SPOOKS IN SCHOOL - On Oct. 30 many horrifying and unusual faces could be seen in the halls of Rahway High School. It was Halloween time, and students and faculty were asked to bring a touch of the bizarre to the school. Over 250 students and teachers participated in what will now be an annual event. The judges were: Frank Brunetta, the superintendent of schools; Nicholas DeLeonaco, the assistant superintendent of schools; Mrs. Adèle Magnolia, the supervisor of curriculum and instruction; Mrs. Elizabeth Jacobs, a Board of Education member, and Mrs. Virginia Clanton, the secretary to the superintendent. The first-place winners were: Michele Privetazano, death; Patricia Colte, green Marten; Todd Bitza, nurse; Beta Jacobs, Board member; Mrs. Helen Cannon, a teacher; a bald-headed mercenary; and Marie Holmgren, a vampress. Each winner received a bank fashioned after a Rahway High School football helmet.

Council okays city map: Bryant St. park coming?

By R. R. Faszczewski
The development of an official city map was unanimously approved by the Rahway City Council on Nov. 9.

According to Sixth Ward Councilman James J. Fulcomer, the drawing up of the map will give the city the option of holding up development of land which it may want to use for other purposes.

Support for the map was given by Mrs. Sharon Surber of 577 Bryant St., who said it was one step the city could take to establish a park on W. Inman Ave. between Bryant St. and St. George Ave.

Mr. Surber and other residents in the area support Rahway's application for Green Acres funding for the park to prevent the construction of a gasoline station by the Exxon Corp., which has already received approval from the Planning Board for the project.

In other action, the Governing Body:

- Authorized the Rahway Police Dept. to sell bicycles and unclaimed property at a public auction on Saturday, Dec. 12.
- Okayed the appointment of George Pallito of Finance aide's certification leads to dispute on tenure

By R. R. Faszczewski
A dispute over the certification of Roger E. Prubush as both municipal treasurer and tax collector led to a proposed amendment to the Rahway salary ordinance on Nov. 9 to separate the two positions, lower the salary range for the position of director of finance and comptroller, and establish the position of tax collector as a salary of $3,100 for this year and $3,410 as of Monday, March 1, of next year.

The move, in effect, would establish the tax collector post at the difference in salaries between that of director of finance as originally proposed and the lower salary range.

Republicans opposed to giving Mr. Prubush tenure as treasurer and tax collector, positions he has held as director of finance for 10 years, without taking the steps for certification, voted down resolutions to give him tenure.

The four Democrats on the Governing Body disagreed with the five Republicans, and voted for tenure.

Council members were cautioned by Business Administrator Joseph M. Hartnett, however, amending the ordinance to provide a separate position for finance director might bring in a new person to work in that post who holds the same position in some other municipality.

This might lead to a situation in the city where it could not change an individual in the finance post because he already has tenure, Mr. Hartnett added.

The separate tax-collector position might also create a lucrative part-time position for someone, he noted.

However, Sixth Ward Republican Councilman

James J. Fulcomer said he was not in favor of establishing tenure now for a position which previously did not exist.

First Ward Republican Councilman Lawrence C. Bodine asked if the requirement for certification could not be met without creating another position.

The salary-amendment ordinance also would establish the post of director of public works and city engineer at a salary range of $29,400 to $32,400, effective Jan. 1 of this year, and $32,640 to $35,640 effective

March 1 of next year. It would also increase the salary rate for senior assistant assessor by $200.

Although the change in the positions concerned with the finance office was voted against by the four Democrats, and the increase in the assistant assessor's salary was favored unanimously, the introduction of the entire salary ordinance amendment was unanimous.

The public hearing and possible final adoption of the measure will be held on Monday, Dec. 14, at 8 p.m.

Newspapers hit top in city auction bids

By R. R. Faszczewski
The owners of the Newark News-Record, the Clark Patriot and the Rahway Record, Tabloid newspapers, were the highest bidders in the Oct. 27 Rahway city property auction, reports a Clark Patriot spokesman. Although there are many business establishments in close proximity to the property, the newspaper companies were the only bidders on the property. According to C. Vignante, the editor and publisher of the newspapers, the Central Ave. facility will be used to house the newspapers and their commercial printing business following approval of a variance by the Rahway Board of Adjustment.

