Pro basketball dribbles into Red Bank Regional

By JULIE McDONNELL

LITTLE SILVER — Semi-pro basketball is going to dribble its way into Red Bank Regional High School this fall.

The school's Board of Education last night granted permission for the Shore Bullets, the minor league franchise of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks, to play 22 Saturday night home games at the school's gym, beginning Nov. 19.

"We're very happy to have reached this agreement," said Greg Kapalko, the team's general manager, who acknowledged having turned down an offer to play in Asbury Park's Convention Hall.

"The Red Bank gym is one of the finest facilities in the state," said Mr. Kapalko, whose team will pay $300 each night for the privilege of using the field house. "And it's our intention to fill that gym with some of the finest basketball the Eastern League can offer."

Mr. Kapalko said the roster of the Bullets should be filled with familiar names from the Shore Summer League, as well as former members of the Eastern League and the NBA.

The home games, which the general manager said are expected to draw crowds of 1,000 persons or more, willl be televised over local cable television stations via delayed tape.

Ticket prices will range from $3 for adults to $1.50 for students and 50 cents for children under 12, Mr. Kapalko said, with season ticket plans available.

The Bullets, who will practice at the Asbury Park Middle School, hope to line up a game with the Hawks, he added.

Several members of the Board of Education expressed worry about crowd and traffic control, and Mr. Kapalko said the team would hire its own police and has its own insurance coverage.

Bob Dziadoz, a former coach at Red Bank Regional and Henry Hudson Regional, has been hired as head coach.

Tryouts for the Bullets, which Mr. Kapalko said are open to any serious, bonafide player, will be held this Saturday and Sunday at the Asbury Park Middle School.

In other business, the board discussed the feasibility of "plugging in" to a Honeywell master computer to control the heating, ventilating and air conditioning of the school.

Such a master control system, according to a Honeywell spokesman, could save the board $38,000 a year from the $150,000 it now budgets for lighting, heating and air conditioning.

Board member Norman Lee said he objected to the lack of a guarantee from Honeywell that a specific amount of money would be saved, and, after adjourning into a private session to discuss the matter with the board attorney, the board decided to take no action on the proposal this month.

The board appointed its roster of athletic coaches and faculty advisors for extra-curricular activities.

Dr. Donald D. Warner, school superintendent, announced that a study skills program has been introduced this fall for all 9th-grade students, and for students in the 10th grade who are enrolled in Developmental English.

The course is designed to increase the student's competency in nine basic skills, ranging from listening and finding main ideas to taking notes and following directions.

Westside revitalization is planned

By BEN VAN VLIET

RED BANK — The borough's year-long program to revitalize the sagging westside business and residential area has come down to two basics — money and people.

And, the two committees working on this problem announced yesterday specific plans for providing money for area improvements, and for getting the westside residents involved in "communityride."

After nearly six months of study and contemplation, the Red Bank Area Chamber of Commerce and the Red Bank Westside Revitalization Committee independently yesterday came up with major programs designed to bring life back to the Shrewsbury Avenue area.

The chamber, which dedicated this year to the improvement of the predominently black westside area, announced it is forming a non-profit corporation to deal specifically with improvements to the westside.

In addition, John Kaye, president of the Shrewsbury State Bank, told the chamber that the state has instituted a program which will provide local banks with the incentive to offer low-interest loans to persons in urban areas for home improvements.

This, Mr. Kaye said, should eliminate one of the biggest problems in seeking rehabilitation of older areas, that of providing the money.

Banks have been extremely reluctant in the past to lend money at reasonable rates for improvements to properties in so-called depressed areas.

Meanwhile, the borough's Westside Revitalization Committee, meeting at the Bates Elks Lodge last night, said it plans to institute a series of programs designed to bring the

HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW — These marijuana plants were confiscated by Holmdel police from Exotic Gardens, a plant nursery on Miller Ave. This is the second time that Frederick A. Jones Jr., the nursery owner, has been charged with growing marijuana on the premises. Inspecting the evidence is Holmdel Patrolman Leonard Sasso.

Marijuana grows... a second time

By JILL HUBER

HOLMDEL — The owner of Exotic Gardens, a plant nursery at 10 Miller Ave., has been charged a second time with growing marijuana on nursery premises.

Frederick A. Jones Jr., 34, same address, was freed on $5,000 bail after he was charged with possession and intent to distribute marijuana.

According to police, Patrolmen William Roman and Michael Motichka went to the premises at 12:30 a.m. yesterday to investigate a reported break-in. Police said an alarm had gone off, but that no one was found in the area.

During their investigation, however, police discovered one large and two smaller marijuana plants growing on the premises.

With the assistance of Detectives Michael Borsari and John Brennan, the patrolmen obtained a search warrant for the nursery. The search resulted in the seizure of four more large plants and a quantity of manicured marijuana, police said.

On July 20, 1976, Mr. Jones was also arrested on the same charges during an investigation of a similar break-in at the nursery.

He will appear in municipal court for the most recent charges on Sept. 26.

Lance future not so bright

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bert Lance faces a troubled financial future as he and his wife pack their bags and head home for Georgia.

The Lances have not said what they will do now that Lance has resigned his White House job, but President Carter said his former budget director "needs to go home to take care of his business."

The Lances put the mansion up for sale for $2 million last month, but it has not been sold. It was not clear whether they would live there. They also own a $100,000 house in Calhoun, Ga., and a vacation home on Sea Island, Ga.

Now that he is leaving Washington, Lance will no longer have to pay the $18,000-a-year rent for his house in Georgetown, and will not have to sell his stock in the National Bank of Georgia at a loss.

He owned about $2.9 million in National Bank of Georgia stock when he took office, but it has declined in value from 17 cents a share to about 12 cents. He could lose $1 million if he sells it.

Although he owns 17 per cent of the bank stock, it was not clear whether he would have a job with the bank if he returned.

Robert Guyton, who replaced Lance as president of the Atlanta bank, said last night, "Obviously, we don't know Mr. Lance's plans for the future."

One of Lance's biggest problems is a $3.4 million loan from the First National Bank of Chicago. Lance has to pay $225,000 per year in interest on that loan and had been counting on stock dividends to help pay for it. However, his

Ask shelter care restriction

By DORIS KULMAN

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — Hospitals and social service agencies should be prohibited from placing former mental patients in any shelter care boarding home which hasn't passed municipal fire, safety and health inspections and doesn't comply with the local zoning code, a county Welfare Board staff committee recommended yesterday.

That recommendation would give the location of unlicensed homes to municipal officials, Harry J. Postel, the board's project administrator for after-care services and chairman of its boarding home committee, acknowledged.

Despite the growing clamor over unlicensed shelter care homes, the Welfare Board has refused to give their addresses to municipal officials, insisting that it would be a violation of client confidentiality.

A state license isn't required unless a shelter care home has more than three boarders.

There has been an area-wide crackdown on unlicensed homes since last June, when four former mental patients burned to death in a fire in an unlicensed home in Sea Bright. Sea Bright officials said they didn't know the property was being used to house former mental patients.

"There's a difference between giving the location of a home and giving the name of the person being placed in it," Mr. Postel told the Welfare Board at its public meeting yesterday.

"But the first requirement is that the home be physically safe?" Freeholder Ernest G. Kavalek, a Welfare Board member who supports disclosure of the addresses to municipal officials, asked rhetorically.

"That's it," Mr. Postel replied.

In the report Mr. Postel presented yesterday, the boarding home committee called for sweeping changes in the way aged, poor, and physically and mentally disabled clients are placed in shelter care homes and in the ways in which the homes are regulated, operated, and paid.

Most of the recommendations require changes in state legislation or regulations, Mr. Postel conceded.

But Mr. Postel and Louis Armour, the board's acting director, agreed there is one

Matawan makes slow progress

By DAVID GRAULICH

MATAWAN — As weary negotiators and frustrated parents paused to observe today's Jewish holiday, there were continuing signs the Matawan Regional teachers strike is making glacier-like progress towards settlement.

State mediator Jack Tillem concluded an all-night bargaining session at 5:30. Wednesday morning by saying he detected "a small glimmer of hope." Mr. Tillem, who has authority to schedule the talks, said the next negotiating session will probably take place Sunday night.

The football game's off, page 29

Meanwhile, Vincent DeMaio, school board attorney, said he will seek contempt summonses for the teachers today from Superior Court Judge Thomas Yaccarino.

