City residents get first shot at city jobs

By R. R. Faszczewski
A city policy giving preference for employment in Rahway government positions to city residents was made law Sept. 14 when the City Council voted to adopt an ordinance on the preference system.

State Civil Service law now requires the adoption of an ordinance before the preference can be given.

However, the city cannot force those who are on the various forces to remain residents once they are employed, because that is against state law.

To back up its stand on residency preference, the Governing Body also passed a resolution calling on the State Legislature to allow cities to make residency mandatory, especially among police and firemen.

In other action, the Council:

- Postponed action on an ordinance which would have restricted a restriction on parking on Grove St. from St. George to Jefferson Ave. until a police survey is done among residents of the area.
- Agreed to the final payment to Allen Blacktop Corp. of Plainfield for the resurfacing of certain city streets.

Unauthorized veterans' property tax deductions for this year for Robert L. Walker, Joseph C. Sosa, William J. Homyak, Peter J. Perry and Edward W. Carroll and some citizens' deductions for Susan C. Senise, Louise Coppola, Peter DiTullio and Mary Ivey.

Okayed the refund of $321,211 in 1981 taxes paid in error by Richard and E. Sherrin.

Agreed to certify to the state that all councilmen have reviewed sections of the city's 1980 audit report as required by state law.

Authorized the sale of 78 pieces of city property at a city auction. Among the properties to be offered are the old City Hall at 1470 Campbell St. at a minimum price of $75,000, the former Elizabethtown Gas Co. building on Central Ave. at a minimum price of $150,000 and the Serriny Ave. firehouse at a minimum price of $25,000.

Cost of geriatrics center estimated at $7,200,000

By R. R. Faszczewski
The proposed Rahway Geriatrics Center will have a construction cost of $5,000,000 and a total cost of approximately $7,200,000 to cover the first two years' operating expenses, reported Walter Schaffhauser, the chairman of the Rahway Housing Authority, at the City Council's Sept. 14 session.

According to Mr. Schaffhauser, the project could get underway by Sunday, Nov. 15, if approval of the financial condition of the non-profit corporation set up to supervise construction and operation of the facility is forthcoming soon.

He explained the corporation, of which he and other Housing Authority commissioners are officers, believes in starting the project without going into debt.

After the financial report is made the startup date would depend on how favorable the atmosphere is for offering bonds to fund the project, he added.

Rates are presently too high for that, even though part of the project is being financed with federal funds, the chairman noted.

Responding to a desire expressed by The Ward Councilman Max Sheld to have the Council and the city administration introduced an ordinance on the non-profit corporation's board which would approve the Council approves employee pacts

By R. R. Faszczewski
Contracts with four groups of employees were approved by eight of the nine members of the Rahway City Council on Sept. 14, with one abstention.

Deciding not to vote either way on the measure was Councilwoman-at-Large Frances F. Finak.

Under terms of a pact with Rahway Local No. 866 of the Teamsters, which represents City Hall employees, a general pay increase of 4% was granted, effective Jan. 1 of this year, with an additional 3% general increase effective Jan. 1 of next year, an additional 3% general increase effective July 1 of this year and a general increase of 10% effective Monday, March 1, of next year.

A second accord, with the Firemen's Mutual Benefit Assn., grants general pay increase of 3%, effective Jan. 1 and July 1 of this year, a general pay increase of 10%, effective Thursday, April 1, of next year, and a clothing allowance increase of $200, effective this year.

The third contract, with the Policemen's Benevolent Assn., gives police the same increases as rank-and-file firemen, in the contract cited above.

Under the terms of a contract with the fire deputy chiefs bargaining unit an annual salary of $25,384 was granted, effective Jan. 1 of this year, and one of $30,461 was given, effective Friday, Jan. 1 of next year, with payment to commence during the first pay period of 1982.

In addition, the fire deputy chiefs will receive a clothing allowance increase, effective this year, of $200, and one of $50 next year.

Blue-collar worker gives look into meaning of work for him

By Robert Schrank

EDITORS NOTE: This is the second in a series of 15 articles exploring "Working Changes and Choices." In this article, Robert Schrank, a former blue-collar worker now with the Ford Foundation, argues our society's continued discrimination against blue-collar workers would have serious consequences. This series was written by NEWSPAPER, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, with funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities. companied by an even more rapid decline in the prestige society assigns to the work they do. I speak feelingly about this issue, for I spent many years working in a blue collar as an auto worker, plumber, and machinist. In each of these jobs I worked hard physically, and I was continually aware of the fact that there was something wrong with the work I was doing, even when I was installing tools and building the two-volume necessities of modern life.

eliminating the need for craftsmanship. But the change made mass production possible and heralded the age of the assembly line.

