

Thomas W. Long easily wins Assembly seat; only about 2% of city voters show up

By R. R. Faszczewski
Approximately 2.2% of the city's registered voters turned out Tuesday for the Special Election in which 18-year Democratic Union County Freeholder Thomas W. Long of Linden easily won the unexpired Assembly term of Democrat, Raymond J. Lesniak, the state senator for the 20th Legislative District, who was elected to the upper Legislative house in June. Unofficial results showed 236 votes for Freeholder Long in Rahway to 73 for the independent candidate, Henry Kielbasa of Linden, and 20 write-in votes for the president of the Rahway Republican Club, Adam Mackow. The Republican Party had no official candidate in the Special Election. In the district as a whole, with two election districts in Elizabeth still not reporting as of press time, Freeholder Long tallied 4,345 votes to 733 for Mr. Kielbasa.

The municipalities in the district, outside of Rahway, reported, in Linden, 1,657 for Freeholder Long and 192 for Mr. Kielbasa; in Elizabeth, 1,315 for Freeholder Long and 437 for Mr. Kielbasa, and in Carteret, 137 for Freeholder Long and 31 for Mr. Kielbasa.

The new Assemblyman-elect did best in Rahway in the Fourth Ward, where he had 67 votes to 12 for Mr. Kielbasa. Results in the other wards were: First Ward, Mr. Long, 45; Mr. Kielbasa, nine; Second Ward, Mr. Long, 29; Mr. Kielbasa, 11; Third Ward, Mr. Long, 38; Mr. Kielbasa, 21; Fifth Ward, Mr. Long, 29; Mr. Kielbasa, 15; and Sixth Ward, Mr. Long, 28; Mr. Kielbasa, six.

Contacted by The Rahway News-Record, Assemblyman-Elect Long said he was very happy with the victory, although very disappointed with the poor turnout, which, he said, had been about 4 to 4.5% of the registered voters in the special elections in the last two months. The first occurred when former Democratic State Sen. John T. Gregorio was forced to give up his seat when convicted of tax-evasion charges. In June then-Assemblyman Lesniak successfully won the unexpired portion of the Gregorio term in the Senate, thus creating the need for Tuesday's election to fill his Assembly seat.

Both Sen. Lesniak and Assemblyman-Elect Long will be candidates for full terms in November. They will be joined on the Democratic line by incumbent Democratic Assemblyman Thomas Deverin.

Mr. Long said he will give up his freeholder seat if he wins a full two-year term in the Assembly in the General Election in November. He added he will not hold both offices simultaneously if he wins a full term. The Assemblyman-Elect denied rumors, published in a local daily newspaper, that he had made some type of deal with the Republicans through which he would give up his freeholder seat early if they ran only one Assembly candidate in November.

Mr. Long said he has spoken to Union County Republican Chairman Alfonso Pisano recently and the GOP chairman has neither formally or informally spoken of the above rumored "deal."

On other topics, he said his top priorities in the Assembly will be automobile insurance reform, exploring how to remove the funding of state-mandated programs from county budgets and providing better funding of higher education at the state level.

County arts center drive

At a wine-and-cheese gathering attended by some 30 members and friends on July 23 in the upstairs area of the Rahway Young Men's Christian Assn., Rahway Landmarks officially launched its fund drive for purchase of the Rahway Theatre.

Rahway Landmarks is the non-profit corporation that was formed five years ago to acquire the theatre for conversion to a showcase for the performing arts under the name "Union County Arts Center."

It has approached its objective methodically, devoting the first two years to a campaign to elicit community support and involvement and to build a firm base of members and volunteers. "That done, the past two years have been devoted to specific funding and acquisition plans, reports a spokesman for the group.

Earlier this year the 150-member organization made a $10,000 down payment on the solidly-constructed theatre, which has been closed since Nov., 1981, when it was being used for the showing of X-rated films exclusively.

An additional $165,000 must be raised by next March to fulfill terms of the purchase option and to consummate purchase.

Beyond that, there is still need for several hundred thousand dollars in additional funds to cover the cost of restoration. For that reason, the drive will continue for 30 months. It is possible the theatre could be re-open on a limited basis before the end of that period, the spokesman added.

The theatre was built in 1928 as a combined movie/ vaudeville showplace and is fully equipped for stage productions. It has exquisite interior architecture, a built-in pipe organ, excellent acoustics and more than 1,400 seats, the spokesman pointed out.

