New York has been providing state aid for its schools at the rate of $81 per pupil New Jersey, under the Pascoe Plan, will be averaging less than $25 per pupil. Even if it makes available the $11,900,000 additional, which has been requested, it will give harrly half as much state aid as New York State

Consequently, local property in New Jersey cities for requirements must bear a far greater burden of school support in the form of higher tax rates than comparable New York cities
