Waterway sediment might save neaches in NJ, according to Rutgers scientists

Can the earth itself be recycled in the same way as paper and bottles? In some cases the answer may be yes, according to doctor Norbert Psuty, director of the marine science center at Rutgers, the State University.

Center personnel, in cooperation with the cooperative extension service of Rutgers' Cook College, are about to see whether sediment dredged from the New Jersey Intracoastal waterway in Ocean County can be used to restore eroding beaches and disappearing wetlands.

Members of an applied research facility, the center personnel work with extension agents in shore counties to convey scientific and technical discoveries directly to those who can receive practical benefits from them. Through a marine advisory service they respond to questions and enquiries which deal with marine problems.

"Our role is to help extension agents provide the kind of service to the marine community which they have always provided for agriculture," doctor Psuty explained.

The waterway is a 117-mile link in a partly man-made waterway extending from Massachusetts to Texas. A sheltered route for pleasure craft and commercial and sport-fishing vessels, it is of crucial importance to the economic and recreational life of Ocean County.

In order to maintain minimum channel depths and to keep boat basins open periodic dredging is required. What to do with the dredged sediment is a serious problem, according to doctor Psuty.

"Sediment must be dumped somewhere within a one-mile radius of the dredging site if the operation is to have any economic feasibility," doctor Psuty said. "In the past, dredging was done with little attention to its environmental impact and much valuable marshland became a dumping ground and was destroyed."

"Today, we are trying to develop an environmentally viable balance sheet where recreational, commercial and ecological factors will all have a place," he said. One approach he cited is to determine whether dredged sediment can be used and not just discarded.

"Materials dredged from inlets are predominantly sand and these materials make good beach fill," doctor Psuty noted.

"If tests we are about to conduct show sand or certain types of sand will remain on the beaches, we will be able to slow erosion by replacing the sand which is washed away. This can be a tremendous boon since 20% of the waterway is accessible to this type of treatment."

In the back bays, he said, dredged material is primarily silt and clay. According to preliminary calculations by center scientists, these materials are compatible with those found in marshes and make up for wetlands lost during earlier dredging operations and development projects.

"We plan to fill in shallow waters adjacent to marshes and transplant marsh grasses from the existing wetlands into the new materials," doctor Psuty said.

"These grasses should fix the fill in place so it will not slip back into the channels," he explained.

"Marshes are the most elemental part of our food web," professor Psuty explained. "They are the nursery ground for much of the marine life we harvest in oceans, bays and estuaries. From a strictly practical point of view, by preserving our marshes we are preserving not only the ecology but the whole economy of the coast."

Retired brigadier general will address conservatives

Retired brigadier general Willard S. Magalhaes of Westfield will set forth "The Case for National Defense" at a public meeting of the Republican Conservative Action Club of Ocean County on Thursday, March 20, at 8:15 p.m. at the Woman's Club of Westfield, 318 South Euclid Avenue, Westfield.

According to the club president, the program was scheduled because of the appalling state of national defense in the face of ever-increasing military power on the part of the Soviet Union.

He reported the consensus of the club's executive committee was that American freedom will not endure in the face of communist aggression unless the United States recoups some of its ever-waning military power.

General Magalhaes was commissioned in the United States army signal corps reserve upon graduation from Cornell University as a mechanical engineer.

He was assigned at the beginning of World War II to the first air warning company at Fort Monmouth, in the then new radar control function for the army air corps.

Prior to Pearl Harbor he volunteered for overseas duty and was instrumental in establishing the air defense of Iceland and in planning the radar control for the air cover of the Normandy invasion.

He served subsequently on the staff of the air warning training center in Florida and on the staff of the air corps headquarters in the Pentagon.

During the Korean War his 152d aircraft control and warning group of the New York air national guard, with almost 1,000 officers and men in six units, formed the nucleus of the newly created 64th air division headquarters in St. John's, Newfoundland. General Magalhaes commanded the unit during its establishment. This was said to be one of the highest commands held by any recalled reservist.

In the Berlin contingency of 1961 general Magalhaes and his 2,000 reservists in the 152nd tactical control group, then a part of the tactical air command, were airlifted with two Liberty ships full of equipment, to locations in West Germany.

