Unsettled Market Conditions Responsible for This

Sale of 800 Women's Finely Tailored Suits at $18.75

Best Tailors Have Looked the Situation Straight In the Face and Resolved to Quickly Dispose of Surplus Stocks at Less Than Cost—These Suits Would Ordinaril, Sell for $30 to $57.50

Selling Will Start at Ten o'Clock, So That Out-of-Town Women May Have Equal Opportunity for First Selection

The market was not thrown into this crowded condition over night. It has been coming for months. The spring was very late; in fact, it was cool up to the middle of June. During the summer other conditions occurred that delayed the preparation for autumn. The early autumn was warm, and dealers all over the country cancelled their orders. And the result-is quite evident by tomorrow's event. This season should have been very successful—tailors put forth their best endeavors to perfect styles that are quite the prettiest in many seasons. However, this could not overcome the price conditions. The tailors who have sold us their surplus looked at the matter in a very philosophical way and decided that a small price was better than to keep the garments.

Women should not only appreciate these economies, but the fact that these suits are offered so early in the season with many months of uncfulness about It is against our policy of advertising to talk price comparisons in a boastful manner. Therefore, we are willing that you and nobody knows values better than the American woman-should compare these suits with those at least twice tomorrow's price. Scores of suits in the collection were made to sell for considerably more than twice the price in fact, dunlicates had to be taken from our own stock and lowered to $18.75-to MICEL TOWNSHIOW'S DETICE. Besides these overlets from four of the best New York tallors, we have added a hundred or more suits from our regular stock making a total Namely per cent. of the suits are of fine imported Vienna cloth—the kind that is made into fine imported suits; also cheviots, fancy worsteds, basket weaves, and a few tweeds. Black, mavy, blue, brown and all the season's most charming cloth shades. Plainly tailored, hand embroidered and braided. Linings are so good that they deserve as much mention as outer fabrics. Second Floor, Old Bui ding.

These suits will not be placed on sale until ten o'clock, so that women residing in New Jersey, Long Island and surrounding New York Counties may equally share in the selection of these suits.

With the opening of the new Pennsylvania Station in New York City this week people who live in Rahway are brought at least a quarter of an hour closer to the heart of New York City

One of the greatest pieces of engineering skill has been crowned with success, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Station is now within a stone's throw of Greeley Square, and right at the door of the Gimbel Store, in the trade and travel centre of the greatest city of this

Few minds would have conceived, even a decade ago, of the running of these great railway lines right straight through the wonderful tunnels many feet below the waters of the mighty Hudson. Ferry boats have been eliminated, with their tedious delays, and their uncomfortable changes. Now you can take your train in Rahway and not leave your seat until you are at the centre of Manhattan Island. You will be startled when you see the amazing and magnificent structure that the Pennsylvania Railroad has erected as its new Terminal. But if you have not been to New York within the last few months, you will marvel quite as much when you view the great new Gimbel Store building, which stands almost heside the Pennsylvania Terminal.

The Store has now been open two months, and already the trade centre of New York City has gravitated to Greeley Square. Wonderful preparations have been made to install in this great new Gimbel building the most brilliant and interesting Holiday Store that New York City has yet seen.

Now the Christmas Store is ready to receive the early shoppers who want to anticipate the crowded holiday rush.

Here is a building magnificently equipped to comfortably take care of the largest metropolitan crowds that come. The broad floor space, the abundant provision of elevators, easy stairways, magnificent stocks, amongst which every article is new a way derfully fascinating Toy Store that covers the entire fourth floor: the Tea Room and Grill, where the most delightful luncheons are served at moderate cost: an Auditorium where there are musical entertainments twice daily: complete stocks of everything worn by man, woman and child, and everything for the furnishing and decorating of the home; a Waiting Room that is a marvel in its scope and the facilities for comfort—these are a few of the attractions of the new Gimble Store, to visit which the most cordial invitation comes with this announcement.

It is just a step from the Pennsylvania Station in New York City to Gimbels.

Again, the Holidays

O HERE we are on the eve of another Christmas season. Glorious holiday, how gladly it is welcomed by the many millions all over the earth! How eager the children are for its coming! How joyful it makes the young folks—the lovers and the sweethearts, the mothers and the sisters! How it cheers the old folks whose memories of the holidays of their youth are revived by the pleasures of the young. Oh. what would we do without Christmas?

Perhaps the old world would move on as always, even if we should abolish Christmas: but what could we substitute that would so warm the cockles of our hearts -that would so mellow our natures that would so loosen the purse strings of our Old Scrooges? What, pray?

Let us rejoice that there is such a holiday as Christmas. Let us be glad of the opportunity it gives everybody to display the generous spirit that is too often hidden by the rush and fuss of things about us.

We like the Christmas season because of the preparations we have to make for it because of the joys we experience in gathering the gifts for the thousands who give them, and we feel, as we gather them, a certain delight at having to play such a large part in making the multitudes happy on Christmas Day.

But best of all to us is the Christmas spirit that pervades the store throughout the month preceding the festive day. The crowds of buyers, their cheerful faces, their animated conversations, their greetings to one another—all contribute to make the holiday

And so we say, "Welcome to Christmas, and may it bring good cheer to all !"
