GOP challenger takes on three-term Democrat

By Christopher Toohey
Staff Writer

This is the second of a two-part series highlighting the candidates running for the two Assembly seats in the 20th Legislative District. The 20th District includes Elizabeth, Linden, Roselle and Rahway. Last week, Democratic incumbent Joseph Suliga and Republican challenger Richard Revilla were featured. This week, profiles on Democratic incumbent Neil Cohen and Republican challenger Thomas Rocco are presented.

Neil Cohen

Thomas Rocco

Thomas Rocco believes that a more conservative approach to legislating is needed in the 20th District and this may garner support for his candidacy, but one of his opponents, Democrat Neil Cohen, believes his experience in the Assembly will not only capture a majority of Democratic voters but Republicans as well.

On Nov. 7, residents of the 20th District will decide which two candidates will serve in the Assembly for the next two years — incumbent Democrats Cohen and Joseph Suliga, or Republicans Rocco and Richard Revilla.

Cohen, a 43-year-old attorney who lives in Roselle, is seeking his third term in the Assembly, a position carrying a $35,000 salary. Cohen, who was first elected in 1989, lost in 1991 in the former 21st Legislative District and won again in 1993 when he sought a seat in the new 20th District.

Rocco, a 47-year-old inventory control specialist for Pathmark Corp. in Woodbridge, said his reason for running is one of party allegiance. "I think we should have more of a Republican presence in our district," Rocco said of the 20th District, which has a majority of registered Democrats.

Rocco recognizes his lack of experience compared to Cohen but remains optimistic. "I think the citizens of Rahway, Linden, Roselle and Elizabeth can vote for a positive change on Election Day."

Reflecting on his current term, Cohen highlighted his work on health care as most significant. After five years of effort, the governor signed Cohen's bill, which requires insurance companies to offer coverage for bone-marrow cancer treatment. Another of his bills, Cohen said, focuses on the Patient Protection Act, which deals with monitoring the nation's HMOs.

Approximately 60 other Cohen-sponsored bills, he said, have also been signed into law.

Rocco said that although everyone in the United States should be provided with health care, socializing it is not the best route to take. He said, instead, people should be given tax breaks on all money spent on health care.

He puts raising employment levels at the top his list of priorities. "And I don't mean just $5-an-hour jobs either. I mean careers and career opportunities," he said.

Another issue Rocco views as significant is education. He intends to improve the educational system by pushing teaching that would give students "real-life job skills which would benefit them in a job or in college," Rocco added. "I would encourage [illegible] to take trips to manufacturing and service companies to show them what the real world is like."

If re-elected, Cohen plans to continue his health care efforts while continuing the deregulation of the energy industry. "Although not a romantic issue, it's a consumer, business and conservation issue," Cohen said of energy. He said he will focus on the role that utility companies and independent power producers will play in the energy market of the future.

"It's an important issue, but there's no [illegible] right now," said [illegible] who doesn't see any immediate need for such action.

Rather, Rocco said he feels creating jobs and accelerating the economy is paramount. He will continue to lower income taxes and keep property taxes [illegible] for retired residents.

One way Rocco would stimulate employment is to increase the minimum wage in New Jersey by at least

Budget is reintroduced; state says advice wrong

By Christopher Toohey
Staff Writer

How many City Council members, out of the nine that are on the council in Rahway, does it take to introduce a budget? It would seem to be a simple question, but it's apparently more complicated.

In August, during a special meeting, the council voted to introduce a $25.5 million budget, a vote that was originally scheduled to be taken July 1. At the time, City Attorney Rebecca Donington said she advised the council that in order to introduce the budget, a majority vote of the members present at the meeting was required. But according to Bob Friant, spokesman for the state Department of Community Affairs, Donington's advice was incorrect.

According to Friant, a majority of the entire council is required, not just those present. In a nine-member council, five would be the minimum number of votes required.

In August, the council voted 4-3 in favor of the budget's introduction and moved on, but now in light of Friant's intervention, the budget had to be reintroduced. A temporary budget of $1.6 million was also needed in order to pay city employees.

Council President Salvatore Mione said that he was more disappointed with his fellow council members voting against the budget's introduction than Donington's reportedly inaccurate interpretation of the statute.

"I was a little disappointed, but if the law is vague in that area and is left to interpretation, I can see where a mistake could be made. However, there should be no reason why the whole council shouldn't vote for the introduction of the budget. Whether they agree or disagree, they can't say anything until they introduce the budget," he said. "I'm more annoyed at the council than the attorney for misinterpreting the statute," Mione added.

The temporary budget passed 6-1 without a hitch and on Sept. 28 the $25.5 million budget was successfully reintroduced by a vote of 5-2. Republican Councilmen James Fulcomer and Jeffrey Cohen voted against the introduction.

Republican Councilman Frank Janusz, absent from both meetings, said he also would have voted against the budget's introduction. He said, "They're only putting $2 million into the budget from the Union County Utilities Authority from our host community agreement — we're guaranteed $2.2 million." He added, "Last year we only put $1.76 (million) into it, and we were guaranteed $2.2 million, so there's $600,000 floating around that should be in tax reduction that's not going into the budget. There's no reason for a tax increase this year."

Janusz also had strong opinions concerning the issue of the misread statute.

"It's just another example of the attorney giving us bad advice. It was everybody's opinion that there needed to be five votes, but the attorney said four would be enough. The attorney has been wrong and given us such bad advice in the past," he said. "In my opinion we're without representation. I have no faith at all in this attorney or their law firm."

City spokesman Jeff Jotz said, "I think the worst part is that if they had voted to introduce the budget, we wouldn't have this problem to begin with. They're actually the ones who are costing the taxpayers' money."

Jotz also said the issue didn't pass the first vote because of "pure partisan politics."

With the budget now introduced, the council will hold a public hearing for the budget on Oct. 30.

Walking for fitness promoted by school/hospital partnership

By Donna Segal
Managing Editor

Rahway Hospital and the Frank K. Hehnly School in Clark have joined forces to create a [illegible] walking program for children in grades [illegible]. The principal speaker at the kickoff ceremony, Kay MacVicar, director for Patient Services, Rahway Hospital, was dressed as a clown to emphasize walking as a [illegible] stress-reducing activity.

As part of a partnership between Frank K. Hehnly school officials in Clark and Rahway Hospital, 364 first through fifth grade children agreed to a collective goal of walking 36,000 miles before the end of the school year.

Rahway Hospital wrote the fitness program, which is appropriate to the age group, and the school has delineated a walking course on its grounds. Each student has been provided a sneaker-shaped log into which he or she will enter the number of personal miles walked both at school and during free time.

The program officially kicked off at a school assembly at the end of last month, for which Kay MacVicar, director for Patient Services for the hospital, was the principal speaker. MacVicar, who was dressed as a clown to emphasize [illegible] told the students, "Lots of adults are concerned with their physical well-being and getting involved in [illegible] exercise programs, while in the last 15 years, children have become heavier, slower and generally less healthy."

According to MacVicar, national statistics on the subject reveal that only one-third of children under age 18 exercise for a continuous 20 minutes, three days a week — the minimum needed to maintain a healthy body. The time children spend in front of television sets keeps increasing.

MacVicar said, "Walking is limited, isolated, safe and life changing." She said that the hospital's outreach and focus on prevention reflects a new philosophy that hospitals are not houses of sickness. "Health-care professionals now recognize their obligation to bring prevention information into the community," MacVicar added.

During the assembly, [illegible] School Principal [illegible] Levine told the students, "It is important to be well in mind and well in body. Physical education and mental education go hand-in-hand." Following the assembly, Levine went on a walk with the students around the tennis courts. She said it is her objective to incorporate the walking program into the curriculum. "For instance, the miles walked [illegible] math, health and science," Levine said.

According to [illegible], when teachers observe that students are tired or bored, they may use the strategy "STEW" [illegible] everything — walk," and [illegible] either the outside course or, if the winter has been [illegible], within the confines of the school building.

Rahway Hospital and Clark Kiwanis Club join forces

By Christopher Toohey
Staff Writer

On Sunday, Rahway Hospital's Nicholas Quadrel Healthy Heart Center will hold its fifth annual Healthy Heart Walk in Rahway's Union County Park.

The 1 1/4 mile walk, which will begin promptly at 8:45 a.m., is sponsored by the Clark Kiwanis Club, a worldwide service organization, and Rahway Hospital.

The first 200 registrants will receive souvenir water bottles and certificates will be awarded to all who complete the pleasurable walk which traces the lake and various groves of the park. The walk will be held rain or shine. The fee for the walk is $3, and on-site registering is available. Pets are also welcome.

Howard Klein, coordinator of the Rahway Hospital Public Relations Department, said that even though proceeds from the event have averaged about $2,000 in previous years, fund raising is really a secondary goal for the event.

"Their purpose out there for walking is just to recognize that walking is a heart-healthy form of exercise," Klein said. "Patients of the Healthy Heart Center are invited to the walk as well as community members in general," he added.

Linda Murphy, nurse manager for Ambulatory Services at Rahway Hospital, said, "Some of the people that walk have sustained heart attacks or minor cardiac infarctions. What we're looking for is for them to get the confidence to walk an entire mile."