These units were committed to North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces soon after the equipment was installed. General Magalhaes was awarded the air force commendation medal by the commander of the 17th air force for his leadership of the 152nd air group in West Germany.

An active Republican serving as a member of the Republican town ship committee, general Magalhaes is also New Jersey department commander of the Military Order of the World Wars.

Press errors never cease

At times, because of typographical errors, only the frustrated writer knows what he was trying to say. Here are a few examples taken from the press of the nation.

Clark art club offers class in chair caning, displays

A workshop in chair caning conducted by Irwin Turner will be sponsored by the Clark Art Association at the township library, 303 Westfield Avenue.

The workshop will be held Thursday, April 17, May 8 and May 29, at 8 p.m. The course will be open to all township residents but registration will be required. Those interested should telephone 388-2780.

Children's art classes sponsored by the association will continue Saturdays. Those interested should telephone 388-8657.

The work of Mrs. Thomas (Dorothy) Wilkinson will be on display in the township library during March. Mrs. Wilkinson has served as first president of the association from 1969 to 1972.

Since then she has served as membership chairwoman and hostess. She is in charge of arranging children's art classes.

Mrs. Wilkinson's formal interest in art began eight years ago. She has since studied with Charles Miller in Rahway and has studied portraiture and sculpture with the association.

She is a parttime student at the DuCret School of Art in Plainfield where she majors in fine arts and portraiture.

Mrs. Wilkinson says she enjoys craft work, such as decoupage, sewing and cooking in addition to sculpture.

Displays of the work of other association members will be offered during March at Franklin State Bank and United Counties Trust Company.

Miss Tomassi plays roles in three college productions

A company which plays together is a truth Miss Noreen Tomassi of 933 Jacques Avenue, Rahway, discovered since she became a member of Union College's repertory theatre company.

The company's spring season with "Blithe Spirit" and "Hay Fever" by Noel Coward, "Six Characters in Search of an Actor" by Pirandello, and "The Seagull" by Anton Chekov will run from Wednesday to Friday, March 19-29 at the Cranford Campus theater.

Miss Tomassi left Union College in 1972 to study acting at the American Academy in New York. Since then she has also studied at Lee Strasberg's Theatre Institute and the Speech Studio. She returned to Cranford for roles in "Blithe Spirit," "The Seagull" and "Hay Fever."

Even while studying at the academy, Miss Tomassi says she rarely played more than one role at a time. "The most I ever did was two plays at one time," she said. "By working on three parts at once, you're able to notice the subtle shades of character."

She plays Madame Arcati in "Blithe Spirit," Nina in "The Seagull" and Myra in "Hay Fever."

"The hardest thing is developing three different personalities. Madame Arcati is the most difficult because she is so unlike me. She is older and she has a different voice for Madame Arcati. I use a different vocal tone," she explained.

One of the advantages of her new endeavor she said, is an opportunity to see how women were viewed in different times. Another advantage she cited is the opportunity to work with a cross section of performers from the college and the surrounding community.

"There is almost constant contact with the people in the company," Miss Tomassi said. "With our rehearsal schedule you almost live with the people you are working with. We are like a family."

John K. Willenbrock of 3 Durham Drive, Clark, played baritone saxophone with the Bucknell University symphonic band as it toured the metropolitan New York City area from March 13 to 15. Mr. Willenbrock is a junior at the Lewisburg, Pa., college.

Elizabethtown Gas Company celebrates 120th anniversary this month, establishment by state legislature predates incorporation of Elizabeth

Founded in 1855 by a special act of the state legislature, Elizabethtown Gas Company, which marks its 120th anniversary this month, is the oldest all-gas utility in New Jersey.

Five weeks older than the incorporated city of Elizabeth and two years older than Union County itself, it was originally called the Elizabethtown Gas Light Company.

In the early days the firm sold gas for lighting purposes only since gas as a fuel was too expensive to compete with the cheaper commodities of wood and coal. At that time gas was measured by candle power and was made primarily from coal. In 1892 Elizabethtown purchased Metropolitan Gas Light Company which also served Elizabeth. To make this purchase possible the Elizabethtown directors elected not to pay a dividend, the only year in which Elizabethtown stockholders failed to receive a dividend. By 1905 growth and population in the service area and the swing from gas for lighting to gas as a fuel for household cooking and water heating resulted in the establishment of a new manufacturing plant and a change in processes.