The July 23 affair at the "Y" was primarily a get-acquainted social event for the organization's more-active participants. As newly-elected corporation president, Sandra Sweeney, remarked to those at the gathering, "We've come to know each other in a strictly working environment during the past several months. It's a real pleasure to be able to get together finally in a more relaxed atmosphere."

Mrs. Sweeney operates an established furniture restoring business in Edison, and is one of the original Landmarks founders. She is an alumna of Rahway High School and is professionally trained in both business and the arts. She succeeds Robert Balfour, the organization's principal founder, as the president and board chairwoman.

The July 23 gathering also served as a welcoming reception for those who have expressed an interest in becoming active solicitors for the drive. Under the direction of its funding coordinator, Eric Ricketts, Landmarks has prepared an 85-page casebook and other materials for the purpose and has scheduled a series of training sessions at Rahway's Columbian School.

To date more than a dozen Landmarks members have indicated a desire to serve directly in the campaign, most of them as volunteer door-to-door solicitors. Lazlo Szabo is in charge of solicitor recruitment for the drive.

Addressing the attendees at the function, Mr. Ricketts thanked those who have volunteered thus far, but expressed the need for many more volunteer solicitors. Anyone interested may telephone Mrs. Sweeney at 738-0636 during the day, or either Mr. Ricketts at 388-2585 or Mr. Szabo at 388-4864 evenings after 7 o'clock.

Eleven cities, counties to receive state aid for summer youth jobs

THE ORIGINAL - This was Rahway's original public high school, built in 1873, one year after the public school system in New Jersey was required by law. The building, known as Lincoln School or the Third Ward School, was used until the new high school was constructed around the turn of the century. That building is the old City Hall at 1470 Campbell St. The Lincoln School was located on St. George Ave. between Pierpont St. and Central Ave. The photograph was removed from a volume of photographs donated to the Rahway Public Library by H. L. Moore, the author of the 1911 Moore postal card series of Rahway landmarks.

He is awarding $1 million in additional funds to 11 cities and counties for the Summer Youth Employment Program, reports Gov. Thomas H. Kean.

The grants, which are being provided under the Governor's Special CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) Grants program, will provide employment opportunities for 1,200 disadvantaged youth.

Altogether, $29,125,000 will be spent statewide this summer on the youth employment program. An estimated 29,500 individuals will be hired to jobs in state agencies or at municipal or county workites.

In addition, noted Gov. Kean, employers in the private sector who hire economically disadvantaged youth aged 16 or 17 will receive a generous tax credit.

"Hopefully, the additional public monies, coupled with the tax-credit program in the private sector, will keep this from being a long, hot summer filled with idle hours for our young people," Gov. Kean said.

"Without question the search for employment is particularly difficult for youth in that most lack any kind of training or work credentials," he added.

Jurisdictions receiving grants of $100,000 include the cities of Paterson, Elizabeth and Camden, and the counties of Mercer, Essex, Middlesex, Passaic and Union. The funds will allow for the hiring of 120 more youth in each area.

Trenton and Atlantic City will each receive grants of $75,000, which will allow each to hire an extra 90 youth, and East Orange will receive $50,000 for the hiring of an additional 60 individuals.

These grants are in addition to any funds originally earmarked for these areas. As to the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit law, employers may take up to an 85% tax credit on wages paid to youth they hire who are economically disadvantaged and aged 16 to 17.

For those over 17 such as a disadvantaged college student, the credit is 30%.

The credit is against federal taxes. Interested employers should contact their nearest New Jersey Employment Service office and ask for the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) representative.

"This is the first year we have been able to offer this particular tax credit," commented Commissioner Roger A. Bodman of the New Jersey Dept. of Labor.

"We have already sent out letters to 55,000 employers advising them of the program," said the commissioner. "While it's too early to say how many employers are taking advantage of the program, our staffers are reporting a steady stream of inquiries."

Commissioner Bodman also noted in the Summer Youth Employment Program, the bulk of the funds—$25.7 million—will be handled locally through mayors and county officials.

Another $918,000 will be spent to hire youth in the counties of Hunterdon, Salem, Sussex and Warren. The labor department will administer the program in these counties. The commissioner said two cities, Newark and Jersey City, previously received an extra $750,000 each in extra Summer Youth Employment Program funds directly from the United States Dept. of Labor.

Senate defeats aid to aliens

Before approving the Immigration Control Act the Senate defeated an effort by New Jersey Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley to use federal funds to pay for all state-provided health, welfare and education aid to newly legalized aliens for three years.