Murphy added, "You'll see their daughter and maybe a [illegible] come along just to show solidarity with [illegible] person [illegible] rehabilitation."

Those who [illegible] the 13th annual Kiwanis Run for Life, which will be held in conjunction with the walk. Runners can choose a [illegible] mile or 5 mile race, which also goes into the wooded part of the park. The first 200 registrants will receive a special Run for Life T-shirt, and three awards will be presented in each male and female group. The pre-entry fee for any of the three Run for Life races is $12 and the [illegible]

GOP challenger takes on 3-term Democrat in 20th District race

$1 per hour. "I feel this would help people get over the poverty line. It would encourage people to go to work and hopefully relieve them from welfare."

Rocco would also deregulate the business start-up process. "I'd like to eliminate a lot of needless paperwork and information checking," he said, and especially for small businesses because he feels this is where the jobs are right now.

Another factor Cohen attributes to his and Suliga's past success is their "extraordinarily good constituency service." He feels people may only remember one in every 60 bills passed, but it's the prompt response their office supplies that people not only appreciate but remember. Cohen said that his office will respond by letter to an individual's question or comment within 48 hours. "The hallmark of any legislative office is the quality of people that you have working," Cohen said, referring to his staff at the Assembly headquarters in Elizabeth. "And the speed in which you get them an answer."

If elected, Rocco said his office would be able to cut response time to 24 hours. "I think it's important to get back to the people."

Cohen's campaign began in September when he started walking door-to-door through Rahway and Roselle. Cohen said he and Suliga always try to run their campaign as if they're behind in the polls. He added that this year's campaign will be relatively unchanged from previous campaigns. Plans include intensive house-by-house, door-to-door campaigning of the four communities that make up the 20th District — right up until the day of the election.

Rocco said he's been campaigning since late August, also walking door-to-door in Rahway. He plans to campaign in Roselle as well. He calls the response he's been receiving "very positive."

Rocco's other campaigning events include a fundraiser on Oct. 19 at Casa's Restaurant, where Rocco's running mate will also be present, along with mailings, cable TV commercials and additional fundraisers. [illegible] describes the campaign as very aggressive.

The two opposing candidates know very little about each other. Cohen hasn't seen Rocco at any events or campaigning. He does know that neither Republican candidate has any governmental experience. But regardless of what his opponents may have up their sleeves, Cohen likes his chances of winning.

Of the 200,000 people who reside in the 20th District, 80,000 are registered voters. Of those, approximately 55 percent are Democrats and only 10 percent are Republican. Cohen expects not only to take the Democratic vote, but a majority of the Republican ballots as well.

Rocco disagrees with his opponent. He said he feels the Republican constituency has not lost any faith in the party. "I know the numbers are against us, but it is an election. Anything can happen."

Cohen is minority whip of the Assembly, Roselle Democratic Party chairman, and a former Union County Democratic chairman. In addition, he served three years as a freeholder and was recently selected as a member of the Holocaust Memorial Commission and received an appointment to the Hispanic Advisory Council.

Rocco is a commissioner of the Rahway Housing Authority, a member of the Union County Environmental Health Board, treasurer of the Rahway Republican Club and was a candidate for councilman at large in Rahway last year.

What would it feel like to meet the Pope? To shake his hand? To speak directly to him? Just ask some local children who were among the 38 students from St. John The Apostle Elementary School in Clark who greeted him at Newark Airport when he arrived from Italy on Oct. 4.

After checking her e-mail one day, Sister Donna Marie, principal of the school, said she read a notice sent from the Archdiocese that offered an opportunity for a certain number of schools to greet Pope John Paul II, along with the governor of New Jersey, president and first lady, at the airport when he arrived. Thirty-eight students and two adults would be selected to represent each school. Seizing the opportunity, Sister Marie responded immediately.

Other than requiring the schools to be ethnically diverse, the diocese offered spaces on a first-come, first-serve basis. Thanks to her haste in responding, St. John The Apostle was selected as one of the schools.

Representing the only local elementary school, St. John The Apostle School now had the difficult task of determining which students would attend. Since the diocese wanted sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders, a lottery was held to choose 13 eighth-graders, 13 seventh-graders and 12 sixth-graders. Alternates also were chosen.

According to Sister Marie, on the day of the event, since the bus was not scheduled to arrive at the school until 10:45 a.m., it was planned that the students would stay in their classes until 10 a.m. However, when it arrived an hour early, the bus driver suggested they leave a little early. She agreed. So, the kids got out of class earlier, loaded their cameras and umbrellas and departed for the New Jersey Turnpike at 10 a.m.

According to Sister Marie, upon reaching their destination between 10:15 and 10:30 a.m., the group made the pleasant discovery that, of the 50 buses scheduled to arrive, their was only third on the scene.

She said that once on the airport grounds, they were not allowed to leave the bus right away. As time passed, anticipation was building, but failed to get the best of them. Finally at 12:30 p.m., they disembarked from the bus and made their way toward the runway.

According to Ryan McKenna, a resident of Linden and seventh-grader at St. John The Apostle, along the way, each man, woman and child had to be searched. They were required to not only walk through full-size metal detectors, but were subject to a separate search involving a metal-detecting wand that passed over every part of their bodies.

In addition, all personal belongings had to be searched, including cameras. But since all film that passed through the metal detectors would be ruined, officials recommended not loading film until their cameras could be checked. Eighth-grader Megan Carpenter of Rahway said that this presented a problem for the many students who brought disposable cameras, in which the film already is loaded.

Next, the group was lead to their space. They walked all the way through the spacious fenced section of asphalt, right to the front. They settled up against the front fence, just to the right of the podium where the governor, president and Pope would soon speak.

It didn't take long for all 2,000 students scheduled to arrive to file in and assume their respective positions. Also in place were the Newark Port Authority Security detail, the Secret Service, and news media.

Governor Whitman was the first to arrive at 1:30 p.m. She briefly addressed the crowd, then greeted and spoke with many of the visitors. Marisel Morales, a mother of one of the children in the school, who serves as Whitman's secretary, arranged for all the eighth-graders in their group to privately meet the governor before she strolled around the outside of the fence greeting everyone.

President Clinton was next to arrive. Scheduled to arrive at 2 p.m., Air Force One did not show until about 2:20 p.m. With the Pope not due for another 40 minutes, the students had expected the president to come out and talk with everyone just as the governor did, but he did not. In fact, he remained on his plane until the Pope's plane had landed.

According to Sister Marie, two planes landed. The first was believed to be a decoy. At 3 p.m., the Pope arrived in the second plane and soon made his appearance.

The gateway was pushed up to the doorway of his Alitalia jet. At the bottom of the steps, the president, accompanied by other state and religious figures, awaited the Holy Father. After a short, private conversation with Clinton, the Pope made his way toward the podium for his first press conference. The students' cameras flashed and hands applauded as he stepped onto the small stage before them, followed by the president.

Clinton spoke first, welcoming the Pope to the U.S. He also mentioned the first lady's efforts with the Women's Conference in Beijing.

Afterwards, the Pope addressed the crowd and press. He, too, supported Hillary Clinton's efforts. He then expressed his views on the issue of abortion endorsing not only the right to life, but the dignity of life.

The Pope continued by explaining that the future is in the hands of the children. He encouraged a return to religious life, siting the recent shortage of priets and nuns in the U.S.

New York's Cardinal O'Conner, Cardinal Law from Boston and even the wheelchaired Cardinal Kroll form Philidelphia made the journey to be on hand for the Pope's first look at New Jersey.

Students said they could see security at every turn, including agents on rooftops who constantly had their rifles drawn on the area.

The children said that not only were they not intimidated by the stong police prescence, but they rather enjoyed their company. Beforehand, students asked security members questions concerning the event. Eighth-grader David Sica of Rahway asked, "Is this the biggest event you've ever done?" In response, the officer said that it was and that there were more security officers than there students.

During the times that each notable figure took their walks down the fences, officers would take pictures for kids who couldn't get close enough. And, afterwards, some officers even gave children who were lucky enough, their gleaming white gloves, which are part of their dress uniforms, as souvenirs.

The event did not end until 5:30 p.m., when the bus that brought the children finally took them home. The students said they all enjoyed the experience immensely and will always remember it. "My mother said I should tell my grandchild," said eighth-grader Annie Thorton of Rahway.

"It's once in a lifetime," said the sister. Actually, twice. This was the second time Sister Marie had seen the Pope first hand. In 1979, as head of the religious department at Mt. St. Dominic's High School in Caldwell, she saw him at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Thirty-eight students from St. John The Apostle Elementary School in Clark got a chance to greet Pope John Paul II at Newark Airport when he arrived from Italy on Oct. 4. Rahway and Clark children are seen meeting the Pope.

Johnson teachers awarded for joint science project

Arthur L. Johnson teachers San D. Hassleman and John Aragona were recently awarded a grant by the Alliance for Arts Education/New Jersey and the New Jersey Council on the Arts.

Their joint project titled "A Practical Guide to Exploring Sandy Hook's Natural Resources Through the Eyes of the Scientist and Artist" will be developed and produced in collaboration with the art and science departments.

Hasselman and Aragona plan to design a series of exercises and investigative activities in a combination book/kit form dealing with the Sandy Hook seashore area.

