By JULIE McDONNELL

FAIR HAVEN — Inspections by the borough's building officer Thomas Carlock, have turned up two allegedly illegal sheltered care homes here.

As a result of the inspections, two summonses will be issued to King and Wilma Graves, 87 Jackson St., and to George and Clementine Cannon, 124 Third St., for operating boarding homes in violation of the borough zoning ordinance.

The zoning ordinance prohibits any type of boarding or rooming facility.

Violators face a maximum penalty of $200 fine and/or 120 days in jail.

Mr. Carlock, armed with a search warrant and accompanied by a police officer, made the inspections yesterday afternoon. He said each house contained three boarders, all male.

George Whitmore, borough prosecutor, said the summonses will be delivered either during the weekend or on Monday.

At both residences, Mr. Carlock said, he was told that the boarders were "sheltered care out-patients."

Mr. Carlock said he spoke to Mr. and Mrs. Cannon during the inspection. The operators of the Jackson St.

home were absent, and Mr. Carlock said he plans to return there today to interview them.

The Cannons also operate a licensed, eight-bed rooming house in Asbury Park, at 701 Summerfield Ave., according to city records.

Sources in the Asbury Park health department have said that the Summerfield Ave. house is used as a sheltered care residence for former mental patients from Marlboro Psychiatric Hospital, however.

In a rooming house, only a bed and change of linen is provided. A boarding house provides food as well as a bed.

Sheltered care homes, on the other hand, typically provide a limited amount of medical care, such as supervision in taking medication, as well as more personal care than food, shelter and laundry.

Typically, former patients at Marlboro are placed in this type of facility to be "de-institutionalized" and integrated back into the community.

Mr. Carlock made his first inspection of the two homes on Monday, but the owners were not present and he was denied entrance, he said.

Jury: Gigantic welfare fraud rip-off

By WILLIAM J. ZAORSKI

FREEHOLD — A Monmouth County grand jury, in a presentation released yesterday, advocated that stronger measures be taken to stamp out what it called a "gigantic 'rip-off' of the public funds" by means of welfare fraud.

In its 28-page presentation, the grand jury noted that alleged welfare fraud cases totaling $726,298 had been referred to the county prosecutor's office over a 19 month period.

"This presentation is not intended to be a philosophical treatise on the whys and ways of welfare fraud," said the grand jury. "It is intended to be critical of the welfare system, as the grand jury found it in Monmouth County."

"And it is intended to be critical of the people who administer that system in such a manner that the public can be bilked out of three quarters of a million dollars, and who knows how much more."

The presentation listed 10 recommendations for change of the welfare system. One is that the report be made public and brought to attention of future grand juries in the county so they can determine "whether some real effort has been made to stamp out this odious problem."

Noting that a prior presentation by an earlier grand jury (in 1974) "merely acknowledged" the problem of welfare fraud and "made some mild suggestions," the presentation said that "it was obvious to the jury that the fraud had not diminished and that perhaps stronger measures should be advocated."

The grand jury, which had been held over from its term which should have ended last May, said that it had heard welfare alleged fraud cases between January and May totaling $125,241. Two other grand jury panels sitting at the same time heard similar cases involving an additional $92,282, bringing the total to $217,523 for this period.

Between October 1975 and April 1977, alleged fraud cases totaling $726,298 had been referred to the county prosecutor's office from the county welfare board, now known as the county Board of Social Services, said the jury, adding that "The jurors were disturbed by these figures."

The grand jury said "it is obvious that welfare fraud is a serious problem in Monmouth County," adding that it suspects that it is also a problem in the other 20 counties in the state.

"It is difficult to determine just what percentage, moneymwise, that ($726,298) figure represents. Nor is it as certainable just what percentage of the welfare recipients are committing fraud in one form or another.

The grand jury noted that there are two main categories of providing assistance to the poor and needy. One is aid to families with dependent children in which two types of fraud can result: where recipients fail to report income and where they fail to report a spouse or father residing in the home. (This is the area where the bulk of the indictments handed up

Wells: that's 1.79 per cent

By DORIS KULMAN

The dollar amount of alleged welfare fraud cited by the Monmouth County Grand Jury yesterday is less than 2 per cent of the total sum the county Welfare Board distributed during the time in the presentation covers, according to county welfare director Robert C. Wells.

In a presentation critical of county welfare officials who, it declared, administer the welfare system "in such a manner that the public can be bilked," the grand jury said, alleged welfare fraud cases totaling $726,298 were referred to the county prosecutor between October 1975 and last April and that cases totaling another $217,523 had been handled by grand juries since May.

"That's 1.79 per cent of the amount of money distributed by the board during that time period," Mr. Wells said.

He declined to comment on the grand jury's specific recommendations, but said the Welfare Board would make official response at its Aug. 31 meeting.

However, Louis Armour, the board's deputy director, said that the grand jury's major recommendation for preventing fraud — more on-the-spot investigations by welfare workers at client's homes — would require hiring more than 100 additional workers at an annual cost of more than $800,000.

The board fired 96 workers this year because of budget cutbacks, Mr. Armour noted.

He said there's no hard evidence that more home visits turn up more fraud.

"Apparently, the grand jury heard conflicting testimony," he said. "Some of our staff felt home visits would help, some thought not. My opinion is that it would turn up some fraud, but not a significant amount. We need more research into that to come up with some facts."

Each welfare application is investigated now, "but it doesn't involve a home visit," Mr. Armour said. "We contact schools, we check the Bureau of Vital Statistics for birth records, clients supply us with rent receipts..."

A home visit is made if the person processing the application

Tests today on 'Sam'

NEW YORK (AP) — As police assembled heaps of evidence against the 44-caliber killer known as the "Son of Sam" and as a district attorney summoned a grand jury, psychiatrists were beginning a series of tests today that could make their efforts academic.

Their examinations involve a quiet, smiling postal clerk who allegedly has told police he killed six people and wounded seven others because he was commanded to do so by a 6,000-year-old voice named "Sam" who spoke to him through a dog.

David Berkowitz, 24, Korean vet, former auxiliary policeman and security guard, and lately a mail sorter in a Bronx post office, was not in a prison cell but in a heavily-guarded, private room in the mental ward at Kings County Hospital, ordered there by a judge who said: "I am of the opinion that the defendant may be incapacitated."

Judge Richard Brown of Brooklyn Criminal Court ordered the psychiatric tests yesterday as the plump-faced, mild-looking Berkowitz stood before him, saying nothing but "yes" when asked if his name was David Berkowitz. The same smile flickered across the lips that continually reappeared since his arrest.

Berkowitz, arrested while coming out of his Yonkers apartment house late Wednesday night, allegedly told police then that he was the "Son of Sam," object of the most extensive manhunt in New York City history.

During hours of questioning before his arraignment, he allegedly gave what one detective called a "blow-by-blow" description of his year-long murder spree.

"He's amazing," the detective said. "He seems to have total recall, correcting us on minor details here and there."

Police also said yesterday that if Berkowitz had not been caught Wednesday night, a far worse blood bath might have been imminent.

Shore sludge goes to top of federal priority list

By SHERRY CONOHAN
Statehouse Correspondent

TRENTON — Projects providing for land based disposal of sewage sludge will automatically move to the top of the priority list of sewage treatment facilities awaiting federal funding, a State Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) official said yesterday.

Jeff Zelikson, acting director of the Division of Water Resources, said they would be given preferential treatment in an effort to enable the state to meet the Dec. 31, 1981, federal deadline set for an end of ocean dumping of sludge.

"In order to be able to comply, we have to put the design money out immediately," he said.

His disclosure of the new policy came on the heels of an announcement by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne that DEP will revise its sewerage priority rating system to consider seasonal influxes when determining population densities, a move that will primarily benefit seashore communities.

Mr. Zelikson said the revision of priorities, based on seasonal influxes of population, should be completed by DEP by the end of the month. But, he said, those priorities would be listed after any projects providing for land based disposal of sewage sludge.

Nine sewer authorities around the state, including two in Monmouth County, were given federal grants in 1976 for planning studies on

Army wins

Go-ahead at Ft. Monmouth

TRENTON — The Army can go ahead with its plans to eliminate or transfer 1,273 jobs from the Ft. Monmouth Electronics Compound, says a federal judge.

In a letter opinion released yesterday U.S. District Court Judge Clarkson S. Fisher said plaintiffs failed to demonstrate an injunction preventing the transfers and elimination of jobs would be in the public interest. The suit had been filed by Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., the National Federation of Federal Employees, Ocean Township and Oceanport Borough.

Fisher disputed the plaintiffs' arguments that an Army evaluation of the environmental and socio-economic impact of any significant movement of personnel is required under the National Environmental Policy Act.

"Nothing persuasive has been cited to the court to convince it that the enactment was designed to be used for the purposes promoting full employment, or to be used to prevent the discharge or transfer of federal personnel at an Army installation," he said.

The act was designed primarily to protect natural resources, he added.

The Army has announced plans to eliminate 533 jobs from the Electronic Command in order to meet a congressionally-mandated reduction in civil manpower at military bases.

An additional 224 jobs will be lost and 516 jobs transferred as part of a nationwide reorganization.

Now see here Governor Byrne

By BEN VAN VLIET

Like they say, there's more than one way to skin a cat.

And because Joel Herberg, the commodore of the 38th annual Red Bank Sweepstake Regatta, firmly believes in that adage, Gov. Brendan T. Byrne will be on hand Sunday to present the Governor's Cup.

The governor, despite the best efforts of local officials, had said he could attend the Regatta on Saturday, the first day of the two-day affair, but would not be available for the Sunday presentation.

Mr. Herberg, who doesn't take "no" for an answer readily, took matters into his own hands.

He called the governor's office and, after being told the governor wasn't available on Sunday, said, "Well, that's okay with me, I think we can get Bateman to present the trophy."

State Sen. Raymond H. Bateman happens to be the Republican candidate who opposes Gov. Byrne in this year's election.

"There was a very long silence on the phone," said Mr. Herberg. "I thought for a while we had been cut off."

Mr. Herberg said the secretary finally told him she would get back to him.

Early Wednesday, the governor's office called the borough and announced that the governor found after all that he could make the presentation Sunday.

That was the way things stood until Thursday, when the governor's office called Red Bank and announced that the governor would once again be unable to attend on Sunday, but he would be around on Saturday for a bit of handshaking.

But, said a spokesman for the governor, someone would be designated to award the Governor's Cup, and it won't be a Republican.

Wild killer slaughters 4

SEASIDE, Calif. (AP) — Laboring "without clues or suspects," police are hunting a motive and a killer in the stabbing deaths of a grandmother, her daughter and two grandchildren in this Monterey Bay town.

"We've never had anything like this — it's the most gross crime in our community that I can remember," said Seaside police commander Bill Gullett.

The slaughtered bodies were discovered by police around 6 a.m. yesterday after house painter Marvin Thiel, 43, a family friend, failed to get any response at the door of their modest apartment.

one of a triplex. Seaside, a town of about 2,000, is 199 miles south of San Francisco.

The dead, each of whom had been stabbed many times, were Josephine Smith, 66; her daughter, Suzanne Harris, 28; Mrs. Harris' daughter, Rachel, 6, and her niece, Renee Ferguson, 15.

Summoned by Thiel, police kicked in the door and found Renee's body, her hands bound, lying on the bedroom floor. The other three, unbound, were lying on the kitchen floor.

The walls and furniture were splattered with blood. Bloody footprints were tracked through the rooms.

Tests today on 'Son of Sam'

(Continued) They said in his car, beside a semi-automatic weapon, was an unsent letter to authorities of Suffolk County on Long Island, saying he was planning to "go out in a blaze of glory" by mowing down a crowd of young people in a discotheque.

Berkowitz for $10 million damages.

The source said summonses were served on Berkowitz at the Department of Correction and Kings County Hospital. Another was taped to the door of his Yonkers apartment.

Although Berkowitz has no known financial resources, the Violantes reportedly are hoping to collect the damages from any future money the alleged killer might make from book, television and movie rights.

Despite the hours of questioning, police were still baffled at the motive for murder. While Berkowitz was quoted as saying persistently that "it was commanded" when asked about each of the killings, he variously described his master as "a man who lived 6,000 years ago," the devil, or a Yonkers neighbor, Sam Carr.

"I got the message through his dog," Berkowitz was quoted as saying. "He told me to kill." Meanwhile Carr, 64, said he had reported to police that Berkowitz had shot his dog in the leg last April and more recently had told police he thought his neighbor might be the .44-caliber killer.

Carr said the sooting of the dog plus Berkowitz' likeness to one of the police sketches of the killer gave him a "gut feeling" Berkowitz was the man.

Once Berkowitz was in custody, and young women and their parents all over the city were breathing easier, police piled up evidence aside from the alleged admissions to prove Berkowitz guilty as charged of second-degree murder, first-degree murder being reserved in this state for such special crimes as killing cops or prison guards.

They disclosed they had fingerprints matching the suspect's from a note left at the scene of one of the slayings, and handwriting from notes tacked on the wall of his Yonkers room that matched the "Son of Sam" handwriting.

They had a woman witness who said she came face to face with Berkowitz at the scene of the Moskowitz-Violante shootings while she was walking her dog. They had ballistics tests on the .44-caliber Charter Arms Bulldog revolver used in the various killings, and quoted Berkowitz as saying he had a friend buy it for him in Texas.

They had evidence from Houston on the gun purchase, but a police spokesman said the buyer was "not involved in the crime" although he might be a witness.

Brooklyn Dist. Atty. Eugene Gold said he hoped a grand jury would indict Berkowitz in the Moskowitz slaying and the assault on Violante not later than Monday.

But whether he ever goes to trial will depend on whether or not the psychiatrists determine he is legally sane, or, in Judge Brown's words, "lacks the capacity to understand the procedures against him or to assist in his own defense."

Shuttle landing called 'critical'

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Two computer-aided astronauts were scheduled to guide the Space Shuttle Enterprise today in its first flight and landing free of its Boeing 747 mother ship.

The test is a critical milestone in the development of the airliner-sized space bus designed to make hundreds of flights into near-Earth orbit during the next decade, carrying men and up to 65,000 pounds of cargo.

Preparation of the engineless 75-ton craft was running smoothly early today at this sprawling desert base north-east of Los Angeles.

The crewmen, Fred Haise, 43, and Gordon Fullerton, 40, had honed their maneuvering skills in a special jet trainer yesterday.

"I know of no open issues at this point" that would prevent the flight, said Donald Slayton, manager of the approach and landing tests here.

The 747 jumbo jet, with the shuttle crouched on its top, was to take off at 8 a.m. PDT and climb high over this desert air base. At an altitude of about 25,000 feet, explosive charges were to break the connection between the piggy-backed craft, launching the shuttle on a 4½-minute glide which ends with a landing on a seven-mile-long dry lake.

For the 50,000 to 70,000 sightseers expected to gather at the base, the test was a preview of how future manned space flights will end. Gone are the ocean splash-downs that were required in the days of the Apollo moon missions, and in their place will be shuttles touching down at more than 200 miles per hour.

Carter scrutinizing Panama pact

WASHINGTON — President Carter is going over the new Panama Canal pact word for word so he can okay every detail and start a sales blitz to convince Congress and the people it's safe, sure to improve Latin American relations and worth ratifying.

For the first time as President, Carter cleared his schedule today of all appointments but his regular intelligence briefing so he could devote the day to studying the agreement.

Approval was expected. Carter gave his preliminary opinion yesterday: "I'm very pleased with it."

President stays mum on Lance

WASHINGTON — President Carter will continue to discuss official business with Budget Director Bert Lance, but he is withholding expressions of support for his longtime friend, whose personal finances are under federal investigation.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said yesterday that Carter wants to avoid influencing the investigation, being conducted by the comptroller of the currency.

Powell faced his first on-the-record, at-length questioning on the investigation at the daily White House news briefing and said in a carefully worded statement that Carter would withhold comment on Lance or the investigation.

Tris products showing up again

WASHINGTON — Products treated with Tris, the flame retardant linked to cancer in animal tests, are reappearing on store shelves, and the government is powerless to intervene.

S. John Byington, chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, said yesterday his agency cannot stop the sales because a federal district court in June voided the commission's ban on production and sale of children's sleepwear treated with the chemical.

"We did not want a large number of these garments coming back on the market. We're damned concerned about it. But at this point in time we cannot take enforcement action because we were ordered by the court not to."

'77 regional jobless rate down

NEW YORK — Unemployment in the metropolitan New York-Northeastern New Jersey area remained unchanged in June, equaling the 8.6 per cent recorded in May.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, however, the figure was down 2.4 percentage points from June 1976.

The stable June figure here contrasted with the national increase in the jobless rate from 6.4 to 7.5 per cent over May to June.

A spokesman noted that the unemployment rate typically rises in June with the seasonal influx of young people seeking work. Adjusted for seasonal variations, the national jobless rate only edged up .2 per cent, from 6.9 to 7.1.

He said seasonal adjustments were not available for the metropolitan area.

A Profile: Born as David Falco

NEW YORK (AP) — He had always lived apart, the moon-faced introvert they call Son of Sam. A little odd maybe. A little out of touch, said people who knew him. A misfit who was quoted as telling police he killed because "it was commanded."

"He used to laugh for no apparent reason," one of his old friends told an interviewer. "We'd ask him what he was laughing about and he would say, 'I just thought of something funny.' When we'd ask him what it was, he wouldn't tell us."

A former classmate said, "at one time we were playing basketball and he would steal the ball," the classmate recollected. "And he would hassle and you'd have to ask him to get it back."

With a crowd roaring "Kill! Kill!" outside, Criminal Court Judge Richard Brown ordered Berkowitz held without bail at King's County Hospital until psychiatrists determine whether he is fit for trial.

He hated dogs, his former landlady said.

According to colleagues at a Bronx post office, Berkowitz was a conscientious mail sorter with, nonetheless, a suspicious cast to his eyes. He was sometimes jumpy and always unpredictable, they said. He rarely initiated a conversation and he answered questions in a word.

'Sam' said:

NEW YORK (AP) — David Berkowitz, 24, accused as the feared "Son of Sam" has given police details knocking down some of the popular theories about his method of operating, according to detectives who questioned him.

The detectives, said the suspect made the following statements:

- He fired one-handed for the first three attacks, not in the two-hand, combat-style position police believed he used.
• On at least two occasions he fired all five shots in his .44 caliber revolver. He did not keep one bullet in the chamber or leave one chamber empty, as police believed.
• He never went inside a dis-cotheque to scout for a victim.