Mr. DeMaio said he thinks the citations can be in the hands of about half the 400 teachers by Monday.

Judge Yaccarino on Sept. 16 issued an order restraining the teachers from striking and ordering the board and the teachers to negotiate.

That's my baby!

THAT'MY BABY! — Mrs. Cathy Gibson, of Crittenden, Ky., smiles as she recognizes face on photograph in Hammond, Ind. police station last night. The picture is that of her son, Shawn Michael Wayne Gibson, five-months-old, found abandoned in a Hammond alley on Monday. Mrs. Gibson discovered the whereabouts of her son after viewing an Associated Press Laserphoto Tuesday, and was driven to Hammond by Kentucky State Police, where positive identification was made. Shawn is shown in inset.

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A 5-month-old baby found abandoned in an alley here has been identified as Shawn Michael Wayne Gibson — taken from his parents' home about 275 miles from here on Sunday.

Police said the child was identified yesterday after the Crittenden, Ky., couple were shown a news service photograph of the child. Police contacted the couple after Mrs. Laveta Eleam, the baby's grandmother, saw a similar picture at a Vincennes, Ind., newspaper office.

Mrs. Eleam was sure the child was her missing grandson, but Kentucky state police had to contact the parents for positive identification.

The mother, Cathy Gibson, 23, of Crittenden, Ky., arrived here late yesterday to claim the baby. But authorities refused to give her immediate custody.

Lt. William Olson said welfare officials apparently wanted more information about the baby's disappearance. He said they also wanted to make sure Shawn was returning to a good home.

Olson said the foot prints of the abandoned infant and the Gibson baby matched, and Mrs. Gibson also identified a diaper bag and clothing recovered with the child.

She was taken to a private home after meeting with FBI agents to discuss the case. Olson said they would try to reunite the mother and child Thursday morning.

Mrs. Gibson said her husband, Mike, is a semi-truck driver and could not accompany her.

Before identification, the platinum-haired baby with a distinctive "widow's peak" had been named Johnny by a woman who decided she wanted to adopt the child after she kept him overnight.

Mrs. Mary Stephens, a neighbor of the man who found the child, said "It really broke me up. It hurt," when authorities took the child away.

The baby was found here Monday by Jim Hall in an alley behind his home. Hall had the baby in his arms when his neighbor, Mrs. Stephens, arrived.

"Where did you get that?" she asked.

"I found it," said Jim.

Mrs. Stephens, unable to bear children of her own, was handed the infant. She said she wanted to call him Johnny after her husband John, a security guard.

Hammond juvenile authorities said they let Mrs. Stephens keep the baby overnight. But now he is in the protective custody of the Lake County, Ind., Welfare Services.

Police also said they were searching for a 23-year-old woman named "Mary." Reportedly, the Gibson's left the baby with a male friend Sunday while they were out. Police believe he left the infant with Mary and she disappeared with him.

"Found with the child was a yellow flowered baby bag containing diapers, lotion, baby powder, a red, white and blue T-shirt and small red shorts," said Lt. William Olson of the Hammond juvenile division. "This has been described as belonging to the Gibsons."

The grandmother, said that Shawn had such clothes and "there was a baby bag with tulips on it."

Evel Knievel faces assault, gun charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel, who apparently was en route to surrender to police, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon in an alleged attack on a 20th Century Fox executive, authorities said.

Knievel was released late Wednesday night after posting $1,000 bond. He was scheduled to be arraigned next Wednesday in West Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Police said Knievel knew he was being sought and it appeared he had planned to turn himself in when he was arrested by a patrol officer who spotted him on a freeway in North Hollywood.

Sheldon Saltman, 46, was treated for compound fractures of the left arm and a broken wrist after the incident earlier Wednesday, authorities said.

The vice president of the telecommunications division of Fox Studios told police that Knievel and an unidentified man confronted him outside the studio commissary. He said Knievel hit him with a baseball bat, according to police.

Mark Erickson, an aide to Saltman, said Saltman used to be Knievel's publicity agent and wrote the book "Evel Knievel on Tour." The book told the story of the much-publicized but ill-fated Snake River Canyon stunt which Knievel failed to accomplish.

Erickson said Knievel apparently was upset with some parts of the book.

Son of Sam suspect has girlfriend

NEW YORK (AP) — A penpal romance apparently has developed between David Berkowitz, the suspected .44-caliber killer known as "Son of Sam," and a Brooklyn woman who has offered him a "place to stay when he gets out of the hospital."

Rosina Belpedio, 40, told The Associated Press late yesterday she considers Berkowitz "handsome" and "very close to me."

But broke and downhearted, Miss Belpedio has sold for $100 a letter Berkowitz wrote to her. "I needed the money. I was broke. I hope Sam forgives me," she said.

The letter from the 24-year-old Berkowitz was in reply to two love notes Miss Belpedio sent to him at Kings County Hospital, where he is undergoing psychiatric tests. He is accused of murdering six persons and wounding seven others in a 12-month period.

In his note, Berkowitz thanked "Rosina" for being his friend and for her "lovely letters." He promised he'd pray for her, but begged off on an apparent request for a get-together.

Others have different things in mind for Son of Sam suspect. See story on page 5.

"However, there are a lot (sic) of things that can never be, such as, the two of us getting together," the letter read. "Wherever I'm going, it will be for a long time, too long. I don't think we could ever get together, it just cannot be.

"Rosina, I sense that your (sic) very much like me — a lonely person. I just hope this letter happens to cheer you up."

His letter, dated Sept. 11, concluded with, "Goodbye, Rosina, and thank you for caring. Take care. Yours truly,

"David B."

"SAM"

Miss Belpedio said she offered Berkowitz a temporary home since "eventually he's going to get out of the hospital and when he does he'll need a place to stay."

community together for the overall improvement of the westside.

"Without community involvement," said Richard Johnson, chairman of the revitalization committee, "we have nothing."

"Our hope," Mr. Johnson said, "is that the people over here will have more self esteem and will be encouraged to improve their properties."

The westside committee was named by Mayor Daniel J. O'Hern a year ago to come up with recommendations for revitalizing the westside, once a thriving business area.

Mr. Johnson said the committee will strongly urge that the borough make necessary physical improvements to the area, but that local contractors and workers be employed on the job.

The committee, he said, feels very strongly that westside contractors and workers must be employed to make the planned improvements to the sidewalks, curbs, lighting, and landscaping.

"A person," he said, "who is involved in building something, has pride in that thing, and we need more of that."

The borough has already committed more than $130,000 for construction of new sidewalks, curbing, and lighting along a four-block area of Shrewsbury Ave.

Mr. O'Hern said last night the money has been received and the project will proceed this year.

He agreed with the committee's request that local contractors be hired for the work, and also agreed that the westside contractors should first get together and be prepared to submit bids for the various contracts which will be awarded.

The mayor said the work would have to be placed out for bid, and thus Westside contractors must be prepared to submit bids.

He also said the borough has the right to give preference on the award of bids to local contractors.

The chamber's westside committee has devoted most of its energy to finding ways to provide funds for redevelopment of the area.

John K. Pawlowski, chamber president, said the chamber will create a redevelopment committee and apply for federal CETA funds to hire a director and secretary.

The corporation, he said, will apply for and channel whatever state or federal funds may be available for redevelopment of urban areas.

He said one of the functions of the corporation will be to buy up property sold by the borough for taxes, fix it up and sell it at a reasonable costs.

The idea, he said, is to get some of the run down properties back onto the tax rolls, thus giving other property owners the incentive to improve their own properties.

Mr. Kay said the new state law designed to provide low-cost loans to residents of urban areas, should make home improvement loans much more available to these areas than in the past.

Mr. Kay said the state Mortgage Finance Agency will pay banks a fee for accepting loans from urban areas and then will offer to buy these approved loans from the banks.

Borrowers would pay up to two percent less than normal interest rates. To qualify a family of four must have a total income of less than $16,900.

Mr. Johnson said last night, however, that the basic problem on the westside can't be resolved unless the people are involved.

"As long as people in the community are unemployed, hungry, and don't give a damn," he said, "no amount of window dressing is going to accomplish a thing."

thing the board can and should do immediately — coordinate a committee made up of representatives of all agencies which use Monmouth boarding homes so they can share information on which homes provide good care, and which provide bad care "or have been abusive to clients."

The Welfare Board should distribute to other agencies a list of towns that require a license or certificate to operate a boarding home, the committee recomended. It said clients should be told about those regulations because it would help them choose where to live.

