CHARITY SHOULD BEGIN AT HOME.

Just now, in this country, many who are philanthropically inclined are working upon the sympathies of the people to play the part of Santa Claus for the unfortunate of Europe, who, through the ravages of war will experience anything but a merry Yuletide unless plans now being formulated here in America are carried to a successful issue. The cause is most commendable. People will contribute liberally. Many a heart will be gladdened, and many a tale will seem to turn the brighter because of the generosity of a nation composed of people who are ready, if necessary, to make sacrifices for the happiness of those in distress.

There is another side, however, to this picture which should not be lost sight of. Satisfying heart-rendering and destructive as has been the war in Europe, it is in our power to have it here to a degree that it has thrown out of employment hundreds and thousands of men, many of whom have held their positions for years. The heads of families, good citizens, experts in their lines. Men who never before have been out of work. Unless there is a revival of the present business depression, how will these citizens of the United States fare. They will their families depend and enjoy the coming Christmas season.

Every city, town and hamlet in the country has its quota of unemployed. Rahway, usually happy, contented, prosperous in common with other places, has, in this respect felt the effects of the war. And at present, as there is no relief in sight, let us not lose sight of the fact, that commendable as is the joy of giving, charity should begin at home.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE

If the management of the Empire Theatre, Irving street, continues to entertain the people of Rahway with the same high class talent as that presented at the Saturday performances there is every assurance that this popular playhouse will be well patronized during the coming winter months. The shows given Saturday afternoon and evening were of an excellent character. There was a good hearty laugh in every act. And the audience at the conclusion of each number on the program should be evidence for the managers of the Empire that their efforts to please were greatly appreciated.

Proceeding the entertainment, Saturday evening, it was announced from the stage just before the photo plays for the week would be, and as each one has a National reputation, it is safe to predict that the Empire will be a very popular source of amusement from now on. On Saturday evening the theatre was crowded.

In another column of this issue of the department, and any money paid for more modern equipment should be considered a good investment.

An auto engine is considered a valuable addition to the present equipment of the fire department. By all means Rahway should be able to boast that such an apparatus has been added to the department. It is not the purpose here to describe the time saved in times of emergency, nor what could be accomplished by the auto engine. That was well demonstrated by the auto engine from Westfield, at the time of the fire in Cherry street, when the business section of the city was threatened. People, then, were loud in their praise of the work accomplished by the auto engine and many still are enthusiastic in the idea that it would be a valuable addition to the present equipment of the fire department. Any reasonable sum of money spent on the Rahway fire department would be money well invested, and any piece of modern fire-fighting apparatus placed in the hands of the firemen would aid them materially and add to their present efficiency.

The question of an auto fire engine has been under discussion for several years. Sooner or later it has got to be purchased by the city.

OUR LETTER BOX

Editor Record:—
The trial of Coffey to Pangborn was heard last week. Edward Coffey was using his aunt, Sarah Jane Pangborn to have his name taken off the police records. The case was not decided. Judge David said he thought it was a case of malice more than anything else.

I cannot understand how witnesses testify so under oath and how foreigners who cannot speak English can give evidence, and don't see how anyone can get fair play awaiting to lie. And I should like to know why the witnesses on one side were all called while all the witnesses on the other side were not on the stand. The witnesses that were called on one side could not possibly know anything about the case, while the witnesses that were not called could have testified truly, as they know all about the supposed trouble.

Respectfully,
KERRON R. COFFEY.

Formal Opening and Exhibition of Authoritative Autumn Millinery
Beginning Monday September 21st

In an enlarged, handsome and improved salon, flooded with daylight, our formal Autumnal opening Display of Distinctive Millinery will be a style review, interesting and resplendent, as it will be beautiful.

For here will be gathered, with painstaking care and authoritative selection, all—and only—those hats which in every line reflect the best in correct style for Autumn and Winter wearing.