Mayor proclaims Earl Hoagland Day

Thursday, Nov. 26, was proclaimed "Earl Hoagland Day" in Rahway by Mayor Daniel I. Martin in honor of Mr. Hoagland's outstanding career as a teacher, coach and athletic director of the city's school system. The mayor, who himself played football under Coach Hoagland, has brought great honor and distinction to the city of Rahway and made an immeasurable contribution as an educator and leader of the thousands of former Rahway students.

'Y' blaze cause not determined yet

By R. R. Faszczewski
The probable cause of the two-alarm fire which caused extensive damage to the Rahway Young Men's Christian Assn. at 1564 Irving St., Rahway, on Nov. 11 has not been determined yet, although arson has been ruled out, according to a spokesman for the Y.M.C.A. Arson investigators on the second and third floors of the older section of the facility sustained a fairly large amount of damage in the hallways and the roof of the section over the living quarters was heavily damaged, according to Christopher Armstrong, the president of the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors.

Planners oppose condominium zone

By R. R. Faszczewski
The Rahway Board of Adjustment was due to act on Tuesday on a recommendation by the city's Planning Board on Nov. 10, an application for a change in zoning to allow a 15-unit, two-family residential area in the area of W. Milton, Emerson and Elm Aves. and Pierpont St. is being turned down. Residents of the area strongly oppose the application, made by Double "LL" Inc. of Colonia, according to William Davis, another member of that body, said he was against the proposed zoning change. Councilman Fulmer pointed out the official reasons for not recommending the change were: First, the development would have an adverse impact on the area and one of the properties would be used for traffic congestion.

City may enforce parking for disabled

When buying saws don't grit your teeth

Many of you may be aware of the recent recall of Black and Decker "Electric" chain saws. The "Electric" saws EM10, EM12A, and EM14A were voluntarily recalled by the McCulloch Corp. of Los Angeles.

The recall was initiated after four instances of spontaneous restarting were reported among units manufactured by Black and Decker of Canada.

The particular saw's "off" switch may fail to function properly, causing the chain saw to continue to run after the trigger is released. It may also start spontaneously when placed down after use.

Although there have been no injuries reported, this is obviously a potential safety hazard. Those of you who own "Electric" saws should contact your local Black and Decker service center.

The McCulloch Corp. will incorporate new "off" switches into these saws free of charge.

Since many people, not just professional lumberjacks, are now using chain saws to cut firewood and for other uses, it is important to offer some guidelines. When purchasing or renting a chain saw there are several basic areas you should be familiar with.

Basically, a chain saw consists of a chain that is driven at high speed around a steel guide bar. The cutting is done by sharp teeth fitted into the chain.

When buying or renting a chain saw, decide whether you want electric or gasoline power to drive the chain. Electric powered saws, such as the "Electric" saw mentioned above, are relatively quiet. They have less vibration and are usually less expensive to purchase. They do have one distinct drawback, and that is their use and travel limitations. They can be used only as far as the length of your longest extension cord will allow.

Gasoline powered saws, on the other hand, are extremely powerful, and are available in a full range of engine and guide bar sizes. They burn a gasoline and mix with air to create a flame, and are quite noisy and very smoky. However, they can be used in just about any location.

Check the quality of the saw by testing for balance and power. To check a saw's balance, pick it up and use how it feels in your hands. You may discover a heavier, well-balanced saw is more comfortable and less fatiguing than a lighter one for your particular needs.

If a heavy duty saw is important for your work, look for a larger engine with a wide-cut chain system.

As a general rule electric saws are designed for lighter work.

No matter what model you choose, safety is the most important feature to look for. For example, check for a "stop handle" that releases the clutch of a saw's control bar. This reduces the extreme torque which it should be easy to reach when the saw is in use.

Be sure the safety switch prevents the saw from being thrown back at you in case of a jam.

Before setting up or using a saw, see the owner's manual and instructions. Never use a saw in a particular chain saw. Be sure the instructions are clearly printed on the saw.

REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

by Congressman Matt Rinaldo

12th District, New Jersey

Federal red tape is strangling nation

In a radio address to the nation in 1930 President Franklin D. Roosevelt warned, "if we do not halt this process of building commissions and regulatory bodies and special legislation like huge, inertial pyramids over every one of the simple Constitutional provisions, we shall soon be spending billions of dollars more than we can afford."

