OUR BATTLE AGAINST RESPIRATORY DISTRESS SYNDROME IN NEWBORNS HAS HELPED BABIES - AND THEIR FAMILIES -BREATHE A WHOLE LOT EASIER

The world is pretty tough if you're born with immature lungs. The tragic fact is Respiratory Distress Syndrome is the leading cause of death among newborns, killing But American Heart Association research scientist John A. Clements, M.D. is working hard to discover its causes — and cures. He has shown that victims don't produce enough of the crucial chemical that promotes full lung expansion. Knowing this, doctors can perform a pre-natal test for the presence of this chemical in the womb. If a proble is foreseen, drug therapy can help save the baby. And Dr. Clements is continuing to develop new treatments for babies born with Respiratory Distress Syndrome. We support thousands of projects as important as this one. But we need your help. A ntribution to the American Heart Association is an investment in research that makes a difference. And even gives the littlest among us a bigger fighting chance.

Flowering shrubs may be pruned while dormant

Although both springflowering and summerflowering shrubs can be pruned now before growth resumes this spring, the method of pruning differs considerably.

Spring-flowering shrubs, such as forsythia, lilac or spirea, which flower before mid-June, bloom on wood produced this year or before. These multi-trunk shrubs should be pruned while dormant by thinning out older wood at the base of the plant, leaving the younger growth to bloom

Summer-flowering shrubs, such as butterfly bush, vitex or the white Snowhill hydrangea will bloom on new growth produced this spring. These shrubs can be pruned back severely now before growth begins. Excess shoots may also be thinned out at the base of the shrub. The blue or pink florists' hydrangea is an exception to the summer-floweringshrub pruning rule, since its buds are set in late summer for the following year's blooms. These hydrangeas should be thinned near the base if the number of shoots becomes excessive.