The Welfare Board has a directory like that now, Mr. Armour said.

The committee recommended that the state Departments of Health and Human Services give one agency in the county central responsibility for inspecting and certifying all boarding facilities in the county. Social agencies would be allowed to place clients only in those boarding homes the central agency had certified.

A boarding home would have to meet municipal fire, safety and zoning regulations before it could be certified, Mr. Postel explained. In addition, the agency would set standards for socialization, hygiene, recreation, nutrition and protection of a boarder's personal rights, and certification also would depend on how well a boarding home met those standards. The central agency would provide training programs to help boarding home staff meet the new standards.

The central agency also would develop a rate schedule that would pay boarding home operators according to the quality of the services they provide and the competence of their staff, instead of on a daily rate, as now. Changes would be needed in the Medicare and Social Security systems to make that possible.

The Department of Human Services "should develop clear guidelines to distinguish between patients who need shelter home care and those who need room and board and put it in writing," Mr. Postel said. He said hospital social service departments should make sure a mental patient is discharged to a home that provides the services he needs.

"But we can only regulate the system, we can't regulate the client," Mr. Postel said. "A person leaving the hospital is free to live anyplace, to choose or reject a service whether we think it's appropriate or not. If we thought John Doe should be going to a particular home and he says 'no, I don't think so, I like the one down the street better,' that's his right."

But several Welfare Board members protested what they obviously saw as the long arm of bureaucracy reaching into homes whose owners have one or two rooms to rent and are willing to rent them to former mental patients.

The committee's recommendations would displace some people living quietly now with families, Dr. James W. Parker, Welfare Board chairman, said, noting that the requirements for state licensure "sometimes mean some degree of reconstruction."

Dr. Parker said many boarding home residents "are elderly and confused and because of their incapacities are a problem for communities. Some towns absorb them, and are genuinely concerned about them. And I agree they all should be in safe, fireproof homes. But all communities should share the responsibility. If they did, there would be fewer in Long Branch, Asbury Park, Red Bank. We can't have all the confused and incapacitated in one community and none in the others. Because a town doesn't want a boarding home, a patient from the town has to go to another municipality . . .

Matawan

Both sides expressed interest in moving the talks back to the Hilton Inn, Tinton Falls, where the first three sessions were held. The talks were moved to the Molly Pitcher Inn, Red Bank, after the Hilton was filled with New York Knicks basketball players training at Monmouth College.

Teachers spokesman Marvin Reed said yesterday the Tuesday night meeting "was the first one that took place the way it was supposed to" during the 11-month dispute. Mr. Reed said progress was made but declined to specify on what issues movement had taken place.

Board spokeswoman Kathleen Marshall said the Tuesday night session contained "more dialogue on issues than in the past 11 months. There's been very serious dialogue. Negotiations are talking place; both sides, even during the breaks, are constantly considering alternatives."

According to Mr. Reed, figures from seven of the eight Matawan schools showed that five regular teachers reported to work Wednesday out of some 400 association members. There were 1263 students in school, out of a total enrollment of 6,600, and 79 substitutes crossed picked lines.

There were other developments as the strike ended its fourth day:

— The Board of Education ran a full-page advertisement in local newspapers, quoting last week's restraining order.

Mr. Reed denounced the ad, saying, "It seems to come right from the book of the strike-package manual of the New Jersey School Boards Association."

— A Friday meeting was called for Matawan parents to discuss the strike. According to Mrs. Linda Roemer, the meeting organizer, the purpose is "an informative meeting; we're not advocating one position or another. We'll have an agenda, and spend about 15 minutes discussing each issue of the strike." Mrs. Roemer said board members would be excluded from the meeting and that only teachers who have children in Matawan schools would be allowed to attend. The purpose of excluding the two groups, she said, "is because we don't want it to end up in a shouting match." The parents meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Matawan Women's Clubhouse, 199 Jackson Street.

— A group of seven Matawan clergymen issued a statement yesterday, urging the two sides "to speedily resolve the issues between them in a just and equitable manner. We feel time is a critical factor if children and parents are to maintain respect for teachers and the Board of Education. Our children are being deprived of their education and the morale of the community is being undermined. We urge both bodies to act in good faith and in the best interest of the community immediately. We also offer our resources to bring about a solution."

The statement was signed by Rev. George Jaeger of the Trinity Episcopal Church; Rev. Timothy Swanson, Cross of Glory Lutheran; Rev. Michael Miller, First Presbyterian Church; Rabbi Barry Dov Lerner, Temple Beth Ahm; Rabbi Henry Wiener, Temple Shalom; Rev. Lewis Kisenwee, First Baptist Church, and Rev. Robert Heulitt, First Methodist Church.

Boat burns, dad, son rescued

MANTOLOKING, (AP) — A former Indiana man and his 11-year-old son have been rescued from a burning 27-foot sailboat that was reported to be their permanent home.

New Jersey Marine Police said Douglas Kindred, 41, and his son were anchored in Barnegat Bay off the coast here last night when the youth overfilled a lit kerosene lantern and ignited the craft.

They were rescued by a local resident who saw flames from shore, the marine police said.

Sam Peters, a marine police officer, said Kindred told him afterwards he had sold his belongings in Indiana and began living on the boat in June.

Kindred told marine police his sailing trip had taken him through the Great Lakes and Erie Canal, down the Hudson River and into the Atlantic Ocean. The trip was to continue down the Atlantic coast, marine police said.

Concordes to become extinct

LONDON — A House of Commons committee has driven another nail into the Concorde's coffin, reporting there's no possibility of selling the supersonic airliner at a profit.

The report issued yesterday by the influential Public Accounts Committee said there "appears to be no practical possibility of Concorde production beyond the 16 aircraft being authorized" by the British and French governments.

"Concorde Doomed," said a headline in the London Evening News.

The two governments announced last November they would stop production when the initial fleet was completed in mid-1978, and British cabinet ministers have indicated that decision will stand.

EAST WINDSOR — A man who robbed a bank here this week probably got away red-handed, police say.

The gunman left the Franklin State Bank here Tuesday with the bag of money he asked for and a canister of red dye that he hadn't requested, police said.

The canister was designed to explode and emit a powder that permanently stains anything it touches. As an added touch, an enterprising bank teller tossed a vial of tear gas into the money bag, authorities said.

East Windsor Police Chief Joseph G. Micniski asked area merchants to be on the lookout for red greenbacks.

SALT treaty may expire

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace it.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department.

The initial SALT agreement, signed five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers. The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months.

Little radiation danger found

SEATTLE — Fallout from China's nuclear test caused only a slight rise in radiation in the Northwest and posed little health danger, federal officials say.

The air mass carrying the fallout was expected to move northeastward and reach the Great Lakes region today and the East Coast on Friday.

Mid-morning radiation checks yesterday in Seattle and Juneau, Alaska, showed no increase in ground radiation, but afternoon checks at Anchorage and Portland, Oreg., indicated there was some rise in radioactivity.

Rate of inflation slows

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose by only three-tenths of 1 per cent last month, the lowest monthly rate of inflation since last November, the Labor Department reported yesterday.

The August increase reflected continued moderation in grocery prices and a slowdown in the cost of services, including household charges and mortgage interest rates.

The slowing of inflation this summer has been one of the few bright spots in an otherwise cloudy economic picture, which has seen unemployment rising and economic growth slacken.

Carter administration economists called the price report encouraging.

Blast at Fisherman's Wharf

SAN FRANCISCO — At least five persons were injured yesterday when a gas explosion set a two-story building ablaze on Pier 43 at Fisherman's Wharf, officials said.

Fire fighters aided by two U.S. Coast Guard cutters and three smaller boats from the water fought the blaze for an hour and a half.

Workmen from Pacific Gas & Electric Co. were shutting off a gas main when the blast rocked the building about 11 a.m.

Showdown vote is tonight

WASHINGTON — The Senate is ready to choose between President Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas and a rival proposal to lift them.

After days of maneuvering, those on both sides of the issue agreed to schedule a showdown vote for tonight. Advicates of deregulation were predicting victory by at least a four-vote margin. Administration allies were saying the vote is too close to call.

If the Senate votes for deregulation of new natural gas, as it did in 1975, it would be another blow to a Carter energy program that already has been decimated by Senate floor and committee action.

