Hartnett tavern Whether Mayor Martin used his power with such terribly unethical, personal motives is an interesting question, but it is a question to which I never made reference. I challenge the mayor's $43,000 political writer to provide direct quotation and proper citation from any of my prior statements to the effect I commented on the mayor's fight to stem a customer drain to a rival tavern.

What I have pointed out is the shameful fact the present Rahway mayor maintains an interest in a local tavern while, as mayor, he has the power to appoint the members of the Alcoholic Beveral Control Board in Rahway and is handpicking the clerk of the A. B. C. It is outrageous a mayor and his hand-picked business administrator should enter into such a conflict of nterest while holding such offices. It is equally shameful the mayor should compound his conflict of interest by, to use the mayor's euphemism, "recommending" the person to serve as the clerk of the A. B. C.

Tylenol, which were then sold to unsuspecting customerof a Chicago drug store.

Several persons took the poisoned capsules, and died, including three members of a single family. The Chicago incident trigged a series of "copycat" crimes in other parts of the country. Reports flowed in of criminal tampering with other non-prescription medicines, which resulted in injuries to unsuspecting consumers.

It was unthinkable such terrorists' acts could happen in this country. It was frightening to think any product might be adulterated or tampered with in such a manner as to threaten the public health. The concern was so great in some areas municipal officials cancelled Halloween "trick-or-treating," and millions of parents kept their children home out of fear for the safety of their voungster

Since these criminal tamperings, government and industry have been working together to provide packaging that will lessen the chance of this happening again-either to the people of Chicage or anywhere else. New government rules requiring tamper-resistant packaging for most non-prescription medicines will soon come into effect. It is anticipated new packaging will begin to appear on store shelves over the next few mon-criminal code to increase the penalities for tampering with food, drug, cosmetic and other products with the intent to cause personal injury or death. We need to make it a federal offense so the resources of federal lawinforcement agencies are utilized.

To this end, I am offering legislation that would nake such activity a crime punishable by up to life in prison if death or personal injury occurs as a result of it, and by a maximum of up to 20 years in prison where no such injury results. Not only could these penalties be imposed against someone who criminally tampers with a product that actually causes harm to another, but also in instances where the intent to economically sabotage or damage the reputation of business is present.

It is clear we must get tough with criminals who iciously and wantonly injure the innocent or attempt to ruin a business.

While legislative action is required to deter and combat such activities, we must not be lulled into thinking government rules and tamper-resistant packaging can guarantee protection against everything that might occur to a criminal. The consumer must help. When you buy medicines-or any product-be sure the packages are not opened or damaged. Look at the seals or wrappings to make certin they are not torn. Also check the product inside the package for signs of tampering before using.

candles-especially where alcohol is also involved can be a recipe for trouble.

Immediately after the exchange of gifts, clean up the wrapping paper that litters the room. Some families set out festive department-store shopping bags as receptacles for use as packages are unwrapped, to keep the papers in one place. That's a great idea but be sure to discard the bags of paper in a plastic or metal trash container prompt Boxes and other manufacturer packaging should also be disposed of quickly, though "quickly" here may denote an interval of days while final disposition is made of a large number of still-boxed gifts.

Common sense is also in order for holiday party giving. If you're inviting over a group of close friends and setting out a festive assortment of nuts and cheeses on a coffee table, you're going to have all kinds of people dressed in their holiday best reaching over and onto that table. Is this a smart place to put the traditional bayberry candle? As at any time of the year, if a guest drops a cigarette or lighted match, retrieve it at once. Remember overstuffed upholstery can retain heat and ignite hours after a fire has been "extinguished" with water. Even a small fire on a sofa cushion, for example, means the cushion should be placed outside overnight--or you should telephone the fire department just to make sure the fire is really out. Common sense, a little imagination and a little wisdom can make a holiday celebration that's not only dramatic and festive-but safe. Have a happy holiday and take care. After all, fire and burns aren't on anyone's Christmas list!