• He never wore a wig, as was speculated after differing reports on the length, color and style of his hair.
• His victims hair length and color had nothing to do with their selection, as was popularly believed.
• The attacks were totally random, but the targets always young women.
• He insisted he had never been jilted by a girlfriend.
• Detectives said he carried his revolver in a plastic bag, but never shot through it as police had believed. He said he carried the gun in a bag because he didn't believe in holsters.

The shoplifting trial of Melvin Dummar, named an heir to the late Howard Hughes in a purported will, has been set for sometime in September. Ogden, Utah, City Judge E.F. Ziegler agreed yesterday to leave the date open because Dummar and his attorneys will be busy in proceedings over the so-called "Mormon will."

Melvin Dummar

Dummar is accused of taking 10 cents worth of wood screws July 29. Police said a Safeway Store guard told them he saw a man remove some wood screws from a package and put them in his pocket.

"I love what I'm doing. I enjoy being in the midst of the sound, the music," says 66-year-old Ginger Rogers.

Miss Rogers, after 73 movies with and without Fred Astaire, could easily retire to her big ranch in Oregon or her Palm Springs home. Instead, she's warming up Miami Beach's Theater of the Performing Arts with the songs she set America to humming, years ago. "Embrace me, my sweet embraceable you..."

"I think I'm one of the most qualified women in the U.S. in the area of the economics of regulated industries," says Elizabeth Bailey of Rumson.

Mrs. Bailey, sworn in Tuesday as the first woman member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said she was one of four Republican women President Carter considered for the job.

"What I liked was that the President didn't want to appoint me until he had met me. He waited to see if I had the energy to do the job and the courage it takes to make tough decisions," she said.

Mrs. Bailey, who worked as head of the economics research group at Bell Labs, fills the unexpired term of former board chairman John Robson who resigned in April. She then will serve her own six-year term through Dec. 31, 1983.

"I've had plenty of time to form opinions," she said. "Now I'll have a chance to see how easy or difficult it is to act upon them."

Clerk steps down after 37 years

RUMSON — Albert A. "Art" Kerr Jr., will step down Sept. 1 after 37 years as borough clerk and administrator here.

He will be replaced by Gary Sammon, 34, who has been assistant borough clerk and borough administrator for the past seven years.

Borough Council last night accepted Mr. Kerr's notice of retirement with deep regret, praising his performance for the borough over nearly four decades.

Mayor John O. Teeter said Mr. Kerr had done a "superlative job" in administering the borough's affairs, a sentiment echoed by Councilman Charles S. Callman.

"The town wouldn't be the same without him," Mr. Callman said.

Mr. Kerr was named borough clerk in April of 1940, and named to the post of administrator in the 1950's, Mr. Sammon said.

He has purchased the John Anderson real estate agency in Fair Haven and intends to continue living in Rumson.

Mr. Kerr currently earns $31,525 annually. Mr. Sammon, who earns $16,960 as assistant administrator-clerk, said that he has not discussed any possible salary increases with the council, but that he wanted to dispel any notions that he was about to double his salary.

"After all, Mr. Kerr has been here 37 years," he pointed out.

Mr. Sammon said that Lorraine Watson, now a payroll clerk for the borough, will act as his assistant when he takes over the administrator's job next month.

Fiorino, Byrne meeting is set

By SHERRY CONOHAN
Statehouse Correspondent

TRENTON — Gov. Brendan T. Byrne and Monmouth County Democratic Chairman John R. Fiorino tentatively plan to meet tomorrow to discuss the appointment of a Monmouth County prosecutor to succeed James M. Coleman Jr., who leaves the post next week, it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Fiorino has been opposed to Gov. Byrne's nomination of Deputy Attorney General G. Michael Brown of Sea Girt for the job and there is no indication either man has changed his position.

Sens. Herbert J. Buehler and Eugene J. Bedell, both D-Monmouth, who have been holding up Mr. Brown's appointment with senatorial courtesy, also may attend the conference.

It was uncertain late yesterday where the meeting would be held. Gov. Byrne is scheduled to make an appearance at the National Sweepstakes Regatta in Red Bank in mid-afternoon and could meet with the Monmouth County contingent somewhere nearby at that time. Or Mr. Fiorino and the others might be asked to Morven, the governor's residence in Princeton, in the morning for the meeting.

The current prosecutor, Mr. Coleman, a Republican, is leaving Thursday to take a job with the Legislative Services Agency, an arm of the Legislature, as revisor of statutes.

State Attorney General William F. Hyland, who has the authority to appoint an acting prosecutor to fill the vacancy, has said he anticipates doing just that and will announce his choice for the temporary post before Mr. Coleman leaves.

It is widely believed that Mr. Hyland will name Mr. Brown acting prosecutor, a move Gov. Byrne has endorsed as "making sense" since he expects Mr. Brown to eventually be confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. Brown, chief of the trial section in the Division of Criminal Justice, moved to Monmouth County from Essex County three years ago and his relative newness to the county has been the principle reason for the opposition to him in county Democratic circles.

A committee of the Monmouth County Bar Association, in reviewing the prospective appointment, issued a "no comment" finding on Mr. Brown on the grounds the committee members knew too little about him to form an opinion, ac-ording to reliable sources. The committee, however, reportedly gave its approval to Joseph Meehan, a Long Branch attorney and Mr. Fiorino's admitted first choice for the prosecutor's job.

A state bar committee did just the opposite. It endorsed Mr. Brown but withheld approval of Mr. Meehan.

Mr. Brown had been pushed for the job by Sen. Frank (Pat) Dodd, D-Essex, a close personal friend, and also has the strong support of Mr. Hyland. It was Mr. Dodd who lured Mr. Coleman into resigning by offering him the job with the Legislative Services Commission, of which is chairman, thereby clearing the way for Mr. Brown's appointment as acting prosecutor.

If the impasse over his permanent appointment isn't resolved, he could serve in an acting capacity indefinitely as long as Gov. Byrne is governor. But Gov. Byrne, who is seeking re-election in November, could lose in November and the permanent appointment of Mr. Brown to a five-year term as prosecutor would ensure that he would have a job after Nov. 8 regardless of what happens.

Museum selects woman director

LINCROFT — Dr. Judith Van Ba ron, director of the Bronx Museum of the Arts from 1974-'76, was appointed as director of the Monmouth Museum. She'll take over the post Sept. 1.

The museum's executive committee gave the 32-year-old New York art administrator a unanimous vote of approval yesterday following a three-month search for a new director.

She was chosen from a field of 12 applicants, about five of them women, by a search committee headed by its chairman, Howard R. Berger of West Long Branch.

Philip C. Carling of Fair Haven, acting museum president, announced the appointment of Dr. Van Ba ron after the trustees met yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Van Ba ron was managing editor of Arts Magazine from 1973-74 and arts news editor of the SoHo Weekly News from May 1976 until now.

She earned a masters degree in 1969 and a Ph.D. in art history in 1973 from Iowa University. In 1962 she earned an associate arts degree from Waldorf College, Iowa, and in 1963, a bachelor of arts degree from Luther College in Decora, Iowa, graduating magna cum laude.

Shore sludge

(Continued) The development of land based alternatives to the ocean dumping of sludge. Mr. Zelikson said none have reached the second, or design stage, as yet but that he expected them to be moving into that area by the end of 1977. When they submit their applications for funding for design work, he explained, they will move right to the head of the priority list.

The two Monmouth County recipients of the planning money for land based disposal of sewage sludge were Middletown Township Sewerage Authority and the Northeast Monmouth Regional Sewerage Authority in Monmouth Beach.

Assemblyman Anthony M. Villane Jr., R-Monmouth, chairman of a bistate legislative committee seeking solutions to ocean pollution, said he was happy to hear about the priority that will be given to sludge disposal projects.

But, he said, the problem won't be resolved until DEP sets standards that prohibit the disposal of metals and other toxic materials by industry into sewer systems. The presence of these materials in sludge, after the waste has been treated, prevents its use as a fertilizer or in many landfills because they make it harmful to the soil, he explained.

Dr. Villane said he anticipated that one of the recommendations that will come out of the bistate legislative committee, made up of four members each from the New Jersey and New York Assemblies, will be that the two states set such standards accompanied by penalties for violations.

Mr. Zelikson said Cape May County would benefit the most from the revision of priorities for funding when seasonal influxes are considered in determining population densities.

The issue of using seasonal populations for project priority ranking was raised by seashore communities during a public hearing last month on DEP's Water Resources Program Plan for fiscal 1978.

"Our ocean resources are vital to the health of our environment and our economy," Gov. Byrne said.

An application for $374,000 from Asbury Park for preparation of plans, specifications and project reports for a wastewater treatment plant and interceptor sewers and for $3 million for construction of some currently is third in priority on the division's list. Nine other Monmouth projects also are pending.

Those and others from around the state will have to await final Congressional action on the proposed Clean Water Act of 1977 which would provide $1.14 billion for New Jersey through 1985 for the construction of sewage treatment facilities. The Senate and House have passed different versions of the bill.

'Treat Atlantic City separately'

By SHERRY CONOHAN
Statehouse Correspondent

TRENTON — New Jersey should consider making Atlantic City a separate enclave with stricter licensing requirements for businesses than elsewhere in the state in order to combat infiltration by organized crime, a recognized authority on the subject said yesterday.

Ralph F. Salerno of New York, former supervisor of detectives for the New York City Police Department who law enforcement officials regard as a national expert on organized crime, also urged the state to enforce all tax laws stringently, particularly those on income tax evasion, in dealing with the mob.

"That's the Achilles heel. It's worth the time and effort to go after that," he said of tax law enforcement.

Mr. Salerno offered his suggestions on the last of four days of public hearings held by the State Commission of Investigation (SCI) to expose how organized crime figures already have infiltrated Atlantic City in anticipation of casino gambling.

Joseph H. Rodriguez, chairman of the commission, said at the conclusion of all testimony that the SCI would submit recommendations of its own after reviewing the record — hopefully by early fall. Two areas obviously in need of recommendations, he said, are in stricter licensing for cigarette distributors and vendors and in the functioning of the local Alcohol Beverage Control body.

Mr. Rodriguez also said that while the commission felt the licensing of ancillary services for casinos was critical it now will go one step beyond that.

"Others not directly connected with casinos should be licensed," he said.

"We believe that these four days of public testimony have made apparent what has been chiefly a matter of speculation — that the deployment of mobsters in and around Atlantic City is a clear and present danger," Mr. Rodriguez continued, referring to the purpose of the hearings by the SCI, which is an advisory body without prosecutorial powers.

He said the testimony had demonstrated that the major crime families of New York and Philadelphia — the Gambinos and Angelos Brunos, respectively — are obviously "cooperating" in an effort to cash in on profitable commercial sidelines of a developing casino gambling metropolis.

Mr. Salerno, in his testimony, added a third family to those two based on what he had heard during the hearings — that of the late Vito Genovese — and indicated still other organized crime families also were active on the Atlantic City scene.

Referring to an SCI chart showing the movement of the organized crime families mentioned in the hearings, indicated by arrows, Mr. Salerno remarked that some arrows were missing and began to explain. He was interrupted by Mr. Rodriguez, however, who said, "There are certain arrows we're keeping to ourselves now."

Asked about the hearing when the SCI would explain the missing arrows, Mr. Rodriguez said it would do so when it felt they should be explained and declined further comment. Mr. Salerno also refused further comment, saying he couldn't discuss the matter because it was still under investigation.

Mr. Salerno said Atlantic City was very susceptible to infiltration by the mob because of its location "right smack in the middle of megalopolis" and organized crime doesn't have to go very far out of its way to extend its already established business and service operations to the shore city. By contrast, he said, casino resorts such as Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe and Reno are in areas with a small permanent population which are a four-hour drive from the population centers of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

He noted that a 400-mile radius from Atlantic City includes most of the megalopolis, almost all the way from Washington, D.C. to Boston.

"I see the beginning of silken webs being spun all around in Atlantic City," he warned. And, he said, the information brought out during the SCI hearings should be the target of a big tax inquiry by both federal and state officials because of the many questionable money deals described during their course.

"The prime law enforcement," he stressed, with regard to organized crime figures, "is tax enforcement."

Presentment

by grand juries pertain to.) The other is assistance to families of the working poor.

More thorough investigative procedures would uncover more fraud, said the grand jury. It added that it believed that "once it became known that there were, and would be more thorough investigation, it would serve as a deterrent to some welfare recipients who might otherwise be inclined to attempt to defraud the board."

During its investigation of welfare fraud, the grand jury heard testimony from Elizabeth McKenzie, administrative supervisor of income maintenance intake division; Edythe Davidson, administrative supervisor of legal department; Martha Swan, administrative supervisor of income maintenance assigned to undercare division; Leonora McKay, administrative supervisor maintenance; Jeanne Ganz, administrative supervisor of social works; Dorothy Seldon, social service technician and president of Communication Workers of America, Local 1087, and Louis Armour, deputy director of the board.

Ms. Swan, Ms. Ganz, Ms. Seldon and Mr. Armour had testified they did not believe that more thorough investigative procedures would uncover more fraud. Mr. Armour, for example, felt that the board is doing a good job of detecting and preventing fraud and that investigation of all cases would not uncover much more fraud.

The grand jury said that the federal regulations which shifted emphasis from intake to social services "has, for all practical purposes, eliminated effective personal investigation of each applicant." Before the rules were changed in 1965, board employees investigated every application but no longer. "Basically the client comes in and you take his word what is what..." said M. McKenzie.

"This grand jury firmly believes that fraud will not be eliminated so long as there is only a spot check system or reliance is placed upon the now existing sources of reporting possible welfare fraud," said the presentment.

Acknowledging that more personnel means more money, the grand jury said it believes the public would prefer to spend more money to prevent fraud than to let it run on virtually unchecked and in the long run to spend more money on followup investigations, prosecutions and trials.

In its recommendations, the grand jury said:

— That all applications be investigated when received and the investigation is to include an at home visit.

— That except in emergent matters, the initial payment check not be sent for 30 days, or within a lesser time if the investigation be completed sooner.

— That not less than 25 per cent of the renewal applications be investigated, at random, in the same manner as the initial investigation.

— That after initial application, a board employee be assigned to the case and stay with the case until it is terminated.

— That in addition to the home visit required at the initial investigation, that there be additional periodic visitations, unannounced during the time from approval to renewal, and likewise after each renewal.

— That an attempt be made to enlarge the existing sources of information that might lead to the uncovering of fraud, and to further attempt to speed up the receipt of information from these sources.

— That the fraud unit should secure more investigators so that the time can be cut down from referral to that unit to ultimate recommendation for possible prosecution.

— That there be a constant reevaluation of existing procedures to determine whether the resources and personnel of the board are being adequately deployed to cope with the fraud problem.

— That the officials of the board make a sincere effort to place the emphasis back on intake maintenance and to seek the aid of their legislative representatives, both federal and state, to accomplish this result.

While the grand jury lambasted the present welfare system, it said the officials of the board are knowledgeable and given the tools and the personnel, meaningful efforts can be made to detect fraud at the outset and "end this travesty once and for all."

Copies of the presentment are to be sent to Gov. Brendan T. Byrne; Chief Justice Richard J. Hughes of the N.J. Supreme Court; state Attorney General William F. Hyland; the Board of Freeholders of Monmouth County and all other counties in the state; all county prosecutors; all county welfare board directors; the president of the state Senate, and the speaker of the state Assembly.

Gas smell

By DAVID ASTOR

MIDDLETOWN — Hundreds of Bayshore area residents flooded the New Jersey Natural Gas Co. (NJNGC) with calls late yesterday afternoon when an "inadvertent" influx of odorant created strong gas smells in their places of residence.

Leon Zuckerman, NJNGC assistant vice president, said that the added odorant, known as mercaptan, somehow how got into the company's pipes in Cliffwood.

"It got in there inadvertently and we don't know how at this moment," declared Mr. Zuckerman early this morning. He theorized that it was "probably a mechanical thing."

Mr. Zuckerman said that a certain amount of odorant is always fed into the natural gas, which is odorless.

"This is a safety measure so that people can detect a leak when they smell it," he said.

Mr. Zuckerman emphasized that the added level of odorant, which entered the system at around 4:30 p.m., was "not harmful" and that there was no threat to the health of the residences who smelled it.

The assistant vice president noted that the company received about 300 calls from residents in communities such as Middletown, Keyport and the Matawans before NJNGC personnel brought the odorant back to the usual level at around 5:30 p.m. There were also a "handful" of calls from Long Branch, he added.

An effort was made to send out workers to check the residences of everyone who called to complain about the smell, said Mr. Zuckerman.

Mr. Zuckerman said he hoped to have a specific reason today for the mercaptan influx.

The assistant vice president reported that this influx "happened once before several years ago."

cation feels something is amiss, and always within six weeks after a client goes on the welfare rolls, Mr. Armour said. There are spot check home visits, he said.

As part of its fraud watch, the board gets a listing of persons drawing unemployment insurance "so that we can make sure they're reporting that income if they're also on welfare," he said.

The board has been successful in getting a listing of all county and municipal employees "to compare against our case load," and has asked private employers for listings of their employees "but we've not gotten a good response, they tell us it's against their policy, or they don't tell us anything," Mr. Armour said.

Some of the money cited in the presentment "was re-couped from reductions in clients' grants," Mr. Armour said.

The presentment recommended beefing up the board's fraud investigation unit.

That unit has 13 investigators "and that's more than any other county welfare board has," Raymond B. De-

Ridder, the board attorney said. "Even in the lay-offs, the investigators weren't touched."

"It's a Catch-22 situation," Mr. DeRidder said. "We have a good grand investigation unit, so we find it, and we send it to the prosecutor — one day, we had 20 cases before the grand jury. And we get in trouble for that! We're a losing proposition..."

"You're going to have a certain amount of fraud no matter what you do," Mr. DeRidder said. "The problem is, no one knows what's an acceptable amount."

Dr. James W. Parker Jr., the board chairman, couldn't be reached for comment. County Freeholder Director Ray Kramer, a board member, said he wouldn't comment on the presentment because he hadn't read it.

"I read it and I thought it a well-done examination of the process," Frederick Forrest, a board member, said. "I'm encouraged that more people are being concerned with this problem."

Illegal homes?