The goal is to get students in the arts, especially the visual arts and writing, and the sciences, especially oceanography and biology, to collaborate. Each student will complete exercises in the arts and sciences and will, in turn, act as a facilitator to each student in the group. Leadership skills, cooperative learning skills, as well as enhanced art and science skills will be nurtured and developed through specifically developed exercises. Through these activities students should become aware of the relationship between "seekers of knowledge" and the "observers of life."

Among the activities which will be noted in the plastic bound notebook/kit [illegible]:

- To experience the geography and geology of Sandy Hook;
- To investigate the impact of longshore currents;
- To understand the importance of the tidal marsh and its inhabitants;
- To secure samples of ocean water and sand for laboratory investigation;
- To observe the effects of pollution;
- To observe the historical and modern navigational techniques.

Hasselman and Aragona are in the planning phase of the kit from now until December, 1995 and plan to field test the kit with art and science students in May [illegible].

In the making

At the Jostens Yearbook Camp this summer, the top editorial board of the Lance, the Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School yearbook, decides on the cover design: Joe Marchese, left, Regine Rousso, Ray Doss, standing, and Jennifer Applebaum confer with plant artist Rick Brooks. This year's theme, "Prime Times," will explore just what makes high school special, unique and memorable. Special attention is being planned to include all students regardless of grade level or school involvement.

More than just a public library

Everybody knows that a public library is a great source of information for children as well as adults. It is a place where students can go to do research for a school project. It is a place where adults can go to take out a book for some easy reading during their free time or even do some research themselves. It is the one place a person can go to read, research and take some time out, and do it all for free.

That is what every free public library is all about. It is rare, however, to find a library that is so much more than that. Rahway has such a library. From activities for children to activities for adults, the library staff is there to accommodate everyone.

The library should especially be commended this month for its efforts to educate and provide some entertainment during Arts and Humanities Month. Library staff have taken the time to plan a month that includes a bit of fun and education for everyone.

The month started last week with the unveiling of the library quilt — a project that should be commended in and of itself. The quilt was put together under the direction of librarian Julie Doel, several library staff members as well as residents. The quilt shows scenes of Rahway and will be on permanent display at the library. What a better way to bring some members of the community together to make the quilt while creating something that depicts the city's history and will be a permanent fixture at the library.

Today at 7 p.m., the library will feature a lecture by New Jersey writer Michael Aaron Rockland, author of "Snowshoeing through Sewers" as well as other books on New Jersey culture. Rockland will discuss his newest book and show some of the PBS [illegible] based.

On Sunday at 3 p.m., a group of performers, Messina and Chattin, a jazz trio, will perform at the library.

On Monday, there will be a needlecraft demonstration and exhibition at 7 p.m. Next Thursday, a [illegible] by Library Trustee Sondra Fishinger will be presented at 7:30 p.m.

But that is not all. The library has much more planned for the remainder of the month. All programs are free and open to the public. We urge people to come out and enjoy what the library has to offer. It is not often we see a library that offers more than the usual book and research opportunity. The Rahway library does.

Trees are a living part of our community

Free Form

By Bob Rixon

Rahway is filled with grand trees notable for their species, size, age or unusual shapes. If these trees could speak, they would constitute the vocal leadership of a strong lobbying group. If we added the various branches of the Rahway River, some of the local wildlife, and sympathetic humans, they would be a formidable constituency come election time.

Many Native American nations welcomed voices of the nonhuman world to their councils through the use of masks and symbols. If someone showed up at a City Council meeting dressed as a tree, would [illegible] be allowed to speak, or [illegible] firewood?

Ancient Celts had [illegible] in cutting down trees. [illegible] significance and were [illegible] by law and tradition. [illegible] groves of trees [illegible] and often [illegible] which the superstitious Celts identified as supernatural power. Because trees live longer than we do, sometimes thousands of years longer, they do seem to be closer to immortality. Yet they are [illegible] in the same [illegible] as humans. [illegible] and they die. Through this [illegible]

[illegible] shapes, so often the result of adaptation to their environment. We admire them year round. We mourn them when they fall.

A particularly powerful grove of trees lives in Veterans Park at the corner of Grand and St. Georges. A great [illegible] tree anchors this grove like a monarch, with a massive trunk and broad canopy, and thick, snake-like roots. Recently, the city enclosed this tree with a low stone wall, as if to make a castle. My girlfriend and I often stop by to visit this tree on our evening walks. The tree has a calming presence. It is an extraordinary creature that stands in company of other wonderful trees.

Not so exceptional were the trees on Hamilton Street chopped down to make room for a new curb. Downtown and on other streets are empty spaces where trees once stood. The city and the utility companies cut down far more trees than they replant. This inequity is a nationwide trend.

Because Rahway is [illegible] we have [illegible] historical, the rare and exotic. We cherish our obvious treasures and try to protect them. Trees are treasures.

Trees are cut down for good reasons, because they are diseased, entangle wires, crack sidewalks and sewer lines, or must make way for construction. No tree should be killed without sadness, or without replacing it, either in the same location or nearby. Some people just don't like trees. But no street should have the quality of its light and shade completely transformed if there is any way to avoid it and without consulting the people who live there.

Trees on streets and in parks are too important for any individual to hold or covet the authority to have them cut down or radically pruned in a way that will affect the appearance of neighborhoods for years to come. Our trees are more than property, they are a living part of our community.

Bob Rixon is a resident of Rahway and a weekly columnist for this publication.

Slow down! We're moving way too fast

As I See It

By Norman Rauscher

We've heard the expression "Bigger is Better." Many would agree [illegible] paraphrase that [illegible] statement? [illegible] Speed is [illegible]

ful company. We need to have the best, not the fastest computer on the market, the best copying machine available and the best fax and telephone service that can be devised.

No wonder many of us are uptight. We live in a world where speed has evolved into a cult. We are surrounded by speed the entire day, whether at home, the office, shopping or driving. We can't seem to slow down and it has affected us negatively.

I don't think we humans were put on this planet to constantly engage in doing things the fastest way possible. The so-called Unabomber, who is dangerously opposed to modern technology, may have a point when he claims human beings are not meant to live in this high-tech society. He blames the start of the Industrial Revolution in the early 1800s for our woes. I don't thoroughly agree with that but I do think the Industrial Revolution might have had a hand in it. The Industrial Revolution might have gotten out of hand somewhere back. We don't know where this high-tech revolution is taking us, but it sure is taking us somewhere all too fast.

Norman Rauscher is a former newspaper publisher and a columnist for Worrall Community Newspapers.

Church disavows canvassing

To the Editor:

It has been brought to the attention of the Progressive Baptist Church membership that solicitation in the name of the church is going on throughout the City of Rahway.

Please be advised that no one has authority to be canvassing for any funds in the name of the Progressive Baptist Church.

Vote Fulcomer for freeholder

To the Editor:

I urge my fellow citizens to join me in voting for Councilman James J. Fulcomer for freeholder on Nov. 7.

Jim Fulcomer has been an outstanding councilman for four terms with a solid record of fighting high property taxes and trying to improve our city and county.

When he was a freeholder, Jim Fulcomer kept his campaign promises to build a new county jail so that the liberal judges would not put criminals back on the streets and to build a new Runnells Medical Center to save on operational costs. Freeholder Fulcomer also helped to create the county improvement authority, which has saved the taxpayers a great deal of money.

We especially need Jim Fulcomer as a watchdog on the freeholder board to fight high property taxes and to promote the fair treatment of the people by the Utilities Authority that runs the garbage incinerator in Rahway.

In short, we need Fulcomer for freeholder to protect the public interest.

William P. Wnuck
Rahway Councilman

Make English the official language

To the Editor:

I am among the 73 percent of Americans that believe English should be declared the official language of the United States. It is ridiculous to make campaign posters, voting ballots, IRS forms and even driving tests in other languages. Driving tests should definitely not be translated into any other language because all street signs are in English.

I cannot believe that this has gone so far that even the Boy Scouts use languages other than English. Even some doctors are speaking other languages to their English-speaking patients. How does that help the patients?

Most of the people in the United States speak English, and it is the unofficial language of the United States. I think it is time to make it official, so that the government can produce things in only one language.

Of murder trials and roller-coaster rides

O's Zone

By Kevin O'Rourke
Managing Editor

I remember reliving the scene again and again.

I was in the restaurant looking up at the television screen, staring, my jaw open, unbelieving, as the verdicts were announced.

"This court finds the defendant Orenthal J. Simpson, guilty of murder in the second degree on both counts."

I can remember watching O.J. break down and put his head in his hands, as Johnnie Cochran turned away from his client more concerned with his own reputation than the fate of his client. The Simpson family crying and sobbing. O.J.'s mother fainting, as bailiffs came to her rescue.

I can see the reporters outside the Los Angeles Criminal Courts Building being pounded by rocks from angry Simpson supporters. A gaggle of LAPD officers struggled to hold back an angry crowd.

It was at that point when one of my lunchmates broke my concentration as he slammed his hand on the table saying, "I can't believe they acquitted him."

Acquitted. Acquitted. They acquitted him. It had secretly been what I had hoped since the man was arrested more than a year ago.

Those were the good old days — the days after the bodies of Nicole Brown and Ron Goldman were found. The arrest, the slow speed chase, the rumors, the speculation, the hope that they really had the wrong man. In those days, I was sure the police had the wrong man, and I was letting myself believe the most outlandish [illegible] who might have committed the murders. Anything to make me believe that it was not O.J. Simpson.