The product evolved from "coal gas" to "carbureted water gas." Sales climbed as the company's territory grew through expansion, consolidation and increased population. On December 19, 1922, Elizabethtown Gas Light Company consolidated with Cranford Gas Light Company, Rahway Gas Light Company and Metuchen Gas Light Company to form the Elizabethtown Consolidated Gas Company.

Further growth occurred on June 1, 1930, when Elizabethtown merged with Perth Amboy Gas Light Company. Conversion to natural gas was completed in March of 1951. On March 8, 1966, the name was officially shortened to Elizabethtown Gas Company.

In 1965 the City Gas Company of New Jersey at Flemington, and the City Gas Company of New Jersey and Phillipsburg were purchased. Shortly thereafter these companies were combined to operate at a subsidiary, Northwest Jersey Natural Gas, Incorporated. On January 1, 1969, it became a division of Elizabethtown.

The area serviced by this division extends from a point just north of Trenton for almost 72 miles to the New York state border representing approximately one-sixth of New Jersey's land area. Before the current gas supply shortage became apparent to the public Elizabethtown implemented a program designed to protect consumers from such a shortage. In 1969 Elizabethtown reportedly became the first utility in the nation to organize an exempt holding company for the express purpose of diversification into related non-utility areas.

Marsh raps Martin, city budget, urges protest at budget hearing

"Our city budget is padded by more than $1,337,000 this year," charged Republican second ward-councilman John C. Marsh.

He charged that at the same time as the jobs are being created the mayor is giving these job holders less and less to do and is hiring outside contractors and attorneys "to handle whatever projects he gets around to."

"Meanwhile flood control and street resurfacing projects have disappeared, city beautification projects have stopped, citizen participation is at an all-time low and even the courts have ordered him to rebid the proposed new firehouse since his bidding practices were improper," the councilman said.

"For the past two and one-quarter years since I once again took office I have been presenting statistics and other information to the mayor to prove to him he can run the city cheaper and more efficiently with proper bidding, elimination of unnecessary jobs and utilizing available manpower," councilman Marsh stated.

"All of my endeavors have fallen on deaf ears," the Republican official continued. "When I suggested he check into the activities of Arnold D'Ambrosia and gave him information at my disposal he ignored it."

"I had to go to the Union County prosecutor to get any results," the councilman declared. He was referring to later grand jury indictments of former city public works superintendent and Democratic assemblyman D'Ambrosia on charges of extortion, bribery, fraud, embezzlement, larceny and perjury.

"When the Rahway Taxpayers Association objected to the size of the new firehouse and the possible reduction of fire protection," the councilman said, "association members were forced to go to court where it was ruled the city bidding was improper and had to be redone."

The councilman said when he was mayor he eliminated "numerous unnecessary jobs and saved the city more than $600,000 but mayor Martin put the jobs back and created more."

"It takes six votes to get rid of ordained jobs and five to reduce the city budget. It will take a march on city hall by the citizens to convince the administration and council that we won't put up with this situation any longer," councilman Marsh said.

"While most businesses are allowing up to 5% salary increases mayor Martin is giving increases up to more than 10%," he charged.

"We are paying the highest taxes in Union County," the Republican city official continued, "and in this period of rampant inflation and high unemployment mayor Martin is proposing to drive our taxes up even higher."

Councilman Marsh said the mayor "has created an unnecessary job empire to rival that of any government in our history."

Marsh said he will be attending the city budget hearing on March 14 at 7:30 p.m. at the city hall.

Where did $3,000 go?

I never saw it says Dietz

Union County Democratic chairman Christopher Dietz of Rahway testified on March 7 that he never received $3,000 either from Joseph Del Nero or on behalf of Mr. Del Nero, an Elizabeth tavern owner he was defending on a gambling charge in 1968.

Mr. Dietz testified during the second day of the jury trial before county court judge Richard P. Muscatello. The Democratic chief maintained he never received more than a $250 legal fee from Mr. Del Nero or from anyone else on behalf of his former client. He explained the fee was paid by check.

Mr. Del Nero is on trial on perjury charges for allegedly refusing to repeat damaging testimony he gave a grand jury when he was asked to at the trial of former Elizabeth councilman Michael J. DeMartino. DeMartino is free pending an appeal of his conviction for demanding $3,000 from Mr. Del Nero to fix the gambling charge.

