Bumper crop of new knowledge at Rutgers aids state farmers

A small farm in southern New Jersey whose main "crop" is knowledge has a lot to do with keeping agriculture alive in New Jersey.

The Rutgers South Jersey Research and Development Center near Centerton, a 204-acre farm straddling the border between Salem and Cumberland counties, specializes in virtually every aspect of plant agriculture in the Garden State, from farm prices and food quality to disease control and new cultural practices used in New Jersey agriculture.

Release of the new "Rutgers Beacon" asparagus, developed by doctor J. Howard Ellison, extension service asparagus specialist, will give growers a plant which is more tolerant of Fusarium and more productive than the varieties now being used, but labor and field work continues in the search for even better asparagus.

The development of new varieties and crops specifically for southern New Jersey's soil types, climate and other conditions is one of the center's most important programs and a main reason behind its establishment at Centerton some 10 years ago.

"Research for South Jersey has to be done in southern New Jersey if it is to be valid," said doctor Durkin. "Doing such work even in New Brunswick, only 90 miles away, leaves me in any variables and generalizations require examination under local conditions."

Yet there is more to such research than finding crops that can live with plant diseases or ward off insects. It is also possible to get the most of the crop by leaving the plants relatively alone while changing the manner in which they are grown. Work has been done at the center in the use of degradable plastic film to regulate irrigation techniques, direct-seed practices and other new ways to skin the agricultural cat.

"A 300 percent increase in per-acre yield of eggplant was achieved by using the Rutgers system," said doctor Peterson, and comparable results have been achieved with other crops.

Work at the center also focuses on farm machinery developed by agricultural engineers at the state university. Among the examples of mechanical finery to be found there are an asparagus planter and a harvesting machine for the same crop.

"There are over 70 projects under way at the center," said doctor Durkin, "and each of them is important, but there are many other equally important projects that are not getting done because we do not have the means under our present budget restrictions."

"This work has to be done if New Jersey is to retain a viable agriculture. Besides the obvious benefits of fresh, high-quality produce, viable New Jersey agriculture also provides ecologically sound open spaces while searching to stabilize food prices through competition with imported goods," he added.

Kennel offers shepherd mix, other strays

The dog, named "Candy," is a 13-week-old male puppy part-Collie mix who is black, brown and white. She will be a medium size dog with semi-long hair.

Adoptable strays include a friendly, large, black, male Labrador retriever, one male and two female red color beagles plus cats and kittens.

The shelter is open from 1-4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

RAY "AAAAAH" Scientists working at the Rutgers South Jersey Research and Development Center near Centerton are constantly searching for the best varieties of vegetables for use by New Jersey farmers. For example per acre production of eggplant grown under plastic with a trickle irrigation system was increased 300%.

Wine not?

By Enrico

The finest French Bordeaux and Burgundy, the rarest vintages of a German Frockenbeeren-ale, these wines are the fame. But all over the world, most wine drinkers aren't taking these famed portions. They're drinking good, reasonable wine as part of their everyday diet.

Just as a few wealthy Americans snuffed the idea and the habit of the Grand Cru Clarks, millions more discovered the delight of a simple, honest glass of wine with dinner. And that's where the wine comes in.

French and Italian wines are usually lighter than those from Spain and Portugal. Wines with Italian names (from anywhere) tend to be soft and mellow. Many New York wines bear the telltale foreshadowing of the Concord grape.

Knights beat Injuns twice on Saturday

In the first game Gene Eric held the Indians to one hit, a fifth-inning single by Carlos Mendes. Eric fanned six and walked two. The Crimson Knights scored a run in the fourth when Steve Fry singled. Greg Adamo doubled and Mike Kemp's infield out enabled Fry to score.

Two Rahway pitchers, sophomore Kevin White and Jeff Altman, allowed seven hits.

In the second game two unearned runs in the sixth inning spoiled a home-hit effort by Wayne Wojcik and reliever Peter Kobran. Steve Jacobson singled for Wall's only hit and it came in the sixth.

Two infield errors loaded the sacks and Greg Adamo's fly was dropped in the outfield, permitting two runs to score. Rahway had four hits but committed five errors.

District map set as topic

The proposed school district map for Rahway elementary schools will be discussed at the Monday, April 26, special caucus meeting of the Rahway Board of Education.

"Should this plan be received favorably by the board it may appear on the agenda of the special public meeting scheduled for Wednesday, April 28, at Roosevelt School," said assistant superintendent of schools Frank H. Hirsch.

He said one of the major changes in the map is the elimination of Columbian School as a primary facility, that is, for kindergarten through third grade.

Tennis girls lose

Eight of 10 Clark teams open season with victories

The Clark recreation baseball league season opened last Saturday with eight of 10 township teams seeing action under sunny skies and a record-high April temperature of 91 degrees.

However the day wasn't hot as Gary Storms and his Yankee teammates who defeated last year's champion Tigers 6-0, storms allowed just one hit and struck out nine batters. Mike Devito paced the Yankee attack with two hits. Nick Castagna had a triple.

The Reds playing error-laden ball, edged the Dodgers 6-4 behind the pitching of Frank Fruciano. Fruciano, despite giving up 10 walks, went the distance and was backed by the offense of George Amoruso's two hits and two runs batted in. Tom Waidlich paced the losers with three hits and a walk.

A balk in the final inning ended the struggle as the Mets edged the Astros 7-6. Bill Lannan was the winning Mets pitcher and Gary Garwacki's two hits led the Met attack. Lou Melillo blasted a home run for the losing Astros.

The Cubs opener proved successful as they defeated the Twins 7-3 behind the pitching and hitting of Peter Angelo. He belted a two-run home run and received added support from Vince Tattoli who had two hits. Russ Yarem led the Twins offense with three hits including a double and a triple.

Farrell leads Injuns to win

Junior first baseman Ken Farrell belted a two-run homer over the left field fence to lead the Rahway High School Indians to a 5-2 win over the Lions of Roselle Catholic High School.

The hit gave coach Bill Dolan's team a 4-0 lead in the fifth inning. Farrell's homer followed a single by Mike Mica. The hard hitting first baseman also had two singles and a double in four trips and drove home all but one of the Indians' runs.

The winning pitcher was Tony LaRusso. He needed help by Pete Kobran in the sixth and Jeff Alan in the seventh.

Veteran outfielder Mike led the Indians 10-hit attack with three singles as the coach Dolan's team whipped Holy Trinity High School of Westfield 10-6 at the losers home field.

Mike drove in three runs. He stole four bases and scored twice. Hank Winkle had three singles. Rubin Paroz hit a home run and Mark Kaminski drove in three runs with two singles.

Emilio Di Iorio and Dave Nolan each had two run singles to place the Holy Trinity team.

Wayne Wojcik, a sophomore, was the winning pitcher. It was his first win for the varsity team. LaRusso finished the game. They allowed nine hits.

A Community's Strength Lies In Its Homes.... because, so often, they are the foundations of the happiness and well-being, material and spiritual, of its citizens.
During Private Property Week, April 18-24, it is the desire of 22 Realtor Offices who make up the Cranford Board of Realtors, serving Cranford, Clark and Garwood, to assure the public we serve that in a changing world, our primary goal is unchanged:
To serve the public by the professional use of our skills, in bringing buyers and sellers together in transactions satisfactory to both... and to assist families in realizing the dream of home ownership in 3 of the finest communities in New Jersey... or anywhere else.