It was the mob. It was drug dealers. It was Kato. It was A.C. Cowlings. It was a burglar. It was an enemy of Ron Goldman. It was a crazy fan. It was a jealous former teammate of O.J. It was space men. It was Regis Philbin. It was Pat Sajack. It was Martha Stewart. Anyone but O.J. Simpson.

Then the trial started. I watched as best I could, with work and all. Then I got sick of it. As the prosecution presented its case, I began to see that it could have been O.J. Simpson who committed the murders. Then I got really sick of it. I could not watch the All-American hero be persecuted in such a way. Perhaps I could not face myself for being so naive and defending him so, to no one but myself. I resigned myself to the fact that the man was guilty.

Then my gut feelings were overwhelmingly set on a conviction. This man killed two humans. He should be sent away for a long time and the only thing that would get him off of the murder rap was his high-priced, silver-tongued, criminal defense team which was making a mockery of the judicial system. I was disgusted within four weeks and stopped watching or caring about the trial. I think it was right after the Kato Kalin testimony, when he guest-hosted "Talk Soup."

I kept that promise as best I could. I'd turn off reports about the trial, avoid other O.J. junkies around the office like a recovering alcoholic avoids his drinking buddies so I would not get sucked back into a life filled with allusions to F. Lee Bailey and Barry Scheck. I was on the proverbial "Juice Wagon," and I had control of my life.

Then, the downfall came when someone in the office told me that closing arguments were going to start. I got weak in the knees and I could feel myself slipping. I would have to start watching and become part of the trial now. Since I'm only in the office a few hours on Wednesdays, I sat on my couch with a bag of potato chips and watched the closing arguments like a junkie going back to the crack pipe. The trial called to me.

Being in the newspaper business, I always get a good chuckle out of the New York Post's creative and unique headlines. But, every daily newspaper headline sang a sweet song, reminding me of the viceral, voyeuristic, vicarious thrills the trial gave me. I sank to those depths and got hooked on "The Juice" again.

As I listened to Johnnie Cochran's closing argument, the optimist in me began to take over. I began talking to the screen and rooting for O.J. He had convinced me that O.J. must be set free. I watched Marcia Clark's rebuttal with hatred in my heart.

Then, I and the rest of the world were forced to wait a weekend before the jury would begin deliberations. When they had reached a quick verdict, I feared the worst. "He's gonna fry," I said to a co-worker. Judge Lance Ito forced the entire world to wait another day before we'd hear the fate of an American icon.

It would be announced on Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 1 p.m. EST. Perfect. I would be able to watch it during lunch. I and few of my colleagues left the office at 12:40 p.m. in search of a restaurant with televisions. We were late. All the tables with views of the TV were taken already, in two places. We were forced to sit around the bar and watch the verdict. The restaurant was filled. You could feel the sense of urgency in the air. The expectations were electrifying. Then it began when the judge took the bench.

All conversations stopped. It was like being strapped into a roller coaster. It was that same feeling of impending fear and danger as the heavy bar fell across your lap.

The jury foreman told the judge they had reached a verdict. Here we go. The roller-coaster car began clicking and clacking up the first gigantic hill. Ktick, chug, chug. Ktick chug chug. No one spoke. Then in the seconds before the verdicts were read, it felt like the entire country was on the top of the roller-coaster hill and was not sure whether to keep their eyes open as we zoomed down the other side. Everyone seemed to shudder with excitement and fear.

"Not guilty." There was a gasp. A loud, audible, collective gasp. "I don't believe it," I said. Nothing else was said. Everyone seemed to feel the same way. There was no cheering from the mostly professional people in the restaurant eating lunch. The court camera panned to the Goldman family. The sobs of Ronald Goldman's sister. Then I began to feel guilty, and all I'd done was order lunch, watch television and quietly hope he'd be acquitted. "That man just got away with murder," I overheard someone say.

Then I could feel myself becoming depressed. Everyone just sat quietly and ate lunch. There was little discussion. Then one of my colleagues sarcastically said, "Is this a great country, or what?"

Or what?

Crusaders continue to cruise

Johnson quarterback Dan Lueddeke completed 7-of-8 passes for 160 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Crusaders past Dayton Regional 52-0 last Saturday in Clark.

Lueddeke, Layden lead ALJ past Dayton Regional 52-0

By Michael Ziegler
Assistant Sports Editor

The Crusaders' game plan was simple — take Dayton out of its game as early as possible and force mistakes.

"They do some things for big plays which we saw on film that we needed to stop," Johnson Regional High School head football coach Bob Taylor said. "Their motion packages and wide sets posed a threat to us, so we needed to shut them down."

Johnson's defense forced three turnovers and a safety, and quarterback Dan Lueddeke connected with Greg Layden for three touchdowns as Johnson rolled to a 52-0 whitewashing of Dayton, retaining the Unico Bowl trophy for the third consecutive year.

The shutout was Johnson's third in as many games, something Taylor is not all that concerned about.

"The only reason we haven't been scored upon is that our sophomores and second team players have been stepping up and getting the job done," Taylor said. "The shutout streak is not important to me, but the kids have put a lot of pride into it and the seniors have given our second-team a lot of respect for maintaining it. It's healthy for our players to be doing that, but our job as coaches is to make sure they don't put too much stake in it."

Johnson put the game away in the first quarter by putting 22 points on the board behind the passing attack of Lueddeke to Layden. On the first play from scrimmage, following a fumble recovery by Ray Redziniak on the Bulldogs' 25-yard line, Layden hauled in Lueddeke's first scoring pass in the end zone at halfstretch for a 6-0 lead. Fullback Frank Mentzel pounded the coversion in for an 8-0 Crusader lead.

H.S. Football

From there, the defense dominated and gave the ball back to the offense. Dayton, which drops to 0-5, finished with only 86 total yards.

Lueddeke scored on a nine yard option run on Johnson's next series then again connected with Layden in the endzone, this time from 49 yards out. The offensive line of Redziniak, Dan Gazevich, Carmin Scuderi, Bill Ives and Mike Santangelo gave their quarterback all the time he needed to throw.

"The offensive line did a superb job of protecting the quarterback," Taylor said. "These guys can do it all: get out and block on the option, open it up inside and protect the quarterback."

A safety and two more scores in the second quarter gave Johnson a 38-0 halftime lead. Mentzel plunged in from the two and Layden collected his third touchdown reception on a 15-yard screen pass. Attempting to punt from deep in its end, Dayton snapped the ball out of the end zone for the safety.

The halftime lead allowed Taylor to run the ball and play the second team for most of the second half. Eric Gersiner and Jason Hassler, who was perfect on extra points, both scored in the third quarter.

Johnson's next challenge will be against Hillside Saturday afternoon at 1. The Comets' physical and aggressive style concerns Taylor, but he is confident his team will make the right adjustments on offense. Having been blanked 21-0 last year, the Crusaders will hope to contain tailback Revon Myles, "a special kid who has both speed and power," Taylor said.

UNION COUNTY NEWS
WORRALL COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1995 SECTION B

From The Editor's Notebook

By Tom Canavan
Editor in Chief

Last year at this time, I chronicled the life of a former Springfield resident who was diagnosed with lupus, an autoimmune disease that is not easily diagnosed and one that afflicts more than [illegible] million Americans, primarily women of child-bearing age.

I did so because October is designated National Lupus Awareness Month, but my desire to spread that awareness is of a personal nature. Of those more than [illegible] million Americans, I know [illegible] who suffer from this disease, and they are all members of my family.

First Fidelity merger approved

Shareholders of First Fidelity Bancorporation of Newark and Philadelphia, and First Union Corporation of Charlotte, N.C. have approved the proposed merger of the two banking companies.

The new combined company — which will operate under the First Union name starting in mid-1996 — will be the nation's sixth largest banking company based on estimated assets of $126 billion.

The new company will operate the nation's largest network of bank branches — nearly 2,000 — serving 11 million customers in 12 Eastern states from Florida to Connecticut, as well as Washington, D.C.

The merger, announced June 19, is expected to be completed around Jan. 1, pending approval by the Federal Reserve Board and other conditions of closing.

First Union shareholders met in Charlotte where [illegible] percent of the First Fidelity shares cast were in favor of the merger.

First Fidelity shareholders met in Philadelphia where [illegible] percent of the First Fidelity shares cast were in favor of the merger.

Edward E. Crutchfield, First Union's chairman and chief executive officer, called the respective shareholder [illegible] innovative and dynamic financial services leader [illegible] votes represent a strong endorsement of the proposed merger by the shareholders of both companies," Crutchfield said.

Tony Terracciano, First Fidelity's chairman and chief executive officer, said, "We are extremely pleased with the outcome of today's voting and we look forward to joining these two companies into a single entity that will become an Eastern U.S. banking powerhouse."

Crutchfield will remain chairman and CEO of First Union Corp. Terracciano will become president of First Union Corp. John R. Georgius will become vice chairman. The three executives will constitute a new "Office of the Chairman" for the combined company.

The new combined company will serve a region that includes 35 percent of the U.S. population and four of the nation's five highest personal income areas. The existing market served by First Fidelity contains the greatest concentration of middle market companies in the U.S.