The Silver Mirror, Mr. Del Nero's establishment, was shut down for 35 days in the wake of the gaming violation. DeMartino was head of the local alcoholic beverage commission board. On March 7 public defender J. Cohen tried to establish that DeMartino gave the $3,000 to James J. Kinneally, Sr., then county Democratic chairman, who may have passed it on to Mr. Dietz.

DeMartino's defense during his trial was the $3,000 was received from Mr. Del Nero for the purpose of hiring a lawyer for the tavern owner, not for fixing the gambling rap, but Mr. Dietz main-

Sawyer School in Elizabeth will celebrate its sixth year

The Sawyer School located at 664 Newark Avenue, Elizabeth, one of a network of 25 Sawyer schools in major cities across America, is about to celebrate its sixth year. The first Sawyer school was established in Los Angeles 59 years ago. The Elizabeth school, described as resembling more an ultra-modern office suite than a school, is said to have come a long way since those early years.

According to the school's educational coordinator, "We strive to acclimate our students to the type of environment they can expect to find once they are working."

Along the same lines the coordinator noted school instructors are required to possess degrees and to be credited in business education but also to possess work experience.

The coordinator said this is to insure the teachers know both academically and through experience what Sawyer students will encounter upon graduation.

"Because of the type of training we offer we are able to start a new class every month and at the same time have students graduating every month," said school director Steven Rothstein.

"We have a number of students who had started in a college program but saw the job market offered very little to look forward to so they came to Sawyer knowing that secretaries are more in demand than ever before," he said.

"In one evening newspaper alone," he continued, "I counted 134 secretarial positions open. No other field comes close to matching that."

"When people come to see us they are frequently directionless or lacking in self-confidence," noted Miss Carol Nicolsowski, a school admissions representative.

"When I am able to make suggestions that put them on the right track again I feel my job is worthwhile," she said.

She said a recent survey of graduates from several New Jersey colleges revealed a widespread apprehension that many believe they will graduate without employment.

Miss Barbara Shannon, another admissions representative, concurred.

"The fact that our curriculum is designed so a student may proceed at a flexible pace and where she is not made to feel the need to compete with others means the student can concentrate on competing with the most important person, herself," Miss Shannon said.

It was noted graduates from fulltime programs receive placement assistance from the school's placement director who explained she maintains contact with numerous companies throughout the metropolitan area.

The directress also noted the girls are instructed on how to compose an effective resume and conduct a good employment interview.

Suit threatens state legislators, including Kiehn, with pension loss

A suit was filed in superior court in Elizabeth on March 3 in an attempt to have a law giving retirement allowances to state legislators, such as former Republican assemblyman Herbert H. Kiehn of Rahway, declared unconstitutional.

Joining the action against the state legislature, governor Brendan T. Byrne, and other state officials were the Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Union County, The Daily Journal of Elizabeth and Millburn mayor C. Thomas Dunn.

The suit, if successful, would order the abolition of a law which provides state legislators up to $5,000 each to furnish, equip and operate home offices in their districts.

The plaintiffs seek to eliminate remnants of the 1972 pension program which was weakened in October when the state attorney general's office ruled it was unconstitutional for legislators to vote themselves immediate inclusion in the plan.

The legislation passed in 1972 was signed into law by former governor William T. Cahill on November 3, 1972. It provides 3% of the final yearly salary of a state legislator in pension for each year of service.

Eligible for legislators who have served at least eight years and who are 60 or older.

The act requires a contribution of 5% a year of a legislator's salary and allowed the lawmakers to retroactively pay the 5% for prior years of service.

The law went into effect immediately after it was signed by the governor.

Although the October Miss Cram cited Miss Elaine Cram of 1082 Maurice Avenue, Rahway, was named to the dean's list for academic achievement during the fall semester at Arizona State University in Tempe, Ariz.

attorney general's opinion, is illustrated by the case of former assemblyman Kiehn.

He served six years in the assembly and his pension was set at $1,800 a year for life.

But the attorney general's opinion meant Mr. Kiehn would be eligible only for the less lucrative benefits other public employees receive under the public employee retirement system.

