In the junior twenty-five yard swim on back, Oscar Garbawitz managed to kick just a little harder than his opponent and won by a very narrow margin in the unlimited fifty yard swim on back, Macclary led Blone at the finish, with Austin a close third. In the junior under water swim, Wilber Rosell, detached tortoise, won by a wide margin. The 100 yard race for girls was won by Miss Mildred Wright, who carried the blue ribbon for an exhibition swim.

AN INDISPENSABLE FEATURE

How many people ever stop to think just how much the advertisements in a newspaper mean to them?

It is properly understood, generally, that the advertisements—when they are the proper kind of advertisements—are of greater primary importance than any other feature of the newspaper.

Readers will not neglect the news, of course, nor the special department, nor the editorial page. They like to know what is going on in the world of sport, in a great number of cases, and they find themselves spending a few minutes with the cartoonist.

But the advertisements—they represent the essentials. For instance, the advertisements save an immense amount of running around. There is a certain article to be written, and the advertiser tells just which firm makes a specialty of that article.

Then there is the matter of price. The advertisement is often a complete price list setting forth the standard prices of the advertiser, which for one reason or another, are a little below the standard.

The advertising columns in a newspaper really are as important a feature in the world's effort to solve the problem of time as the telephone or the street car.

Try to imagine how monotonous and weary one page after another would be if advertisements were not included. Think how wholly at sea the shopper would be.

All of the people who read the advertisements all of the time to be sure; but the tendency to read most of the advertisements more than once is surely growing rapidly.

The advertiser has become a man who has something of the utmost importance to say, and who knows how to say it; and that is the reason why in many newspapers, all the departments have to strive hard to equal the advertising columns in skill and interest.—Paterson News.

AN ESSAY ON PUPPIES.

A puppy is a little dog. Generally, it's fat and sleek and its hair is shiny. A puppy cries to be good friends with everybody; if you should kick it, it would wag its tail and crouch down on four feet; if you should pat it on the head, it would leap joyously and try to lick your hand. Sometimes, it will bark throatily but in a moment the spasm is over and it again tries to lick your hand.

A puppy has no memory; its policy of humble submission comes from an explanation of the acts of others makes it universally liked.

Some newspaper editors are like puppies. They try to agree with everybody and make no distinction for corrupt public acts. They lick the hand of influential politicians and like the favor of a dog, they are on the head in the shape of official printing, etc. They bark occasionally, but a habit, strange very, and they, in the next issue they excuse the subject of their last Sunday.

If the people at large pat them on the head they whimper for the mere joy of it and try to show their appreciation by licking the hand of the pater. Like the puppy they have no enemies. But who wants to be a puppy?

There is no other washing compound in America like PERSIL, because PERSIL is the only one that does with Oxygen the work you formerly did with hard rubbing and destructive soaps.

This Oxygen is the big secret of PERSIL's success, for Oxygen is the natural enemy of every form of dirt and grease. Oxygen dissolves dirt, removes stains and forces grease out of a fabric for the same reason that water flows down hill—it's the nature of the substance.

When science devised a way to make a washing powder containing Oxygen, civilization took an immense stride forward.

PERSIL is new to you but not untried. Thirty million pounds were used in Germany last year. Thirty million pounds I wish there were not thirty million women in all Germany.

Surely this ought to be recommendation enough for you to try PERSIL. PERSIL is in only a few American stores as yet. But your grocer has it. Don't let your chance to try PERSIL slip a single week.

THE FUN COLUMN

Tree Trunk Cannon.
Wonderful Wooden Hide Wound Guns of the Anitiles
The members of modern gun-epochs a company of boy soldiers commanded by a captain who wears a sword. The revolutionary soldiers of Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic, however, have from time to time made cannon from trees and applied them to practical purposes. In the Antilles there grows a peculiar tree with a winding grain, so tenuous of fiber that to split it by ordinary means is almost an impossibility.

When wanted for artillery purposes the tree is felled, a section some five feet in length and one foot in diameter is selected and cut, the bark is removed, and uneven places on the surface are dressed down.

The embryo cannon is then placed on rude trusses and a bore bored in a process that serves further still to harden the wood. While the bore is being burned green ox hides are cut into long strips by beginning in the center and working toward the outer edge as one would peel an apple.

When all is in readiness one end of this rawhide band, which is about three inches in width, is applied to the lever or bar is attached to the butt. Two or three negroes grasp the arms of the barrel and slowly turn the hollow log on its supports. The hand of green hide is kept under a strain, and in this way the core of the cannon is wound with one of the toughest materials known in the world.

The first layer of hide is tightly wound to the muzzle of the cannon, and back toward the breech again until a number of layers have been applied. The process is completed the persevering inhabitants have a really serviceable weapon.

One of these homemade wood and rawhide cannons used during the late Cuban rebellion in the island of Matanzas 104 charges of powder before becoming useless. The projectiles are made of cast iron, and are stone and are hardened clay balls.—St. Louis Republic.

AN ESSAY ON PUPPETS.

A puppy is a little dog. Generally, it is an animal of the dog family. A puppy tries to be good. It barks with everybody; if you should kick it, it will cry. If you should touch it, it will cry. If you should touch it, it will cry. If you should touch it, it will cry.

A puppy has no enemies; its policy of humble submission and apologetic explanation of the acts of others makes it very liked. Some newspaper editors are like puppies. They try to agree with everybody who writes them. They lick the hand of influential politicians and, like the lawing puppy, receive a pat on the head in the shape of official printing, etc. They bark occasionally, but a short straggly, unimportant note in the next issue they excuse the subject of their own barking.