After the merger, First Union will greatly expand the variety of financial services previously available at First Fidelity branches, Crutchfield said.

In addition to traditional banking products such as savings and checking accounts, certificates of deposit and consumer loans, First Union also has developed an extensive array of financial planning and investment services including cash management accounts for consumers and businesses, tax deferred annuities, and a proprietary family of mutual funds called the Evergreen Funds.

Griffith joins pact for clean campaign

By Chris Gatto
Regional Editor

Bob Griffith

Former Elizabeth Councilman Bob Griffith, an independent candidate for county clerk, this week joined the other two hopefuls in the race in pledging to run a "clean and fair" election campaign.

Griffith, an Elizabeth resident, while agreeing to abide by a code of ethics during his campaign, expressed discontent over being overlooked when Democratic candidate Joanne Rajoppi asked for a pledge of ethics.

"In a recent news release in papers all over Union County, you stated that you were asking your opponent to join in signing an agreement in ethics for the campaign for the office of county clerk," stated Griffith in an Oct. 7 letter to Rajoppi. "Even though a list of candidates were promulgated by the election section of the county clerk's office clearly showing me as an independent, democratic candidate for the position of county clerk, you obviously ignored me."

The Elizabeth resident said he would give Rajoppi "the benefit of the doubt" this time, but threatened to file a complaint with the state Election Law Enforcement Commission "if it happens again." Griffith charged that Rajoppi's "strategy of ignoring" him as a candidate was a violation of the campaign agreement, which says "you cannot misrepresent the facts about your opponents."

Griffith noted that if Rajoppi were to send him a copy of the same agreement she sent to Republican candidate Paul O'Keeffe, who is acting clerk, Griffith would be willing to sign. O'Keeffe and Rajoppi already have pledged to abide by the Code of Ethical Behavior, which was developed by a bipartisan organization.

"I have a strong reputation in Elizabeth for always running clean and fair campaigns. If you want to send me some sort of form to sign for this agreement, I would be happy to do so," stated Griffith.

A councilman for 18 years, Griffith is seeking the clerk's post in an effort to maintain a nonpartisan atmosphere in that office. Walter Halpin, who last month retired as clerk, was able to accomplish this, and Griffith said he would like it to continue.

Griffith favors a proposal to merge the clerk's office with that of the register of deeds and mortgages. Such a move would save more than $300,000, he said.

His opponents also favor such a move but Rajoppi, who currently serves as county register, has argued that a study be conducted first to determine how such a consolidation should be handled.

Domestic violence victims remembered

The YWCA of Eastern Union County, which offers services to battered women and children [illegible] domestic violence, will sponsor a [illegible] Wednesday [illegible]

The vigil is being held to let society know that mothers, sisters and daughters will lose their lives due to domestic violence. Its goal is to encourage the public and authorities to continue their efforts to eliminate [illegible] violence so that no other women will have to die at the hands [illegible]

The Rev. Michael Granzen of Second Presbyterian Church in Elizabeth and [illegible] Ferguson, a seminary student, will offer words of inspiration during the vigil. Additionally, a local church choir will perform during the lighting of the candles. Families and friends of victims will be present to remember their loved ones.

The YWCA of Eastern Union County is designated as the lead agency for domestic violence services for Union County. Its Project: Protect provides confidential hotlines, counseling and advocacy services to women and children, including emergency shelter. It also has a program for men that batter, and a speakers bureau.

For more information about the candlelight vigil or the programs offered by the YWCA, or to schedule a speaking engagement, call the YWCA of Eastern Union County at 355-[illegible]

Tourney features disabled

A group of developmentally disabled individuals recently learned that golf is a lifetime sport that can be enjoyed by everyone.

Sponsored by the Union County Division of Parks and Recreation, with the assistance of a grant from the New Jersey Department of Community Affairs, 12 individuals participated in a series of introductory golf lessons which culminated in a mini-tournament on Sept. 9.

The basics of the game were taught by Alisa Olin, an occupational therapist from Edison. Assisting her were Tom Pranio of Cranford and Bill Smith of Hillside. Classes were held four consecutive Saturdays in August and September at Ash Brook Golf Course, Scotch Plains.

"Some of our participants had never picked up a golf club, while others had played miniature golf," stated Olin.

The final Saturday class was devoted to a mini-tournament among the participants. Joseph Valosky of Flanders was the winner.

Estuary Plan's impact spelled out

Citizens who want to learn how their environment, economy and lifestyle will be impacted by the New York/New Jersey Harbor Estuary Plan may find out by attending the first in a series of educational meetings Wednesday.

The series, "Union County Conservancy: Our Mountains to Our Shoreline," sponsored by the county's Board of Chosen Freeholders and state officials, is open to the public and will be held in the Freeholders' Meeting Room on the sixth floor of the county Administration Building, Elizabethtown Plaza, Elizabeth, from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

"This first public meeting will provide information about our county's ecosystem, and how it affects you and your family's employment, recreation and health," said Union County Freeholder Linda-Lee Kelly, program co-sponsor. "Anyone with a professional or personal interest in the economic and ecological development of Union County is encouraged to attend."

The program, co-sponsored by the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection features keynote speaker Dr. Mary Downes Gastrich, New Jersey State coordinator for the New York/New Jersey Estuary Environmental Program. She and other panelists will present in-depth information on this plan, which could significantly impact such initiatives as Port Elizabeth/Newark Area Redevelopment with regard to conservation, commerce, transportation and quality of life.

The series evolved from suggestions to educate citizens about the county's environment made by participants of a recent roundtable session hosted by the Union County government in conjunction with the Union County Alliance. The alliance, formed in June 1993, is a consortium of top leaders from all sectors, including business, government, labor, civic and academia.

"We are working with the alliance to develop a long-range plan for Union County, targeted to revitalize the county's economy and enhance our quality of life. These roundtables and public forums are vital so that we can work together to create the future we all want and need," said County Manager Ann Baran.

The proceedings will be covered by multi-lingual print and broadcast media representatives and will be videotaped for broadcast on local cable stations.

Kelly conceived and has been the driving force behind developing and coordinating the Union County Conservancy initiative. She continues to work aggressively with the alliance and its Environmental Committee in an effort to strive for sustainable development that would result in a higher quality of life for county residents.

For more information, call Kelly's office at (908) 527-4117.

Scouts' honor for Sheriff Froehlich

Union County Sheriff Ralph Froehlich will be honored during an upcoming buffet dinner, it was announced by Ken Mayti, senior district executive of the Boy Scouts of America.

Mayti, along with Eagle Scout Kevin Sullivan of Westfield, told Froehlich he will be the recipient of the "Good Scout Award" during a buffet dinner to be held Oct. 11 at the Elizabethtown Gas Company in Union.

"Sheriff Froehlich's lifetime accomplishments are an example of what scouting can do for a young individual," said Mayti. "Throughout his life he has shown a support of youth and youth related programs, both locally and nationally."

Two of Sheriff Froehlich's programs, fingerprints of files, a program providing parents of small children a positive means of identification and Play-It-Safe, a child safety pamphlet and soon-to-be video, emphasizing the danger of child abductions, have been given national attention.

Froehlich, a former patrol leader of Boy Scout Troop 28 in Elizabeth, said he was honored to receive such a distinguished award from an internationally recognized organization such as the Boy Scouts. Froehlich went on to say that the Boy Scouts are an example of what is right with Youth in America. Too often we see examples of children gone bad or in trouble. Through scouting, young men are shown what an individual can accomplish by working as a part of a team.

Anyone interested in purchasing tickets for the dinner should contact either Ken Mayti at (908) 654-9197 or [illegible] at (908) 527-2153. All proceeds go to the Watchung Area Urban emphasis and Learning for life program. Donations are $50 and are tax deductible.

Increased pay for workers up to county

Freeholders this week will have an opportunity to decide whether the fee-paid county poll workers should be increased from $75 to $100.

Counties around New Jersey have been granted the authority to take such action as the result of a bill signed into law by Gov. Christine Todd Whitman in August. But freeholders have not yet acted on the measure.

If an increase is approved tonight or during the county governing body's last meeting in October, the increase could go into effect for the Nov. 7 General Election.

The new law permits increases to be enacted for primary, general and special elections, as well as board of education races.

School guild schedules craft fair

The Parents Guild of Union Catholic High School will sponsor a Craft Fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Oct. 21 at the school, 1600 Martine Ave., Scotch Plains.

More than 100 crafters will display seasonal, decorative and functional crafted items. The guild will offer a variety of refreshments for purchase throughout the day. Desserts also will be sold. An added attraction will be visits from Santa during which time photos will be taken.

Admission is free.

For the Popkin Sisters, art was an exploration for later in life

By Bea Smith
Staff Writer

They are called the "Popkin Sisters." They're not a vaudeville act; they are artists. And they recently had their first joint exhibition of art at the Springfield Public Library.

The talented sisters, Rose Simon, 95, and Gertrude Rauch, 93, who reside together in Springfield, may have retired this past year from their creative art work, but their interest in cultural art, theater and music has not waned. The most amazing thing about these two women is that they are devoted to each other, admire each other's talents and work, and rarely, if ever, disagree.