Facing up to situation

Irreplaceable

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is trying to replace a man he says is irreplaceable. Stunned by the resignation of longtime friend Bert Lance as his budget director, Carter began the search today for a successor. "There will be an orderly transition," the President told a news conference yesterday when he announced Lance's resignation. "I will decide beginning after today on who a successor might be."

Among names that quickly surfaced were: James T. McIntyre Jr., director of Georgia's budget office in 1972 while Carter was governor and now deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, which Lance had headed; Robert Strauss, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now the U.S. ambassador for trade negotiations; Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office and Hale Champion, former California finance director and now an official at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Carter said the task of finding a new budget director won't be easy. "I don't think there is any way that I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance that would be, in my judgment, as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he has been," the President said. "Obviously, the government will continue," Carter declared, "and I hope to do a good job as President, and I am sure a successor will be adequate. But there has been a special relationship between me and Bert Lance that transcended official responsibilities or duties or even governmental service of the last six or seven years.

"So he has occupied a special place in my governmental career, in my political career, and in my personal life. I don't think there is any way anyone could replace him now." Carter hinted that he might have an additional problem because of the controversy that finally forced Lance to resign. Asked if the Lance affair had damaged his own credibility with the American people, the President replied: "I can't say. I'd guess to some extent."

In a letter to "My Dear Mr. President," Lance quit "because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it" surrounding his personal financial affairs and his business dealings as the head of two Georgia banks. His departure ends the first internal crisis in the President's young administration.

LaBelle speaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — LaBelle Lance was wrong. She and her husband won't be around to see their azaleas bloom next spring. They're going back to Georgia. Just a week ago, the wife of the former budget director pointed to the azaleas she and her husband had planted in the back yard of their Georgetown house as a sign of their determination to ride out the controversy about Lance's financial affairs. They would be in Washington to see the azaleas bloom, she said.

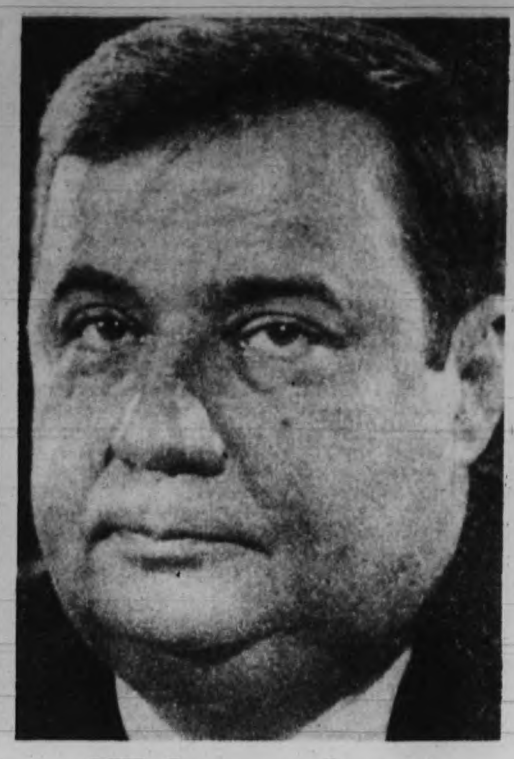

"I still feel he could take a job anywhere," Mrs. Lance said shortly after President Carter announced the resignation on national television. "He's honest and good, and I'm proud of him." Within minutes after President Carter's press conference, Mrs. Lance stepped out on the front steps of their fashionable Georgetown house to make what she called a "statement of faith."

"I did not have anything to do with the resignation," Mrs. Lance said in a voice that was tentative at first, then grew strong, and finally broke several times with emothion. "As far as I'm concerned, my husband din't have to resign." "I told him I would not resign, but again, that was not my decision."

Mrs. Lance, who earlier in the day looked tired and distraught, had changed from slacks to an expensive pale blue ultrasuede dress. She appeared, as one observer said, "at peace with the decision."

Mrs. Lance, a devout Methodist who writes religious poetry, said faith helped her though the past few weeks. "As long as I can walk in the light of Christ, I have faith that he puts me where he wants me," she said. "And my husband shares that same faith."

She married Lance 27 years ago. Both were 19. He was the son of an educator in the Georgia mountains, she is the granddaughter of the founder of the Calhoun bank. Several years later, Lance became a teller in that bank. By age 32, he was president.

Welcome home

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — At 5 p.m. yesterday the sign on the road to Bert Lance's home town said, "Support Bert. Call the White House." An hour later, after President Carter had announced the budget director's resignation, the sign said, "Welcome Home, Bert Lance."

routed from his top federal job, the former $90-a-week bank teller who became a millionaire and top adviser to the President was still a hero to the local folks.

Residents were sad, quiet and bitter yesterday as they waited and watched Carter's somber announcement of Lance's resignation from the Office of Management and Budget. "He's a good ol' boy," said Luther Begley, clerk of the county court and a solid Lance supporter. "I really enjoyed it when they got the Republicans during Watergate, but I don't like this at all."

Jack Mullins stood behind the counter of his pharmacy and swore softly. He claimed Washington liberals attacked Lance because they opposed his plan to cut the federal bureaucracy. "He's the only fiscal conservative up there," said Mullins, speculating that northern antipathy toward southerners fueled much of the opposition to Lance.

"I feel real, real bad," said the Rev. Bob Maddox, a Baptist minister. "Bert has spoken in all the churches as a lay speaker. If he met you, he never forgot your name."

"It's a horrible mistake," said Harbin King, probate judge of Gordon County and one of a handful of local civic leaders who gathered in front of a television set in the Chamber of Commerce office to watch Carter's news conference.

Lance future

bank's financial troubles forced suspension of dividends on that stock in the last quarter.

The Chicago bank has demanded more collateral because of the decline in the value of the Georgia bank stock and as a result of studies of Lance's finances by banking regulators. Lance has put most of his real estate up as loan collateral.

At his confirmation hearings, Lance listed a net worth of $2.6 million, with assets of $7.9 million and liabilities of $5.3 million, but the picture may not be as good now.

For one thing, Lance has personally had to pay for a lot of the work done to defend himself at Senate hearings and for reports by the comptroller of the currency.

Lance also faces continued investigation and possibly legal costs from a variety of government agencies looking into his affairs.

The Justice Department, Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Election Commission are investigating his use of bank aircraft, and the Securities and Exchange Commission is trying to find out if he and his bank made enough disclosures to stockholders.

Middletown man named in charge

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — A Middletown man is free on $500 bail after being charged with possession of a deadly weapon and trespassing at the City Dump tavern on Sept. 2.

Stewart Johnson, 25, of 250 First Ave., faces a hearing tomorrow night for possession of a "nunchuck," a weapon police said was used in oriental defense consisting of two sticks connected by a leather thong.

Police said Thomas Kelly, the owner of the bar, the complainant, had asked Johnson to leave the tavern. When Johnson allegedly refused to leave, police were called and Johnson allegedly fled. Johnson turned himself in to police on Friday.

Facing charges in Red Bank

RED BANK — Austin Jackson, 58, of 72 Cherry St., Tinton Falls, is free on $500 bail, pending a court appearance at 9:30 a.m. Monday on charges of selling and possessing alcoholic beverages.

Patrolman Robert Kennedy and officials from the Alcoholic Beverage Control made the arrest at 10:57 a.m. Sunday at W. Bergen Place and Willow St.

Louis A. Armour

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — The Monmouth County Welfare Board yesterday named its deputy director, Louis A. Armour, to the post of acting director for an indefinite time at an annual salary of $27,177, or $1,904 more than he was earning in the agency's number 2 slot.

Mr. Armour will be filling in for Robert C. Wells, who was given a six-month leave of absence to try out the job of director of the state Division of Youth and Family Service (DYFS).

Mr. Armour, a 38-year-old Long Branch resident, has been the board's deputy director for the past six years.

He began his career with the Welfare Board 13 years ago as a caseworker.

"This clearly shows we aren't hesitant to name Mr. Armour ... we have every confidence in Louis Armour," Freeholder Ernest G. Kavalek, a Welfare Board member, said when the board approved the appointment yesterday.

Mr. Kavalek said later that his comment "was meant to be a general one," and didn't refer specifically to allegations of possible conflict of interest by Louis Armour because his brother, Thomas Armour, owns licensed and unlicensed shelter care homes in the county. The Welfare Board makes referrals to shelter care homes.

"I know those allegations and I personally condemn them," Mr. Kavalek said later.

Mr. Armour would be among those eligible to take the Civil Service examination for permanent appointment as Welfare Board director if Mr. Wells resigns to keep the DYFS post.

