously, even though the captain of the pirates was among their assailants. Just then there was a shout of victory from the sound for the last twenty or thirty the main deck. "The ship is ours!" cried

The following is the purport of his story

THE ADVENTURE OF SAM. The Black Fisherman, Commonly 1 lunted Mud Sam.

Everybody knows Mud Sam, the old negro fisherman who has fished about vears. Well, it is now many years since the pirates.

One of the Dons immediately dropped his sword and surrendered; the other, Suydam on Long Island, having fina light skiff, and being well acquainted with the currents and eddies, he had been able to shift his station with the "The murderers!" exclaimed Sam involunshifting of the tide, from the Hen and Chickens to the Hog's back, and from the Hog's back to the Pot, and from the up, beheld the round black head of Sam Pot to the Frying pan; but in the eager-ness of his sport Sam did not see that half out of their orbits; his white teeth a man who had unwarily stolen upon the tide was rapidly ebbing, until the chattering, and his whole visage shining the lair of a sleeping lion. The honest burghers cast fearful glances at the deep warned him of his danger, and he had roaring of the whirlpools and rapids with cold perspiration.

Dark clouds mount. In every direction he heard came bundling up in the west; and now some one or other of the gang hemming break the silence; for he was continually and then a growl of thunder or a flash of tempted to make ineffectual head against lightning told that a summer storm was this tyrant of the seas and to regain his lost consequence in the eyes of his another the lee of Manhattan Island, and a wall rose directly in his way, it seemed

Kidd, as usual, was his here, concerning that shot out from a cleft and spread its whom he had picked up many of the broad branches like a canopy over the seized it with both hands, and being whom he had picked up many of the floating traditions of the province. The seaman had always evinced a settled pique against the red faced warrior. On this occasion he listened with peculiar impatience. He sat with one arm a kimbo, the other elbow on a table, the kimbo, the other elbow on a table, the lightning seemed to lick up the surges hand holding on to the small pipe he of the stream; but Sam, snugly shelwas pettishly puffing; his legs crossed, drumming with one foot on the ground and casting every now and then the side glance of a basilisk at the prosing capance of a basilisk at the prosing capan tain. At length the latter spoke of Kidd's laway, and only now and then a faint cap, to one or two of his compades as gleam of lightning in the east showed of his crew, to land his plunder in which way it had gone. He was on the point of making loose his skiff to return homewards when he saw a light gleaming along the water from a distance, which seemed rapid current, which in that place runs like a mill stream, and soon swept him off from the neighborhood. It was not, however, until he had drifted a great distance that he ventured to ply his oars; when he made his skiff dart like an arrow through the strait of Hell Gata. down the surface of the rock, let himself your teeth: cried the seaman. "I bank. It pulled up in a small cove close tell you Kidd never was up the Hudson—what the plague do you know of Kidd and his haunts?"

"What do I know?" echoed the half pay officer: "why, I was in London at the time of his triel ave and I had the here's the iron returning on the cocklet of the land the time of his triel ave and I had the here's the corner of the cocklet of the land the time of his triel ave and I had the

Here, the half pay officer, who was was as little noise made as possible; everything had an air of mystery and secrecy. Sam had a great relish for the horrible—a tale of murder was a treat for rowing very muzzy and sleepy, and nodding over his liquor, with half-ex-tinguished eye, suddenly gleamed up like an expiring rushlight. "That's all humbug!" said he fullness or bloating after eating, or of "yebniess," or emptiness of stomach in the moning, tongue coated, bitter or bad tastel in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred oyesight, "floating specis" before the eyes, nervous prostration or px-haustion, irritability of temper, hot flustes, alternating with chilly sensations, starp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold foot, drowshicess after meals, wakefulness or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impeding calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number ing calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierco's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If hot cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, 3kin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooper or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierco's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-tains and impurities, from whatever cause arising.