During a recent chat with both women, Rauch, the younger sister, explained that "Popkin is our maiden name. And," she mused, "we thought it would make an impression when we exhibited our art works for the first time together in August in the library. I've exhibited my art in a number of places including Maplewood and Springfield. And my sister, who specializes in sculpture, exhibited in Summit and Springfield among other places."

Rauch admitted that she has had "no formal training," but she explained that she learned to express her feelings for color and form by studying and reading the great works of art in books and museums. "During my years of extensive travel, my interest in painting led me to create original cards and notes for my personal correspondence. I gave them as gifts, and after friends and relatives began framing them, I was encouraged to attempt more ambitious projects such as Impressionists, still lifes, landscapes and seascapes in various media including oils, pastels and acrylics. I do small paintings mostly, but I have done larger ones. I work on boards or canvas, and most of them were framed. I exhibited about a dozen framed paintings in the Springfield Library.

"I also have painted wool on burlap," laughed Rauch. "I call it painting with wool on burlap. I've exhibited in a number of libraries over the years. I'm 93 years old," she said proudly, "and on occasion, I do sell my paintings, if people are interested. But mostly, I give them away."

Rauch said that she has been "interested in art for many years. I go back a long time," she chuckled. "I haven't been doing anything in the last year or so. After all these years, it was enough. And I really enjoyed it."

Actually, said Rauch, "both my sister and I are interested in art, literature, music and the theater. We haven't been going to the theater recently, but we used to go a great deal."

Both sisters were born in New York City. Rauch said that they came to Newark when she was two years old. She had married Louis Rauch, a professor of mathematics and physics. He died in 1982.

She said that she and her husband had came to Springfield "about 30 years ago, because my sister's husband had died. We came by way of California. And we came to live with her."

Rose Popkin Simon reiterated that "we have always been interested in art and we were always going to see art exhibits most of our lives. As far as doing sculpture," she recalled, "it was after my retirement in 1968. I retired from teaching physical ed and dancing. I taught in Newark at South Side High School mostly. And when I retired from there, I began to travel and then I became affiliated with the Springfield Public Library. I offered my services as a volunteer, and I continued until 1989 after I started wearing stronger glasses. I've had some trouble with my eyes. After all," she mused, "I am 95 years old."

"When I started at the library," said Simon, "I used to review non-fiction books and had them published, you know. I reviewed books in our local newspaper, the Springfield Leader for about 15 years."

She was married to Dr. Ben Simon, a dentist, and he died in 1959. "Since I retired in 1968 or 69, I've been working in clay sculpture. I did that for a number of years and exhibited now and then. Gertrude and I had never exhibited together until recently. We each went on our own merry way," Simon chuckled. "We lived together, but we were independent of one another.

"This was our first exhibit together in August in the Springfield Library — the only one we ever did together. It was quite a surprise to both of us that at this late stage in our lives, that we should have a joint exhibition."

What do the sisters think of each other personally?

"I think Gertrude's wonderful," exclaimed Simon. "I can't begin to tell you how much I admire her work. I'm very proud of her work. I was a real amateur [illegible]. But I [illegible]."

Rauch said, "Rose is wonderful. Thank God that we feel the way we do about each other. Believe me, we're very lucky. Very, very lucky."

Rose Popkin Simon, 95, and Gertrude Popkin Rauch, 93, relax now they've retired. The two had been active artists until recently: Simon was a painter and Rauch was a sculptor. The sisters reside together in Springfield, and remain interested in the arts, theater and music.

Directors' duet

Ecel Thomas, assistant choir director at Chatham United Methodist Church, and Mark Miller, the director of music at CUMC, practice for their piano duet. The two will perform in the church sanctuary on Sunday at 8 p.m.

Cranford Rep will present Holocaust education program, Anne Frank story

On Oct. 22 at 1 p.m. at Cranford High School, the Cranford Repertory Theatre will sponsor a Holocaust education program titled "Triumph of the Human Spirit," commemorating Christian rescuers and survivors of the Holocaust.

CRT has planned the program as a prelude to its fall play "The Diary of Anne Frank," which will be performed on Nov. 30, Dec. 2, 3, 7, 9, and 10 at Randolph Hall in Cranford.

The year 1995 marks the 52nd anniversary of the rescue of 95 percent of Denmark's Jewish community. Protected by their Christian countrymen — from the simplest fisherman to the king himself — 7,200 Danish Jews were hidden, housed, and smuggled to safety in Sweden.

Danish rescuer Preben Munch-Nielsen will be a guest speaker for this special program. When the Germans occupied Denmark in 1940, Preben joined the resistance as a courier. In October 1943, when the Gestapo began the round-up of Danish Jews, Preben and his group in the resistance began to help the Jews. They hid them in houses near the shore and brought them to waiting boats. Under cover of darkness, Preben and his friends took up to 12 Jews at a time across the straits to Sweden. The four-mile trip took about 50 minutes. Preben helped transport 1,400 Jews to Sweden. He fled to Sweden as well in November 1943 when the Germans seized the Danish government. Preben returned home in May, 1945.

Other special guests will include Tove and Niels Bamberger who were Danish survivors boated to freedom by Preben and his group.

The town of Cranford will also be honoring two of its own residents: Orest and Helena Zahajkewycz.

Orest and his sister Helena and their father hid two Jewish families for two years. They also provided food and shelter to other Jews. They lived in Peremyshl which is in the Ukraine, and they currently reside in Cranford.

The cost of the program is $5. All proceeds will benefit the Jewish Foundation for Christian Rescuers. There will be a dessert reception following the program.

Westfield Community Players return to '1940'

In "The Musical Comedy Murders of 1940" by John Bishop, walls move, people disappear and the characters are seldom who we think they are. It's not a musical, but a comedy about a musical comedy backer's audition replete with a Nazi spy, a stagedoor masher and a house with a life of its own.

With this premise in mind, Director John Correll and Assistant Director Linda Behrle Correll, both of Winfield, have prepared for the opening on Saturday at Westfield Community Players, 1000 North Ave. West in Westfield.

The cast includes Linda Correll as Helsa Wenzel, the crazed German maid of Elsa Van Grossenknueten, a wealthy eccentric patroness of the arts played by Jeanette Gould. Elsa is backing a new play by the team of Roger Hopewell and Bernice Roth played by Carl Barber-Steele and Marna Aleshire.

Producer Marjorie Baverstock (Dorcey Winant) and Director Ken De La Maize (Gordon Weiner) are trying to keep Nikki Crandall (Diane Matthews) and Eddie McCuen (Jeff Meyer) out of each others' hair and in the show. Irish Tenor Patrick O'Reilly (Stuart Hershkowitz) is trying to break into the big-time, while New York policeman Michael Kelly (Tim McGovern) is looking for Nazi spies.

Other show dates are: Oct. 20, 21, 27, 28 and Nov. 3 and 4; all at 8 p.m. in the theater. Tickets for $12 are available at Rorden Realty and the Town Bookstore in Westfield, as well as the box office at (908) 232-1221.

Many of the works selected for exhibition were recently displayed at the Newark Museum as part of the 11th New Jersey Arts Annual: Celebrating Diversity in Crafts.

The public is invited to attend an opening reception honoring all festival artists on Oct. 20 from 6-9 p.m.

County Arts Center's new season set to open Oct. 21

Live orchestral concerts, stage musicals, professional touring children's and family stage shows and wide-screen film classics dominate the bookings for the Union County Arts Center's 10th season Oct. 21.

In addition, popular country music artist John Berry will perform; the arts center's famous "mighty Wurlitzer" pipe organ will be featured in at least three concerts; there will be two dance events, including the ballet "Romeo and Juliet"; and a local talent show early next year.

The new season opens with an evening concert by the popular Westfield Symphony, which will return for an encore performance next April. On March 2, the New Jersey Symphony will perform a gala benefit concert; and in the interim there will be performances by the New Jersey Pops, the Orchestra of St. Peter by the Sea, and the Count Basie Orchestra.

The New Jersey Pops engagement will feature former "Miss New Jersey" Heather Herring as vocal soloist.

The stage musicals "Nunsense" and "Phantom," and the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "Pirates of Penzance" will be presented in multiple performances, with "Nunsense" starting later this month.

"Phantom" will be performed eight times in February. "Pirates" is scheduled for five performances in mid-April.

Children's and family theater presentations by the award-winning American Family Theatre include "Sleeping Beauty" on Oct. 22, "Tom Sawyer" on Nov. 19, "A Christmas Carol" on Dec. 17 and "Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin" scheduled for next year.

Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will be this year's holiday presentation for the entire family.

The first of the season's wide screen film classics is the Oscar-winning blockbuster of 1957 "Bridge on the River Kwai," to be shown at a Sunday matinee on Nov. 12.

Good Eats

A wonderful cozy atmosphere, even at its busiest hour

Good Eats — a small luncheonette conveniently located at 2717A Morris Avenue in Union, across from Palmer Video — certainly lives up to its name.

With [illegible] soothing [illegible] Good Eats has a wonderfully cozy atmosphere, even at its busiest hour — the lunch rush. [illegible] the luncheonette [illegible] about 2 p.m. in an [illegible] to grab a quick, gourmet bite [illegible] those who like fine [illegible] want their food fast, Good Eats is the place to be, with [illegible] priced items from $3 to [illegible]

Good Eats offers both country [illegible] the more traditional [illegible] sandwiches. The luncheonette also serves a variety of [illegible] soups and salads as well as [illegible] cheese platters.