It will be noted that the wide range of styling also wa a delightful variety of choice of shape and size, and yet to be still safely within the correct. While the small hat, in now novel shapes, still holds its own with its Parisian air, the new distinctly note will be the large picture hat, hailed with delight by many because of its permitting the freest expression of one's individuality.

The always correct and drowsy black hat will be well represented in new forms, side by side with the gorgeous plumed large hat, resplendent in new and beautiful colorings. Unusual blends of soft tortoise shades; the soft, dainty colorings of chinchilla; the new bogonia pinks, papaya blues; mint, brown, jasper greens, and the many hued soft plumed ostrich, fancy mounts, with many interesting metallic treatments and new effects in flowers and novelties.

Bravery of a Boy.
"One of the bravest acts I witnessed during the whole war," said an officer of the Army of Northern Virginia, "was that of a young soldier who was probably not over sixteen. We had thought of him as only a boy, although he went with the regiment on all of its marches and lived with it in all its encampments."

"One day there was a fierce engagement in the midst of it a bullet struck this boy in the breast, and he fell. Our colonel ordered his men to dismount, and as he himself arranged for his horse the boy called out in a weak voice, 'I will hold your horse, colonel!'"

"Stopping in the midst of the storm of bullets to gaze in pity on the white, boyish face, the colonel said, 'But you have died! You are dead!'"

"I know I am, colonel," the gallant boy replied. "But I can hold the reins while the colonel places the bridle in the trembling hands and went forward. When the fight was over he hurried back and found the boy lying dead; the bridle reins still wrapped tightly round his limp right hand."—Youth's Companion.

Guiney Story of a Grave.
A curious legend is said to be preserved in Monksbury churchyard. "When ever the cause, there is plainly to be seen a strip of sterility in the form of a cross among a mass of verdure. With the moon a melancholy legend is connected. It is called 'Robert's Grave,' and the story is that Robert, a man who was hanged on a gallows, was buried in the churchyard. The chief effort at present and for a long time to come will center around the suppression of forest fires. Until they shall be suppressed there can be no forestry. That they can be suppressed is proved by what has been done already. In developed agricultural sections the fires are much less prevalent than they were. The state's effort is to make farms everywhere as safe as a fire.

"The close relation between forestry and farming will be strongly emphasized, and opportunity given to the farmers who own woodland to learn how to manage it. The value of this bit of one of the crops of a well-managed farm is scarcely recognized. Unlike other produce, wood has no particular harvest time, but can be held without loss until it is convenient to market it.

"Forest planting, in of less importance in New Jersey than in many states, yet the exhibit will show how to do it and what to plant.

"Public and individual interest in shade trees will be stimulated by living examples and by information in pictorial and printed form.

This exhibit has for its sole object the benefit of the people of the state. No one expects to make money out of it, and there will be no need to sell. On the other hand, there will be for others and the visitors in constant attendance to give information and advice.

Trees in the grove on the Fair grounds will also be marked, and Mr. Gastill and his assistants, J. O. Hazard, will point out by concrete examples just how the trees should be cut, those that should be removed, and give other information. They will gladly answer any questions asked of them.

Stammered to Himself.
To those who stutter or stammer let us suggest my personal cure. At about fourteen I was attacked by a bad habit of stammering and could hardly start a remark without it. The other boys laughed at me and called me a stammerer. I was very much distressed. But the ability of the situation appeared to me. Why couldn't I say "No" without the preliminary stammer?

It was obviously necessary to stammer often before saying "No." Well, why shouldn't I stammer to myself? The method was adopted. When a sentence had to be started the stammer was carried out in silence—if a dozen "No's" had to start a "Yes." And after a few days of deliberate speech with the stammer done in silence, it was delivered readily from the habit—London Standard.

Japanese Child Jugglers.
Among the itinerant street entertainers in London are a number of Japanese children, usually boys. They make their way into hotel and public houses, and, producing a sheet of tattered paper, suddenly begin juggling with them in the most expert manner. Accompanying the performance, which is impossible for the audience to see, they utter a series of words without receiving a shower of copper coins which they reward at the discretion of the juggler.