If the people at large pat them on the head, they will wag their tails and try to show their appreciation by licking the hand of the patter. Like the puppy they have no enemies. But who wants to be a puppy?

Pleaded Case on Merit.
A man traveling westward on a through express one day last week left his seat in the crowded dining car just after he had ordered his luncheon. He went to get something he had forgotten in the Pullman. When he returned, in spite of the fact that he had left a large amount of money in the dining car, he found a handsome dressed woman in his place. He protested with all the politeness he could muster, but the woman turned on him with flashing eyes.

"Sir," she remarked haughtily, "do you know that I am one of the directors' wives?"

TREE TRUNK CANNON.

Wonderful Wooden Hole Wound Cannon do as a rule.

The mention of wooden guns suggests a company of boy soldiers commanded by a captain who wears a tin sword. The revolutionary soldiers of Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic, however, have from time to time made cannon from trees and applied them to practical purposes. In the Antilles there grows a peculiar tree with a winding grain, so tenacious of fiber that to split it by ordinary means is almost an impossibility.

When wanted for artillery purposes the tree is felled, a section some five feet in length and one foot in diameter is selected and cut, the bark is removed, and sixteen places on the surface are drilled down.

The embryo cannon is then placed on rude trusses and a bore burned in it, a process that serves further still to harden the wood. While the bore is being burned green or hides are cut into long strips by beginning in the center and working toward the outer edge as one would peel an apple.

It is then drilled through at each end of this wide band, which is about three inches in width, is split to the center and a bar is attached to the butt. Two or three narrow strips are run into the bore and slowly turn the hollowed log on its supports. The band of green fiber is kept under a strain, and in this way the core of the cannon is wound with one of the toughest materials known.

The first layer of fiber is tightly wound to the muzzle of the growing gun, and back slowly turn the hollowed log until a number of layers have been wound on, and the projectile being made of absolute uniformity in its high standard of excellence—a product which in general style and finish no ordinary factory can approach, and superior in these respects to the most expensive custom work.

A Great Output

The Sorosis factories are among the largest in the world, having a floor space of several acres and facilities for a daily output of more than six thousand pairs of shoes—the range of their output being from the finest soft moccasins for a baby's foot and fancy ball slippers to sturdy hunting and riding boots for both men and women.

The Sorosis plant is one of the best equipped in the world. Every kind of machine necessary to fine shoemaking is here in use, and, in charge of intelligent operatives, these machines, supplemented wherever needed by handwork, turn out a product of absolute uniformity in its high standard of excellence—a product which in general style and finish no ordinary factory can approach, and superior in these respects to the most expensive custom work.

The entire roof of the former Hough residence on Irving street has been resealed. The building when finished should present a most attractive appearance.

PERSIL

A Great, Big, History-Making Discovery

You can actually use Oxygen now to wash clothes with. PERSIL, the New Oxygen Washing Compound, has proved itself successful.

Read what PERSIL will do, and consider what a tremendous saving and help it means to YOU. PERSIL—because it contains Oxygen—will

Wash All Clothes Without Rubbing;
Entirely Banish Stains, Grease and Dirt at One Washing;
Wash All Clothes Much Cleaner in Less than Half the Usual Time;
Prolong the Life of All Garments and Make White Clothes Softer, Sweeter, More Dazzlingly White than any other substance under the sun.

There is no other washing compound in America like PERSIL, because PERSIL is the only one that does with Oxygen the work you formerly did with hard rubbing and destructive soaps.

This Oxygen is the big secret of PERSIL's success, for Oxygen is the natural enemy of every form of dirt and grease. Oxygen dissolves dirt, removes stains and forces grease out of a fabric for the same reason that water flows down hill—it's the nature of the substance.

When science devised a way to make a washing powder containing Oxygen, civilization took an immense stride forward.

PERSIL is new to you but not untried. Thirty million pounds were used in Germany last year. Thirty million pounds when there are not thirty million washers in all Germany.

Surely this ought to be recommendation enough for you to try PERSIL. PERSIL is in only a few American cities as yet. But your grocer has it. Don't let your chance to try PERSIL slip a single week.

Document clause. This was the form sent me for my signature by the acting secretary of the interior department.

When I directed the striking out of the reference to the railway company and the enlargement of the area from 320 acres to 12,200 acres the form of the order in respect to immediate diatate restoration was not changed.

It is really not surprising in this case, for in my own private opinion only the Controller Railway Navigation company has made any scrip entries on the eliminated tract, and this although 11,900 acres of water front still remain open to entry.

The "Dick to Dick" letter. Before closing I desire to allude to a circumstance which forms the basis of a widely published statement as to the propriety of the proposed restoration.

When I made this order I was aware that the condition of public opinion in reference to investments in Alaska would be charged by fraud, some well known and others of an hysterical and unjust or false character, would lead to an attack upon it and to the revocation of my order in Alaska.

BRIEF ITEMS OF LOCAL NEWS

The condition of Milton Lake continues to cause unfavorable comment. In spite of the recent rains the water is stagnant and overgrown with weeds. At the north end of the lake a post has been made through which considerable water pours making the surface of the lake extremely low. The gates opening into the race are practically useless, as are the old gates leading to the river. The water in the upper part is about six inches deep and flows swiftly until it reaches a large hole which leads to the river below. Here the water falls about ten feet forming a large rap in the path of the race. It is necessary to walk over several boards in order to reach the lake. Recent cases of malaria in that section will further emphasize the necessity of quick action.

Buckley should have been credited with five correct answers instead of four. The name of Miss Blanche Tucker was accidentally omitted. Both corrections have been made in this issue.