Of the country sandwiches, the chicken cordon bleu with blue cheese dressing is a gem. Served on a Kaiser roll, the slightly spiced grilled chicken, topped with a generous portion of ham and Swiss cheese, is very filling and overwhelms the palette with a distinctive taste.

Another find on the menu is the turkey and brie, served on crunchy baguette. A spread of honey dijon mustard blends sweetly with the smokey taste of turkey. A bag of pretzels is the perfect complement to this low-fat meal.

In addition to pretzels, Good Eats offers several types of potato chips. From sweet potato to salsa to barbecue, Good Eats has possibly the widest selection of chips to side with its fabulous sandwiches.

Customers with more of an appetite than can be satisfied by a sandwich and chips can grab a handful of tiny, tasty chocolate chip cookies or sample some of the finer desserts which are packaged for purchase.

Good Eats also acts as a "gourmet shop," selling specialty coffees, as well as quilts made by Amish people in Pennsylvania. Furthermore, interested patrons may purchase gift baskets — a great idea for the holiday season.

With a catering menu available, Good Eats is the perfect choice for sports parties and tailgate parties, not to mention children's theme parties.

Serving breakfast, lunch and early suppers, Good Eats is open Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. To place an order, call (908) 686-4446 or fax (908) 686-0564.

Lecturer warns of workplace violence

Working in America could be hazardous to your health — or fatal, according to a speaker at the National Association of Prevention Professionals conference, who said nearly 1 million people are victims of workplace violence annually, making it the second leading cause of death in the workplace.

"Yet, despite corporate concerns about protecting employees from potential harm, little has been done. Most [illegible] acts of violence because they do not believe [illegible] in their organization," [illegible] George Schioicka, [illegible] Educational Services, an affiliate of the Saint Barnabas Health Care System.

Speaking at the conference in Atlantic City, which ends today, Schioicka said "when an incident [illegible] in the workplace, [illegible] is like a sacred trust that [illegible]. The financial and psychological impact on the victims, their families and fellow workers is devastating."

Schioicka, a witness of workplace violence, now helps companies learn how to prevent incidents through workplace seminars and workshops.

"There are changes that can be made in the work environment to prevent or minimize workplace violence," Schioicka also said. "Aside from increased security measures and [illegible] applicants, a company also can create a less volatile environment by providing workers with more say in day-to-day decisions. Support mechanisms such as employee assistance programs also can be provided to ensure that all employees can deal with their personal issues or needs."

The Saint Barnabas Institute for Prevention, through a grant from the U.S. Department of Labor, has developed prototype prevention programs relating to drugs and violence in the workplace. Recently, the Institute for Prevention, along with the Rutgers University Center of Alcohol Studies, the New Jersey departments of Labor and Health, the non-profit group Drugs Don't Work, and the Governor's Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, have begun working on the development of a standard by which community-based substance-abuse programs and corporate substance-abuse programs can work as partners.

"We need to begin to recognize that violence in the workplace can happen anywhere and at any time," said Ronald Gaetano, executive director of the Institute for Prevention, a component of the Saint Barnabas Behavioral Health Network.

"Disgruntled employees are not the only cause of workplace violence — drug and alcohol abuse and domestic problems are also leading causes. That's why we need a concerted effort among community leaders, local businesses and grassroots organizations to ensure the safety of employees," he added.

Information about the Institute for Prevention can be obtained by calling (908) 686-6644.

Conference attendees cite workplace violence statistics

- Between July 1992 and July 1993, 2.2 million full-time workers were physically attacked on the job; 6.3 million workers were threatened with violence; [illegible] million workers were harassed on the job.
- One act of workplace violence can cost companies up to $250,000.
- One in [illegible] workers is an alcoholic.
- [illegible] drug users sells drugs to coworkers.
- Employees/substance abusers are responsible for 40 percent of all industrial [illegible]

Conference focuses on drug, alcohol use by young athletes

Reacting to a statistic showing one-third of high school coaches believe drug and alcohol abuse among student athletes is a serious problem, doctors and civic leaders met in Atlantic City this week at the annual conference of the National Association of Prevention Professionals and Advocates.

"Student athletes are generally the biggest, fastest and strongest among their peers, so most people have the mistaken notion that it is impossible for them to have problems with drugs or alcohol," said Ron Gaetano, executive director of the Saint Barnabas Institute for Prevention.

The conference, which ends today, has been attended by doctors, members of grassroots organizations, politicians, health care workers and other professionals.

In discussing the difficulties in dealing with student drug and alcohol abuse, Gaetano described the case of a girl who was caught with alcohol on her breath at a school affair. After being suspended from school, she was brought to the institute for evaluation and counseling.

According to Gaetano, many of her teachers and several parents asked him not to be too harsh with her because she was on the dean's list, was pretty and was one of the best athletes in the school.

Even though this young girl exhibited all of the symptoms of [illegible] outs and loss of control — no one wanted to confront her because she was a star student in their eyes," Gaetano said.

In addition, the Institute for Prevention addresses these issues in workshops, educational programs, training sessions and conferences on the local, state and national levels. In particular, the institute recently offered a two-day conference on substance abuse prevention in sports aimed at athletic directors, coaches, physical education teachers, recreation directors, school nurses and administrators. The institute also runs two-hour and half-day seminars on the topic for high school and college athletic directors and coaches.

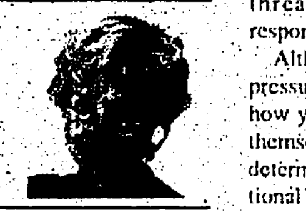
"Professional athletes are role models for youngsters everywhere, but their behaviors and attitudes may not be the best examples for youths," Gaetano said. "We can stop this dangerous chain reaction by teaching young athletes positive behaviors which develop healthy lifestyles, so they can be good role models for our future stars."

The Institute for Prevention is part of the Saint Barnabas Behavioral Health Network, which offers a comprehensive system of mental health and substance abuse services for inpatients and outpatients in 17 locations throughout New Jersey and New York. Information about the institute is available at [illegible]

A little bit of relaxation can work wonders

Focus On Mental Health

By Barbara Albenberg



Everyone is subjected to daily stressful conditions. This is particularly apparent during certain times of the year.

By October, when a hint of fall is in the air, we already have left behind our vacation mentality. Life becomes more frenzied as we resume our hurried pace. Somehow, despite technological advances which have resulted in more time-saving devices and conveniences, we are more harried than ever. This "time crunch," whether real or perceived, results in extreme pressures which, in turn, are often translated into emotional and physical pain. We feel frustrated, angry, irritable, anxious, and depressed; we develop headaches, high blood pressure, insomnia, ulcers, heart conditions and cancer. This internal pressure, coupled with external events, expectations, and conflicted relationships, are the primary sources of stress in our lives.

Both positive and negative events can be stressful since both require us to change and adapt. A marriage, a new baby, a new home or a job promotion can cause almost as much stress as a death, a divorce, or the loss of a job. In fact, no matter what kind of change your life undergoes, it will cause you stress.

Stress is not necessarily bad. To the contrary, it may be stimulating, challenging us to try new things and stretch our limits. However, when there are too many forces we feel incapable of controlling, or the stress is prolonged, we experience distress.

A build-up of stress can cause both physical and emotional problems. Extended periods of distress leave us vulnerable to infection, physical illness and disease. In fact, a high percentage of all physical illness is stress-related.

In managing stress, it is important to define success on your terms rather than by living by other people's standards and rules. Strive for competence rather than perfection. Try not to be hard on yourself and allow for mistakes and failures. View unexpected events as challenges rather than threats. Avoid being overly responsible.

Although you can't control all the pressures in your life, you can control how you'll respond. Often the events themselves are not as important in determining stress levels as our emotional reactions to them. These emotional reactions, in turn, are largely dependent upon the thoughts, interpretations and attitudes we have about the situation.

How you deal with stress and how you adapt to change will largely determine how smoothly your life will progress. Ease up a bit, judge yourself and others less, open up to others and you may find a lot more joyfulness and pleasure in life.

Experts urge caution with medications

Every year Americans take approximately 1.6 billion prescriptions, costing $30 billion. Unfortunately, most patients do not ask questions about these medications. This can lead to serious problems, including misuse of medications.

In recognition of October's designation as "Talk about Prescription Month," the New Jersey Poison Information and Education System, located at Newark Beth Israel Medical Center, in conjunction with the Society of Health System Pharmacists, suggested patients ask their health-care providers:

- What is the name of the drug and what is it supposed to do?
- How and when should the medication be taken and for how long?
- What foods, drinks, and other medications should be avoided?
- What activities should be avoided while taking this medication?
- What are the most common side-effects of this medication?

To avoid complications due to the mixing of medications, it is recommended patients inform their health-care providers of the following information:

- The name of all prescription and non-prescription medicines being taken.
- Any allergic reactions the patient may have toward a medication.
- If the patient is pregnant.

For information about medications, call your health-care provider. If this is not possible, the NJPIES is available for assistance 24-hours-a-day at 1-800-POISON-1.

