Mass medication denies personal choice
 By E. Sidman Wachter

The Swan song of former environmental conservationists' "mass medication" is being sung by the state's health department. The department is now in the process of mandating the distribution of birth control pills to all women of child-bearing age. The department announced that it will begin distributing the pills in the next few days.

It seems incongruous that an agency established to protect the purity of the air and water of the Garden State would interpret its mission to mean the distribution of mass medication to the public. The health department's action is a clear violation of the state constitution, which guarantees the right of personal choice in matters of health care.

Report from Washington
 Congressman Matt Rinaldo

Number of committees in congress is seen hampering energy action
 By representative Matthew J. Rinaldo

Despite agonizing lines for gas and the most severe shortage of energy in the nation's history, congress has failed to respond adequately to the problem. The leadership of both houses has been arguing and bickering, and as a consequence the bill has been stalled for nearly two months.