Yesterday, he obtained a search warrant from Municipal Court Judge Arthur P. Siegfried to make the inspections.

These latest inspections are part of an area-wide crackdown on illegal boarding houses, following a fire June 23 in Sea Bright when four former mental patients were killed in an allegedly illegal boarding home.

Red Bank and Long Branch, in particular, have been cracking down on the large number of unlicensed rooming and boarding houses in their neighborhoods.

Yesterday, the state Department of Health fined six Asbury Park and Red Bank persons for operating illegal boarding homes.

Among those fined were: Raymond Williams, who operates a boarding home at 139 River St., Red Bank, who also faces municipal charges in connection with this home.

Lots and lots and lots of softball

RED BANK — Anyone for softball — lots and lots of softball?

If so, and if one has a pocketfull of halve dollars for charity, the place to be at noon Sunday is Memorial Park, adjacent to the Athletic Field.

That's the kickoff time for what is hoped to be a six-day marathon softball game to benefit the fight against muscular dystrophy.

The game is being sponsored by the newly formed Red Bank Merchants Athletic League, headed by Steve DeAngelo, operator of Ishka-Bibble's Paradise, 68 Broad St., and with the cooperation of the Red Bank Parks & Recreation Department.

Two teams, now being formed, will take part in the 24-hour game with members of the public urged to play as replacements.

However, each player will be charged 50 cents for each hour they play with the money going to the muscular dystrophy fund.

The game is timed to coincide with the annual, Jerry Lewis Telethon which raises money for the same cause. Persons wishing to join in the game are asked to register at Ishka-Bibble's Paradise.

The game is scheduled to begin at noon Sunday and the final out will be called at noon Aug. 21.

WASHINGTON — The Army's controversial plan to break up the Electronics Command (ECOM) at Ft. Monmouth, N.J., will come up for yet another Pentagon review.

Deputy Defense Secretary Charles W. Duncan Jr. said he would personally review the Army's plan to transfer ECOM jobs to two Southern installations.

Secretary Duncan's pledge came during a meeting with Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., who presented the secretary with objections to the Army plan.

As announced on July 13, the Army would scrap ECOM to create a new Electronics Research and Development Command (ERADCOM), with

Gibson assets frozen

NEWARK (AP) — Corporate and family assets of former Long Branch drug dealer Douglas MacArthur Gibson were ordered frozen yesterday in U.S. District Court.

Judge H. Curtis Meanor issued the order after Asst. U.S. Atty. Steven Mills requested the block to prevent Gibson from transferring assets to avoid paying a $50,000 fine.

Gibson was sentenced July 15 after pleading guilty to conspiring to sell heroin and possessing the drug with intent to distribute.

He was sentenced to 12 years in prison after he finishes a 14-to-20-year state term.

Mills said Gibson tried to block the freeze because he is appealing the case. "I can't figure out on what grounds the appeal is — he pleaded guilty," the U.S. attorney said.

Five other persons in the heroin ring also pleaded guilty. Thirty persons suspected of minor roles were tried together before Meanor and acquitted by a jury.

headquarters at the Harry Diamond Laboratories, Adelphi, Md. In addition, the laser lab would be transferred to Ft. Belvoir, Va.

When the revamp plan is completed in 1981, 414 civilian ECOM jobs will have been eliminated or transferred, the Army maintains.

This plan, though, compares with another proposed by the Army last March that would have axed 756 ECOM jobs. The Army scaled down this plan, however, after President Carter met with Mr. Howard and other New Jersey elected officials in April.

Following that session, the President ordered Secretary Duncan to supervise a review of the Army's plan. At the meeting, President Carter said that if the Army could not prove their "preferred alternative" to be "overriding in the national interest" he would order it to implement another plan favored by Mr. Howard.

This plan would have seen the loss of about 200 Ft. Monmouth jobs with the creation of an ERADCOM headquarters at that fort.

During the meeting with Secretary Duncan, Mr. Howard argued the "compromise" was "not satisfactory," outlining three objections to it.

Charles W. Duncan

Specifically, Mr. Howard, whose shore district includes the fort, said the new ERADCOM headquarters should be located at Ft. Monmouth, since this would entail the fewest "forced" transfers of employees. He noted this would also permit the new command to become operational sooner than the Army's plan.

Mr. Howard further asserted the Army's plan was illogical since it retained the Electronics Warfare Laboratory at the fort, while moving other related signal warfare activities from Arlington Hall Station to Vint Hill Farms Station, both Virginia. The congressman said all such warfare research should be consolidated at Ft. Monmouth.

Finally, Mr. Howard scored the Army's plan to move the existing laser lab at the fort to Ft. Belvoir, where an all-new laser test range must be built. The congressman contested the Army's claim that it could be built for $400,000, saying the real cost would be about $1 million.

In listening to Mr. Howard's arguments, Secretary Duncan promised to consider them, but stopped short of saying he would halt the reorganization pending his review.

Nor did the secretary say when he would complete his review of the Army plan.

However, Milton Wilkatz, a representative of the "Save-the-Fort-Committee" in New Jersey said, "the secretary's review shows a great deal of doubt in his mind as to the wisdom of the Army's plan."

Mr. Wilkatz, a delegate to the committee of the million-member Allied Council of N.J. War Veterans, said he also felt that a survey released Tuesday by the Northeast Congressional Caucus may have had a bearing on the secretary's decision to review the plan.

The study showed that between 1960 and 1975 the Northeastern states lost 50.9 per cent of their military and civilian armed services employees, compared to a loss of 9.5 per cent of this job pool nationwide.

Multi-family housing plan approved in Tinton Falls

By JIM OSTROFF
TINTON FALLS — Borough Council last night approved construction of this community's first multi-family housing project.

By a unanimous vote, council granted two developers variances needed to build a 76-unit garden apartment and townhouse complex at Tinton Ave. and Hope Road, ending two years of legal haggling on the project.

The Planning Board must now grant site plan approval for the homes, which will be built on a 20-acre tract. No date has been set for the board hearing.

The project, as set forth by Leon Bouchard of Eatontown and Conrad Wissel 3rd of Mountainside, calls for the construction of 48 one-bedroom homes and 28 two-bedroom homes. A portion of them will be single-story, or garden apartments, and the rest will be two-story townhouses.

However, all the homes are to be "clustered" on about 10 acres of land, which caused both council and the Zoning Board of Adjustment to reject earlier proposals by the builders.

Following months of hearings before the zoning board, the builders' proposal to construct a 168-unit complex on the tract was denied in December 1975, causing the two men to appeal this ruling to state Superior Court.

Rather than go to trial, though, the builders agreed to resubmit a scaled-down plan for an 80-unit development. Several more months of hearings ensued before the zoning board voted to grant the needed variances last November.

However, council, which at the time had also to approve variances, voted in January to reverse the zoning board's decision. At that time, several council members said the proposed project would cause traffic congestion on Tinton Ave., and would be too dense at about four homes to the acre.

The borough's zoning ordinance now provides only for single family houses on one acre of land.

Council also said there were no guarantees that the builders would develop the remaining 10 acres—that were to be left in its natural state—at a later time.

The council's dramatic turnaround last night followed another appeal by the builders to Judge Lane, who again urged them to seek a compromise with the governing body.

Under the plan agreed to last night, council approved a scaled-down, 76-unit project, in which the developers gave written guarantees they would never build upon the undeveloped 10 acres.

Mr. Bouchard and Mr. Wissel also agreed to move an exit/entrance driveway so as to create less traffic disturbance on Tinton Ave.

Mr. Bouchard said he would file an application for hearing before the zoning board "as soon as possible."

Mrs. Elizabeth Q. Billings

He declined to enumerate possible rental fees, though, saying this would be contingent upon "conditions imposed by the board."

He noted, though, that the project would require about one year to construct.

Councilwoman Elizabeth Q. Billings, who was previously a staunch opponent of the development, said council's new position was guided by a probable loss in the courts if it rejected the new plan.

"I think we realized," Mrs. Billings said, "that our backs were up against the wall and we didn't feel we could win an appeal in (state Superior) Court."

The councilwoman also noted that her personal earlier objections to the project were largely based on the fact that the borough's new master plan had not yet been adopted.

"I had thought it would have been approved last month," Mrs. Billings said, "and felt we should wait to see how the (Tinton Ave./Hope Road) area would be zoned."

"But now," she added, "it looks like the master plan won't be voted upon until next month and I didn't think it fair to hold this (development) up any longer."

Meanwhile, council is defending two legal actions by developers seeking to build other large multi-family projects.

Hovbit Inc., a Toms River developer of residential homes, is seeking to construct 1,300 single and multi-family units together with a mix of apartments, commercial and professional uses on a 150-acre tract contiguous to the Garden State Parkway Exit 102.

Judge Lane last month upheld the zoning board's denial of variances for the project, but appeals are expected.

In addition, the Appellate Division of Superior Court in April rebuked council for denying variances to Grace B. Heck of Middletown and the Lomnes Corp. of Red Bank, to construct a 254-unit project on 32 acres of land fronting on Shrewsbury Ave. and abutting Hope Road in the rear.

State says oxygen levels in ocean still remain low

Register Statehouse Bureau

TRENTON — Dissolved oxygen levels in the ocean off the Monmouth County coast continue low and in some locations are approaching levels associated with stress in some bottom-dwelling creatures, the state Department of Environmental Protection reported yesterday.

The oxygen levels, however, are not as low as those that caused last year's massive fishkill off the New Jersey coast, DEP said.

In its weekly beach report, DEP said tests by it and federal agencies show that the dissolved oxygen levels continue to be low on the ocean bottom in an offshore area five to eight miles wide starting about three miles out from Monmouth County down to Atlantic City. As a result, the report said, the agencies have stepped up their surveillance and monitoring activities for dissolved oxygen levels offshore.

The federal agencies involved are the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the National Marine Fisheries Service, according to the report.

It said no unusual numbers of dead fish, clams or lobsters have been reported by state or federal agencies, by divers or by fishermen.

DEP said its inspection cruises and EPA helicopter flights during the week reveal that beach and surf conditions along the shore continue to be very good.

Postpone Armour hearing

LONG BRANCH — A Municipal court hearing on charges that Thomas L. Armour operated an illegal rooming house at 77 Cooper Ave. was postponed once again yesterday when a key prosecution witness, a resident of the alleged illegal facility, failed to appear in court.

Ms. Doris Huhn, who failed to answer a subpoena issued by City Prosecutor Eugene Iadanza, was cited for contempt of court, and ordered to appear in court on Thursday, the rescheduled hearing date.

On July 7, Ms. Huhn told city inspectors and The Daily Register that she and four other women lived at 77 Cooper Ave., and ate their meals at Witmer House, 75 Cooper Ave., a licensed sheltered care facility owned and operated by Mr. Armour.

Mr. Armour was then charged with allowing five unrelated people to share the apartment without obtaining a rooming house license — a violation of city ordinances.

John K. Collins, building inspector, issued the summons.

On July 28, Mr. Collins issued another summons to Mr. Armour, for operating an illegal rooming house at 81 Cooper Ave.

The city alleges that Mr. Armour allowed three unrelated men to live at that address without obtaining a rooming house license.

Hearing on the first charges was postponed a number of times in the past month, most recently at the request of Mr. Armour's attorney, David Resnikoff, who had asked for additional information on the city's witnesses and their statements.

'Beautiful! When is he gonna pull out of occupied America?'

Elected school board

Long Branch officials are expected to discuss next week a proposal that the city's Board of Education members be elected rather than appointed. The city now is the only municipality in the county in which the board is appointed by the mayor. While the suggested change certainly cannot be expected to solve all the district's school problems, it warrants full exploration.

The New Wave, a local civic group, has asked the City Council to put a referendum on the change on the ballot for the November election. The group listed several reasons why it feels the present seven-member board should be replaced with a nine-member elected body. Citizens, it feels, should have control over the board and be responsible for selecting its members. They also should have the right to vote on school budgets and bonds, it contends. To shield the school system from any involvement in city politics, it is argued, the school board should be directly answerable to the electorate, not to the mayor, and its members should be able to conduct school business in complete freedom, without fear of interference from the mayor or council.

It is likely that an elected board would provide a school government more responsible to the electorate. Still, the plan is not to be rushed into. Our experience has been that the popular vote is not always the answer to the question of how best to fill positions of authority — that while solving some problems the system creates others. Thus we do not — in New Jersey and at the federal level — elect the members of the judiciary.

There is recent precedent for the Long Branch action. The Asbury Park City Council last year put the same question on its November ballot. The change was approved and Asbury Park elected its board for the first time last March.

The Long Branch proposal merits study — a full study that will consider all the advantages and disadvantages of the elective vs. appointive school board systems. Then the council will be equipped to decide whether the plan is worthy of the effort and expense of referendum.

Beach shuttle service

A shuttle bus service between Toms River and Island Beach State Park, recently inaugurated by the state, is an imaginative idea that helps solve a number of park access problems and may prove valuable in similar situations elsewhere.

With almost 10 miles of beach and an equal length of bay front, Island Beach can accommodate thousands of swimmers, sunbathers and anglers at a time. Parking, however, is limited to 1,850 vehicles, a fact that has limited utilization of the facility. Then, too, traffic can be a problem on the single-artery access-egress road — especially when the parking limit is reached and park guards are forced to turn back incoming streams of cars.

The shuttle bus appears to be the answer. To use it, park visitors leave their cars in Toms River, just off the Garden State Parkway, board the bus and ride the remaining distance — about 12 miles — to the park beaches. They save money, gasoline and the frustration of being turned away for lack of parking space. The fare, which includes park admission, is 50 cents per person. Park admission charge for motorists is $5 per car.

Public acceptance has been enthusiastic. In the first weekend of the service's operation in June, 200 used it. One month later the weekend count was 1,300 passengers. The savings in gasoline alone — and in the resultant air pollution — has to be considerable. And that many more people got to use the beach.

The shuttle bus plan was an inspiration. Now we must look for other possible applications. It might be one way of alleviating in coming years, for example, the access and parking problems already encountered in operation of the Sandy Hook unit of the Gateway Recreation Area. There must be many other potential uses for this short-haul system of mass transportation.

Federal regulators are sitting on a multimillion-dollar nuclear scandal, which has the smell of a corporate Watergate. The story is told in confidential documents that bristle with such words as "manipulations" and "black-mail."

Two commercial giants, Dow Chemical and Consumers Power, are partners in a nuclear project. Its financial foundation, however, has become shaky. This has come to the attention of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, whose rulings could cost the partnership hundreds of millions of dollars.

Consumers Power, thus confronted with a public body in its path, has sought to circumvent it. The giant utility, a la Watergate, allegedly has tried to prevent witnesses from giving information to federal investigators, has laundered testimony that might be damaging and has given the regulatory tribunal incomplete information.

Here is a corporate cat that may need a bell tied to it. But first, some background. Back in 1967, Consumers and Dow teamed up to construct a nuclear power plant in Midland, Mich. But environmentalists forced Consumers to upgrade the project's safety system. By 1977, stricter federal standards and repeated delays had shot up the cost from $350 million to an alarming $1.7 billion.

Consumers Power began to

buckle under the financial burden and its partner began to waver. Dow tried to wriggle out of the deal if the plant wasn't completed by a fixed date. But Consumers sternly warned Dow of its contractual obligations. This little disagreement strained the relations between the two companies.

Then out of the blue, a federal court ordered the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to review the project for possible safety and environmental deficiencies. The hot breath of a federal judge on their necks made the commissioners apprehensive. They would have to rule, they agreed, whether to halt construction until the review was completed.

This possibility caused panic in the backrooms of Consumers. Another construction delay might force the company to scuttle the project altogether, with staggering losses. The corporate brass were eager, therefore, to reassure the commissioners that all was well and that construction should continue.

But all was not well; differences between the two partners were boiling beneath the surface. This would not be reassuring, the Consumers executives agreed, to the regulatory commission. They tried to keep the trouble from bubbling up, therefore, from below to bother the calm surface.

At a private meeting, secret Dow documents allege, Consumers threatened to sue Dow for damages if the chemical company did not support Consumers. If anyone from Dow gave testimony that resulted in the suspension or cancellation of the construction permit, Consumers warned, Dow would be held legally responsible.

According to confidential minutes taken by a Dow attorney, he viewed the threat as "pretty damn close to blackmail." The Dow documents also show that Consumers tried to persuade Dow to produce a witness who was not aware Dow wanted to back out of the nuclear project.

When Dow refused to send an uninformed witness to NRC hearings, Consumers still drafted misleading testimony for the Dow witness. The ghostwritten version was carefully constructed not to reveal the extent of the disaffection between Consumers and Dow.

Documents also indicate that Consumers was spoon-feeding selective information to the commission staff. One confidential Dow memo quoted a Consumers lawyer as stating he planned to visit Washington "to get (the federal bureaucrats) ready to go to the hearing."

ANDERSON

At the staff level, the regulators and the regulated are in one respect like rare tropical birds. They have learned to communicate with one another through near-inaudible sounds, poses and gestures. They reach understandings through a process of almost imperceptible movements, grunts, raised eyebrows and knowing smiles. The staff investigation, not surprisingly, failed to bring out evidence that was really detrimental to Consumers.

This might have ended the matter, except for the loud objections of a tough trial and environmental attorney, Myron M. Cherry. Consumers had thought Cherry, with his limited resources, could not keep pace with the battery of company lawyers.

Explained the Dow minutes: "Consumers assumes Cherry will not appear because of lack of funds." They believe that since there is no discovery and probably no intervenor cross-examination — will be able to finesse Dow-Consumers continuing dispute.

The minutes indicate Consumers was not worried about any cross-examination by the commission but only by the crusading attorney. As it turned out, Cherry showed up, questioned Dow witnesses aggressively and unearthed crucial facts. But instead of thanking Cherry, the commission staff filed a motion, which Consumers supported, to censure him for allegedly making "personal attacks" upon the staff members.

Consumers, of course, would like nothing better than to get rid of Cherry, who singlehandedly has forced utilities to spend millions beefing up nuclear safeguards.

Footnote: The commission will rule on the Dow-Consumers project and the Cherry censure in the next few weeks. A Consumers spokesman, confronted with the documentation, conceded it was "difficult to refute" allegations that the company tried to suppress information. He insisted, nevertheless, the charges were false. "It's a lie. We did not try to conceal from the commission problems we were having with Dow," he said.