The Welfare Board granted Mr. Wells a six-month leave of absence when he was named to the $35,000-a-year state job. Freeholder Director Ray Kramer, also a Welfare Board member, said that left the way open for Mr. Wells to return if he disliked the job or if the results of November's gubernatorial election makes his state appointment precarious.

Mr. Armour worked briefly as a claims examiner for the Social Security Administration in Baltimore and served a two-year hitch with the Army before joining the county Welfare Board.

Welfare clients will get surprise visits

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — County welfare workers will begin making surprise visits to some clients' homes the week of Oct. 3, Louis A. Armour, acting director of the county Welfare Board, said yesterday.

A special unit of three experienced income maintenance technicians will drop in unannounced at the homes of 150 new applicants for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (ADC) during October, Mr. Armour reported at the board's public meeting yesterday. About 300 new families go on the county ADC rolls each month.

The board last month authorized a $15,000, three-month pilot project intended to determine whether or not surprise house calls will catch more welfare cheats than its customary procedure. The board has been relying on a paper-and-telephone check of the information an ADC applicant supplies about residence, employment, the number of children and the family's financial resources.

Surprise home visits will have been made to 450 new ADC clients by the time the project ends Dec. 31.

The pilot project is a response to a Monmouth County grand jury presentment which said the board is letting welfare cheats bilk county taxpayers.

The grand jury, citing $726,298 in alleged welfare fraud during a 19-month period ending last April, criticized county welfare administrators and the board's investigative procedures. The board should make an in-the-home investigation of all ADC applications, the grand jury said.

The amount of fraud uncovered through the home visits to 50 per cent of new ADC families will be compared with the number of fraud cases detected by the board's usual procedure to see whether or not the home investigations justify their cost, Mr. Armour said last month.

He said the three-month project will cost $15,000 for "straight salaries" and doesn't include fringe benefits or travel and clerical costs. He said the board would have to add eight workers at a minimum annual cost of $80,000 for salaries alone to make a home visit to each new ADC client, and that it would cost another $150,000 in salaries alone for the additional workers required to make a home visit to each of the 7,800 ADC families when their cases are up for semi-annual or quarterly review.

The board has said that the alleged fraud cited in the grand jury presentment involves only 2 per cent of welfare cases and less than 2 per cent of the money distributed.

Strike forum is scheduled

MATAWAN — Borough Council still plans to convene a public forum tomorrow night where all sides of the contract dispute between the Matawan Regional Teachers Association (MRTA) and the Regional Board of Education can be aired.

Location of the 8 p.m. meeting was not decided on last night.

The meeting is the result of a resolution adopted at Tuesday's council meeting which called for the striking teachers, the school board, the governing bodies here and in Matawan Township and the public in general to meet to air problems which have resulted in a strike by the 407-member MRTA.

The resolution stated that the meeting would take place if agreement had not been reached between the striking teachers and the school board.

A marathon negotiating session held between the two bodies Tuesday night into early yesterday morning resulted in no settlement, but the consensus was that the two sides were closer to agreement than they have been since negotiations began.

Contract negotiations are not expected to resume until Sunday.

Robert Feldman, borough attorney, said yesterday the Township Council did not go along with the resolution," but they offered assistance.

"Borough Council still intends to have a public meeting," Mr. Feldman said. "We are still prepared to hold any sort of public meeting that can be held," he added.

"All we are attempting to do is to provide a forum so that things can be hammered out," he said.

If the high school auditorium is not available for the meeting, Mr. Feldman said it would take place in Borough Hall.

"We can't force anyone to attend. All we can do is make the facilities available. Borough Council will provide whatever it can for the public meeting in the event the parties have not reached a settlement," the attorney said.

A group of concerned parents plan a meeting of their own tomorrow in the Matwan Women's Club House, 199 Jackson St. Parents plan to air their feelings at that meeting.

Housing proposal outlined to board

SHREWSBURY — The developers of the Marc Court subdivision here have asked the Planning Board to consider the same type of single-family housing on 32.5 acres of the azalea farm off Silverbrook Road.

In an informal presentation last night, representatives of Marberg Developers, Inc., Lincroft, contract purchasers of the tract from Angelo Bruno here, outlined a plan to construct homes in the $70,000 price range on half-acre lots.

The Bruno family would retain their home and two acres of surrounding property.

Similar informal discussions of development proposals have become a staple of planning board agendas in recent months, as developers try to feel out board reaction without investing in expensive formal architects' and engineers' plans.

Last month, the board heard proposals for a 600-unit retirement and health care facility for 174 acres of the Genola Tract, Rt. 35, and a plan to subdivide the 83-acre David Marx estate into 208 residential lots.

Board Chairman Samuel Hathaway said the board would continue to hear the informal presentations, but was "in no position to give fast answers" on the proposals.

Mr. Hathaway reminded all the would-be developers the borough was in the process of drawing up a new Master Plan, and local agencies would have to consider all the higher-density proposals together.

"They are all totally and completely interlocked," said Kenneth Buck.

The board expressed particular concern over the Marberg Developers' proposal, since at least a portion of the azalea farm is designated as a future school and recreational site in the present community facilities map.

Although designations shown on the map are not binding, board members noted that with even a fraction of the development plans before it going to completion, the borough would need a new school, a new firehouse and additional recreational areas.

Mr. Hathaway, Dr. Carl Gardiner and Bernard Marx will serve as board representatives on a newly formed committee with members of Borough Council and the Zoning Board of Adjustment to interview a half-dozen planning consultants.

Hiring a professional planner is considered a necessary step in the master plan revision process.

In other cases before it, the board granted conditional approval to Leo and Mary Scimeca for plans to demolish an existing house at 765 Broad St. and erect a new Schwinn bicycle showroom, and to S&K Inc., for a 1,820 square-foot commercial building on Riordan Place.

Both still need specific approvals from various agencies including the Shade Tree Commission.

Bus study scheduled

HOLMDEL — A committee will be created by the Board of Education to investigate additional possibilities of busing students to St. Leo the Great Elementary School, Lincroft, and meet with parents on the issue.

More than two dozen parents attended last night's school board meeting, urging the board to provide transportation for approximately 12 local children who attend the parochial school.

Transportation for them and Christian Brothers Academy students had been provided in the past, according to Robert E. Meyer, assistant superintendent. But because enrollment of Holmdel students at CBA jumped from 39 to 52 this year, and a school bus capacity is 54, he said, "It made more sense to transport these children to CBA and find an alternative route for St. Leo's 12 students. We tried for a solution with our own public school routes, but it couldn't be done because of the schedules."

He said school transportation officials sought other alternatives, such as combining the St. Leo's route with other private school routes, creating another private school route, offering parents the state allocation of $200 annually per student to provide their own means of transportation, and a jointure arrangement with other school districts.

"Every approach to transporting these youngsters was investigated thoroughly," Mr. Meyer said.

Parents, however, disagreed.

"The board didn't consider the age, distance, seniority resident taxpayers, the use of buses and road hazards," declared John Gittens, 12 Allocco Drive. "The board didn't contact the parents before the decision or have a public meeting," he added.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER — Dr. David Elkind yesterday addressed approximately 50 social service professionals in the conclusion of a three-day seminar sponsored by the Children's Psychiatric Center in Eatontown. Dr. Elkind's topic was curriculum disabled students.

Unhealthy for students

School curricula rapped

By ANN BRENOFF

WEST LONG BRANCH— School can sometimes be unhealthy for students, maintains a leading professor of psychiatry and education professor.

Addressing a three-day long conference sponsored by the Children's Psychiatric Center at the Holiday Inn, here, Dr. David Elkind yesterday told the 50 social service workers gathered that school related problems are often the cause of emotional disturbance instead of being merely a symptom of the disorder.

Dr. Elkind, professor of Psychology, psychiatry and education at the University of Rochester, discussed "curriculum disabled children."

The speaker sharply criticized curriculum guides used by teachers and noted that the production of these guides "has the worst quality control of any American industry."

"The reasons that these curriculum guides are so bad is that they aren't field tested— in the classroom— before being sold to the schools," he said.

"Teachers generally have to modify the materials to adjust them to the classroom situation. And after teachers get the guides to a workable point, the publishers come out with a new edition— and the teachers have to start all over again," Dr. Elkind added!

Dr. Elkind cited complicated instructions as one example of a poor teaching guide.

"If the kids can't understand the instructions, how are they supposed to work the problem?," he posed.