President Roosevelt didn't know the half of it. Since the New Deal, federal regulations have spread to virtually every phase of human existence in America. They range from rules dealing with lawn mowers, hair dryers, cable television and the financing of political nominating conventions. Their estimated cost to American consumers is $100 billion a year.

The regulatory pyramids have not only added to the price of goods and services, but they have created a massive public and private bureaucracy of lawyers, accountants, clerks and researchers who devote their time and resources to either jamming up economic productivity or trying to tamper it.

It has resulted in imposing incentives to operate efficiently a loss of business competition, endless red tape and streams of consultants hired by government and industry to cope with the regulatory process.

Excess regulations are responsible for the growth of government spending and jobs. Not only does the bureaucracy create regulations, it spawns more bureaucracy in and out of government. In the last decade, the number of government employees has risen by 133%, and the total outlays in constant dollars has gone up 144%.

Consider the amount of money wasted on commissions, commissions, agencies, bureaus and offices that no longer serve a useful purpose.

It also has built mountains of paperwork. In education, for example, more than four million manhours are devoted to filling out federal forms and reports. A deplorable number of these inefficiencies translate into lost dollars which provide no services, benefit nobody, accomplish no good, but contribute to inflation, and a loss of national productivity and an increase in taxes.

One of the first actions the President took after being sworn into office was to freeze new major regulations. He also required the Office of Management and Budget to approve any new regulations, and created a top-level task force headed by Vice President George Bush, to examine the existing regulatory structure.

In the first four months of the new administration, the Office of Management and Budget received 881 proposed and final regulations. Nearly 90% of the regulations submitted to the OMB were judged to be consistent with the President's goal with only minor changes. The remaining 9% were returned for further consultation by the federal agencies.

What is remarkable about this review process is the average turnaround time has been nine days. It reflects a commitment by Vice President Bush and the OMB to review and, if necessary, to agree with or correct a mountain of bureaucracy and red tape in the review process.

In one case, the Secretary of Education withdrew the proposed bilingual education rules which would have required all school systems to offer bilingual instruction to each child whose parents language is other than English. This rule would have cost up to $1 billion over the next five years.

The Secretary of Transportation proposed a new set of rules in regulations mandating the installation of gas-assistive restraints. This is a saving commission of as much as $800 per vehicle.

The result of the regulatory crackdown is that the number of new rules has been cut in half and the number of pages of rules has been reduced by two-thirds.

In order to streamline the regulatory process, we need further, it is necessary to reduce the number of independent government agencies. Congress must operate with the administration to reduce regulations in the tools of the economy, which the Council of Economic Advisors estimates cost the American people more than $100 billion annually. Without the support of Congress, the Reagan Administration has only limited success in respect to independent agencies.

Coach Hoagland honored by City Council members

By R. R. Faszczecki

Former Rahway High School athletic director, Earl C. Hoagland, was honored by the Rahway City Council on Monday, Nov. 16.