A Dow official told us, however, that some of Consumers' actions "sounded like extortion" and were "completely out of line." He insisted, nevertheless, that Dow still hopes to harness energy from the Midland plant.

A spokesman for the commission claimed the staff had conducted an adequate investigation of the Dow-Consumers dispute.

Despised by both sides

By JIM BISHOP

The druggist locked his pharmacy and went to war. The people of New Haven knew him. They weren't surprised. Benedict Arnold was a man of impulses. He was too quick, too brave, too swift of tongue.

He was short and broad, a man with a rocking horse gait. His hair was black and thick; his eyes were as pale as a Ming vase. He left the shop to Mrs. Arnold and three sons, 7, 6, and 3. "The Connecticut militia needs me," he said, which was a statement and a farewell.

Arnold was a captain of militia in April, 1775. He drilled his company up and down the state and taught them musketry and foraging. Then he met Ethan Allen. Together, they marched their combined forces up the lake country of New York and captured Fort Ticonderoga.

Benedict Arnold was a bona fide hero. So he quit the army and returned to New Haven. The drug store was failing. Mrs. Arnold had died a month before his return. He said he felt more sick than angry. He would remain at home with his sons.

THE REPORTER

The Continental Congress promoted Arnold to full colonel. They also sent $800 in British pounds. The money was left for the care of the children. Arnold returned to battle. The Redcoats beat him at Quebec, but now they knew him and feared him.

He and his men built and bought ships all winter. In the summer of 1776, Benedict Arnold fought General Carlton so fiercely that, even though the British won the engagement, Carlton sent a message to Admiral Howe and General Burgoyne that he could not join them outside New York until he had regrouped his decimated regiments.

The Second Continental Congress feared Benedict Arnold almost as much as the British did. They promoted five of his juniors as generals and left him a colonel. General George Washington was angered at the slight, and said so. Congress said it already had two major generals from Connecticut.

Arnold quit again. General Washington begged him to return to his command. He did. The colonel fought two frenzied engagements with the British, and Congress commissioned him a major general — junior, however, to five others.

To keep an eye on this impetuous fighter, Congress ordered him to Philadelphia. He had fine lodgings, a flag, a sedentary command, and the embraces of the town flirt, Miss Margaret Shippen. The lady could do more to men with blue eyes over a fluttering fan than General Arnold could with a regiment.

He married her. The bride loved uniforms and whatever was inside them. Within six months, Arnold was desperately in debt. He was ordered to be court-martialled for using his post for private gain. Arnold despaired. He was sure he was caught in a triangulated vise between his wife, his Congress and General Washington.

Arnold sent a friendly letter to General Sir Henry Clinton in New York. A secret courier brought a friendlier response.

BISHOP

Impetuously, he wrote that he was prepared to work for King and Parliament if he was given money, genuine recognition, and a commission in the British Army.

Clinton was cautious. He wanted proof of loyalty first. Benedict Arnold sent traitorous letters with information about the movements of the Continental Army, the command, supplies, weaknesses, and the strength of the French fleet sailing for the colonies.

The following summer, George Washington gave Arnold command of the plains at West Point. He surveyed the place, and sent a note to Clinton that he would betray the fort for $100,000 if he succeeded; $50,000 and a British commission if he didn't.

Clinton wanted the prize. He commissioned Major John Andre to get through the opposing lines and tell Arnold that the terms were satisfactory. The two met secretly. Benedict Arnold said that he would dispose his forces so that they could not fight well. He gave Andre the plans for West Point.

Andre carried them in his stocking. He was captured above Dobbs Ferry and hanged at a tavern in Tappan. Benedict Arnold fled in the night to General Clinton.

He was commissioned a British officer and fought against his old army up and down the coast. Arnold burned New London to the ground. He fought well for both sides.

In December, 1781, he sailed for England. He knew he was a hero. In London, military men saw him, heard his name, and spat. The King, another loser, gave Benedict Arnold $31,575 and land in Canada.

His drug store in New Haven was stoned. At 60, he died. He was bankrupt of money and, worse, character

Closing the wok works

There is a lot of curiosity about, but almost no information from, Albania. Still loyal to Stalin, the mountain-bound Albanians live in an almost totally closed Communist society.

That's why the following top-secret State Department document may be of great significance, but I can't vouch for its authenticity. It was made available to me at a suspiciously small price.

ANOTHER LOOK

"To Vance; eyes only. Ref. 7110/HC 8/8/77. 'Suggest we query CIA urgently on reports of Albania split with China. Similar rift with Russia 16 years ago came after charges that Soviets had gone soft on U.S. and had strayed from Marxist-Leninist line. Quarrel with China apparently stems from same cause.

"Albania desk flooded with rumors, many from unusually unreliable sources. Therefore need speedy investigation of following stories:

"1. Report of speech by Premier Enver Hoxha on 40th anniversary of Stalin's 'biggest purge. Hoxha reminded audience that Albania only country in world with statue of Stalin. Told citizens to contribute money for bigger statue, then launched what may have been attack on China. Referred to 'certain traitorous revisionist hyenas who go under guise of peace-loving allies.' One unreliable source quoted Hoxha as referring to 'slanty-eyed hyenas.'

"2. According to radio report monitored in Greece, all 150 Albanian workers walked out of wok works. Chinese aid technicians had reportedly criticized the quality of Albanian-made woks, saying that food cooked in them tasted like old goat meat.

"3. Official newspaper, Zeri I Popullit, carried item saying that many Chinese dishes being removed from restaurant menus. Remaining dishes must be labeled 'may be hazardous to your health.' These include bird's-nest and shark's-fin soups, sweet and sour duck's feet, smoked and shredded lizard livers, and steamed squid dumplings.

"4. Yugoslav sources say that Chinese books have been removed from stores in capital city of Tirana. Only book still available is said to be 'Cooking for Gang of Four,' by Chiang Ching, disgraced widow of Mao Tse-tung.

"5. Rumors from several sources refer to serious dispute between Albanian Army commanders and Chinese military advisors over the tenth consecutive misfiring of a PPM (Punk-Propelled Missile), which resulted in test goat being parachuted into middle of a ceremony marking Stalin's birthday.

"(Other rumors hold that Hoxha has blamed Chinese for selling Albania outmoded military equipment, including damp firecrackers for the Artillery Corps and old fortune cookies for Army Intelligence Service.)

"6. Bitter diplomatic exchange reported as result of shipment to China of raki, potent Albanian national drink. Chinese tanker containing 100,000 gallons of the powerful liquor sank off coast of Indonesia.

"Raki spill annihilated fish, birds, and other shore creatures for miles around, causing official Indonesian protest. Chinese claim that raki corroded hull of tanker. Albanians claim tanker made of bamboo and rice glue.

"7. Chinese Ping-Pong team said by our sports desk to have returned to Peking in the middle of tournament marred by outbursts and goat-dung throwing from highly partisan Albanian audience. Ping-Pong series between the two countries, now in its 16th year, stands at China 87, Albania 0.

"It is also believed that Albanian Ping-Pong team, made up equally of northern Ghegs and southern Tosks, has not been invited to the annual Everlasting Peace Through Socialist Sports Solidarity Games in Peking.

"8. Last week Albanian army reportedly put on red alert, which involved issuing shoes, canteen of raki, and real bullets."

Leading Roman Catholic thinkers cite reform needs

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
NEW YORK (AP) — Some international gadflies of Roman Catholicism sat around the big table, articulate, brainy, congenial, talking of the way they felt the church should go to deepen its influence in the world.

"The present system just is not functioning at all," said the Rev. Hans Kung, a noted Swiss theologian. "But the conservatives in Rome prefer not to do anything about it."

"Probably they are afraid," observed the Rev. Petr Huizing, a Dutch canon law expert.

The Rev. Jacques-Marie Pohier, a French moral theologian, said, "There must be a change in balance from the Roman Curia to the local churches."

"The leadership," added a German theologian, the Rev. Johannes Baptist Metz, "must be understood in a more administrative rather than juristic (legalizing) way."

The four, gathered for a news conference here, had just come from a conference at the University of Notre Dame of leading Roman Catholic thinkers on further reforms needed in the church.

About 70 scholars had been there, including top intellectual luminaries from this country and abroad. Among them were the 30 board members of "Concilium," an international publishing project which annually issues 10 volumes at the forefront of contemporary Catholic thought.

At the Manhattan offices of Seabury Press, which produces the flow of exploratory books on doctrine, liturgy, morality and social issues, the four prominent Catholic professors reviewed the present climate.

"It's a process of collision and purification," said Father Metz of the University of Munster in West Germany, a dark-haired man in an open shirt collar, citing the current church strains between conservatives and progressives.

Father Pohier of the University of Paris, a balding, gray-suited man, suggested that church attempts "to impose uniform, worldwide sexual rules may be undercutting greater obligations."

"Maybe control of sexual activity is as important as the church thought," he remarked. Citing needs to fight exploitation and injustice, he said, "Maybe this is more important than sexual life."

"Law is made for members of the church — members are not made for the law," said Father Huizing of the Catholic University of the Netherlands at Nijmegen. "It is to guard people."

Spectacles underlining his high forehead, he said it was essential to "change the image" of a pyramid-ruled church governed from top downward.

"It can't anymore work efficiently in this way," he said. He said its initiatives must flow from local churches working together, across denominational lines.

Father Kung, who teaches at the University in West Germany, his blond hair swept back, said, "A lot is going on at local church levels without approval. It will help church authorities to acknowledge reality."

The four said the Notre Dame conference, held under the title of "Toward Vatican III" and the work needed to be done before another reforming council to follow Vatican II of 1962-65, brought out a consensus favoring these changes:

- Acknowledgment of the ministry of Protestant churches as valid and affirmation of intercommunion with them.
- Local elections of bishops, a reduction of the power of the church's central government, the Roman Curia, and an age limit for popes.
- Modification of the doctrine of "papal infallibility," an authority only used once, and which the scholars unanimously predicted will never be used again.

- Revocation of the church's prohibition against contraception.
- Admission to communion of divorced, remarried Catholics.

— Making priestly celibacy optional and admission of women to the priesthood.

"The church is still living in the time before the French Revolution," said Father Kung. "It's possible things could get worse, but I don't see how. They're already bad enough."

But if the next pope is open to present urgencies, he added, "relationships may be dramatically changed."

NCC is accused of hypocrisy

By THE REV. LESTER KINSOLVING

WASHINGTON — The United Church of Korean evangelist Sun Myong Moon "is not a Christian church," according to the Commission on Faith and Order of the National Council of Churches (NCC).

Moreover, the study document prepared by this commission — written principally by Sister Agnes Cunningham, SSCM, president of the Catholic Theological Society — holds that many of the Moon church's teachings "are incompatible with Christian belief and foster anti-Semitism."

Sister Agnes was assisted in preparing this document by the NCC's Dr. Jorge Lara-Braud and Methodist theologian J. Robert Nelson.

The impact of this incisive study is blunted however, by remembrance of one of the sterner admonitions of Jesus Christ:

"Thou hypocrite! First cast the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast the mote out of thy brother's eye."

—St. Matthew, Chapter 7, verse 5

If there is a mote (speck) of anti-Semitism in the teachings of Sun Myong Moon, surely there is an enormous beam in the eye of the National Council of Churches. For contrary to a completely erroneous and misleading headline in the New York Times, a twice-convicted Nazi war criminal, Romanian Archbishop Valerian Trifa, remains a member of the NCC's governing board.

NCC President William P. Thompson of the United Presbyterian Church refused to allow Dr. Charles Kremer of the Romanian Jewish Federation of America even 15 minutes on the agenda of the NCC meeting in Cincinnati to speak on the issue of Trifa — whom Dr. Kremer has been tracking for three decades.

"The matter relating to Archbishop Trifa has been concluded," wrote Thompson, who added that the issue concerning Trifa — who is under federal indictment on charges of lying to obtain U.S. citizenship — "is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Orthodox Church of America."

Replied Dr. Kremer to NCC President Thompson:

"As far as our committee, the Concerned Jewish Youth, other related organizations including rabbinical bodies and the Committee of Nazi Survivors are concerned, we do not consider the Trifa matter 'concluded.' Indeed, we intend to concentrate on this concern until the NCC properly resolves this critical issue."

"We strongly believe that in light of this failure and evasion of moral responsibility that the National Council of Churches has abdicated its right to speak out as a force for morality in our community. It is tragic that the NCC continues to drag its feet, lacking the conscience or moral will to remove a Nazi criminal from its midst."

As evidence of the fact that Dr. Kremer is quite correct in his statement that the Trifa issue is by no means "concluded," the annual meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis in June took up the Trifa case and unanimously resolved that "the obscenity persists" by which the NCC continues to harbor Trifa.

The Jewish Post, which covered this meeting, also reported that the rabbis gave this column "a standing ovation; for leading a campaign to persuade the National Council of Churches to expel Trifa from its Board."

Police acting to spread Gospel

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sgt. Jim Higgins, a 29-year-old veteran of the San Francisco Police Department, expresses despair at the "macho image" of insensitive, hard-drinking, boisterous policemen.

"A man can get a heart of stone doing police work and his love for others shrivels up and drifts away," said Higgins.

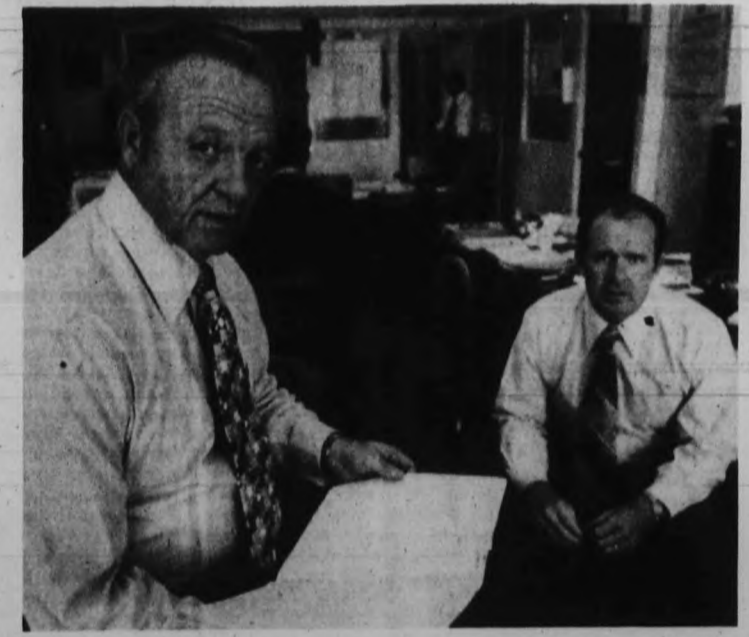

The burly sergeant is deeply involved in a small but growing group of law enforcement agents who have formed the Fellowship of Christian Peace Officers. Twenty-five officers belong to the San Francisco chapter with other units in Oakland, Los Angeles and other cities.

Sgt. Art Brandwood, president of the fellowship's 10-member Oakland chapter, said trying to spread the Gospel among policemen is a difficult challenge.

He said many officers look on Christianity as "a weakness, a crutch that's all right for women, children and old people — but not for the rugged, he-man type of guy."

However, Brandwood said "God is dealing with that attitude" through the example of others in police ranks who are respected for physical prowess and proven ability as cops "and who still love and serve Christ."

Higgins and his partner, Sgt. Jim Crowley, made an appeal for prayers last October on the Virginia-based Christian Television Network. They decried San Francisco as a "wicked city that needs all the prayers it can get."

Their religious message to anyone who will listen involves an evangelical attack on pornography, drug addiction, homosexuality and San Francisco's high rate of alcoholism, suicide and venereal disease.

Last summer, Crowley got embroiled in a public spat with his own chief, Charles Gain, when Gain urged gay policemen to come out of the closet.

The husky Crowley said he considered homosexuals as "the deceived who are deceiving others and leading them down the path to Satan. Only Jesus can break that bondage."

Crowley and Higgins said they pray daily that Gain and Mayor George Moscone will "finally come to the Lord."

San Francisco is a particularly fertile city for religious reawakening Crowley said, "because any vocal minority can find a politician willing to change the law, rather than enforce it. The Bible says the law was not meant for the righteous man, but for the wicked. If we keep going the way we are, we'll soon be rapist."

Rome Krishna temple claims large following

ROME (AP) — Krishna, the Indian god, has found a home in Rome despite some police frowning and a cool attitude by the Vatican. Krishna's worshippers claim hundreds of followers in the Pope's backyard.

Two young women — an American and an Italian — and a Scotsman introduced the cult in Rome three years ago when they lived for several months in a youth hostel.

Now they have a "temple" in a rented, spacious, two-story villa in a park just outside the ancient Aurelian walls off the Caracalla Baths.

"People are fairly interested; we do not meet excessive difficulties with Romans," Alida D'Ambrosio, 24, the Italian founder of the Rome temple, said in an interview.

"The only serious problem we have is with police. They do not like to see us dancing, chanting and preaching in the historical center of Rome," she said.

Recently, a dozen of her followers in ankle-length Indian garments took their "Hare Krishna" dance and chant into St. Peter's Square under the windows of Pope Paul's apartment, but police promptly urged them away.

"Every time they see us, police order us away," Miss D'Ambrosio said. "We obey — then next time we go back."

The other founders have left for India. They were Pamela Borden, from Madison, Wis., and David Naysmith, from Edinburgh, Scotland.

The residents of the Rome temple, who have devoted their life to preaching and proselytizing, number about 50, ranging from 20 to 35 in age, Miss D'Ambrosio said. About one third are women.

The cult's world leader, His Divine Grace A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, tried in vain to be received by the Pope when he came to Rome in 1975. He was granted a meeting with Sergio Cardinal Pignedoli, head of the Vatican Secretariat for Non-Catholic Religions. There have been no other contacts with the Vatican or Italian Roman Catholic prelates since, Miss D'Ambrosio said.

Prabhupada told the Cardinal that Catholics should stop killing and eating animals if they wanted to become good worshippers. He said Christ was just another name of Krishna and that the commandment "Thou shalt not kill" refers to animals as well as to humans.

who have known us for years, like our wives, can see the change," he said. "My life is great now."

"The things that used to be so important, putting the career first, ahead of everything, going out and drinking with the boys, having a ball, all have vanished. It's all gone through the mercy of Jesus."

Planning for your retirement

By SYLVIA PORTER
(First of a series)

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

If you are in sufficient physical and mental health, you'll begin another career — and the odds are if you are young today, you'll have two or more careers in your lifetime. If you want just to play, that too you must plan for now.

