REAPPORTIONMENT DILEMMA.

Republicans have something new to worry about. The constitution provides that there shall be a reapportionment of representation in Congress immediately following each decennial census. What bothers the Republicans is how to make a reapportionment without increasing Democratic strength in the House. The Republicans have figured out that it will be to their best partisan advantage to increase the basis of representation from the present figure of about 200,000 to 225,000, which would increase the number of representatives from 391 to 400, providing the census shows up the 90.000.000 population the experts estimate. On the old basis of approximately 200,000 population to one Congressman, the House membership used to 450. The Republican leaders fear this would be di astrous to their party's membership for the reason that some of the heavies gains in population are expected in the Democratic states of the South and Southwest. Texas, for instance, is expected to gain so much in population that she would be entitled to four additional members of the House, and perhaps five, if the old ratio of representation were retained. Oklahoma also ds certain to make phenomenal gains in population, while Alabama and Georgia will also gain in representation if the ratio is unchanged.

But even an increase in the basis of representation will leave the Re-'publicans in bad shape. The Republican New England states, whose gain in population has been comparatively slight in the past decade, will lose some seats if the ratio is raised, nor will the Republican states of the Contra West show an increase in representation. The only hope for Republican advantage in raising the basis of representation is in the Rocky Mountain states, the Pacific coast and the Northwest. In those states they hope-bu half-heartedly-to make up for almost certain Democratic gains in the Bouth and Republican losses in New England.

Should the ratio of representation be allowed to remain unchanged, it is estimated that the South would gain about 25 representatives, while the North would gain about 35. But while all the 25 new seats from the South could be counted safely Democratic the Republicans would not be reasonably certain of more than half of the 35 new seats from the North. New York City would gain four or five new Congressmen, with almost practical certainty of them all being Democrats, and the Democrats would have good Aghting chances in the new districts in several Northern states.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the Republican leaders approach the task of reapportionment in fear and trembling, conscious as they are that, no matter what partisan advantage is sought. Democratic Congressional gains are a certainty.

and the people. Their interests are opposed; the one group is working nights, days and Sunday's to corrai the votes so that its members may seand making no stir to protect itself. In Rahway there are sufficient voters of independent thought and temperament to control the situation, but not enough with the requisite spine to come out in the open and fight for what they know to be right. It would require but it small band of right thinking easily to absolutely dictate the selection of candidates and the appoint ment of officials, but that band must be organized to lay aside all thought

The commission form of government is attracting the attention of all lov ers of fair play and decency in municipal affairs. Rahway cannot secure such a desirable end unless the legislature shall take some action permitting i but in the interval the control of municipal expenditure can be removed from party leaders and placed with those who have no other axe

I believe that nominally the rights of property coincide with the rights of man; but where they do not then the rights of man must be put above the rights of property.. I believe in shaping the ends of government to protect property: but wherever the alternative must be faced. I am for man of dividends, but I rank dividends below human character. * * * * * Bain in its worst form is inevitable if our national life brings as nothing whatever but a swollen and badly distributed material which were subscribed to assist in the purchase of a new fire engine. The money was subscribed in most instances, with the understanding that it would be turned over to the city as stipulated in the agreement between the new engine company and Common Council. There was never any understanding that the thousand dollars should be held by a private citizen i order that he or the Company should dictate the style of the engine to be nurchased. Councilman Martin, chairman of the Fire and Water Committee is quite right when he declines to take any steps to complete the deal until the new company has performed its part of the contracts.

in this issue) that the people of Rahway are "talking and wondering why so much maney is being spent on the streets this year and so little general improvement of the thoroughfares shown for the expenditure." The abprepriations thus far for the year are $14,500 and the tax rate will advance ecordingly. Possibly the voters will approve of the selection of a street commissioner for political and family reasons and the employment of an mediatant at the expense of the city so that the commissioner can attend to private business. If they do approve they have no one but themselves to blame for the increased faxation. "Turn on the light."

A Charming Exposition of DRAPERIES and LACES BY THE

To Be Known as the September Sale of Lace Curtains

Stationed before the frontiers of Europe's great lace-making countries for months past, and venturing into hitherto little-known paths of lace-industry, our commissioners have trailed down almost endless new creations for tomorrow's unique lace curtain distribution.

Their conquest includes the direct control, FOR OUR EXCLUSIVE SELLING, of the twelvemonth's products of many of the best lace needleworkers on the continent. As a consequence, these patterns, made solely for us, are freed from the usual intermediate costs and will be shown tomorrow at the lowest prices, for the same qualities, in Manhattan's retail history.

The Exhibition's Scope, Newness and Economies Ever since lace-making originated, in the Middle Ages, when queens first wrought ecclesiatical needlework, women have felt the charm of this queenly craft Lace needlework and bobbin-craft has its history, its romance, its literature, its smuggling tragedies, and, it beautiful lace ballads. its music.

Tomorrow's Unique Display

The exhibition that opens with our doors tomorrow ought, therefore, prove an unforgettable pleasure to the women of New York and vicinity, for no less than the entire Drapery Gallery, a city block in area, will be devoted to it. New curtains of needle, cushion and bobbin work will be displayed in a filmy maze of fair white avenues. Each fluttering sisle will be devoted to some one special class of curtain. France, Belgium, Ireland, Scotland, England and America have contributed laces in pairs—casement laces, sash laces, bed sets and garniture and decorative panels for every one's purse and purpose. Families planning new draperies for Fall—hotel keepers, institution managers—all will be glad, we feel sure, to take advantage of this opportunity.