NJPIES was created in 1983 as a source of information for the public concerning toxicological and poison situations. Staff members who answer hotline calls are able to dispense advice and direct victims needing hospital care to nearby emergency rooms. NJPIES receives more than 84,000 calls annually.

Pain may be eliminated for millions

(SPECIAL) A new drug has been approved that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain. The material has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis" and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis relieves pain by first selectively attracting and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis is an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream, and is available immediately without a prescription and is guaranteed to work.

Chevy Van line has come a very long way in 25 years

The year was 1970. George C. Scott turned down an Oscar for Patton, Simon and Garfunkel were at the top of the record charts with "Bridge Over Troubled Water," thousands marched in the first Earth Day observance, and Chevrolet introduced its new full-size van.

Fast-forward to 1995. After 25 years, six U.S. Presidents, several energy crises and the advent of MTV, Chevrolet debuts its first "new from the ground up" full-size van in a generation. Combined with the new interior on the Astro and the all-new front wheel-drive minivan coming next year, nobody will cover the van market as completely as Chevrolet.

The 1996 Chevy Van and Chevy Express Van have the safety, styling, comfort and convenience features that customers want today. With new aerodynamic exteriors, longer wheelbases, rugged new full-frame construction, higher GVWRs and ergonomically designed interiors, Chevy Van and Chevy Express Van are the most advanced full-size vans on the planet.

The "Voice of the Customer" was heard at every step in the design and manufacture of the new Chevy Van and Chevy Express Van. Both models offer a high level of standard safety and convenience features, including dual frontal air bags—up to 8600 lbs. GVWR—and four-wheel anti-lock brakes.

The new exterior has wide-opening rear cargo doors with hidden hinges that make it easy to load large objects. Getting people in and out is easy, too, thanks to a longer wheelbase and wheelwells that don't block access to the front seats.

There's a lot to like on the inside, too. Chevy Van and Chevy Express Van have new ergonomically designed interiors and instrument panels. These spacious full-size vans rank at the top of their class with cargo space of about 267 cubic feet for regular length models and 317 cubic feet for extended length models.

The Chevy Express Van can accommodate a crowd — up to 15 passengers in extended models — with car-like comfort and style. Express Van is a favorite for airport shuttle services, delivery vans, ambulances, motorhomes, large families and tour groups.

A rugged new high-strength steel ladder frame is the rock solid foundation of these new Chevy vans. The 1996 Chevy Van and Chevy Express Van have longer wheelbases than 1995 models — 135 inches in standard versions and 155 inches in extended models — for improved entry/exit, stability and ride quality. A full-size tire is mounted under the body to add cargo room, and a larger 31-gallon fuel tank increases driving range between fill-ups.

A family of new Vortec V-6 and V-8 gasoline engines offer more performance without sacrificing fuel economy — up to 60 more horsepower than last year's optional powertrains. And for the first time, a turbocharged diesel is available in Chevy Vans.

The Chevy Express Van can accommodate a crowd — up to 15 passengers in extended models — with car-like comfort and style. Express Van is a favorite for airport shuttle services, delivery vans, ambulances, motorhomes, large families and tour groups. Commercial vehicle buyers appreciate Chevy Van's ample interior cargo room and its wide range of door and window configurations. In addition, Chevy Van cutaways are available in GVWRs of 9,500 lbs. [illegible] wheelbases [illegible] 150" and [illegible].

The Chevy full-size vans have changed as much as the times. Baby boomers who [illegible] vans at Woodstock are now shopping for van conversions for vacations with their families. Next generation Ford Taurus will be an auto benchmark

Powering the all-new 1996 Taurus models are a choice of two powerful V-6 engines, each with a 100,000-mile tune-up interval under normal driving conditions with routine fluid and filter changes — except for the Flexible Fuel Version. Standard on the LX is the all-new high-performance 3.0-liter, 24-valve DOHC V-6 Duratec engine. This newest member of Ford's wonderful family of advanced technology modular engines is rated at 200 horsepower. The second engine is a significantly improved version of the 3.0-liter overhead-valve V-6 Vulcan that has been the base powerplant in Taurus models. Standard on the GL, it has a 145-h.p. rating. Pictured above is the Ford Taurus Wagon perfect for families.

The front design features a dramatic arching hood line with aggressively styled air inlets and sporty headlights. The rear design present a unique rounded back window, a low-liftover trunk and integrated taillights that blend into the body. The side view is accented by three-dimensional sculpting, six flush-glass side windows, and a sweeping roof line.

Ford has focused on putting user-friendly design elements and features throughout the new Taurus. For example, one interior innovation is the Integrated Control Panel, which puts climate and audio controls into a single easy-to-see, easy-to-use oval-shaped unit. Research shows that drivers can learn to use these controls faster and with fewer errors because of their unique design and larger size.

Just as the first Ford Taurus revolutionized the look of four-door sedans and wagons in 1986, the strikingly innovative 1996 Taurus represents a leap ahead design destined to establish another new styling standard.

"We're confident that the head-turning design and customer-friendly advancements of the 1996 Taurus sedans and wagons will attract not only the large body of current Taurus owners, but younger and import buyers as well," says Ross Roberts, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager.

"Everything is designed to make [illegible] performance better than ever before," adds Jack Telnack, vice president, Design for Ford Automotive Operations, who had overall design responsibility. "Its highly aerodynamic shape enhances fuel economy and road handling, while reducing wind noise, for example. And the elliptical headlights with their jewel-like complex reflectors project a broader, brighter field of light for better visibility."

The front design features a dramatic arching hood line with aggressively styled air inlets and sporty headlights. The rear design present a unique rounded back window, a low-liftover trunk and integrated taillights that blend into the body. The side view is accented by three-dimensional sculpting, six flush-glass side windows, and a sweeping roof line.

Telnack notes that while the rounded design may give the impression that the new model is more compact than its predecessors, the 1996 Taurus sedan is more than five inches longer, almost two inches wider, with more interior room than the 1995 Taurus. The wagon is more than six inches longer and nearly two inches wider than the model it replaces.

Powering the new Taurus models are a choice of two V-6 engines, each with a 100,000-mile tune-up interval under normal driving conditions with routine fluid and filter changes — except for the Flexible Fuel Version. Standard on the LX is the all-new, high-performance 3.0-liter, 24-valve DOHC V-6 Duratec engine. This newest member of Ford's family of advanced technology modular engines is rated at 200 horsepower. The second engine is a significantly improved version of the 3.0-liter overhead-valve V-6 Vulcan that has been the base powerplant in Taurus models. Standard on the GL, it has a 145-h.p. rating.

Both Taurus V-6 engines are "managed" by an advanced EEC-V electronic engine controller with a built-in diagnostic system that monitors performance and allows dealerships to quickly identify service needs in the engines or in either of the two four-speed electronically controlled overdrive transmissions.

Ford has focused on putting user-friendly design elements and features throughout the new Taurus. One example is the Ford-patented three-way center seating/storage system available on six-passenger models. It quickly converts from a center front seating position with its own safety belts to a comfortable armrest and to a console with room for cups, coins, audiocassettes and other items.

Another interior innovation is the Integrated Control Panel, which puts climate and audio controls into a single easy-to-see, easy-to-use oval-shaped unit. Research shows that drivers can learn to use these controls faster and with fewer errors because of their unique design and larger size.

A 60/40 split-fold rear seat, resembling those found in wagon and hatchback models, adds flexibility in meeting varying passenger and/or cargo needs.

Ford fully expects the 1996 Taurus to sustain, and even accelerate, the car's enormous sales success.

Drivers should stay alert behind the wheel

Did you know that sleep plays a role in up to 10 percent of the 20 million U.S. automobile accidents?

According to the New Jersey Automobile Club Foundation for Safety, experts agree that lack of sleep and subsequent lack of alertness frequently lead to tragedy, especially on the highway. In fact, most people have taken the wheel at least once when they were too tired to drive. In one study, fully half the drivers admitted to having had near-mishaps because of sleepiness, and one fifth said they'd actually fallen asleep while driving.

Fatigue impairs judgement, reduces the ability to concentrate and delays reaction time — all essentials of safe driving. Paul Kielblock, AAA's safety manager of the Florham Park based Club, says you can drive more safely by following these suggestions:

Travel rested. Get a good nights rest before you start the trip. Wear a good quality pair of sunglasses in bright sunshine to prevent fatigue.

Exercise during your breaks. Stop periodically for rest and light exercise. Drive for two hours, then take a 10 to 15 minute break outside your vehicle. Run or walk briskly, even if it's around the edge of a rest stop.

Follow your clock. Most people feel sleepy in the mid-afternoon and between midnight and 7 a.m. If you must drive at those times, don't wait until the first wave of sleep hits. Instead, pull off the road and nap.

Share the driving. The most mentally rested person is normally the person sitting in the back seat, not the front. So share the driving with your passengers.

Monitor your medications. Some medications, particularly cold and allergy pills, increase drowsiness so don't use them before you drive. Caffeine, on the other hand, keeps some people alert.

Don't drink. Alcohol doesn't sedate unless you have a sleep debt. But, many alcohol-related mishaps involve a driver who is sleepy as well as drunk.

Look for signs of a sleep disorder. If you snore loudly, feel tired when you wake up and fall asleep at inappropriate times, you may have a sleep disorder known as sleep apnea. If you suspect a problem, see your doctor.