The cost of living for a retired couple jumped another 7 per cent in 1976 alone, and in some sections of the U.S. annual living expenses of the average retired couple are now as high as $11,000 — excluding personal income taxes.

Even though in other areas, a retired couple can live on an annual income as low as $4,373, one out of every four elderly Americans now lives in poverty. And for those who live to age 75, the proportion living in poverty is a startling 50 per cent.

Despite all threats, it would be far too pessimistic to expect a return to double-digit inflation in the U.S. for any prolonged period, if at all. That would imply an unreasonable repetition of a disastrous combination of adverse forces.

Inflation of that magnitude not only pinches the working family. It fiercely erodes the buying value of your Social Security dollars, your private pension benefits, any other savings you have in fixed-income investments (insurance, cash savings).

Instead of the relaxed, comfortable years pictured in the unreal-life ads, you may find your retirement years an economic nightmare. And this may be piled on top of the "shock" of retirement — which ranks in a high ninth place in a list of 40 leading "stress" producers, not far behind "death of a spouse."

What, then, should you do NOW?

If you are in your 20s or 30s, now is the right time to begin to think and prepare for independence in your 60s-70s.

If you are in your 50s, now is the time you MUST plan in earnest for your financial security. You are very late but not yet too late to manage your older years properly.

If you are in your 60s, you are almost surely too late to prepare for your maximum benefit. You've drifted into a position where you are fighting from weakness, not strength.

You must ask yourself at least these 10 key questions.

1. When will you retire? At 65 or sooner? Even today, a man retiring at 65 can look forward to a life expectancy of another 13 years, and his slightly younger wife can expect to live an average of nearly 20 more years.

2. Will you lead a life of leisure or continue to work?

Q — I still have a profit in Franklin Mint (NYSE), but it is rapidly disappearing. Should I sell, hold or buy more? S. G. Hawaii

A — This company's gold-plated growth record has lost its glitter and management has lost some credibility. The mid-May announcement that second quarter earnings would trail those of a year ago came as a shock to investors and the share plummeted. Over the last 5 years, earnings had grown about 40 per cent annually, and only two weeks earlier management had predicted higher earnings for the period.

Sellers drive market down

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's midweek rally collapsed yesterday under new selling pressure that drove the Dow Jones industrial average to its lowest close since the first trading session of 1976.

Evidence of credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve and rising interest rates were blamed for the market's renewed weakness.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips, which had risen 7.62 Wednesday, edged up about 2 more in the first few minutes yesterday.

But it did an about-face at that point, and closed with a 9.61 loss at 877.43, its lowest level since it finished at 858.71 on Jan. 2, 1976. Losers outnumbered gainers by a 4-3 margin on the New York Stock Exchange after trailing by more than 2 to 1 early in the day, and the NYSE's composite index fell 32 to 53.77.

Big Bond volume increased to 21.74 million shares from 18.28 million Wednesday. Things looked pretty cheery for the market as the day began, with the government reporting that the Wholesale Price Index declined 0.1 per cent in July on the heels of a 0.7 per cent drop the month before.

Magician's conviction for selling lock picks upheld

By JOAN KAHN
FREEHOLD — County Court Judge William T. Wichmann yesterday upheld the municipal court conviction of magician Douglas C. Keller Jr., who was found guilty of selling illegal lockpicks at the House of Magic, White St., Red Bank.
 Keller was fined $50 and $10 costs in Red Bank Municipal Court, along with $15 county court costs for violating a 1971 state statute that provides penalties for persons who sell a device for opening or starting a car without an ignition key.

 "The court concedes that these devices are capable of operating in use other than auto locks, but clearly from the testimony, they can be used to open a motor vehicle, and this represents a violation," said Judge Wichmann.

 "It is this court's opinion that the legislature intended to prohibit these types of devices," the judge said.
 New testimony was heard yesterday from a bonded, registered locksmith, after Keller's attorney, Louis Alfonso, had asked for a new trial because of what he said was hearsay evidence that was presented in the municipal court May 11.

 During the municipal court trial, James Tomaini, a county detective, testified that after he purchased the lockpick set, a local locksmith told him the picks could be used to open any car except those made by General Motors.

Under questioning, the locksmith, Theodore Rissmiller, of Howell Township, said he was able to open a Mercury car door last week in less than one minute, using a lockpick purchased at Keller's shop.
 Mr. Rissmiller, although acknowledging that General Motors cars often needed an additional tool before being entered, said he had also opened them with the picks.

Trained persons, the locksmith said, could open 95 per cent of locks on General Motors cars which contain a sidebar lock, by using both a pick and a turning wrench.
 "Would you have been able to open that car with a bobby pin, if you had time?" asked Mr. Alfonso.
 "Yes, I believe that I would if I had sufficient time," Mr.

Rissmiller acknowledged.
 The locksmith testified that picks were made for general use to open all locks, but in some cases additional equipment or expertise would be needed.
 While Chrysler cars contain a pin-tumble lock which can be easily opened with picks, General Motors cars install a sidebar device that requires additional tools for opening.

In some autos, a slaphammer is used, the locksmith said, which allows forced entry into the vehicle. A cylinder puller can gain entry into vehicles with cylinder locks while a slim jim is used only for auto door entries. Try out keys are also used for general use on all locks, he said.
 All of the items, the locksmith said, may be used by professional locksmiths, or thieves to gain entry to premises or cars.
 Ordinarily, Mr. Rissmiller said, he would use a slim jim tool for operating a car's ignition, but if he was trying to gain entry to the trunk he would use a pick.
 "What tool to use would depend on the lock," he said.
 Mr. Alfonso contended that there were a wide variety of auto opening tools which could be used, but some devices called for a greater degree of skill or training to open a car door's lock.
 After the fine was upheld, Keller said that selling lockpicks was a minor portion of his magic business. Many magicians, he said, used lockpicks in their acts for escaping when bound with chains. He said the cost of the lockpicks varied from $5 to $50.

Genola challenges denial of housing plan variance

FREEHOLD — Genola Ventures-Shrewsbury has filed a suit challenging Shrewsbury's denial of its application to construct a 345-unit clustered residential development of an 118-acre tract off Rt. 35.
 In its suit, the developer of 20 Avenue at the Common, Shrewsbury, traced its efforts to develop the property since it purchased it in 1965.

family homes on lots with a minimum lot area of 45,000 square feet and a frontage of 150 feet, said the suit. The R-1 residential zone, where the property is located, permits construction of single family dwellings and accessory uses. The ordinance does not permit multi-family attached or semi-attached buildings in any zone, said the suit.
 The suit says the developer in 1966 had presented a proposal for construction of a planned unit development but that the planning board rejected the plan in November 1967.

a principal of the firm bought five of the lots and constructed single family homes on them. Four of the homes were sold at a loss and the fifth remains unsold, maintained the suit.
 The firm in 1975 submitted a plan to the planning board and council for rezoning of the 133 acres so it could construct a complex of 808 dwelling units, said the suit. It added that the planning board retained a professional planning consultant who recommended last year that the property be rezoned but that neither the planning board nor the council have acted upon the proposal.

nance is confiscatory and unconstitutional as it pertains to the Genola tract and to direct municipality to issue building permits for the firm's project.
 The legal action, filed by Wendall A. Smith of Newark, further maintains that the zoning ordinance is unduly restrictive and limits the type of housing which can be constructed in the borough and blocks low and moderate income families from residing there.
 It further maintains that the zoning ordinance does not make it economically possible to provide an appropriate variety and choice of housing for the borough's fair share of residents in the region and that it does not permit construction of least cost housing.

Concerning its latest application, which the Zoning Board of Adjustment denied July 19, the developer said that it had established that the application could be approved without substantial detriment to the public good and without substantially impairing the intent and purpose of the zone plan and zoning ordinance.
 The suit contends the developer had applied for variances to permit a development of single family residential units at a proposed density of three units per acre on lot sizes of 7,500 and 10,000 square feet.
 The zoning ordinance restricts development of single

The developer said that Borough Council May 13, 1969 amended the zoning ordinance which zoned 87 of the 220 acres of the land that the firm owned, excluding the subject premises, from residential use to commercial.
 The suit maintains that the developer was unsuccessful in selling the land as raw land in 1969 and in 1972 had gained final subdivision approval to create 36 lots of one acre each. When the firm was unsuccessful in selling the lots,

The suit maintains that it is not economically feasible to develop the 133 acres as presently zoned. It charged that the zone classification does not consider the character of the land that enforcement of the classification would deny the firm any fair or reasonable economic return on its substantial economic investment.
 The suit wants the court to declare that the zoning ordi-

It further maintains that the zoning ordinance does not make it economically possible to provide an appropriate variety and choice of housing for the borough's fair share of residents in the region and that it does not permit construction of least cost housing.
 The suit wants the court to direct the borough to adopt land use regulations for a reasonably well-balanced and well-ordered plan for the community and to provide for a fair share of its obligation to meet the housing needs of its own population and that of the region.

Music is therapy for once-shy beauty

Freda Payne

By EMILY WILKENS

Freda Payne, the sexy, sensational black singer, is all for Women's Lib.

"There are lots of things to be gained," she said, "but there's one thing we don't want to lose. That's our femininity."

Freda couldn't lose it if she tried. She's femininity itself, with a sexiness that's underlined by her sultry voice. Recently, when she played New York's favorite night spot, the Rainbow Grill, she held the crowd spellbound.

It's hard to believe, but the singer who's acclaimed wherever she appears was once so painfully shy that, when she was a child, her parents took her to a psychologist for advice on how to bring her out of her shell. That shell was discarded long ago.

Music was the therapy that awakened this sleeping beauty, took her out of self, and eventually made her a star.

"My piano teacher encouraged me to play and sing," she told me. "I didn't realize I had any talent." But she loved entertaining and "I was turned on by applause." It gave Freda a sense of security, making her forget herself in the pleasure of pleasing others. And she's been pleasing them ever since with her appearances in top night clubs across the U.S. and Europe, and on top TV variety shows.

A NEW YOU

Freda travels a great deal. It takes stamina. "I guess the key to keeping fit," she said, "is getting enough sleep and exercise, and eating healthful food."

Her diet's high in fresh fruit and vegetables and she loves to dine in Japanese restaurants because raw fish is one of her favorites. Freda supplements her diet by adding protein powder to her orange juice every a.m.

MAKEUP FAVORITES

Her skin is a light and creamy café au lait. "I use a base," she said, "and like cream shadow and cream rouge to make my skin shine."

Freda uses Capucci's Yendi perfume as her signature.

"I apply it to all the sensual spots," she said, "behind the ears, on the stomach, under the arms, under the breasts. If my gown isn't silk, I spray it with a light film of perfume. I like to exude a perfume aura."

It emphasizes her intrinsic femininity.

In her short but successful career, Freda's racked up one record success after another. Her first big hit was "Band of Gold," and her last best-selling album, "Out of Payne comes Love." She has appeared in films and has had several dramatic roles on TV.

Freda likes change. Often it starts at the top with her hairdo. She likes to change the style. Sometimes it's sleeked back, twisted into a topknot, or worn long and fluffed out.

Freda's hobby is cooking for her husband, Gregory Abbott, the songwriter, teacher and actor whom she married December 1, 1976. Her specialty is steak Puerto Rican style.

JUST FOR YOU: One reason Freda Payne moves so sensuously: She practices yoga every day. "Exercise stimulates the body," she said, "and gets all those muscles into play. That's important to me because when I sing, I don't just sing with my voice. I put everything I have into it. My entire body is working. You can't mouth words, you've got to put yourself into the lyrics."

Interpersonal problems may be traced to past

By DR. JAMES M. LONG

"Dear Dr. Long:

Your recent article about female sexual dysfunctions worried me. It seems that the reason for the problem is a poor relationship between husband and wife. This is not always true. I have a problem reaching an orgasm, but this has nothing to do with my love for my husband. Other than in bed, we have an excellent marriage."

You are perfectly right, sexual problems are not experienced exclusively within an unhappy marriage. In all interpersonal problems the yardstick to evaluate a relationship is based on how each spouse feels. For example, there may be little sex activity between a couple, but there is no disruption in their relationship. Therefore, it would not be accurate to describe their sexual response as inadequate. It seems that the letter writer is saying one thing but she means something else. Her comment, "Other than in bed" indicates some dissatisfaction.

Probably the most common female disturbance in marriage is the woman's inability to experience an orgasm. Organic dysfunctions can be broken down into two distinct areas. A primary organic dysfunction represents a condition wherein a woman has never experienced an orgasm. However, if the disorder developed after she had experienced an orgasm then it is referred to as a secondary organic dysfunction.

Quite often a woman who suffers from this difficulty has a good sex drive and is able to enjoy the pleasures of sex, but she does not enjoy complete satisfaction. This problem may be because she was brought up in a home where sex was repressed, and she is unable to respond to a husband because of parental attitudes. Parents who foster the idea that sex is evil will, of course, contribute to future difficulties for their daughter.

Fear and anxiety can be associated with many conscious or unconscious elements that inhibit sexual performance. Hostility and aggression toward men can be based on fears that a strong emotional commitment is dangerous. Some dominant and aggressive women see sexual pleasure as yielding to men; therefore, they reject their femininity.

Unhealthy parental attachments can also cause conflict and guilt. In childhood, an over-attachment to a mother or an unresolved father/daughter relationship are destructive factors in a marriage. The unconscious comparison of the husband and the father can cause basic dysfunctions. The failure to relate sexually to one's husband is a defense against earlier infantile sexual wishes. After marriage, the wife is unable to separate the two because her anxiety and guilt prevent any type of sexual satisfaction.

Another more frequent reason for sexual failure is the woman's hostility and anger toward men. These feelings invade her thoughts. The original source of her anger was probably her father whom she viewed in a negative way. Unfortunately, as a result, her sexual behavior lacks responsiveness.

A woman with problems may also fear loss of control. Based on patterns learned early in life, the wife who has grown with the determination to control her thoughts and emotions is not able to appreciate the sex act. Therefore, the wall that she has created prevents complete sexual satisfaction.

Many women are not consciously aware of the negative feelings which affect their sexuality; but these causes are traceable to the past. Therefore, it is necessary to assist the woman to recognize her negative sexual learning and to help her to develop a more acceptable attitude towards sexuality. Sometimes it is helpful to have the husband become involved in the learning process. The willingness for couples to recognize a marital problem is important. If they seek a solution together, it encourages open communication which will ultimately yield excellent results.

In problem free marriages, the sexual dysfunction may be eliminated quickly as the symptom is treated and the cause is left alone.

Individuals can be helped to enjoy sex in their marital union. Couples today do not suffer needlessly; they try to do all they can to enjoy the pleasures of their marriage.

Dr. Long will be happy to answer any questions directed to him by mail in care of The Daily Register, One Register Plaza, Shrewsbury, N.J. 07701. Confidentiality will be respected.

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Here's how to "process" your own skinny cheese spreads — without a crockful of unwanted calories.

Begin with nearly no-fat pot cheese (that's cottage cheese without a lot of cream calories or liquid added). Whip it up in a blender or food processor with flavor-adders like garlic, onion, pepper, mustard, Worcestershire, Tabasco and zesty seasonings.

Serve your skinny spreads in a small brown crock, the kind left over from the fattening spreads. Lowfat pot cheese is 99 per cent fat-free (check the label!) while most processed cheese spreads are 20 per cent fat or more and about 50 calories a tablespoon.

SLIM GOURMET

A food processor can make short work of spreads. It used to be that only well-heeled cooks could afford to tinker around with food processors, but there are affordable American versions that do the job just as well as the fancy imports — and for far fewer dollars. A food processor's steel chopping blade can mince ingredients in a few seconds flat, then whip pot cheese into "cream cheese" almost as fast as you can turn it on and off.

Lacking a food processor, you can still make these spreads in a blender. Chop, shred or grate the solid ingredients by hand, whip the pot cheese smooth in the blender, then add the minced ingredients. Blend only till combined. (Thick mixes are more difficult to remove from a blender than from a food processor.)

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD I

1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
one-half teaspoon salt or garlic salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 radishes
one-half small onion, peeled one-quarter of a sweet bell pepper, seeded

IN BLENDER: Blend cheese, salt and Worcestershire smooth. Mince or chop vegetables BY HAND and blend into cheese.

IN FOOD PROCESSOR: Chop vegetables using metal chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend just until mixed. Spoon into small crock or covered refrigerator bowl. Keep chilled. Makes about one and one-third cups, under 10 calories per tablespoon.

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD II

(Adapted from the Faberware Food Processor Recipe Guide)

2 cups 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese one-half teaspoon dry mustard, or 1 teaspoon prepared one-half teaspoon salt or celery salt, to taste

pinch of pepper
2 large radishes, quartered one-half small cucumber or zucchini, in one-inch lengths one-half small bell pepper, seeded 1 small onion, peeled and quartered
4 pimento-stuffed green Spanish olives, halved

IN BLENDER: Blend cottage cheese, mustard, salt and pepper smooth. BY HAND mince or chop vegetables fine, then add to blender. Process only till mixed.

IN FOOD PROCESSOR: Chop vegetables using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and process only until smooth. Store in small crocks or covered bowl in the refrigerator. Makes about two and one-half cups, 10 calories per tablespoon.

MOCK BOURSIN

1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
one-half teaspoon salt, or to taste
2 or 3 sprigs parsley
1 clove garlic, peeled

IN BLENDER: Beat cheese and salt smooth (will be thick). Mince parsley and garlic and blend into cheese.

IN FOOD PROCESSOR: Chop garlic and parsley using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend smooth. Store in covered crock in refrigerator. Makes one cup, about 10 calories per tablespoon.

INDIAN CHEESE SPREAD

1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese one-half cucumber, peeled one-half teaspoon cumin seeds one-half teaspoon salt or garlic salt, to taste pinch of black pepper
pinch of red pepper

IN BLENDER: First shred the cucumber, using a hand shredder. Set aside 10 to 20 minutes, then pour off any accumulated moisture. Combine remaining ingredients in blender and blend smooth. Add cucumber and blend only until mixed.

IN FOOD PROCESSOR: Shred cucumber using the fine shredding disc. Remove and set aside 10 to 20 minutes. Meanwhile, replace shredding disc with steel chopping blade. Put remaining ingredients in processor and whip smooth. Drain shredded cucumber. Add to cheese and blend only until mixed. Store in covered dish in refrigerator. (Good with tortilla chips!) Makes about one and one-half cups, about 7 calories per tablespoon.

