Help From Elizabeth Refused. It is to be regretted that a misunderstanding occurred between the Rahway firemen and the Chief of the Elizabeth department, as subsequent actions may cause a feeling which While the fire was raging, it is said that Mr. Herman, or Mr. Josephs, connected with the plant, telephoned to the Elizabeth Department, requesting assistance. It is also said that in making the request, he used the name of Chief Toms of the Rahway department. Upon this request Chief Gertsung, of Elizabeth, dispatched a steamer and a hose carriage with a working crew to Rahway, and in company with several other Elizebeth firemen came here himself in an automobile to render whatever assistance possible. His services were not needed, for when he arrived the Rahway firemen had the blaze under control. Nothwithstanding, his act was one of courtesy, and should have been treated as such. and no doubt, would have been, had the Rahway firemen thoroughly understood the situation. The Elizabeth chief was told by one of the Rahway firemen, that if he put his men to work on the fire the local fremen would turn the job over to them, and every man in the local department would be called off. Had he "butted in" without solicitation, this no doubt would have been a proper solution of such a problem; but when he came here, as he supposed, on the request of Chief Toma, it is the opinion of many that both he and his colleagues in the automobile were treated very shabbily. THELAUTER

A STANDARD OF QUALITY

We had an interesting experience lately. The members of a suburban club were considering the purchase of a piano, and had before them half a dozen bids, the bid for the Lauter Pianos being the highest of all. The matter was decided in our favor after five members of the club testified that there could scarcely be any doubt in their minds as to the wisdom of this course. Each was the owner of a Lauter Piano, ranging in age from seventeen years to ten months. Each was equally enthusiastic, assuring the other members that the Lauter Piano in his home left nothing to be desired in the matter of quality, and in durability. This is the kind of practical test that Lauter Pianos have won the esteem of every owner. To have a Lauter Piano in your home is to have the maximum of piano satisfaction. Lauter construction is of such that from every point of view the piano gives ideal service. It often happens that the owner of a Lauter Piano purchased six ten or twelve years ago tells us that the instrument seems, if anything, to improve with age, that its beautiful mellow tone seems to grow better with

There are reasons for this superb LAUTER quality, this remarkable durability. We have compiled "The Lauter Pieno Book," a bound volume of the LAUTER PIANO in a way that is instructive. if not actually entertaining. We gladly mail this book to anyone who may be interested. It is of especial value to you if you have in mind the purchase of a piano, either now or some time in the future.
