Mrs. Eileen Woodward, and her husband, Douglas, were residents of Rahway for many years before returning last year to Great Britain. They now reside in Newton American voices! Except for a couple of trans-Atlantic phone-calls, they were the first I'd heard since Florence and Hart Mershon visited, us last A few months ago, I'd chanced upon a small item in our local newspaper. It asked any Americans living in the orbay area and interested in forming an American Club, to contact a Mrs. Robertson at an address in Torbay is a county borough embracing Torquay, Paignton, Brixham, and points between, all of which form the coastline of Tor Bay. Newton Abbot, where we live, is just outside that area, but in reply to my excited inquiry. I'd been told this technicality wouldn't affect possible membership in the proposed club. So here we were, my husband and I, with eight other Americans -- all strangers to us -- crowded into a sitting-room overlooking a bay enshrouded by the twilight mist of a chilly April evening. Introductions over, we sat in a semicircle around a green-tiled hearth and were grateful for the warmth and glow of an electric fire. Which part of the U.S.A. are you from?" I was asked. Across the room, a lady looked up quickly. "Which

I used to be a member of the Cranford Dramatic My interrogator looked incredulous, and I couldn't blame her, because nowbody ever takes me for an actress -- even an amateur one. But this wasn't the reason for her surprise. No, it seemed that her sister and brother-in-law had been C.D.C. members, too, It even transpired that the brothern-in-law and I had appeared in the same play. Not only that, but my new friend had actually been in the audience! I forgave her for not recognizing me, because in the play I'd portrayed a retired Parisien courtesan. When a lady on my left said she'd studied at Ohio State University, it was my turn to look surprised because that's where our younger daughter instructs and does post-graduate work. I mentioned this and a couple opposite said they'd once lived in Columbus.