Be an entertaining hostess with "decalorized" dips. Make your own mock sour cream at only half the calories! Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to Slim Gourmet Party Dips, in care of the Red Bank Register, Sparta, N.J., 07871.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a healthy, normal, 16-year-old high school girl with a problem I have never seen mentioned in your column before. It's my mother — but not the usual mother-daughter stuff. Hear this:

Mom never finished high school. She has decided to go back — in September. With ME. She thinks it's neat to be going to school during the day instead of at night like most older people who want to get a diploma.

I'm dreading the next year something awful. If Mom is in any of my classes I will just die. Can you imagine what it would be like to have your own mother sitting there with all your friends, trying to be one of the gang?

I've tried to talk her out of it but she says, "You ought to be proud of me." Well, I'm not proud. I am dying inside. Tell me how to handle this. I need to get my head ready. — Off The Wall In Washington

Dear Off: Some daughters would not mind if their mothers decided to go to school with them, but since you do I think it's too bad she didn't respect your feelings. Stuck is stuck, honey, so be a good sport. This, too, shall pass. In fact, you might look back at the whole thing in a few years as a hilarious episode.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a word of encouragement for that minister who was feeling guilty because he went ahead and performed the marriage ceremony for a couple he didn't think would make it.

It seems the groom got cold feet at the last minute — he wanted to back out but the bride and her family raised such a fuss he reluctantly agreed to go ahead and marry her. It was the minister's wife who wrote about his "guilty conscience" and asked other clergymen to express themselves. This letter is for her.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Woman: Please tell your husband's conscience to shut up. No minister is so wise he can predict which marriages will succeed and which will fail. Only God knows that.

The couple's final decision was to get married and your husband carried out their request. In no way is he responsible if they later regret the decision and the marriage breaks up. Sign me — Forty-Two Years A Presbyterian Pastor. A. Taylor Dunlap — Tukwila, Wash.

Dear Rev.: Thanks for the day-brightener. I agree with you completely — and so did about 400 other clergymen of all faiths.

Dear Ann: I've got to write this before I cool down and chicken out. Twice in the past two weeks our 17-year-old son's friends have come to our door looking for a place to sleep because their own parents locked them out.

Two of the boys are brothers. Their parents are well-to-do. The kids have had all the things money can buy and no guidance. The other boy doesn't get along with his dad. His mother told him to stay away "for your own good" because "if your father finds you here he might do

FAIR HAVEN CRASH — Three persons were injured when a car was in collision with a hardware store van, right rear, at the intersection of Fair Haven Road and Third St., Fair Haven, yesterday afternoon. Police said the van struck the car on the passenger side as it pulled onto Fair Haven Road, and pushed it into a telephone pole, at left.

Three hurt in crash

FAIR HAVEN — Three persons were injured in a collision between a van and a car at Fair Haven Road and Third St. shortly before 4 p.m. yesterday.

In fair condition at Riverview Hospital, Red Bank, are George F. Boyle, 59, of 30 Shafer Lane, Freehold, the driver of the car; and his two passengers, Jeanne E. Kudlack, 50, of 3 Morris St., Freehold; and her 16 year old daughter Sindri.

Police Sgt. Robert J. O'Neill said that a Fair Haven Hardware store van, driven by Harry S. Allen, 18, of 27 Williams St., here, was traveling south on Fair Haven Road when it was in collision with the Boyle car, which was turning right out of Laurel Ave.

The impact pushed in the passenger side of the Boyle car, a light green Cadillac, and forced it across the road, where it struck a telephone pole at the corner of Fair Haven Road and Third Ave.

Mr. Allen, a hardware store employe, was not injured in the accident.

The three occupants of the Boyle car were taken to Riverview by the Fair Haven First Aid Squad.

No summonses have been issued pending further investigation, Sgt. O'Neill said.

Unemployment rate same in N.Y., N.J.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bureau of Labor Statistics said yesterday that the unemployment rate in the metropolitan New York-New Jersey area in June remained at 8.6 per cent, unchanged from the previous month.

That figure, however, was down 2.4 percentage points from June of last year, said Herbert Beinstock, regional commissioner of the federal agency.

TINTON FALLS — The Board of Education is seeking two teachers to work with pre-school children with mental, physical or social impairments.

Parkway plagued by drunk drivers

WOODBIDGE (AP) — A record number of drivers were charged with drunken driving on the Garden State Parkway during the first seven months of this year, the New Jersey Highway Authority said Thursday.

Five hundred motorists so far have been charged with the offense, about 61 per cent more than last year when a total of 788 persons were charged for the entire year, said William F. Smith, authority commissioner.

they enter the school system. Children enrolled in PREP attend the borough schools four days a week for 2 1/2 hour daily sessions.

At the board's regular session Wednesday, it hired Jean Mahoney and Anna Andresen as head teachers in the program. However, two positions as assistant teachers remain open due to a resignation and staff reassignment. The salary for each assistant teacher is $6,500.

In other personal matters, the board hired Katherine

Wilson and Amy Ming at annual salaries of $7,900 to teach special remedial math and reading classes. These classes are funded by a federal program known as Title I. Aldona Jacko was hired to teach in the same program on a half-time basis for a $3,950 annual salary.

The board also approved the first set of student citizenship guidelines in its history to outline procedures for student suspensions and expulsions. Essentially, the guidelines provide for hearings before a school administrator or the full board before such disciplinary action is imposed on a student.

In other action, Joseph X. Seaman, a Perth Amboy auditor, made no recommendations to the board for improvement in his annual audit.

Mr. Seaman said that all board purchasing and fiscal policies were in order, crediting Michael Hammer, board administrator, for conducting operations in a manner that required Mr. Seaman to list no areas for improvement in his written audit.

Attorney general gets files of Rackmill case

By ANN BRENOFF

FREEHOLD — The records and files of the Sharon Rackmill case were released under subpoena yesterday to the state Attorney General's Office.

The state Board of Medical Examiners announced that it would reopen the case where Dr. Ruben Seda-Morales, formerly chief of staff at Freehold Area Hospital, was found innocent of negligence or malpractice in his treatment of the 10-year-old girl, who succumbed to an asthma attack on March 4, 1976.

According to hospital records, Sharon Rackmill was brought to the hospital's emergency room and was admitted by telephone by Dr. Seda-Morales.

But the physician refused to come to the hospital, and the child died approximately six hours after first being admitted to Freehold and while being transferred to another hospital.

Steven Kern, a deputy attorney general assigned to the state Board of Medical Examiners, said that all hospital records and the legal files of Ronald Sage, the Rackmill family attorney, had been subpoenaed by his office. Mr. Sage confirmed that he had handed over all his records under subpoena and was "waiting" for the outcome of the board's second look at the case.

The Daily Register

SHREWSBURY, N. J. FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1977 13

The N. Y. Daily News reported today that during most of the six hours that Dr. Seda-Morales refused to go to the hospital to attend to the patient, he was talking on the telephone with a woman co-worker he later married.

Hours after the 10-year-old girl died, according to the report, Dr. Seda-Morales and the woman, Toni Steen of Freehold, met in the living room of her home and — in the presence of her husband — agreed to explain his refusal to go to the hospital by saying that he was sick at home.

The report quoted Leonard Steen as saying, "They invented the story about him being sick right in front of me. He had to have a logical excuse why he didn't go to the hospital."

Mrs. Steen worked as the business manager of Dr.

Seda-Morales' pediatrics group in Freehold. The doctor frequently visited the Steen home, Mr. Steen said.

"My wife and I were happily married at the time, or so I thought," the News quotes Mr. Steen as saying.

However, according to the newspaper account, Mr. Steen said he later discovered that his wife and Dr. Seda-Morales maintained an apartment at the Twin Rivers complex in East Windsor Township, half an hour's drive from Freehold.

According to Bucks County, Pa., court records, Dr. Seda-Morales married the 47-year-old Mrs. Steen in Langhorne, Pa., on Dec. 21, 1976.

At the time he was still legally wed to his wife in Colts Neck, the doctor and Mrs. Steen then returned to their spouses in New Jersey.

The marriage remained secret until April 13, when Dr. Seda-Morales phoned his first wife in Colts Neck and told her that he was leaving the country and planned to divorce her.

It is believed that Dr. Seda-Morales is living in either Brazil or Louisiana now.

The Board of Medical Examiners has the power to revoke a doctor's license if it finds evidence of gross negligence or malpractice.

But in order to have his license revoked, Dr. Seda-Morales would have to return to this state or be returned under extradition if a lawsuit ensued.

In a recent out-of-court settlement, the Rackmills received $25,000 from Dr. Seda-Morales insurer, Chubb & Son, Inc. Freehold Area Hospital's insurance company awarded the family another $2,500 as part of the settlement.

The board decided to reopen the matter when two letters surfaced written by nurses. Originally, the board had decided there was no cause for action against the doctor in September, 1976.

The letters, written to Gloria Antrim, the hospital's associate administrator for patient services, both complained of Dr. Seda-Morales' handling of the case.

With this new information available, the medical board decided to reopen its probe of the case.

Police in two communities unravel 'narcotics rip-off'

By DAVID GRAULICH and BOB BRAMLEY

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — Police say they've completed a complex investigation resulting in arrests of seven people on charges ranging from armed robbery to possession of marijuana. Most of the charges stem from what police call "a narcotics rip-off" during an Atlantic Highlands apartment burglary July 23.

Atlantic Highlands police say they combined with Middletown Township police to make the arrests. The first arrests were made Wednesday night, when Middletown police raided a home at 181 Wilson Ave., Port Monmouth, with a warrant to search for a stolen .380 automatic pistol. They found the gun and arrested John W. Cooke, 26, of 27 Cypress Drive, Eatontown; Gerald Saberon, 21, of 27 Plymouth Ave., Port Monmouth; and Karen Sigler, 21, of 181 Wilson Ave.

Middletown police charged Mr. Cooke with illegal purchase of the gun, allegedly stolen last October in a Newark burglary, and with possession of stolen property. Mr. Saberon and Mrs. Sigler were charged with possession of more than 25 grams of marijuana and face possible additional charges, police said.

After Mr. Cooke was booked by police at Middletown headquarters, Detective James Hourihan, Jr. of the Atlantic Highlands police arrested him on charges of armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, possession of a dangerous weapon, breaking and entering, larceny of an amount over $500, conspiracy, possession of more than 25 grams of marijuana, and possession of the marijuana with an intent to distribute.

Atlantic Highlands police also arrested two other people yesterday morning on the same charges: Gary Vaughan, of 110 Center Ave., Atlantic Highlands, and a 17-year-old male juvenile from Middletown.

Detective Hourihan said the arrests of Mr. Cooke, Mr. Vaughan, and the juvenile stem from an armed burglary July 23 at the apartment of Robert Kennedy, 22, of 29 Bay Ave., Atlantic Highlands. Detective Hourihan said the burglary "was a result of narcotic activity" but declined to give further details.

To cap the series of arrests, Atlantic Highlands police yesterday arrested Mr. Kennedy, whose apartment was allegedly burglarized, on charges of possession of more than 25 grams of marijuana and possession of the drug with an intent to distribute. He was released on his own recognizance, while Mr. Cooke and Mr. Vaughan are being held in Monmouth County jail in lieu of $25,000 bail. Mr. Saberon and Mrs. Sigler, who were arrested Wednesday night, were released on $500 bail pending a court hearing.

Middletown police said Mr. Saberon had been free on parole following his conviction last year for an assault on Mrs. Rose De Luce of Wilson Ave., Port Monmouth. They said he was convicted of hitting her on the head with a hatchet in her home and robbing her. Mrs. DeLuce is in a mental hospital with a disorder resulting from the attack, police said.

Mrs. Sigler is the widow of David "Little Georgie" Sigler, a diabetic whose struggle against the disease was the subject of a Daily Register feature story last November. Mr. Sigler died in June at age 30. He had a widely publicized funeral during the July 4th weekend, when his ashes were carried to Raritan by motorcyclists and police units in a chrome-plated motorcycle gas tank and were scattered out to sea.

Hazlet board recommends Bethany Towers measure

By DAVID ASTOR

HAZLET — The Planning Board last night voted 3 to 2 to recommend to the Township Committee that it approve an amendment to the zoning ordinance that would pave the way for a senior citizens' high rise.

"Bethany Towers is for senior citizens who are in dire need, on fixed incomes," declared board member Joseph J. DeVirgilio, just prior to his vote. "That is why I vote yes."

Mr. DeVirgilio also cited the success of Bethany Manor, a senior citizens' high rise in neighboring Keyport that has been in operation several years.

Joining him in voting for the amendment were Mayor

Stephen J. Filardi and Thomas D'Arcangelis, board chairman.

"This is the third time the Planning Board has recommended it," said Mr. D'Arcangelis. "I was for the project when it was 12 stories. Not only will it be nice looking, but it will provide a service for the elderly in the community."

Bethany Towers, as currently proposed, would be eight stories high and contain 141 units.

Edward Flateman, board vice chairman, in voting against the amendment, said that Bethany Towers could set a precedent for other high rises in the township and that the committee had deleted all senior citizens' sites from the zoning ordinance. Eugene Balestriere also voted no.

Earlier this month, the committee voted to introduce the amendment, which would change the 24-acre Bethany Towers site between Rt. 35, Bedle Road and Clark St. from a business highway to senior citizens' zone. A public hearing on this amendment is scheduled for Tuesday in Township Hall.

The board voted 4 to 1 to give preliminary approval to Coastal Properties, Inc., Keyport, for a single-family subdivision off Union Ave. The development, which would be known as "Union Hills Estates," would contain 21 lots on a 5.1-acre site. Mr. DeVirgilio dissented.

In other action, the board voted 4 to 1 to return all but $750 of the $5,600 paid in fees by National Amusements of Boston, Mass., for its application to construct another movie screen at the Route 35 Drive-in.

The board denied the application last month and said then that it would retain $1,100 of the $5,600. Sidney Sawyer, attorney for the applicant, had questioned why so much of the fees was withheld, which led to last night's board action.

The board voted unanimously to change its meeting night to the third Thursday of the month from the current second Thursday, commencing with the October meeting.

Stargazers hunt meteors, but cloudy sky dims show

By HILDY McCORMICK

MATAWAN — Observance of a phenomenon first recorded in the 10th century was repeated here last night when nearly three dozen stargazers gathered in Terhune Park to learn tips on how to best observe the annual Perseid meteor showers.

The period last night and early today was the time the shower of falling stars reached its peak. The showers started on July 25 and could continue through the end of this month.

Steven Rabinowitz, 31 Ardmore Lane, Matawan Township, president of the Matawan Regional High School Astronomy Club, distributed maps of the heavens.

"Can anyone see anything?" he asked at approximately 10 p.m. But patches of clouds made it difficult to view the meteors.

Mr. Rabinowitz explained that the meteors travel through space in a swarm at approximately 40 kilometers a second. Each is "about the size of a grain of sand" he said, but as they fall through space, light is produced through vaporization. Although the meteors appear to be falling, he said, "We move into them because the meteors are attracted by the earth's gravity."

The 15-year-old student, who is entering his sophomore year in high school, said that last year he observed 50 meteors an hour. He noted that the "brightest shower" was recorded in 1883. "It was one of the best showers of the year. Thousands (of meteors) were recorded per minute."

The Perseid meteor shower is one of 13 recognized major showers that take place annually, he said.

The discussion of what to look for in the skies was organized by the Matawan Joint Free Public Library and presented by Mr. Rabinowitz in the park.

STARGAZERS — These seven persons were among a group that turned out last night to observe the annual Perseid meteor shower, summer's display of falling stars. Looking into somewhat clouded skies for the show of stars are, from left, foreground, Megan Connolly, 7, and Tara Connolly, 11, both Little Silver; Glen Coleman, 10, and Steven Rabinowitz, 15, both of Matawan Township. In background, from left, are Peter Fontaine, 10, and Jessica Fontaine, 12, both Little Silver, and Gil Coleman, 13, Matawan Township.

Little Silver raises price of school lunch five cents

LITTLE SILVER — The price of a lunch is going up in Little Silver schools.

The Board of Education last night increased the price of a student lunch from 50 to 55 cents effective in September.

The price of adult lunches was also raised a nickel to 85 cents. The cost of milk remains at six cents per container.

Edward Pavlovsky, school superintendent, said the raises were necessary because of the high cost of food and labor.

He also said that Little Silver has one of the lowest priced lunch programs of any Monmouth County elementary school district.

The school, which now operates a lunch program at its Point Road School, is seeking to provide a hot lunch program next year at the Markham Place School with the food being provided by the Red Bank Regional High School.

The board hired Stuart Carver, 13 Cambridge Road, Freehold, as school psychologist at a fee not to exceed $4,300 a year. Mr. Carver replaces Alton Lewis, who retired after several years of serving the board as psychologist.

IFF plant expansion plans okayed by Hazlet planners

HAZLET — A 54,600-square-foot expansion of the International Flavors and Fragrances (IFF) plant here for storage purposes was unanimously approved last night by the Planning Board.

IFF Plant Manager Kent Fleming said he hoped the extension of the current 110,000-square-foot plant, located on the south side of Rt. 36, would be ready for occupancy early next year.

"It is urgent that we begin excavation as soon as possible," declared Mr. Fleming. "We want it done before the winter weather hits us."

Mr. Fleming, in explaining the need for the expansion, said that IFF had increased its inventory of raw materials since opening the township plant in 1971. He also noted that, because of "climatic and political" reasons, some raw materials were only available "once or twice a year," thus necessitating a larger storage area to stockpile these materials.

Part of the expansion, added Mr. Fleming, will consist of a 2,400-square-foot cold room for storing perishable materials.

The present plant is used for the blending of various materials into finished and semi-finished fragrances, said Mr. Fleming. Part of it is also used for storage and shipping.

Joseph J. DeVirgilio, board member, read a letter from the Hazlet Environmental Commission stating that the IFF expansion is in an environmentally "sensitive" area near Natco Lake.

James P. Kovacs, an engineer representing the applicant, said that drainage from the plant flows west, away from the lake. He noted that two trees would be cut down for the expansion, but that the rest of the expansion area consisted of weeds.

This area, he added, was graded back in 1970 by IFF with the intent that it would be built on in several years.