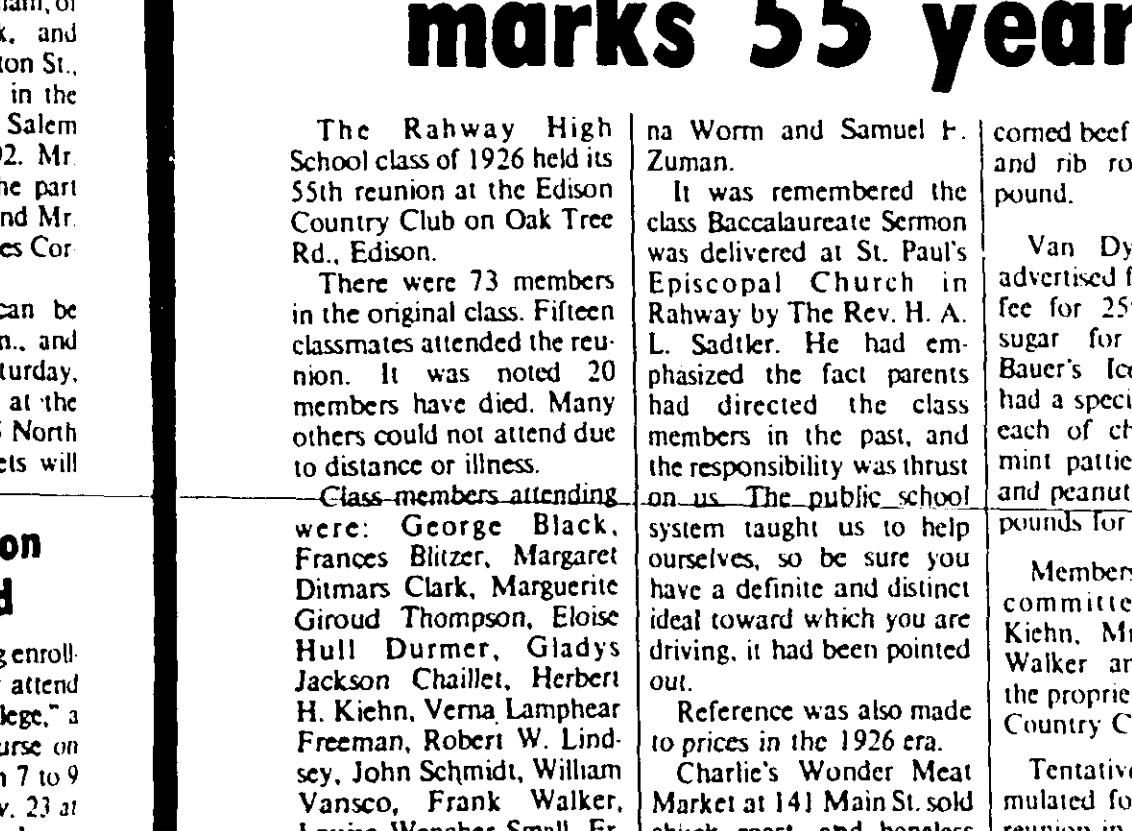

The coach led four undefeated football teams with 28 consecutive football victories and eight state championships. He had two rankings of his team as the state's best team in the state, seven state sectional baseball championships, and two Greater Newark Tournament baseball championships.

Ceremonies dedicating the fieldhouse to Mr. Hoagland will be held on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 26, at the Rahway-Clark football field.

In another honorary resolution, the councilman memorialized former First Ward Councilman Daniel W. O'Connor, who died recently.

Councilman O'Connor, who served on the governing body from Jan. 1, 1977 to Dec. 31 of last year, was hailed as a "great humanitarian" by Councilman at Large, Walter Melick, who introduced the memorial resolution.

Mayor Martin said Mr. O'Connor always put his of fiscal duties ahead of his health, and South Ward Councilman James J. Fulcomer and Second Ward

Class of 1926 marks 55 years

The Rahway High School class of 1926 held its 55th reunion at the Edison County Club on Oak Tree Rd., Edison.

There were 73 members in the original class. Fillet and classmates attended the reunion. It was noted 20 members have died. Many others could not attend due to distance or illness.

Class members attending were: George Black, Frances Blitzer, Margaret Dimark, Gladys Jackson Chaitel, Herbert H. Kohn, Vera Lamphear Freeman, Robert W. Lind, John Schmidt, William Varney, Frank Walker, Louise Crook, and Sammie Zuman.

Historians to hold doll house exhibit

The Seventh Annual Doll House and Firehouse, circa 1900. Again this year, Mrs. Ann Marie Kaminski will show her authentic colonial kitchen, typical of the 1776 period.

A celebrated stunner to the annual affair will be Santa Claus, who will present goodies to the children. Children under 13 years old accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

A $1 donation for others will be used for the preservation and restoration of Rahway's historic landmarks. Mrs. Kaminski's exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Fairleigh Dickinson University's Fairham Madison campus.

An elementary education major, she attained a 4.0 average.

Our people do it better because we're employee-owned.

10m Jack DeStefano of STS, and when you've worked with us many times as I have, you know there's more to a tire change than just a lug wrench and an iron. Today's tires, particularly those new Bridgestone radials, are precision made and take some high precision tools to mount them properly.

For example, every radial must be dynamically balanced - so at STS we use the best balancing equipment in the business every time we put on a radial for you.

There are lots of little things about a good tire change, too. Where your tire is mounted, the hubcap is placed over the lug nuts polished side up to avoid scratches. And if your car has mag wheels, we'll mount tires by hand instead of using power equipment to protect your wheel investment.

And, of course, since we want you back again as a customer, we'll sell you the best tires that money can buy. Like the new Bridgestone 207V Super for steel belted radials.
