"What manner of looking fellow i he?" asked the doctor. "I think I would "Yes you Englishmen are apt to look to one another," said the colonel in re-ply, "and Gwynne is a particularly fine specimen. He has your eyes and hair, doctor but hasn't had time to grow grizzled and bulky yet, as you and I have. One might say that you and the sergeant were from the same shire."
"That would help me very little, since I was only three years old when the governor emigrated," answered the doctor, with a quiet smile. "We keep some traces of the old sod, I suppose, but I've been a Yankee for forty years, and have never once set eyes on Merrie England in all that time. Did the sergeant say where he wanted to go?" And the nuestioner looked up sharply. "Nowhere in particular down the valley was all. I remember, though, that Mr. Parke said he seemed much ex ercised over the name of that ranch down the Monee-I've forgotten what they call it. Have you heard it, colonel?" "Seems to me I have, but I've forgotten. You have, doctor, have you not?" "Heard what, colonel?" "The name of that ranch down the Mones an English ranch, they tell me, about seven miles away." "Oh, yes that one! They call it Dunery he stood in dread. There could be raven Ranch.—Did the sergeant take any little doubt that the clusive stranger was of the hounds with him, captain? It cocurs to me he might have been running a coyote or a rabbit, and his horse have stumbled and fallen with him. There is no end of prairie dog holes down that "No, the dogs are all in. I wouldn't be surprised if he had gone to the ranch. That's an English name, and they are all Englishmen down there, I hear. Very possibly that is the solution. They may have tempted him to stay with English hospitality: though it would astonish me if he yielded. I'll tell the men to inquire there first, colonel, and will go and send them now." And, bowing to his commander, Capt. Stryker turned and left the porch. The doctor rose, thrust his hands deep in his pockets, paced slowly to the southern end of the veranda, and gazed down the distant, peaceful valley, an anxious cloud settling on his brow. The colonel resumed once more the newspaper he had dropped upon the floor. After a moment Dr. Quin came slowly back, stood in front of the entrance a few seconds looking irresolutely at the soldier sprawled at full length in his reclining hair, stepped towards him with a preparatory clearing of his throat as though about to speak, and then, suddenly and helplessly abandoning the idea, he plunged down the short flight of steps, hurried out of the gate and disappeared around the lence corner in the direction of the hospital. Immersed in his paper the colonel never seemed to note that he had gone; neither did he note the fact that two ladies were coming down the HAT evening a group of cavalry officers came The soft swish of trailing skirt being nsufficient to attract his attention as they arrived nearly opposite the shaded in front of officers" row a dark featured, black bearded, soldierly looking captain veranda, a silvery peal of laughter broke the stillness of the early evening. Mrs. Belknap's laugh could not have been more ready, and her great, dark eyes shot a sidelong glance to note onel, cheerily. Come in and have a seat. The doctor and I were just wonthe effect. You see: you were so hidden by the vines that no one would dream of your being there in am-"Oh, indeed, I assure you I wasn't asleep," answered the colonel, hastily. "Won't you come in, ladies, and sit here in the shade awhile?" "We thought we would stroll around until parade," said Mrs. Lawrence, hesitatingly and then sit down and watch it somewhere." "No place better than this," promptly answered the colonel. "You can sit be hind the vines on that side and see, or, what we would infinitely prefer, sit here at the entrance and be seen. Meantime, I've been unpacking some photograph albums this afternoon, and you can amuse yourselves with those while I put on my harness. Come!".

The colonel's collection of photographs was something the ladies had already heard a great deal of. One of the most genial and popular officers of the army; albums full of pictures of prominent menand attractive and distinguished women not only those with whom he had been ciated in his long years of service, but men eminent in national and state affairs, and women leaders in society in many a gay metropolis.

Both the ladies had liqued to see this famous collection the evening before, but the colonel had not then unpacked the albums, and they were disappointed. Now, however, the prospect was indeed alluring, and neither could resist. When the first call sounded for parade a few moments after, and the commanding officer was getting himself into his full dress uniform, the two pretty heads were close together, and two pairs of very lovely eyes - one dark and deep and dan-gerous, the other a clear and honest gray were dilating over page after page of photographed beauty. There was no need to puzzle over the identity of the originals, under each picture the thoughtful colone had carefully written the name and address. There were shouts, indisinguishable at first, but excited and tartling. Some of the men in ranks witched nervously and partially turned their heads, as though eager to look behind them and see what was wrong; whereat stern voices could be heard in subdued but potent censure: "Keep your eyes to the front, there, Sullivan!" "Stand last, there, center of Third company!" The guard, too, paraded in front of its quarters some distance behind the line, was manifestly disturbed, and the voice of the sergeant could be heard giving hurried orders. Every man in the battalion seemed at the same instant to arrive at one of two conclusions prisoners escaping, or fire over at the stables—and all eyes were fixed on the importurbable form of the commanding officer, as though waiting the signal from him to break and go to the rescue, But there the colonal stood placid, calm, and apparently utterly unconscious of the distant yet nearing clamor. The adjutant hesitated a moment before proceeding further, and glanced appealingly at his chief; whereupon there came from the blue and gold and yellow statue out on the parade, in half reproachful tones, "After to-morrow there will be little

Officer after officer he passed in review until he came to Stryker's troop, posted on the right of the cavalry, and there, with a neigh of recognition, he fearlessly trotted up to the captain's outstretched hand. Another minute and two men fell out and made a temporary gap in the rank; through this a sergeant file closer extended his white glove, relieved the captain of his charge and led the panting steed away.