Representatives for IFF said that the expansion would not mean any new parking spaces and would not increase the air pollution in the area.

IFF also plans to expand its chemical plant in Union

Beach, which is located on the other side of Rt. 36. Plans call for a two-story administration building to be added to the present structure there, which was built in 1952.

The estimated price for both projects is $5 million.

HOMeward BOUND — Walter Stickle, 13, and Joseph Pease, 14, both Holmdel and members of Boy Scout Troop 331 of Holmdel, unwind last night at the Monmouth Mall parking lot after returning from a nine-day Boy Scout Jamboree held in Pennsylvania. Troop 330 of Little Silver also made the Jamboree trek, which saw scouts nationwide gather to display skills and develop a position paper that was to be given to former President Ford.

Torrez fires masterful 2-hitter as Yankees blank faltering A's

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Torrez hurled a masterful two-hitter Thursday night, allowing just two singles and permitting only one other runner in pitching the New York Yankees to a 3-0 victory over the Oakland A's.

The 6-foot-5 right-hander hit Rodney Scott with a pitch to start the game. Marty Perez hit into a force out and Jim Tyrone bounced into a double play after which Torrez retired the side the next three innings.

After Manny Sanguillen singled in the fifth, Torrez retired 11 straight hitters until pinch hitter Tim Hosley singled in the ninth.

It was the 13th straight loss for the A's, most for the franchise since the club dropped 13 in a row while playing in Kansas City in 1959.

It was Torrez' fourth straight complete game win and evened his record with the Yankees at 9-9. He was 3-1 with the A's for a 12-10 over-all mark. Torrez struck out four.

All three New York runs off loser Pablo Torrealba, 3-4

Baseball roundup
Hot-hitting Bobby Bonds drove in four runs, two with his 29th homer, and Paul Hartzell notched his first complete-game victory of the season Thursday night as the California Angels defeated Boston 7-3, ending the Red Sox' 11-game winning streak.

Hartzell, a big right-hander, settled down after a shaky start in improving his record to 5-7. He allowed three runs on four hits in the first two innings, but finished with a seven-hitter while handcuffing the Boston sluggers the rest of the way.

In other American League action, Lee May's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning scored the tying and winning runs as the Baltimore Orioles rallied for three runs to defeat the Seattle Mariners 4-3.

Buddy Bell smashed a two-run homer and Rick Waits and Jim Kern combined on a five-hitter to hurl the Cleveland Indians to a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Dave Goltz won his fifth straight game with relief help from Tom Johnson, while Lyman Bostock and Glenn Adams belted home runs as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 7-3.

Mike Hargrove and Claudell Washington each drilled two-run home runs and rookie Bump Wills laid down a perfect suicide-squeeze bunt to help the Texas Rangers to an 8-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

In the National League, Bake McBride drove in three runs and belted his ninth homer of the season and pitcher Jim Kaat had three hits as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Montreal Expos 10-5 for their eighth consecutive victory.

Cesar Cedeno smashed three doubles as he drove in three runs, helping the Houston Astros to a 7-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Bill Robinson drove in four runs and Odell Jones pitched a five-hitter to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-1 victory over the New York Mets.

Jets, Falcons goal: Win a football game

How They Stand

By MARTY FISCHBEIN

The New York Jets are looking for their first pre-season victory tomorrow night when they visit the Atlanta Falcons in their third outing of the young season.

The Jets have already dropped 20-6 and 21-3 decisions to the Chicago Bears and Philadelphia Eagles respectively.

The Falcons were 3-0 victors over St. Louis in their first game last week.

Kickoff has been changed to 7 p.m. from the original eight o'clock start.

WNEW-TV channel 5 will carry the game live and will also present a special on the Jets starting at 6:30.

Jet coach Walt Michaels is still trying to find the right combinations on offense and defense and will look over a new combination on his offensive line.

Right guard Darrell Austin will move to center. Garry Puetz will shift back to right guard from tackle and Robert Woods will start at left tackle.

Woods has been a starter at left tackle since 1973, but had off-season ankle surgery and has been slowly rounding into form.

Michaels wants to test Woods and see if he's ready to resume his pre-injury status.

Austin started four games at center last year and seven at right guard and Puetz split his playing time evenly between right guard and right tackle.

Joe Fields who started 10 games at center last year will be the back-up man to back Clark Gaines and Charlie White.

Michaels said Todd will play three quarters with Marty Domres playing the final period.

The new passing formation which struck for 57 yards on the first play against the Eagles will be used again with Richard Caster and Wesley Walker at wide receivers and Jerome Barkum at tight end.

The game will present two former Alabama quarterbacks against each other.

Scott Hunter will start and play the first half for the Falcons and like Todd was coached by Bear Bryant at Alabama.

Steve Bartkowski made his first start last week after undergoing knee surgery after the fifth game last year. He was four of six for 52 yards against the Cards and will relieve Hunter in the third period tomorrow.

Billy Hardee, a free agent who played two games with Denver last year was picked up on Wednesday and if he can master the Jets' system he may get a chance to play against the Falcons.

Hardee is 6-feet tall and weighs 185 and is capable of running the 40 in 4.6 seconds, the kind of defensive speed the Jets are sorely in need of.

Shafer Suggs, who suffered a shoulder separation in an off-season auto accident will most likely take over at left corner when he is ready for action which places the other cornerbacks in a battle for the right side starting post.

Richard Todd will open at quarterback with running

Neptune duo eliminated

By MARK MAGYAR

ASBURY PARK — "Neptune Joe" Frady and Richie Hansen, both of Neptune, were eliminated in the fifth round of the World Open Pocket Billiard Championship last night.

Thirty-two players have been knocked out of the double-elimination classic, leaving Pete Fusco of Philadelphia, Steve "Leapin'" Lillis of Montclair, and the tourney's top 10 seeds to battle for places in Sunday's championship match at Convention Hall tonight.

Eight seeds — Steve Mizerak and Tom Jennings, both of Edison; Allen Hopkins of Cranford; Peter Margo of Staten Island, N.Y.; Ray Martin of Fairlawn; Jack Colavita of West Caldwell; Joe Russo of Trenton; and "Earl the Pearl" Herring of Newburgh, N.Y. — are undefeated.

Luther "Wimpy" Lassiter of Elizabeth City, N.C.; Irving "The Deacon" Crane of Rochester, N.Y.; Fusco, and Lillis each have one loss.

"Neptune Joe" Frady, the current world nine-ball champion, ran 44 balls to overtake his fourth-round opponent, Mike Carella of Tallahassee, Fla., 150-143.

But Fusco, whose Tuesday run of 119 balls is still the highest in the tournament, pocketed 69 balls on his second turn, then shook off late game jitters to oust Frady 150-128.

Richie Hansen upset Bob Jewitt, 1974 national collegiate champion, 150-122, but never got untracked against the "new" Lassiter.

Lassiter had been unimpressive in his first three outings, so he paid $700 for a new Meucci cue 30 minutes before his match with Hansen, and decided to speed up his stroke as well.

Lassiter rattled off consecutive 75, 37 and 36 ball runs in overwhelming Hansen 150-28.

Crane narrowly escaped elimination, edging rookie Bruce Grasing of Palisades Park 150-149 in a three hour, 45 inning marathon that lasted until 2:55 a.m.

The 63-year-old world champion kept trying to shake off a cramp in his right leg throughout the match, and his right arm shook from exhaustion on many shots.

"This tournament was poorly planned," Crane charged. "There is no way I should be on the pool table for five consecutive hours until three o'clock in the morning. I had only 10 minutes rest between (New York City's "Rusty") Miller and Grasing."

When Grasing took a 94-46 lead midway through the contest, Crane abandoned his cautious style of play for a wide-open game, taking risky break shots and numerous combinations that Grasing passed up.

When Crane missed with a 137-132 lead, Grasing ran 17 balls, but choked on the easy corner shot that would have given him the game.

Crane ran 11 balls, then played a perfect two-cushion safety from a difficult position to leave Grasing with a six foot shot.

Grasing's shot was an inch wide, and Crane pocketed the last two balls for the game.

Lillis, who lost to top-seeded Mizerak in the first round, stunned the crowd by winning four straight to make the final 12.

The young Navy man avenged Pearl Harbor with a 150-20 victory over Mamoru Tanaka, the Japanese champion, then walloped Brooklyn's Mike Marroita, who had beaten Lassiter earlier, by a 150-45 score.

In the Women's World Open Pool Championship, Jean Balukas of Ft. Hamilton, N.Y., the overwhelming favorite, had to come from behind to defeat Billie Billing of Brooklyn, 75-54, while Geri Titcomb of Cincinnati, Ohio, beat Vicki Frechen of St. John's, Mich., 75-40.

IN THE MONEY — Pistol Pete Maravich has a lot to smile about after signing a $3 million, five-year contract with the New Orleans Jazz. That breaks down to $600,000 a year, enough to make anyone smile. Maravich had been negotiating since the end of last season. As one of the premier players in the National Basketball Association, and one who was a free agent, Maravich was in an enviable bargaining position with the Jazz.

Old Giants never die

By GREIG HENDERSON

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. — There will be a small family reunion when the New York Giants and the New Orleans Saints come marching into the Superdome tomorrow in both clubs' second exhibition game.

Within six of the gold Saint helmets will be some familiar faces to the trained Giant eye.

The former Wellington Mara-men, now members of the Hank Stram clan, are center John Hill, wide receiver Don Hermann, running back Leon McQuay, safety Chuck Crist, linebacker Pat Hughes and punter Tom Blanchard.

Hill, Hermann, Crist and Blanchard all had starting assignments in the Saints opening victory versus the Chicago Bears, 20-14.

New Orleans quarterback Archie Manning appeared to be returning to his old form, hitting nine of 14 passes for 170 yards and a touchdown. Manning missed most of last season with arm trouble.

Quarterback, quarterback. Who will be the quarterback for the New Yorkers tomorrow?

Coach John McVay says he will start Jerry Colstejn, who went four for nine for 32 yards in the second half of the Giants 19-3 loss to the New England Patriots. Rookie Randy Dean and veteran Steve Ramsey should also get a turn.

Fullback Larry Watkins will see extended service with Marsh White questionable due to a hyperextension of the knee suffered in practice Wednesday. Larry Csonka is still recovering from his knee woes.

Watkins, a 6-2, 230-pound Alcorn A & M graduate, is looking forward to the extra work.

"I'm optimistic about the team just like the new coaches are," he said. "The new offense seems to be wide open with the fullback being involved quite a bit. You can get a chance to use all your talents in this offense."

Doug Kotar, Gordon Bell and Bobby Hammond will share the halfback chores.

Rookies Al Dixon and Emery Moorehead, who were impressive last week, will get a good look tomorrow. Johnny Perkins and Don Zimmerman, who missed the Patriot outing, should also see action.

McVay, still experimenting with the offensive line, will continue to employ two units.

The Giant defense, led last week by Troy Archer, John Mendenhall, Harry Carson, Brian Kelley and Bobby Brooks, got good grades from McVay.

The Giants will hope to march out of the Superdome with a clearer quarterback picture, a touchdown and perhaps a victory.

Littler leads PGA

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson, forced to play with borrowed, unfamiliar irons after two sets of his clubs were declared illegal, fired a solid, four-under-par 68 that put him within one stroke of leading Gene Littler in Thursday's first round of the PGA National Championship.

Watson, the outstanding player in the game this year and the central figure in the club controversy that has marked this 59th PGA, had to borrow a set of irons from Roger Maltbie—a set with which he never had before played—only 30 minutes before his tee time.

"Well," said one man in the gallery when Watson holed out for a birdie on his final hole, "I guess they'll have to take the ball away from him now.

Nicklaus, called by Watson "the master of the game" and seeking a record-matching fifth PGA national title, was another stroke back.

MYAA All-Stars advance

THURMOND, MD. — The Middletown Youth Athletic Association's Girls' Softball All-Star team rallied to defeat the Pennsylvania All-Stars, 7-6 yesterday.

The victory put the MYAA team in the Eastern Championship finals against the Massachusetts All-Stars today. The winner of this game will move on to the World Series in Portland, Oregon.

Ceil Ludavico was on the mound for MYAA. She showed good control, walking only two batters.

Allenhurst, Royal Manor triumph

By JIM HINTELMANN
NEPTUNE — After losing the completion of a suspended game to Larson Ford, Allenhurst Barbors rebounded and took an 89-85 decision over Larson last night to even their best two out of three series at a game apiece in the Shore Summer Basketball League playoffs.

In another playoff game, Royal Manor rallied to defeat Paul Michaels, 96-90.

Allenhurst had led Larson, 60-59, with 1:57 left in the third quarter on Wednesday night before rain forced a suspension of play. The two teams resumed play last night from the point of suspension and Larson won on a 83-76 victory.

The Royal Manor-Paul Michaels game followed and then Allenhurst and Larson returned to play the second game of the series.

"This time we played the game and our talent showed up," said Allenhurst coach Kevin Duggan in explaining the difference between the two games.

"In the first game with Larson, we got too involved with the calls of the officials and the loss of some of our players on fouls."

Before winning, Allenhurst almost blew an 11 point last quarter lead but just held on for the victory.

Trailing 85-74 with 3:05 remaining, Larson rallied and scored the next six points on a jumper by Harry Jones and two baskets by Aucie Perry.

A jump shot by Jeff Rush gave Allenhurst an 87-80 with 1:35 left but James put in a free throw and Jack Hill dropped in a pair of baskets to cut the margin to 87-85 with 35 seconds remaining.

Allenhurst attempted to hold the ball for a good shot but lost the ball on a 24 second violation.

Larson then had a chance to tie the game with 10 sec-

Larson had taken its final lead at 44-41 on a three-point play by Perry but Allenhurst scored eight of the last nine points of the half and ran off the first 10 points of the third quarter. This was just enough to hold off Larson's late rally. Willis and Randy Meister had 23 and 20 points respectively while Perry scored 20 for Larson.

In the completion of the suspended game, Larson broke a 74-74 tie with six points in a row, four by Bill Terry, and held on for the victory. Trailing 78-74 with nine minutes left in the game, Royal Manor scored 14 points in a row to overtake Paul Michaels in last night's second game.

"We got into the bonus situation early in the fourth quarter," said Royal Manor coach Art Stock.

Ocean wins in playoff

NEPTUNE — Ocean Sporting Goods took the lead from the start and went on to top Scholastic Sales, 86-70, yesterday in the High School Basketball Federation playoffs.

Neil Boyle from Red Bank Catholic and Neptune's Todd Holland paced Ocean with 30 and 25 points respectively which offset a 30 point effort by Chris Rose of Scholastic Sales. With Holland scoring 19 points, Ocean raced out to a 46-32 halftime lead but Scholastic made a run in the third quarter.

With Rose, a junior at Red Bank Regional, and Bob Wade setting the pace, Scholastic narrowed Ocean's lead to four points late in the third quarter.

Boyle then came through with some key baskets to keep Ocean safely in front and a 22-12 final quarter put the game away.

Long shots have day at Monmouth

By JOE HINTELMANN
OCEANPORT — It was a day of long shots yesterday at Monmouth Park. Jockey Doug Thomas, Don MacBeth, Craig Perret and trainer Chuck Spina contributed heavily, each winning two events.

Thomas won the opener aboard Jay Walton's Crimson Twins at a price of $29.80. MacBeth completed a $115.60 double by taking the second event aboard A One (8.60). Thomas and MacBeth saved the big numbers for later. Thomas led wire to wire in the fifth event aboard Anita's Snooks and this four-year-old filly produced the highest win price of the meeting, $105.80.

Anita's Snooks, recently claimed by Gerry Miceli, had been racing principally at six furlongs over the main course. Yesterday, she went a mile over the turf. She had raced only once previously on the grass in her career and was not in the money.

MacBeth took the ninth race aboard Ben Britton, a three-year-old gelding that returned $67.00.

Perret took the sixth race on Drover's Dawn (20.00) and the featured eighth aboard Council House (7.20). It was Council House's third straight win and fourth in her last five starts, all over the turf.

Spina, who recently purchased a home in Oceanport, saddled first time starter Scheer Lightning in the third event and the two-year-old filly led all the way under John Czarnecki and paid $43.60. Spina, whose horses are usually ridden by apprentices under request of the owners, took the fourth event with Topaz Cat, ridden by William McGrath, an apprentice from Neptune. What a Queen finished second but was disqualified and placed fourth in the race. Czarnecki had just recently ridden his fortieth winner and lost his apprentice allowance.

The youthful and likable Spina has only a few horses but makes the most of them. A couple of weeks ago he put together four winners at Atlantic City

Oxygen level low says Marine lab

Sandy Hook Marine Laboratory reports the bottom water dissolved oxygen content off shore is still declining, and if this continues "some localized problems may develop during the next month." However, a repetition of last year's massive kill of shellfish and finfish seems to be highly unlikely.

According to the federal laboratory, in some near shore areas in a 75-mile band from Manasquan to Avalon and two to five miles off shore, the dissolved oxygen values for bottom waters last week were near and in some cases slightly below two milliliters per liter. This is the level that begins to affect and stress some fish and shellfish.

The laboratory reports: "While this level may be stressful to a few marine organisms, it is not considered dangerous to most of them. Values below one milliliter for extended periods of time (at least a week), however, can be considered dangerous for many animals. Farther offshore, extending out to the shelf edge, dissolved oxygen values are higher and no immediate problems are anticipated there."

Severe oxygen depletion and associated mortalities of marine organisms occurred over a large area of the Middle Atlantic Bight in summer 1976. Because of the severity of the 1976 event, in terms of impact on shellfish stocks and the entire bight ecosystem, the National Marine Fisheries Service and other agencies have been making observations of bottom water dissolved oxygen values off the coast of New Jersey since spring 1977. The emphasis of these efforts is to examine the ocean conditions closely, to examine the factors which affect the oxygen values, and to alert the public, industry and the scientific community to any potential problems.

Since the early part of this year, the oxygen levels in the New York Bight bottom waters have been monitored.

The laboratory reports the oxygen levels can be expected to decline until late summer or early fall when "the cooler weather will help overturn the presently stratified water column and replenish the oxygen in the bottom water."

Clam Hearing

A public meeting to obtain suggestions for improvement of sea clam regulations will be held at Stockton State College, Jim Leeds Road, Pomona, at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 23.

