MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 13 — Plankay Board of Ad — mitted by the legislature has been thrown out by the U.S.

Assemblyman Bob Franks would like to change the way districts are drawn. His bill, ACR 59, which was 1 TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2. Union County Regional [] reviewed at a public hearing held in Trenton last week by the Assembly State Government Committee, seeks to amend the state constitution by removing the power to draw districts from the state legislature and giving it in stead to a ten member bipartisan commission. Franks' bill has been endorsed by the League of Women Voters, Common Cause and the Star Ledger.

Assemblyman Franks' plan would call for Congres sional districts and the 40 legislative districts to be established by the New Jersey Redistricting Commission after each Federal census. The commission would be reaurred to accept plans from the public, conduct it meetings in public and hold public hearings throughout the state.

The 10 commission members would be appointed with consideration to geographic, ethnic, racial and political diversity. No more than five members of the ommission can be affiliated with either political party. Among the Commission's requirements will be t establish districts of contigious territory, as nearly equalin population as possible, and as compact as possible coinciding with existing boundaries of counties and minicipalities.

Governor Kean supports the measure, which b outed in his 1986 State of the State address, "Twice in the , tachenny in Elizabeth in Last ten years, New Jersey has ended up in court while addition to serving as Coun [1] republicans and democrats brawled over the redrawing of ongressional districts," the Governor said. "Assemblyman Bob Franks has a bill that would Franks said, "This commission would be charged secondation to a Estate on October 26. She j with insuring that the remapping procedure follows the court guidelines with regard to population equality. It

While it is probably impossible o totally remove politics from the process, the bipartisan ommission would improve the integrity of the system ind insure greater representation for the people."

Constitutional Rights

This is the first in a series of articles by officers and members of the New Jersey Affiliate of the Association of That Lawyers of America. It is designed to inform you, the reading public, of the legal rights you have in various situations to receive compensation for wrongs that may have been committed against you. This article is devoted to a situation concerning the rights of citizens under the United States Constitution when they are accused, rightly or wrongly, of violating the law,

May teenagers arrested for violating a local ordinance by playing their radio too loud be kept in jail overnight and deprived of food and water and even a place to sleep? That is the issue recently decided by the United States Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Anela v. City of Wildwood

In the Summer of 1981, teenage girls rented premises n Wildwood as a summer vacation home. During the Ju ly 4 weekend, while some of them were dressed only in hightpowns, the police came in and everyone present was irrested and given only a few minutes to dress before bemy taken to the station house in a paddy wagon Although New Jersey law required that for minor offenses such as this one, arrested persons be issued a summons after identification procedures were completed and then released, that did not happen. Rather the City enforced a bail schedule set by the local municipal judge, requiring that payment be made if the girls wished to avoid spending the night in jul before their court appearance in [] debts left behind in the past the morning. The police refused to take travelets checks which one of the girls had, and in the absence of sufficient eash, all nine girly arrested were locked up. They were put three in a cell, and each cell had no bed, containing only a small bench, a sink and a filthy toilet. Although the girls were in the cells for nearly twelve hours, no food was pro- | ble_attempt, and in_some | vided and when a request was made for water, they were told that there were no cups.

The Third Circuit found that the City of Wildwood could be held liable for the overnight incarceration of the plaintiffs. Rejected was the City's argument that it was not responsible because the bail schedule had been set by the municipal judge who is technically an employee of the state and not the city. The rule requiring issuance of a summons and release was created by the New Jersey Supreme Court, clearly a higher state authority than a municipal judge, and the Third Circuit found that the City had a duty to be aware of its legal obligation. The practice of incarcerating persons arrested for minor offenses. such as this when they could not post bail created the necessary municipal policy which must exist before a local government entity can be held liable in damages for violation of constitutional rights. The court also ruled that the conditions of incarceration violated the rights of persons detained before trial not to be punished. Providing neither a place to sleep nor food and water for girls charged with nothing more serious than lowl radio playing was found to constitute "privation and punishment in violation of the Fourtcenth Amendment."

When appearing before the municipal judge in the morning the girls all pleaded guilty and paid fines so as to be done with the matter once and for all. While the trial judge had ruled that these guilty pleas barred the girls. from arguing that there had been no probable cause for their arrest in the first place, the Third Circuit disagreed. Guilty pleas to minor offenses such as this one were found not to be conclusive as to whether police had violated Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable. searches and seizures. Only when there has been a fulltrial followed by adjudication on the evidence will findings in criminal proceedings be deemed binding in later. civil lawsuits against police or other law enforcement of-

The lesson to be learned from the Anela case is that persons accused of voilating the law do not forfeit their right to decent treatment. Here, especially, where the violation claimed was in no way criminal, and really amounted to nothing more than a nuisance, nine girls were subjected to loss of basic human necessities such as police arrested everybody in the house without making any attempt to find out whose radio it was that was playing, while many of the girls were not in the living room, where the radio was located, but in their bedrooms or bathroom, Similar considerations have arised in a number. of cases where people stopped for nothing other than a speeding ticket were ultimately subjected to going to the station house and removing all their clothes for a stripsearch for which there was absolutely no justification. Citizens would all do well to be apprised of their rights. and it is our hope that this column will help to accomplish iust that.

Wishing to appear cheerful today for the family's visit, she slowly arose from the bed realizing it was only one hour until they would be arriving. Although they spoke weekly with Joan, it had been seven months since they had last seen each other at Dan's funeral. Eric, her son who lived 25 miles away would also be coming with his family for dinner. Emily wept as she realized she had not seen Eric for the past month. Weeping seemed commonplace to her over the past few months and she frequently thought of the days when she worked as a telephone operator and looked forward to having an early breakfast with Dan and the children before beginning her day. Dan had worked long hours and mily had enjoyed having time with her children in the evenings. How quickly they grew and how far away they now seemed to her. She wept some more as she remembered her empty home and her lack of interest in seeing her children.