By a 57-to-37 vote, the Senate defeated the senator's plan when he offered it as an amendment to the immigration bill in a move strongly backed by the National Governors' Assn., the National Conference of State Legislators, the National Assn. of Counties, and the United States Conference of Mayors.

"This amendment is a matter of equity and fairness," Sen. Bradley said. "It is a matter of equity and fairness to those who have been in this country for three years and are now being treated as if they were just arriving."

"No new programs would have been created," he noted. "My amendment would have provided a limited amount of educational assistance to those school districts which have concentrations of illegal aliens. This is a matter of fairness to those districts."

Draft signup needed to get college aid

Some 500 Union County College students and prospective students who have applied for federal financial aid for the 1983-1984 academic year have been notified they must show proof of having registered for the draft or financial aid.

"We had a tremendous amount of voluntary compliance. Most went right ahead and filled out these certification forms already, even though there was a question of uncertainty," Mr. Biggs said.

There is no deadline for returning the draft/registration certification forms to the college, according to Mr. Biggs, but if students applying for financial aid do not submit them they will not be considered for federal funds.

Union County College has a multitude of grant programs for students who are financially needy and qualify for financial assistance. All of the college's grant programs are sponsored in part by federal government funds, Mr. Biggs said.

Meteor shower ready for annual display

Perseids, the most brilliant, most reliable and most widely observed meteor shower occurs every year during the first two weeks in August, according to Arthur Caccella, a lecturer in astronomy at Union County College and past president of Amateur Astronomers, Inc.

The Perseids shower can easily be seen in this area with the greatest display occurring around Friday, Aug. 12, the astronomer said. It is called by that name because meteors appear to be coming from near the constellation, Perseus.

Meteor showers are generally believed to be associated with the debris of old comets. A swarm of particles, somewhat separated from its parent comet and over a long period of time spreads out along the orbit of the comet. Each year, as the Earth passes through this stream of comet debris, the particles are swept up, causing a shower of meteors, the expert explained.

Woman boiler operator earns way up

Housing, churning and roasting, the cavernous boiler room threatens to swallow any intruder. Nose from countless, mammoth-sized steam boiler valves and from water, oil and fire protection pumps dominates the room.

When the boiler fires off, as it does several times a day, a smoky haze adds to the steam that billows from the town's grain elevators and chimneys.

Keeping all that power under control—the potential for explosion exists in any boiler room—is the job of Cynthia Soma, the only woman boiler operator at Rutgers University.

A member of the physical staff at the Newark campus of New Jersey State University, she has been operating the boiler in the 16-story S. I. Newhouse Center for Law and Justice in Newark for the past six years.

Like her colleagues, Soma has a lot of female boiler operators in the state, she says. But she is more an "atypical" boiler operator than by her own kitchen.

The job is the latest in a series that has led her into untraditional roles. She worked for the New Jersey Department of Transportation in houses and repaired railroad ties for Amtrak among other jobs.

Her hobbies include making jewelry, sculpting paper and working in public gardens. She has also studied blacksmithing and is adept at stained glass making.

"I can't go to work in my pajamas," she says. "I have to be in my work clothes."

She has a 10-year-old son, and she has a pet dog, a cat, and a hamster. She also has a hamster named "Milo," she says.

Amtrak.

An active member of the International Union of Operating Engineers, she deliberately stages sexual innuendo from male coworkers. For example, she deliberately makes herself visible at union meetings and continues to take classes that will further her opportunities for higher grade levels.

"My blood boiled," she said, "because I was asked to be a union steward. I remember saying something like, 'That's very funny. Nothing to do with your time, huh?'"

The boiler operator said she felt compelled to choke back her anger because she was afraid her male coworkers would complain to her supervisors, claiming she was short-tempered, hard to get along with or a trouble maker.

"I was afraid to be an angry man in my work clothes," she said. "I was afraid to be an angry man in my work clothes."

GAUGING HER SUCCESS - Cynthia Soma, the only woman boiler operator at Rutgers University, finds one of her charges at the 16-story S. I. Newhouse Center for Law and Justice at the State University of New Jersey's Newark campus. A member of the physical staff, she has been operating the boiler in the building since she joined the Rutgers School of Law in 1977.

It is, she will make a leave of absence, without pay, from her boiler operator position for her first year of law studies, then return to the boiler room and complete her law education at a Rutgers University law school.

"The boiler operator is a very different job from what most people would expect," she said. "It's not just a job, it's a way of life. You have to be a team player, you have to be a team player. You have to be a team player."