PRODUCTION

Underlying the concept of mass production was the innovation of interchangeable parts. For example, a part made in one factory would fit in every other factory. Under this system, PEOPLE also became interchangeable. Without the need for special skills, any worker could perform any part of the assembly process. This aspect of the Industrial Revolution is ongoing. For example, we are currently witnessing the skilling of the craft of printing. Historically, a printer would make type, set it, lock it up, and run the press in the tradition of Gutenberg, the inventor of mechanical printing. But a modern printing plant, copy is typeset by reporters and passed through a pre-programmed computer that makes the press mats. No printers are involved, and the few human tasks remaining are easily learned.

Today's blue-collar workers were a majority of the American labor force. Since then, their relative percentage though not their absolute number has declined as a result of changes in attitudes toward them. Today, blue-collar workers comprise only 36% of our 102 million-member workforce. Unhappily, the decline in the percentage of blue-collar workers has been ac-

Residents urged to be 'eyes' for police

There has been an alarming increase in burglaries across the state and nation, and Clark is not immune. The most effective way of preventing burglaries is through the cooperation of the residents, who must become "eyes and ears" of their neighborhood police chief, Anthony J. Smar.

Residents were asked to telephone police headquarters immediately upon observing suspicious vehicles cruising their neighborhood or strangers walking around or behind a neighbor's home, by the chief.

Junk mail needn't soil your doorstep

There is a resource for any consumer deluged by advertising mail. Consumers can stop being inundated by mail by simply writing or telephoning the Direct Mail Marketing Assn., Inc. This free service will remove your name from its mailing lists.

If you are not receiving any unsolicited advertising mail and would like to, this too may be easily remedied. Contact the same association, and ask them to add your name to their mailing lists.

Send your letter or request for either being "purged" or "added" to the mailing lists to Direct Mail Marketing Assn., Consumer Relations Dept., 6 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

This form is also known as an "Application for Listing." Once it is completed and returned, your name will be added to a list that prohibits the sending of any unsolicited advertisements to you. This should, in all likelihood, be the end of your problem.

However, should you continue to receive obscene postal notices after your name appears on the list, you have the right to demand further satisfaction. Contact the postal inspector and inform him of this occurrence.

Your postal inspector is located in the telephone directory under United States Government, United States Postal Service.

Consumers should be aware of the fact that you can take action against particularly offensive advertisements sent through the mails. The Advertising Advertisement Statute, Section 3008, Title No. 39 of the United States Code, assists in this area.

Knows that post office has a form called a "Notice for Prohibitory Order Form," No. 2150. By signing this form, you are registering a complaint against that particular mailer. The postal service will then issue an order to that mailer.

He will be instructed to cease further mailings to you on the 15th day after the date of the order. If you should receive a subsequent mailing after a 30-day grace period, refer the mail to your local postmaster. He will then bring the matter to the attention of the postal inspector.

There is no reason for you or your family to be subjected to annoying or obscene, unsolicited mail. The postal service gives consumers workable alternatives.

The division has several Teletel numbers that you can call with the mail. For more information on advertising mail, please telephone your toll-free number, 800-242-5846, and ask for tape No. 316, "Advertising Mail."

Cleanup of water needs shot in arm

By 1985 the federal and state governments and local municipalities will spend an estimated $3 billion to clean up New Jersey's water to meet federal clean water standards.

The key to cleaning up the toxic materials in New Jersey's water is effective pre-treatment. It is especially critical to treat the water, since much of it is recycled and used over and over. If the 765 million gallons a day of drinking water that is used in the state is effectively treated at discharge points, it will be much cheaper and more effective to clean it up.

For the industrial waste-water recovery system, as provided in the Clean Water Act, has never really worked well. Very little money has been collected under an arrangement in which industries pay their share of the federal grant for new waste-water plants that treat both industrial and residential waste water.

Here is how it was supposed to work. The Environmental Protection Agency, which administers a grant program that provides 75% of the costs to municipalities for the construction or upgrading of their sewer systems, requires any industries located into the water waste and sewer systems to pay a share of the construction costs based on their water industries have been using the city's sewer lines and treatment systems for many years. In fact, they had a partnership in which the taxes paid by industry helped build the old sewers and treatment plants.

