"With your help I can read your meter even when you're not at home."

Then we can send you exact bills each month

We know you can't always be home when the meter reader calls. So we've come up with some suggestions that will enable us to read your meter when you're not there. They're convenient, simple and safe.

Four ways you can "beat" the averages

1. If only your gas meter is inside, we can install a remote gas meter reading device. This way your meter can be read from outside your home. For most customers, there is a one-time charge of $60.00 plus tax for the equipment, but no service charge for installation.

2. We can give you a "dial card" to keep in your home If you know you are not going to be home on a scheduled meter reading date, just set the pointers on the dial card as they show on the meter, and leave it where our meter reader will see it.

3. Addther way is to ask for our pre-addressed postpaid 'meledreading cards." You can fill one in and mail it to us a was ahead of your scheduled meter reading date. 4. Leave a key with a neighbor who can let us in, and call in advance to let us know.

We'll help you choose

Our customer service representatives will work with you to choose the best alternative for you. You could call today, in fact, at the number indicated on your bill. Of course, if you can possibly be home when the meter reader comes, all the better. Just check your bill for the next scheduled reading day. Your bill shows if your usage has been averaged. Look for an "A" next to the number in the "Gas Use — Elec. Use" column. By helping us provide you with accurate billing, we're improving efficiency, and that helps you because it saves money and time for everyone.

That's people-to-people service

Speaking of efficiency, our "Seal-Up and Save" energy conservation messages might help you use energy more wisely. You'll find them with your bill or in your newspapers.