Another point he raised which leads to curriculum disabled students is "encouraging the early introduction to reading."

According to Dr. Elkind, "there is no data that says teaching children to read in first grade is better than starting them reading in second grade."

"In fact," he added, "there is considerable evidence that says delaying the start of reading instruction may be preferable."

Dr. Elkind said that it is often for socio-economic motive that a parents associate early reading with higher intelligence.

"In Russia, students are taught to read at age seven. In France, they begin reading at age five. Twenty-five per cent of the French students have reading problems," he stated.

"Reading is like retiring," he maintained, "some people are ready to retire at age 50, others can still be productive when they are 80. So why force everyone to stop work at age 65.

"Similiarly," he continued, "some children are capable of reading at a pre-school age— others should wait to be taught."

Dr. Elkind maintained that "fifty per cent of our reading problems would be eliminated if all students were given a later start on reading instruction."

"Because when a child doesn't do well at the start of school, it gets the process steamrolling," he said.

"And school failure is a public failure. Every day, that child must be glaringly reminded that he can't do or read what his classmates can," he stated.

"The results of school failure are often lower self-esteem, a lower sense of industry and often family disharmony," Dr. Elkind concluded.

Friends of victims urge Sam death

NEW YORK (AP) — About 75 relatives and friends of Son of Sam victims demanded death for David R. Berkowitz as they marched Wednesday outside the building where the man accused of being the .44-caliber killer is undergoing psychiatric tests.

"If they would ask me, I'd say 'Hang him upside down on a tree,'" said Nandor Freund, father of Christine Fruend, 26, who was shot and killed in Forest Hills, Queens, on Jan. 30.

The demonstrators shouted: "Kill 'im! Kill 'im!" "We want a trial now," "A trial's not good enough for him," "Sam's not insane" and "We want Sam."

"Let me have 'im," shouted one man.

The revenge-seeking marchers said they also were seeking full restoration of the death penalty. Under New York law, only the murder of a police officer or prison guard can be punished by death.

Meanwhile, Berkowitz, who was charged with six killings and seven woundings in a 12-month shooting spree, was confined under heavy guard on the sixth-floor prison ward in Building G at Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn.

The demonstrators, who were not allowed inside the building, carried signs proclaiming: "Kill Son of Sam," "The Rope for the .44-Killer," "Less Security for Berkowitz, More for the People," "What About the Victims" and "Revenge Now."

Spencer Lader, an attorney who said he is representing the families, said that, although he approved of what they are doing he was opposed to the signs.

"You're innocent until proven guilty," Lader said, "but you can't tell these people that."

The protest was organized by Eva Freund, Christine's 20-year-old sister. She said its purpose was "to voice our opinions and feelings and show the people, the whole world, that we do not accept what they are telling us."

Miss Freund was referring to the results of tests that showed Berkowitz incompetent to stand trial. New tests are being conducted now on behalf of the Brooklyn district attorney's office.

"He should come to trial immediately," said Miss Freund.

She said, "We don't want him put in a mental institution so he can get out in 10, 20 years, whatever, and start all over," she added.

"I want that man up there to go through some of the pain I went through," said John Diel, 30, who was with Miss Freund the night she was slain.

Church to mark its 150th

MARLBORO—The Old Brick Reformed Church, Route 520, will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the dedication of its Church building this weekend with a two day camping program on the church ground.

Members of the congregation will gather during Friday and Saturday bringing their camping equipment. They will stay over until after services and a luncheon Sunday afternoon.

The camping is meant to recall the "camp meetings" popular among Christians in the 19th century.

The congregation was originally established in 1699 by Dutch settlers. Pastors from what is now Brooklyn would ride down to the church to conduct services. In 1709 the congregation obtained its own, resident pastor.

The present building, opened in 1827, is the second building serving the congregation on that spot. The original building was on Main Street, Marlboro. After the congregatiom outgrew that facility they moved to the church's present location.

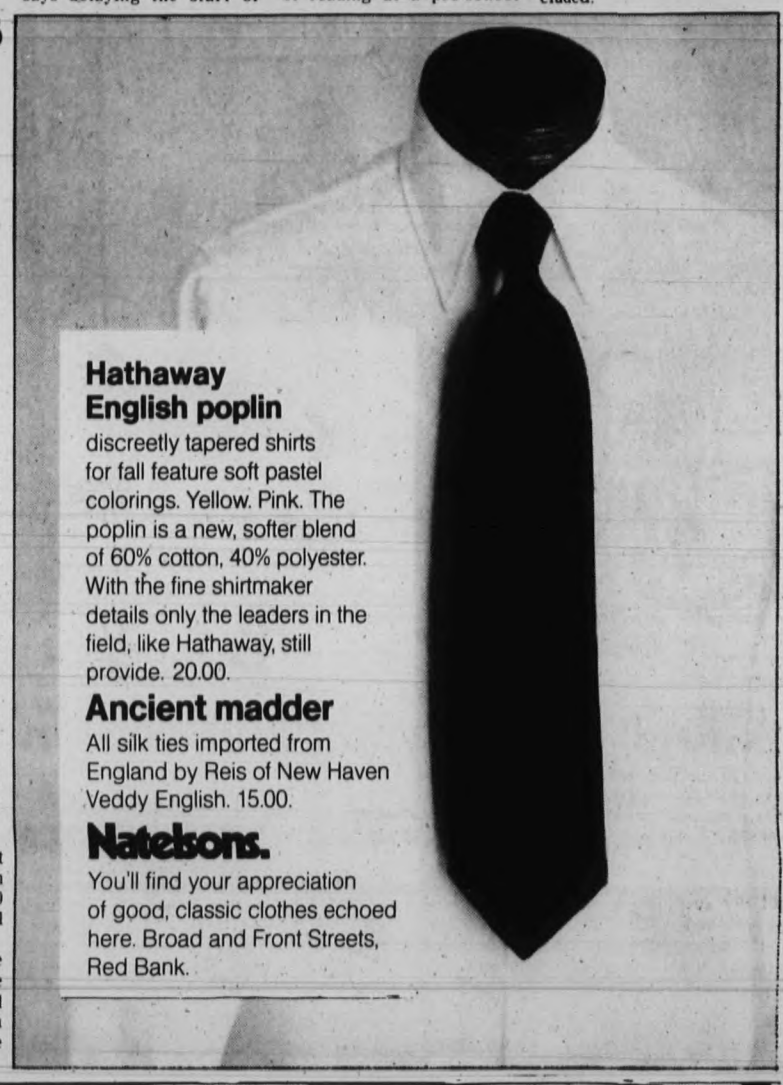

The first funeral service held in the present building was that of Pastor Benjamin DuBois who was active in the patriot militia during the revolutionary war. During his ministry the language of the services changed from Dutch to English.

The Saturday program being planned for this weekend will include some work and recreation during the afternoon. Saturday evening members of the congregation will hold a camp fire sing-a-long and humorous skit illustrating the church's history.