The men retook their places; the captain again resumed his position in front of the center of his company, dropped the point of his saber to the ground and settled back into "parade rest;" the band went on thundering down the line, countermarched and came back to its post on the right, making the welkin ring with the triumphant strains of 'Northern Route," the trumpets pealed the "retreat," the adjutant stalked his three yards to the front, faced flercely to the left and shouted his resonant orders down the line, three hundred martial forms sprang to attention, and the burnished arms came to the "carry" with simultaneous crash, ranks were opened with old time precision, the parade "presented" to the colonel with all due formality, the manual was executed just as punctiliously as though nothing unusual had happened; first sergeants reported, orders were published. officers marched solidly to the front, halted, and made its simultaneous salute to the colonel, who slowly raised and lowered his white gloved hand in recognition; and then, and not till then, was any one allowed to speak of what was uppermost in every mind—that Sergt. places the trees are too close together, and want thinning out; and in many more places they want trimming very much. As for instance, up town, in Oliver street, from Grand to Seminary, the sun hardly ever shines on the road bed, from one en of the summer season to the other; and this season fin particular, there has been times when passing through that street, one could have his olfactory nerves greeted with a musty effluvia. There are other streets nearly in the same fix, and this is not in keeping with a city that claims to be of the healthiest in the state. There are over the broad expanse of prairie when Lieut. So, with the assurance from God of a wonderful Son and an eternal kingdom, he sits before the Lord and says, "Who am I, O Lord Godf and what is my house that Thou hast brought me hithertof" house for a great while to come." Not only was David amazed at the past goodness of God to him in taking him from the sheep-cote and from following the sheep to be the ruler over God's people Israel (v. viii), but he was overwhelmed by the revelation now made to him of the future glory and sta-bility of his houseand kingdom. "And is this the manner of man, O Lord God?" There is no doubt some reference to Solomon in house of David, but there is a more decided reference to the Son of David of Matt. i, 1; ing that covenant which Issiah calls "The

this very kingdom when Israel shall be restored and cleansed from all their sins, the Lord. stored and cleansed from all their sins, the Lord says that He will do it not for their sakes, but for His Holy Name's sake. When we remember that one of the precious names of Jesus, Son of David, is "The Word of God" (John I, 1; Rev xix, 13), then we understand that "for Jesus' sake" He will accomplish all that "for Jesus' sake" He will accomplish all things concerning his elect church, and His elect nation Israel, "according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Eph. iii, 11.)

22. "Wherefore, Thou art great, O Lord God: for there is none like Thee." Who is like unto Thee, O Lord, among the gods!" SIR: I would like to say a few words in regard to the trees in the streets, and even the yards, of this city. There is nothing that adorns a city so much, or makes it look more home-like than trees. Still there is such a thing as having too many, and sang Moses after the Egyptians had been overthrown in the Hed sea (Ex. xv, 11). "There is none like unto Thee, O Lord; Thou art great, and Thy name is great in hight," says Jeremiah as he talks of the True and Living God, king of nations, king of, eternity. (Jer. x, 6-10.)

23. "And what one nation in the earth is like Thy people, even like Israel, *** * which Thou redeemeds to Thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods 1 is-rael alone of all the nations was thus honored of God, and surely Hohad a right to expect from them great things in the way of obedi-ence, in return for the great things which He-had done for them. The church of Christi composed of believers gathered out of all nations, has been redeemed by His precious blood that she may make Him a name on this earth; and He has a right to expect from every one thus redeemed a holy life and a whole hearted devotion to Himself in His present great work of preaching the Gospel to 24. "Thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be a people unto thee for-ever, and thou Lord art become their God." "I know that whatsover God 'doeth, it shall be forever" (Eccl. iii, 14). The sun, moon and stars as we look upon them in the heavens are a sign to us that Israel shall never cease to be a nation before God.

25. "And now, O Lord God, * * do as Thou hast said." David follows up his heartfelt thanksgiving by placing himself entirely in the will of God and at His disposal; like Mary when she said. "Behold the board.

like Mary when she said: "Behold the hand-maid of the Lord; be it unto me according to Thy word." (Luke 1, 38.)
26. "And let Thy name be magnified for ever." David seeks not his own glory nor the glory of Israel, but that through him or his house or his people the name of Jehovah mny be magnified. In Ps. lxix, 30, he says, "I will magnify Him with thanksgiving," and that is what he is doing in this lesson. Hear him repeatedly saying, "Let the Lord be magnified" (Pa xxxv, 27; x, 16; 1xx, 4), and calling upon the people to magnify the Lord with him and exalt His name together (Ps.) 27. "For Thou, O Lord of Hosts, God of Israel, hast revealed to The servant, saying, I will build thee an house," and therefore David prayed this prayer. This is the right thing to do with all the revelations which God makes to us in His word concerning His great goodness towards us, and His purposes not yet fulfilled; just receive them grateful-ly, eat them joyfully and pray for them with 28. "And now, O Lord God, Thou art that

28. "And now, O Lord God, Thou art that God, and Thy words be true, and Thou hast promised this goodness unto Thy servant." He here acknowledges that he firmly believes that all God's words are true, and he simply pleads His promises. This is what we need today on the part of Christians; to lay hold of God's promises and plead them with the same confidence with which we would present same confidence with which we would present a check at a bank for payment; but as the check will not be paid till we indorse it, so we need not expect a promise to be fulfilled till we indorse it—that is, write our own name on it as if it meant us individually. with Thy blessing let the house of Thy servant be blessed forever." "Satisfied with favor, and full with he blessing of the Lord" favor, and full with the blessing of the Lord".

(Deut. xxxiii, 25], who can estimate it? "A blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive" (Mal. iii, 10), why should we not have it? Only let us fulfill the conditions of this last one and it will surely come in Histime; and as to the blessings of Matt. v. 1—notice the conditions and fulfill them.