The pension law, the suit contends, violates the following section of the New Jersey constitution:

"Members of the senate and the general assembly shall receive annually, during the term for which they have been elected and while they shall hold their office, such compensation as shall from time to time be fixed by law and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever..."

Improved press releases possible by following hints

The staff members of The Rahway News-Record and The Clark Patriot welcome news items and press releases from club publicity chairmen and readers, and to help them with their statements they offer a few suggestions.

Whenever preparing a statement on a future event be sure to include the full address of where the affair will take place plus the exact time it will start.

Always be sure to designate participants by both their full names, avoiding nicknames, and by their organizational titles. It is impossible to identify an individual top fully.

One item often omitted is the "why" of a story. Always be sure to explain why a meeting will be held, why a fundraiser is being undertaken or why someone will receive an award.

Also remember other readers may not be as familiar with an organization as club members. Therefore avoid jargon and explain fully what the event being planned will include.

When a past event is being described both the date and location of the occurrence should still be given, although an exact time and street address would no longer be vital. Information on names would still apply.

When describing a series of events remember future occurrences always have preference over past incidents. They should be detailed first in the release.

Many publicity chairmen write fine releases but forget the most basic and important matters, such as providing their names and telephone numbers in case there are any questions. To insure accuracy, releases should be either typed double space or printed on ruled paper with the author skipping every other line. Substantial margins should always be observed.

Letter writers are reminded that all letters should be prepared with the above rules in mind. In addition the missives must be signed and include the author's name, address and telephone number.

Anonymous letters will not be printed under any conditions.

Staff members reserve the right to alter other releases or letters so as to fit space and stylistic requirements and avoid libel.

By-lines are only awarded on editorials and sermons or upon the discretion of the publisher.

Readers may obtain a copy of the newspaper style sheet by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the newspaper, 1470 Broad Street, Rahway.

Over $1.9 billion in federal taxes paid by New Jersey taxpayers

New Jersey's taxpayers are estimated to have contributed to the federal government over $1.9 billion in taxes in fiscal 1973 to 1974 while the state and local governments received more than $1.3 billion of grant-in-aid payments, according to a spokesman for the New Jersey Taxpayers Association.

The resulting ratio of $1.48 paid by state taxpayers for each dollar of federal aid ranked New Jersey second in the nation behind Indiana among the 23 states whose federal aid tax contributions exceeded their governments' income from grant payments, he said. In fiscal 1973 New Jersey placed third in the federal aid cost versus benefit rankings.

School people donate blood

A bloodmobile from the Greater New York blood program was at Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark on March 3 to replenish the blood supply for the school blood bank.

Cash grant payments into New Jersey totaled more than $1,303,000,000 representing an increase of only $69 million over 1973, he noted, the smallest aid boost to the state in five years.

According to a formula devised by the Tax Foundation, a national governmental research organization, Garden State residents paid an estimated $1,934,600,000 in federal taxes to cover the aid. It was reported New Jersey's share of the national tax burden decreased slightly to 4.33% in 1973 to 1974 from 4.37% the preceding fiscal year.

While the federal aid distribution concept is complex and does not contemplate a dollar of aid for each tax dollar, the tax group representative said, the cost-benefit calculations help dramatize the high cost and growing influence of such aid programs.

Among the nearly 80 federal aid programs in the state, he continued, those demonstrating the largest dollar increase over 1973 were construction of waste treatment facilities, food stamps, medical assistance and law enforcement assistance.

The general revenue sharing program, presently under review by congress to determine whether to renew it beyond its December 1976 expiration date, brought $190.5 million to state and local government coffers in 1973 to 1974, a decline of $17.8 million from fiscal 1973 he said.

Federal grant payments to New Jersey rose from $6 billion in 1970 to $1.3 billion in fiscal 1974. In the same period, the tax spokesman continued, grant payments nationally increased from nearly $23.5 billion to $44.6 billion.

New Jersey ranked ninth nationally in the amount of federal aid dollars received in fiscal 1973 to 1974, according to the tax group. The federal aid totals are based only upon cash payments for grant-in-aid programs to state and local governments as reported by the treasurer of the United States for fiscal 1974.

Aid figures exclude payments to individuals and federal contracts with businesses in the states or costs of administering the various grant programs or "matching funds" state and local governments must expend to qualify for certain aid programs.