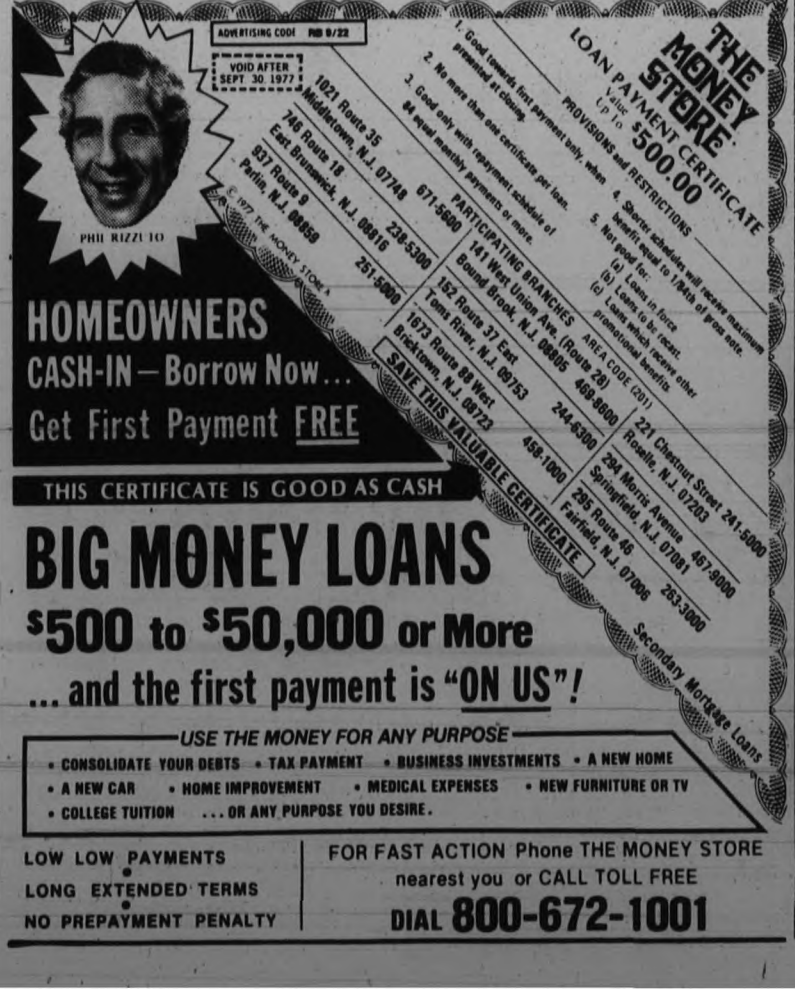

The three church choirs will participate in a service of rededication in the church building on Sunday at 10:15 a.m. The morning service will be followed by a buffet luncheon in the church's pine grove.

A time for restraint and reason

The Matawan Regional school strike has reached a most regrettable state.

Instead of quiet, patient and reasoned negotiation, we have had defiance of a court order and a highly emotional confrontation.

No one benefits under such circumstances. Certainly not the district's thousands of students, who are the real losers, and taxpayers who see large amounts of their hard-earned tax dollars wasted daily because of the strike.

The teachers' refusal to return to work as ordered by a court is most irresponsible. This shocking behavior can hardly be very inspirational to students. Is this the way to cultivate respect for law and order in our young citizens?

The emotional outbursts which occurred when a large group of teachers, parents and students appeared at an agenda meeting of the Regional Board of Education Monday night only aggravated and intensified a worsening situation.

Marie Panos, president of the Matawan Regional Teachers Association, was most ill-advised when she attempted to engage in an exchange with the board on the issues at the board session at the Broad Street Elementary School. This was certainly not the place and proper atmosphere for such a discussion, and the shouting match which ensued was inevitable. The board was forced to take refuge behind locked doors in the adjoining administrative building.

The confrontation assumed an almost mob-like character when Mrs. Panos and others gathered in the administrative building parking lot and yelled up to the board offices in a fruitless effort to draw board members into debate. A rather shocking situation ensued when board members had to be escorted to their cars by police.

No doubt teachers and board members are faced with difficult and complex issues. But that is not the point now. The fact is that the teachers are engaged in an illegal strike and students are being deprived of an education.

It is a time for restraint and tact so the issues can be discussed in a reasonable, civilized manner.

A colorful candidate withdraws

State Sen. Anthony Imperiale, the controversial legislative maverick and political independent from Newark, has abandoned his gubernatorial ambitions and announced support for state Sen. Raymond M. Bateman, the Republican candidate for governor.

It's uncertain at this time whether Mr. Imperiale's move will be more beneficial to the cause of Gov. Brendan T. Byrne or Mr. Bateman. Both major party standard-bearers, however, welcomed the development.

Mr. Bateman said he thought Mr. Imperiale's withdrawal and endorsement would help him because polls have shown that Mr. Imperiale would have taken votes away from him among blue collar workers. Both Mr. Bateman and the governor were happy that Mr. Imperiale was out of the race so voters could focus on them.

Gov. Byrne said he was not at all surprised that Mr. Imperiale endorsed Mr. Bateman since both the Newark senator and the GOP candidate opposed the state income tax.

It will be interesting to see if Sen. Bateman calls upon Mr. Imperiale, who is such an arch critic of the state income tax, to assist him in the campaign or quietly relegate him to the background.

The Mallory Cup competition

The Clifford O. Mallory Cup race, the men's national sailing championship, is to be contested today through Saturday in the waters off Atlantic Highlands. The Monmouth Boat Club of Red Bank is hosting the event.

We welcome the many accomplished sailors participating in this major competition which was held last year in California. The race is sanctioned by the United States Yacht Racing Union and will include eight competing teams from various sections of the nation.

Each race will be five to seven miles on a triangular course similar to the one sailed during the America's Cup race. The last contestant to win from the Middle Atlantic Area was Cliff Campbell of the Barnegat Bay Yacht Club in 1967.

It should be a delightful weekend for our many sailing enthusiasts. And again, a warm welcome to the visitors.

Humphrey's last hurrah

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON SCENE

The ailing Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., demonstrating why he is called the happy warrior, responded to the news that he has terminal cancer by visiting other patients in his hospital wing and offering them cheerful encouragement. He also passed around his flowers and candy to patients who didn't receive any.

Such an attitude is typical of this warm, sensitive man who has endeared himself to his Washington colleagues. It may explain why they want to do something for Hubert and why, therefore, full employment legislation may pass Congress.

The word is spreading on Capitol Hill that the ebullient Humphrey wants eagerly to make one final, lasting contribution to the country. He wants to provide more jobs for his fellow men who are out of work. He has joined Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., in sponsoring a bill calculated to achieve full employment.

It may have a slight flavor of the 1930s, with its provisions to use grants, loans, tax breaks and other fiscal devices to create more jobs. But suddenly the Humphrey-Hawkins bill is given a good chance to pass.

No less than Jimmy Carter is quietly preparing to throw his weight behind the bill. His top assistants have been in touch with aides of Humphrey and Hawkins. The staffs are now meeting daily, and a final agreement is expected in a few days. "The president has personally accelerated the timetable on this," one participant told us.

Such heavyweights as Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, domestic policymaker Stuart Eisenstat and economic adviser Charles Shultze are now involved in the negotiations. Once a tentative agreement is reached, the president will discuss the final details personally with Humphrey and Hawkins.

There remains a major conflict over the bill's goal of driving down unemployment to four percent. Just about everyone who wants to work should be able to get a job, allowing for the constant number between jobs, if the four percent goal can be achieved.

But some White House aides believe the figure may be unrealistically low. "The president doesn't like the idea of being tied to a specific number," one presidential assistant told our associate Howie Kurtz. "He wants to make a good-faith effort to reach the goal without having his hands tied by a rigid timetable."

The bill would provide the monetary means to create more jobs. Federal funds, for example, would be awarded to private companies for needed public works projects. This would be supplenented by public sevice jobs and government training programs.

But if these efforts should fall short of the four percent goal, then the federal government would become the "employer of last resort." It would provide temporary, low-paying jobs to those who can't find work elsewhere.

The White House objects to this provision. "You can't legislate full employment," complained one Carter adviser. "You can't have a legally enforceable plan where an unemployed person can go into court and say, 'Judge, I want a job.'"

Explained another White House official: "First we want to test the idea of large-scale public service jobs." Before the government does any more hiring, he said, the president wants to try out his planned 1.4 million welfare jobs and 200,000 youth jobs.

Congressional backers argued, however, that the "last resort" jobs are not automatic and would be created only if the president and Congress decide they are needed.

ANDERSON

The two sides are also negotiating over the role of the Federal Reserve Board, which controls the nation's monetary policy. Under the bill, the Fed would be required to certify to Congress whether its monetary policy will help achieve full employment. But congresssonal liberals believe that the nation's growth is being stymied by the crafty, conservative Fed chairman, Arthur Burns.

"For years, economic policy has been made in the backrooms by Arthur Burns and a few private bankers who sit on the Fed," complained one congressional expert. "This bill would take economic policy out of the backrooms and put it on the floor of Congress."

Agreed one presidential assistant: "Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that bankers shall have a branch of the federal government."

But he added: "While we don't mind if Congress conflicts with the Fed, it would be a major political battle for the administration to infringe on the independence of the Fed."

Some of Carter's economic advisers are also worried that the legislation will fuel inflation. "The inflation problem is very real," a White House economist told us.

Humphrey and Hawkins insist, however, that lower unemployment doesn't necessarily lead to more inflation. For each one percent reduction in the jobless rolls, they say, the government saves about $20 billion in unemployment checks, food stamps and other benefits. "This bill will help Carter balance his budget," said a supporter.

A compromise between the two sides, nevertheless, is in the offing. And President Carter will come out fighting for a national commitment to full employment.

