STAR WARS? - It may look like a space ship on a solar flyby but it's really a part of a new communications system. This two-inch lightguide laser is shown in a celestial setting to illustrate its power--it emits a blast of light equal in intensity to the light on the surface of the sun. Made by Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System, the device generates light pulses that carry information over thin glass fibers in lightwave communications systems. The laser chip inside is smaller than a grain of salt-yet it can carry more than 1,000 simultaneous conversations

High Court backs my 'head shop' ban

RAHWAY NEWS-RECORD/CLARK PATRIOT

My effort to ban the sale of drug paraphernalia recently received a big boost from the nation's highest In two separate rulings, the United States Supreme Court indicated states and communities have the right to prohibit the sale of drug related accessories.

New Jersey has had a drug-accessory ban on the books for over a year. However, a court challenge had delayed enforcement of this significant law, which I sponsored.

The Supreme Court decisions are an encouraging sign New Jersey was on firm constitutional footing when it enacted the drug paraphernalia ban. I am optimistic a state appeals court will resolve quickly and favorably the challenge to New Jersey's law. The sooner New Jersey can begin cracking down on sinesses that glamorize the use of drugs, the better. A year ago, a state Superior Court judge "reluctant ly" invalidated portions of the New Jersey law, ruling the ban was "unconstitutionally vague." In that decision, Superior Court Judge Richard Cohen did not fault the Legislature's intention, just the way it went about curbing the sale of items intended for use in illegal drug activity. The state appealed the ruling, and is now waiting for an appeals panel to rule.

The state law was based on model legislation drafted by the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, the agency responsible for curbing illegal drug traffic. It bans the sale of such items as needles, spoons, pipes, rolling papers and scales if they are "intended for use" in sniffing. smoking, administering and weighing illegal drugs. umerous other states and communities relied on the federal guidelines in enacting drug-paraphernalia Now the United States Supreme Court appears to have given its stamp of approval to drug-accessory bans, such as the one in effect in New Jersey. First, the Supreme Court upheld an Illinois ordinance banning the sale of drug paraphernalia to minors, and controlling sales to adults. The Illinois law requires shops selling drug-related items to be licensed, and keep a log of sales to adult customers. A few days later, the high court let stand a Nebraska law that bans drug paraphernalia sales to anyone --regardless of age. The Supreme Court rejected without comment a challenge to the Nebraska law based on the federal model statute, which is virtually identical to the New Jersev law.

This is good news for parents like myself who have become alarmed at the growing accessibility of illegal drugs and drug paraphernalia. Hopefully; head shops - stores specializing in drug paraphernalia - soon will be a thing of the past in New