Under legislation enacted last year by Congress, the funding of industry's portion of the new sewer lines and treatment plants was excluded from the federal grants. The idea was to force industry to come up with the rest of the money. Not as a practical matter, it is proving to be unworkable, and it is resulting in complicated negotiations and long delays in building new treatment plants.

Since these projects have been delayed, inflation is eating up the costs, causing the federal government as well as those paying for the local share to lose money. In many cases, cities do not have sufficient resources to pay up the industry's share, now excluded from the federal grants.

Another general difficulty is industries faced with new costs of building sewers and new waste treatment plants find it hard to close down and move to another plant. The new Jersey Act of Environmental Protection, which is one of the toughest in the nation, has strongly recommended treating that portion of the law. It has warned the failure to knock out this provision will delay the clean water program and seriously jeopardize the health of New Jersey's citizens.

The National League of Cities and a number of environmental protection agencies also support repeal of the industry-share provision. Under this step is taken, the non-federal part of the cost of the new treatment plants will be estimated 60%. In many cases, communities and industries may not be able to raise the money necessary to finance these projects.

If supporting changes in the act that would speed up the clean-water program and cut their costs. The bill an supporting would raise grant eligibility for the industrial portion of a sewage treatment plant. As in the past, it would be recovered by taxes on industry.

Fulcomer opposes state property tax

New Jersey General Assembly member James J. Fulcomer of Rahway, announced today he "strongly opposes" the new state-wide property tax suggested by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne because it is "the wrong tax at the wrong time, and it would drive up property taxes in Rahway to an intolerable degree."

The Rahway Sixth Ward councilman said a state property tax would "raise property taxes, hurt business and raise unemployment."

Because a state property tax is likely to help fund education or welfare, Union County is likely to pay even more in property taxes during its first year to help finance more urban counties, he noted. Rahway, in particular, the councilman added, would suffer because the additional 110 million dollars in new taxes to be secured from the proposed waste-water bonds would be greatly diluted under a state property tax, as would the city would be sharing the new taxes with the rest of the state.

"While the governor argues the first year of a state property tax would reduce the state-wide total of local property taxes by the amount collected by the state, the governor neglects to tell us how counties and cities will pay more in taxes to help pay for the state's debt and the cost of our present educational and social services," he said.

"What the people need is the constitutional dedication of some or other local services to the people key services in property taxes," he concluded.

Mrs. Dorin picks aids for campaign

Members of the Committee to Elect Mary Ann Dorin Freeholder were announced by the candidate, who is running as a Democratic freeholder candidate with Phil Portnoy of Union and Frank Beninato of Elizabeth.

Mrs. Dorin revealed George Dorin and Greg Martucci will head up her campaign, while Walter Tycki will act as treasurer for the group.

The candidate also noted Sal Molica, the city Democratic chairman of Linden, will be her honorary campaign manager, and Frank Long will coordinate Linden and part of Elizabeth.

Other coordinators include Mrs. Claire Lyons for Hillside, Mrs. Patricia Waskop for Kenilworth, Harold Fisher for Plainfield, Bernard Mond for Scotch Plains, Eileen Brown for Winfield and Doby Popper and Kathy Brook for Summit. Additional coordinators will be announced soon, Mrs. Dorin added.

Mrs. Sinnott backs strong park upkeep

She will fight to continue good maintenance of all Union County parks, announced Councilwoman Rose Marie Sinnott, who is running as a Democratic freeholder candidate with Philip Portnoy of Union and Frank Beninato of Elizabeth.

The freeholder chairwoman stated that the park facilities are in need of repair, and she is planning to bring a bill to the county board of supervisors to increase the park maintenance staff.

Mrs. Sinnott noted she is running in the 1981 county election, and she is planning to bring a bill to the county board of supervisors to increase the park maintenance staff.

"I commend the reduced park maintenance staff for this year. They have produced more work with a smaller number of people and that shows true dedication to our parks. I think every county resident should realize the strong financial obstacles those men faced in doing their jobs this year, and I hope all the freeholders will realize that we can afford to do further cuts in this part of the county budget," stated Sinnott.

Freeholder Sinnott said she considers the county parks desirable assets of county government and she will explore the possibility of applying for a grant to help pay for the park maintenance staff.