County ranked fourth at national confab

Union County officials returned from the National Assn. of Counties Conference in Milwaukee last week informed the county was tied for fourth place in the nation with the most awards for innovative and cost-effective programs. Union County swept the conference with 17 awards this year, topped only by Los Angeles County, Calif., 28 awards, and Suffolk County, N. Y., 34 awards. Dade County, Fla., which includes Miami Beach, tied the Union County total of 17 awards. In third place was Chester County, Pa., with 21 awards.

Union County was also one of four counties around the nation which set up and manned a display booth on the conference floor. During the three-day conference, hundreds of officials and administrators from all over the country visited the Union County booth to discuss and obtain information about programs and services they might use back home.

Union County, N. J., even received a visit from a representative of Union County, N. C. A total of 75 representatives from New Jersey attended this year's conference. Representing Union County were: Frank H. Lehr, the chairman of the Board of Chosen Freeholders; Freeholders Walter Boright and Charlotte DeFillippo; Arthur J. Gris, the county manager; Vincent Campasano, the director of central services; and Laura Covucci Kolmoski, the public information officer.

Union County's 17 awards include the following programs, which were judged for their merit, innovative methods, cost effectiveness, service to county residents and transferability to other counties: Coordinated Home Care Program; Fingerprints on File; Flag Guardians; Police Training Academy; Pro Se Lit-

Roosevelt cites Scott Pagliaroli

A sixth grader, Scott Pagliaroli, was given the Youth Fitness Award at Rahway's Roosevelt School, for scoring between 50 and 79% on all items.

Hurricanes are killers. These devastating storms pose a triple threat to any community they strike: The high winds, the torrential flood-producing rains inland, and the storm surge—the real killer of hurricanes. Acting like a giant bulldozer, the storm surge is a dome of water often 50 miles wide that sweeps everything from its path where the eye of the hurricane makes landfall. Water in a storm surge can rise 20 feet or more above normal tides.

Huge waves above this dome of water pound the shoreline and inundate low-lying areas, cutting off some escape routes from the shore. The stronger the hurricane, the higher the storm surge will be. Nine out of 10 people who die in a hurricane drown in the storm surge.

The floods and flash flooding produced by the torrential rains of a hurricane are major threats to lives and property. Although hurricanes weaken quickly as they sweep inland, they often dump six to 12 inches of rain or more over the areas they cross, resulting in severe flooding. A hurricane's winds also cause great destruction. For some structures, such as mobile homes, a hurricane's high winds can cause much damage. Hurricanes can also spawn tornadoes, which cause additional devastation.

The greatest threat from a hurricane's winds is from flying debris. Wind-driven sand and surging water cause great damage and are lethal, as are airborne signs, flying glass, lawn furniture and construction materials. The director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), Louis O. Giuffrida, stresses the importance of hurricane preparedness.

"Knowing the designated evacuation routes for your community, staying alert to warnings and following official instructions as quickly as possible could save your life," he said. Mr. Giuffrida said his agency is encouraging emergency-preparedness programs at the state and local government levels for a variety of natural and man-made disasters and emergencies, including the hurricane.

More people now live in coastal areas than ever before, many on the paths of past hurricanes. About eight in 10 coastal residents from Texas to Maine have never experienced a hurricane. As coastal populations increase, so does the potential for tremendous devastation from a hurricane.

Many coastal residents are apathetic about hurricanes, said Dr. Neil L. Frank, the director of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), "and that's a big concern for us. We are now more vulnerable to hurricanes than we ever have been. If people don't regard a hurricane as a serious threat to life and property, many deaths and much damage could be caused."

He added many coastal residents mistakenly believe they have already experienced a savage hurricane, and this perception increases the level of apathy. Hurricane David, for example, merely brushed the southeastern coast of Florida in 1979. Its most violent action was over the ocean. However, many residents in that area believe they weathered a major hurricane and now regard appliances that have a heating element in them. Be alert for tornado watches and warnings; tornadoes are often spawned by hurricanes. If you receive a tornado warning, seek shelter immediately, preferably below ground. These precautions can help immediately before and during the storm, but there is another step you can take now to provide long-term protection for your home and property—buy flood insurance. Losses from flooding are not covered by home-owner's insurance policies. Flood insurance, however, is available through the National Flood Insurance Program, which is administered by FEMA. If your community participates in the National Flood Insurance Program, you are eligible to apply for coverage. A telephone call to your insurance agent or broker will start the process to cover your home, possessions and business. A five-day wait is required for your policy to become effective. Renters can buy policies to protect their property, too.
