This story is supposed to be founded upon a manuscript found in the papers of Allan Quatermain, which were given to the author as literary executor. In it Quatermain tells the story of his marriage.

CHAPTER IV.—Quatermain discovered a large body of Zulus, and was surprised by two of their secuts. Acting upon the impulse of the moment, he shot both of them and retreated. The Zulus had been following a party of Dutch Boers, consitting of seventeen or eighteen men, their women and children, and a large number of cattle, with which they were removing to the north. For safety's sake the cattle and some of the women and children were sent away, while Quatermain the witch doctor and some of the Boers remained

He had a thousand natives with him planted coffee, oranges, etc., and had edu-cated his daughter, though she had never left the them to Quatermain, when a rather alarmin encounter with baboons, who swarmed round about, occurred. Hendrika quelled the disturbance, and Indaba warned Quatermain of her, saying, "She is jealous of Stella, 'the Star.' and

I dreamed that Stella and I were stand ing together to be married. She was dressed in white and radiant with beauty, but it was a wild, spiritual beauty which frightened me. Her eyes shone like stars, a pale flame played about her features and the wind that blew did not stir her hair. Nor was this all, for her white robes were death wrappings, and the altar at which we stood was formed of the piled up earth from an open grave that yawned between us. But complete happiness is not allowed in this world even for an hour. Three days after our wedding Mr. Carpending, now it fell. We came into the center but to dinner and found him lying speechless. At first I thought that he was flying, but this was not so. On the contrary, within four days he recovered his speech and some power of movement. But he never recovered his memory, though he still knew Stella. and sometimes myself. Curiously enough he remembered little Tota best of al three, though occasionally he thought that she was his own daughter in her childhood, and would ask her where her mother was. This state of affairs lasted belonged to Mr. Carson from those which belonged to the Kaffirs, for I proposed to for some seven months. The old man gradually grew weaker, but he did not lie. Of course his condition quite precluded the idea of our leaving Babyan Kraal till all was over. This was the more distressing to me because I had a nervous presentiment that Stella was incurring danger by staying there, and also because the state of her health rendered it desirable that we should reach a civilized region as soon as possible. At length the end came very suddenly We were sitting one evening by Mi Carson's ledside in his but, when to our astonishment he sat up and spoke.

"I hear you," he said. "Yes, yes, forgive you. Poor woman! you too have suffered," and he fell back dead. I have little doubt that he was address ing his lost wife, some vision of whom had flashed across his dying senses. Stella, of course, was overwhelmed with grief at her loss. Till I came her father had been her sole companion, and therefore, as may be imagined, the tie between them was much closer than is usual even in the case of father and daughter. So deeply did she mourn that I began to fear for the effect upon her health. Nor were we the only ones to grieve; all the natives on the settlement called Mr. Carson "father," and as a father they lamented him. The air resounded with the wailing of women and the men went about with bowed heads, saying that "the sun had set in the heavens, now only the Star (Stella) remained." Indaba-zimbi alone did not mourn. He said that it was best that the Inkoos should die, for what was life worth when one lav like a land-more ever, that it would have been well for all f he had died sooner. On the following day we buried him in the little graveyard near the waterfall. It was a sad business and Stella ried very much, in spite of all I could io to comfort her. That night as I sat outside the hut moking-for the weather was hot and Stella waslying down inside-old Indabasimbi came up, saluted and squatted at "What is it, Indaba-zimbi?" I said. "This, Madumazahn. When are you oing to trek towards the coast?" "I don'tknow," I answered. "The Star

"Is that all?" I said, for I saw that he had something behind. "I am not afraid "No Macumazatin, it is not all. The pabyan-frau, Hendrika, is with them." Now, nothing had been heard or seen of Hendrika since her expulsion, and though a first she and her threats had haunted me somewhat, by degrees she had to a great extent passed out of my mind, which was fully preoccupied with Stella and my father in law's illness.

"I know it because I saw her, Macumazahn. She is disguised, she is dressed up in baboon skins, and her face is stained dark. But though she was a long way off I knew her by her size, and I saw the white flesh of her arm when the skins slipped aside. She has come back, Macumazahn, with all the baboons in the world, and she has come back to do evil. Now do you understand why you should trek?"
"Yea," I said, "though I don't see how she aid the baboons can harm us. I think that it will be better to go. If neoessary we can camp the wagons somewhere for a while on the journey. Heark-

Into all our talk I need not enter, but the end of it was that she agreed with me, and declared that she could quite well manage the journey. Nothing happened to disturb us that night, and on the following morning I was up early making preparations. The despair of the people when they learned that we were going to leave them was something quite pitiable. I could only console them by declaring that we were but on a journage and would according to leave them was slowly the time passed! It seemed hours before the moon rose. Then we started. In all we were about a hundred men, but we only mustered "They had lived in the shadow of her five guns between us, my elephant roer father, who was dead," they declared; "ever since they were little they had lived in his shadow. He had received them when they were outcasts and wanderers without a mat to lie on, or a blanket to cover them, and they had grown fat in his shadow. Then he had died, and the Star, their father's daughter, had married me. Macumazahn, and they had believed that I should take their father's place, and let them live in my shadow. What should they do when there was no one to protect them? The tribes were kept from attacking them by fear of the white man If lie went that would be eaten up," and so on. Alasi there was but too much foundation for their fears. I returned to the huts at mid-day to get some dinner. Stella said that she was going to pack during the afternoon, so I did not think it necessary to caution her about going out done, as I did not wish to allude to the subject of Hendrika and the baboons unless I was obliged to. I told her, however, that I would come back to help her as soon as I could get away. 83. "A light for revelation to the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel" (R. V.).
The Spirit through Simeor speaks again of that which He had before spoken through the prophets; that the Messiah should not only be the glory of Israel but a light to lighten the nations (Isa. xlii, 6; xlix, 6); and in Isa. lx, 1-3, we have the order of events, where we are told that darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people, but the Lord shall arise upon Israel and His glory shall be seen upon them, and the Gentiles shall come to their light and kings to the brightness of their rising. Let any one read carefully the whole of Isa Iz without perverting Scripture by trying to make Israel The Lord is now a light to every individual, Jew or Gentile, who will receive him, but when He has become the Glory of Israel as a nation, then shall all nations flow to them and be enlightened with their light. The Glory of the Lord refers to the visible manifestation of His presence, as when the Glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle and temple (Ex. xl, 84, 85; I Ki, viii, 11). Jesus Himself repeatedly referred to His future coming in power and glory (Matt. xvi, 27; xiz, 28; xxiv, 80; xxv, 81); and in Ps. cii, 16 build up Zion He shall appear in His Glory.