The hearing will be given by the State Division of Fish, Game and Shell Fisheries. Written comments may be sent to the division office, P.O. Box 1809, Trenton, N.J. 08625 before Aug. 23.

Copies of the existing regulations may be obtained from the division office.

Manny Dostl of Manny's Sport Shop, East Keansburg, reports Leo Chodkowski of Lopez, Pa., caught nine weakfish and five fluke in Chapel Hill Channel. The weaks ran from three to nine pounds.

Fisheries Hearing

Some of the problems that have arisen since the 200-mile Fisheries Limit was established last year will be aired at a public hearing at the Kings Grant Inn, Route 70, Point Pleasant, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Announcement was made by the State Division of Fish, Game and Shell Fisheries, acting on reports that the National Marine Fisheries Service "has received several applications requesting permission for foreign vessels to process and transport to foreign countries, fish caught by U.S. fishermen."

"Other inquiries concern permission for foreign vessels to catch a portion of the fish that preliminary plans projected for U.S. fishermen. The catch would then be transported by American vessels to U.S. on-shore processing plants."

People these days do a lot of running around. Sometimes for fun. But most of the time they're going someplace. Or coming home from same.

So along comes Puch with a great idea. A method of getting there and back that beats walking by a country mile because it's a lot more fun and doesn't cost a whole lot more.

A Puch has pedals for starting and a peppery little engine for zipping you around without blisters, bunions, or getting out of breath.

Power boats set for race

RED BANK — Tomorrow at 12 noon the roar and the rooster-tailing of power boats will be heard and seen along the Navesink River as the 38th Annual Red Bank National Sweepstakes Regatta gets underway.

Seven classes of hydroplanes, Jersey Speed Skiffs, Ski Boats and Super Stocks will be racing for the thousands of spectators crowding Marine Park and those afloat in the spectator fleet surrounding the one and two-thirds mile oval course. Hydroplane drivers from all over the United States and Canada will be competing.

The National Championships for the Jersey Speed Skiffs will take place on Sunday at about 2 p.m. However, the qualifying heats for the race will be held Saturday. Joe Stavola of Red Bank is the defending National Champion. Others vying for the title will be Steve Becker of Oceanport, National high-points champion and Dave Paraskevas of Lincroft, the world record holder. Other boats from as far away as Florida are expected to compete in a field of up to 25 boats.

The Governor's Cup Race will be held Sunday. Boats of the 145 Cubic inch, 2.5 litre and 280 cubic inch classes provide a staggered-start handicap system which usually results in side-by-side finishes.

The Red Bank Grand Prix will feature modified hydroplanes capable of speeds of above 150 mph. They will be competing for the Red Bank Gold Cup. Next to the unlimiteds, these boats are the fastest in the world. Up to 20 boats are expected to register for qualifying.

There will be more than $10,000 in prize money and more than 90 trophies awarded. Admission to the Sweepstakes is free.

Your horoscope, birthday

Friday, August 12— Born today, you are one of those highly enthusiastic individuals who aspires at times to just-out-of-reach goals which, because they forever elude you, forever frustrate you and cause you difficulties in your general relationship with yourself and others. Your greatest need is to learn to gauge your own ability and your own stamina. For there are times when as far as talent is concerned, you are quite capable of performing as you wish to perform, but energy fails you. Your highest joy will come when you finally learn to fit aims, talents, and stamina together into a single effort. Progress and profit will then become a real and enduring part of your everyday life. One of those persons who is highly sensitive to any change in the environment in which he works, you must secure working conditions that are conducive to peaceable thought and physical relaxation, for without either of these all your effort may go for little in the long run.

Saturday, August 13

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Don't allow dislikes — which may be purely temporary — to keep you from making a decision in favor of gain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Make this a routine Saturday; otherwise, innovation could undermine a tenuous new relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Though you may sustain quite a fright during morning hours — the results of incomplete work — afternoon hours should prove bright and lively.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Be as conciliatory as you can where another's points are concerned. There is nothing to be gained by making an enemy of an old friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Much that is offered today has about it an air of risk. Accept no challenge that you do not feel certain of meeting successfully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Avoid conversations about business or profession. Friends and family wish to escape the work week, not rehash it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Plan your schedule loosely. A number of extra work and play activities may arise and you want to be able to involve yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Try to arrange a journey around a business matter.

Make an effort to overlook another's transgressions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Don't encourage a dispute by entering into an argument with another about the issues involved. Maintain an air of disinterest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Take care that caution is not thrown to the winds simply because you wish to impress another with your courage. Be brave, not stupid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Allow family members enough time and room to come to terms with changes which you propose. Don't demand instant support.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — A slow morning works its way into a quicker-paced afternoon and evening. Don't mistrust those offering aid; accept it in good grace.

Sheinwold's bridge advice

by Alfred Sheinwold

If you regularly play bridge in an institution for the criminally deranged, it may pay you to assume that declarer has bid like an idiot. Don't rely on this in normal surroundings if you can defeat the contract on the assumption that the bidding makes sense.

East won the first trick with the king of spades and returned the jack to dummy's ace. South led a heart to the ace and returned a club, losing the king to East's ace. East continued spades and sighed heavily with South produced the queen.

South later lost a diamond finesse but still had nine tricks.

"A civilized partner would turn up with the queen of spades," East complained. "You must think we're playing with a pinhole deck," West retorted.

West could hold the queen of spades only if South had jumped to two notrump without a spade stopper and with only 11 points.

SHOULD PLAY JACK

East should play the jack of spades at the first trick, and South would take the queen (since if West has the king South has no other chance to win a trick with the queen).

East gets in with the ace of clubs and leads the king of spades to dummy's ace. When East gets in again with the queen of diamonds, he returns his last spade, and West def-feats the contract with three spade tricks.

As dealer, you hold: ♠KJ2 ♥J63 ♦Q105 ♣AJ107. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. You have only 12 points in high cards and no points at all for distribution. Some experts would open this borderline hand because of the two tens, but most experts would wait for at least another high-card point.

The star listens to the director when Landon's working camera

AT THE HELM — Actor, director, producer Michael Landon is shown checking a camera angle during filming of the series "Little House on the Prairie." recently. Landon does exactly what the director orders, at least every other week, as he works both sides of the camera as actor and director and sometimes writer.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Landon, star of NBC's "Little House on the Prairie" does just exactly what the director orders, at least every other week.

Landon, you see, works both sides of the camera — as actor and director.

Under the hot sun in the Simi Valley, about 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles, Landon, the director sets up a camera angle.

Then he rushes out, becomes character Charles Ingalls, and starts nailing the side of a house as part of a scene.

Landon is the star, producer, sometimes the writer and one of two directors of the series, now filming for its fourth season.

"I like making films," says Landon, who is somewhere in his 40s.

"There's advantages and there's disadvantages" to directing a show in which you're also starring, he says. "The disadvantage being of course, you just can't sit back and see what you did until you see the dailies, the raw film shot each day."

"Aside from that you just have to count on your instincts. The big advantage of course is that I cooperate completely with myself."

Landon, on lunch break on location, leans back in the folding chair under the mess tent and laughs.

"When the director says move, I move, wherever he wants me to go, I go there. So that way I can get a lot of work done without a lot of hassles."

Landon directed "The Music Box," the episode scheduled for 8 p.m. EDT Monday. It's a repeat, first seen March 14. Middle daughter Laura, played by 13-year-old Melissa Gilbert, feels guilty because she's stolen a small toy.

"I've always liked directing more than anything else," says Landon, who directs every other "Little House" episode, alternating with William F. Claxton.

"Someday I'm sure I will direct full time, but in the meantime my checks are larger for acting than they are for directing." Again he laughs.

Landon doesn't exactly like to talk about how long he thinks the show, currently NBC's most popular, will continue.

"I have no idea. If everybody is having fun making the show, that's great," he says, as if television shows are kept alive if the people making them enjoy their work.

But, he adds, "If we had the same competition every year, I could tell you how many years we'd be on. If you're eating up the competition and they're not going to change it, then you're going to be on quite a while. But they're in a competition every year."

Landon made it 14 years on his first regular series, "Bonanza," where he played Little Joe starting in the late '50s. That's where he started writing, he says.

If the series goes for a fifth year, says Landon, older daughter Mary will go blind and the family will sell its farm and move into town where Charles will run a boarding house.

Besides being true to the Laura Ingalls Wilder novels on which the show is based, the move will "give us more storylines," says Landon.

The character on the screen is a familiar one to the actor. Landon says he's pretty much the same guy at home with his wife, the former Lynn Noe, and the couple's seven kids, aged 4 to 26, including three by previous marriages.

The Landon's school age children aren't permitted to watch television on school nights with two exceptions: certain specials recommended by the school and "Little House on the Prairie," which Landon contends shows dad pretty close to real life.

"I'm really not that much different on the show than I am in the house. I'm strict, we have a very affectionate family, there's no disrespect in my house. Everybody makes mistakes, including dad, which he admits to, so everybody knows they're not perfect and everybody does their share."

THREE STAGES — The event-packed life story of novelist Charles Dickens, portrayed in "Dickens of London," a 10-episode new series, airs on the Mobil-funded Masterpiece Theatre beginning Sunday, Aug. 28, at 9 p.m. on PBS. Simon Bell plays the famous author as a boy, Gene Foad, center, as a young man, and Roy Dotrice is Dickens in middle age.

Three actors play one part while one plays 4 or more

If three actors are needed to play one part in one play, how many parts can one actor play?

The answer to that theatrical version of an old riddle — the original had something to do with apples and applesauce — depends entirely on what actors and what play you're talking about. If it happens to be "Dickens of London," the answer's almost as convoluted as the question.

To begin with, "Dickens of London," which airs on Masterpiece Theatre beginning Sunday, Aug. 28 at 9 p.m. (ET) is a ten-episode story of the life of author Charles Dickens. That part's easy. And since the Mobil-funded PBS mini-series begins almost at the beginning, with Dickens as a penniless lad of 11, it made perfect sense to cast a youngster, Simon Bell, in the part.

Young Dickens may not have had much in the way of creature comforts, but he was equipped with parents. Which immediately triggered the need for someone to play Dickens' father — a need met by 83 year-old veteran performer Roy Dotrice. And since the lad Charles managed somehow to grow, despite the fact that he was considerably undernourished at times, there was no question that a youngish actor was required to portray him as a young man. So 26 year-old Gene Foad got that assignment.

Still easy, right? But here's where the complications begin to multiply. The young man Charles Dickens inevitably aged into the famous and thoroughly adult novelist who became the best-read author we all know about, the man who wrote such enduring tales as "Old Curiosity Shop," "Oliver Twist," "Great Expectations," and so on.

This aging process obviously necessitated the assignment of still another actor. But knowing a good thing when they had it, and perhaps mindful of the old axiom, "like father, like son", the producers at Yorkshire Television decided that Roy Dotrice should do Dickens' father as well as Dickens' father.

If you're keeping score, which may or may not be advisable, that makes three actors — Simon Bell, Gene Foad and Roy Dotrice — playing one part, with one actor — Roy Dotrice — playing two. So far, so good. But we're not finished.

Time did not stand still for either the adult Charles Dickens (Roy Dotrice) or his father (Roy Dotrice). However, no elderly gentlemen were called to portray either in post-September years. Instead, the self-same Roy Dotrice was additionally "aged" assuming you prefer to think about it at all.

Dotrice's batch of assignments may have eliminated some confusion during the filming of "Dickens of London" by paring down the personnel list, but it hardly seems likely, does it? Especially when you consider that the multi-talented, multi-age, multi-role Mr. Dotrice also plays two other parts in the series — you'll see him behind the makeup as a Polish neeromancer, and also as nasty Daniel Quilp. That brings the tally of Dotrice roles to four, if you don't count the elder Charles and John Dickens, or six if you do.

Any questions?

CBS begins series with 2 singing lads

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When I was a kid playing lead guitar, indeed the only guitar, in the youthful Rich Marone All-Stars, nobody ever asked us to star in a prime time summer music series on CBS.

It may be because the All-Stars disbanded — at the demand of the audience — after rendering "Tenderly" and "Deep Purple" to start a Friday night teen dance in a church basement in Van Nuys, Calif.

I guess this hasn't befallen, the young Keane Brothers — Tom is 13, John 12. Because the lads, who sing, play drums, piano and vibes, start their own four-week summer series on CBS tonight.

Unlike the Rich Marone All-Stars, the Keanes, sons of a record producer, kick off their act with a few gags about their age. Sample:

Tom: "I'm new to television."

John: "I'm new to everything."

They then go to their studio-set apartment for more banter aided by Jimmy Caesar, a grown-up comedian-impressionist. He tries to interest them in tickets for a fundraising dinner. At $100 a plate.

Wow, one of the lads remarks, "If the plate is $100, how much is the dinner?" Caesar then impersonates Bing Crosby and Sammy Davis and exits. Then the lads sing "Help! Help!" and with good reason.

A sprightly moment occurs when actor Burt Reynolds, a man of sardonic humor, comes to their apartment and says he used to live there in 1959 while in his first series, "Riverboat."

The boys don't recall that year or that series. Notes Tom: "I'm only 13."

"Thirteen?" cries Burt. "I've got suits older than that."

"Is that one of them?" inquires John.

Well, folks, this repartee gives way to another song, indistinguishable from any teeny-bop tune now fouling the airwaves. Then come the Anita Mann Dancers.

They are a chorus line of girls aged 8 to 12. They dance to a classical music number entitled, "I Wanna Get Back on the Floor and Boogie."

It is hard to describe the way the lady tykes dance, but rest assured you'll never see it at Miss Mayberry's annual cotillion.

I'm sure the Keanes have talent, but the only time I detected it was when they had at a fine Count Basie tune.

"Cute," in which John Keane did a brisk, not-bad jazz solo on vibes.

Summation: The brothers are appealing, but should have appealed to the writers for better material. They may make it as singers eventually, but only when their voices change and their diction improves.

Saturday night, ABC starts a four-week summer sitcom producer Jimmie Komack first called "Girls, Girls, Girls," then "Sugar" and now "Sugar Time." It's about three aspiring lady rock singers.

Barbi Benton, once a Hugh Hefner associate, and Didi Carr and Marianne Black are the featured players.

Judy Collins: Act loses lustre

HOLMDEL — Judy Collins' voice at the Garden State Arts Center last night was strong and pristine as usual. Her fans loved her particularly those few eager ones who hooted at her from the lawn before each of her songs as if she were Linda Ronstadt.

She didn't talk to them from the stage, or anyone else, except to thank the audience for being there. She reacted as she usually does by bowing low then swinging her dark hair back in place and putting her hands together as if in prayer and saying thank you.

She's like the Rock of Gibraltar and Libera — dependable. That steadfastness of hers has been around since the early 60s when it was only Judy Collins and Joan Baez before it was Carly Simon, Laura Nyro, Joni Mitchell and Carole King.

Ms. Collins has been singing here for most of the center's

Judy Collins

10 seasons, if not all of them, with the same vigorous voice and the same protest songs including Stephen Sondheim's "Here Comes The Clown" which she does exquisitely. But the lulls in between the songs are unending. Her act just isn't as good as it used to be.

It was better when she would hang a guitar around her neck, walk out on stage, talk a little, and sing the same songs she sang last night about love and war, beauty and whales.

She used to wear a white organdy gown which made her look like a 60s flower child. Arlo Guthrie would sometimes do the first set. Now, no more white dress. She wears a soft blue (first act) or pink gown with a daring neck line. Well, if Joan Baez can perform in Las Vegas, anything is possible.

Of course, things must change. The band Ms. Collins sings with is not bad. Individually they're good. But while they're playing this light, sometimes Latin beat, she's singing these right-on songs. Only once all night did the audience feel compelled to clap along.

Gerry Niewood, a talented New York jazz reed man, led the group in a song he wrote for his four-month-old son Adam who slept in his mother's arms in the audience during the show. The song sounded a lot like Stevie Wonder's "Isn't It Wonderful," a song the blind musician wrote about his new-born daughter.

Ms. Collins' talents are many. She's acted professionally and she's written many songs and articles. She's also produced a memorable documentary film, "Antonia: A Portrait of a Woman" which was chosen to open the American Filmmakers Series at the Whitney Museum in 1974.

The film embraced the life of Antonia Brico, a European musician-conductor who found it impossible to conduct because she was a woman. She did, however, become conductor of the Denver Symphony Orchestra.

With six Gold Records to her credit, a winning film with a feminist point of view, we were disappointed that Ms. Collins didn't have more to say to her audience. Tonight and tomorrow night, Linda Ronstadt will headline the center. There are no more tickets to be had including grass seats. The rock and roll star sold out almost immediately after her performance was listed.

'Alexander Hamilton' bound for Hudson

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — The Alexander Hamilton, which has been deteriorating from spectacle to eyesore, is scheduled to be moved on Aug. 28, when the moon and tide peak at the same time and the water will be exceptionally high.

It is fitting that the new owner of the "ark" — which now has not only a past but a future — is Noah Sullivan, president of the Sulko Pier Corp., a construction firm in Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

The Alexander Hamilton, the last sidewheel boat of its type to be operated in the United States, has been declared a national historical site and is bound for a port in the mid-Hudson River, between New York and Albany.

Mr. Sullivan says he has contacted numerous officials from various ports and "everyone wants it." The decision on where the ship will be docked is to be made before its Labor Day voyage, he says.

During that trip, things will be a little like "old times" for Edward M. Grady, 197 Hudson Ave., East Keansburg. He was captain of the Alexander Hamilton for eight years and it was he who guided it on its last run from New York to Poughkeepsie in 1971.

On Aug. 28, it is Capt. Grady who will be directing the tugboats as they extricate the ship from the mud. He expects, though, that he got involved in the project "by accident."

He had gone to the yacht harbor last Sunday because he wanted his son, Edward Jr., 8, to have an opportunity to see the craft. Repair crews were at the scene and Capt. Grady says that when he told them he had been its last captain, they "got talking and one thing led to the other."

Capt. Grady, who now is a tugboat captain for River Towing Inc., Hoboken, says he was shocked by the vandalism to the sidewheeler.

"Capt. Grady has given us a lot of valuable insight into operation of the Alexander Hamilton," Mr. Sullivan says. To prepare the craft for its journey up the Hudson, three work teams are working on it daily. Among those assisting are sandblasters and underwater divers. Mr. Sullivan says Earle Naval Weapons Station has cooperated by providing special floats and equipment which would not normally be accessible.