WHO'S NEWS — A big-time corporation lawyer, Milton Handler, is expected to direct a presidential study of the antitrust laws. He was described by Attorney General Griffin Bell as "a superstar in antitrust law." But our files show this same Handler testified twice against the 1975 Antitrust Improvements Act. It turns out that Handler has also represented big corporations in antitrust cases.

Rip-off in the name of art

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

CONSERVATIVE VIEW

Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin, our town's leading practitioner of the gadfly profession, sank his teeth last week in the National Endowment for the Arts. In the process, he once again raised a fundamental issue of constitutional government.

The senator was upset — justifiably so — at the award of $6,025 in tax funds to Le Ann Wilchusky of Pittsburgh. The award financed the production of a 20-minute film depicting, in part, the dropping of crepe paper from two small planes flying over El Paso. In times past, though not at public expense, the same artist has dropped bouquets of plastic streamers, tire rubber, and even 35 rolls of toilet paper from airplanes. She told Proxmire's staff that while johnny paper makes lovely patterns in the sky, crepe paper is even better. These things are not easy to explain.

The National Endowment for the Arts, in the year of this remarkable award, was financed chiefly by $82 million in tax funds. Most of this was paid out in federal-state partnership programs, and in large grants to museums, orchestras and public bodies. But the foundation also made 1,107 individual grants in fiscal '76 amounting to $4,863,000. These went, by way of example, to 78 poets, 45 novelists, 26 playwrights, and to whole flocks of artists, sculptors, printmakers, photographers, and even to 24 art critics.

The grant to Ms. Wilchusky came under the category of Public Media, Programming in the Arts. Such grants are intended "to encourage quality programming on film, television and radio." When Senator Proxmire complained to Nancy Hanks, chairman of the Arts Endowment, she amplified this explanation. Such films as the Wilchusky film, she said, are designed "to document an event designed to alter an audience's immediate environment for a short period of time."

This was how the taxpayers had their immediate environment altered for a short period of time: Ms. Wilchusky, according to her final report, spent $1,424 on air fare and lodging for herself and her husband for a week's stay on the resort island of St. Maarten in the Caribbean. This was in February 1976, when things were a little bleak in Pittsburgh. Ms. Wilchusky told Proxmire's staff that she needed to go to St. Maarten in order to film one of the environments that had influenced her development as an artist. Her husband served as cameraman. The finished film shows various scenes of the artist posing in St. Maarten.

In August 1976, the artist, her husband, two sky divers and two of her children assembled in El Paso. They spent $1,713 for travel expenses on this venture. While the children stayed on the ground, the others went aloft. The sky divers then unreeled four rolls of crepe paper as they fell toward the ground. The camera whirled away. The children retrieved the crepe paper. The artist told Proxmire's staff that her work calls attention to the higher spirit of mankind and the coming era of peace and harmony on earth.

KILPATRICK

A spokesperson at the foundation further explained that transitory works of art, such as this one, are as creative in their way as objects made of clay or bronze or stone. It is, she said, kind of like filming a fireworks show.

The $6,025, said Proxmire, represented the total annual taxes paid by a factory worker in Milwaukee, a cleaning woman in Madison and a dairy farmer in Marathon County, Wisc. Proxmire termed the award "an outrage."

This sort of thing is indeed outrageous, but such payments from public funds also raise grave questions under the Constitution. Where is the authority for this nonsense? Even if the general welfare clause is cited, it is absurd to contend that grants to individual artists and writers are for the general welfare. Such grants smack of monarchical largesse, of purses bestowed by wealthy patrons to their proteges.

Forget the Wilchusky film. What of these 78 poets and 45 novelists? For every poet who received a $6,000 fellowship, it is a fair assumption that 10 applicants were turned down. The 19 members of the advisory panel on literature simply gave away public funds on their subjective judgment of the applicants' talent.

A few years back, the foundation paid our tax money for a poem that read, more or less in full, "liigghhhtt!" I would like six grand, if you please, for my own poem of protest: "Arrggghhhh!"

Uncle Sam as a shill

By NICHOLAS vonHOFFMAN

THE LIBERAL SIDE

The last few weeks have seen a hullabaloo over the inaccurate EPA gas mileage figures which, by law, must be stickered on every new car windshield. The same figures, not by law but by manufacturers' desire, are featured in most television car commercials.

It's a dreamy set up. If automobile makers lie in a television commercial, they'll have the Federal Trade Commission on them; but the knowing use of inaccurate information cranked out by the government brings with it legal immunity.

Using Uncle Sam as a shill to sell merchandise is an ancient practice dating back to the turn of the century and before. The question first arose with government inspection of meat. In the poorer sort of high school history text, we are told that an aroused public, shocked at the sale of rotten beef by the big meat packers for our soldiers in the Spanish-American War, rose up and demanded reform and regulation.

The facts were different. While the taste of the stuff might have left something to be improved on, no big meat packers sold any rotten beef to the army.

The major meat packers led the indignation parade demanding government inspection of beef in interstate commerce. The big packers' business had been damaged by fly-by-night competition selling bad meat in Europe. The situation had reached the point that a number of countries prohibited the importation of American meat. The packers wanted a federal inspection system so that the United States government could guarantee the quality to foreign customers who preferred their beefsteak without salmonella sauce.

The fight in Congress over the 1906 law wasn't a battle between the reformist forces of consumerism and the Beef Trust, but over such questions as ,"Why should the people pay for the packers' inspection instead of the packers paying for their own inspection," as Senator Alfred Beveridge asked at the time.

The consequences of selling poisoned food are such we must have inspection even if the manufacturers can cash in on it. Of course, what we don't know is if the system actually keeps bad food off the market. We know it doesn't keep all of it off.

von HOFFMAN

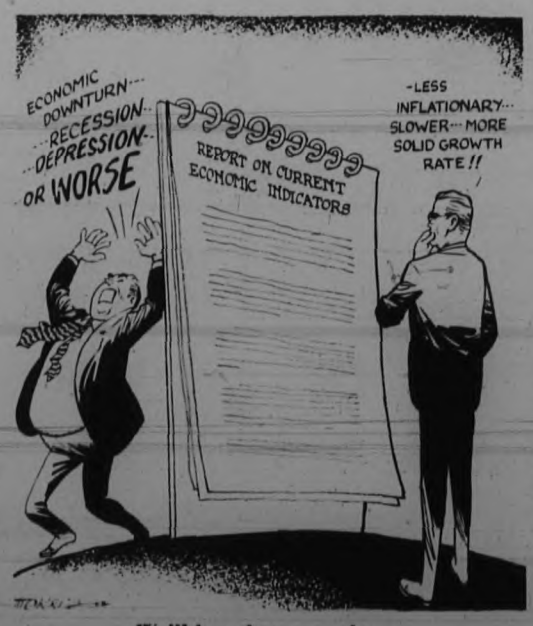

But how is the commonweal served by the Department of Agriculture grading foodstuffs? Why should the U.S. government be grading the cut of meat we get at the Safeway or at the A&P!

Nor is the trend toward backing away from such activities. The wine industry is pressing for new, exacting labelling regulations, a la that provided by the French government for its vintners. The purpose, of course, is for an advertising and merchandising effort that will kick up the prices of certain wines which will now be special and expensive because Uncle Shill says they are.

All of this is to be done in the name of consumerism. When it comes to the consumer's health and safety we have no choice. Thus it's insane to permit dangerous microwave ovens to be sold at the appliance store, but should one of the manufacturers be allowed to use the government safety certification in its advertising as it does?

Government action beyond minimal health and safety ultimately injures consumers by misleading them, as in the EPA gas mileage case, and/or dampening their motivation to look after themselves.

By doing less the government may do more. The policy should be, Uncle Samuel will try to keep you from being hung but not stung.

We'll buy that second one

Shrewsbury, N.J.

To the Editor:

We would like to address all residents of Shrewsbury regarding the Lone Oaks Inc. proposal to construct a 190-unit cluster condominium. A use variance has been requested by Lone Oaks President, Mrs. Florence Forgotson, to change the present R1 zone (residential 1 acre) to allow cluster lot usage.

We wish to state our opposition as follows:

This proposal is a multi-family development; it is not a senior citizens complex, as some residents believe.

The 53 acres bordered by Shrewsbury Plaza, Rt. 35, Sycamore Ave. and Consolidated Rail are buffered by vast numbers of trees and foliage. The land is not, in our opinion, an unattractive, unsaleable property to single-home builders. The railroad track through proper land usage, can be averted; the tracks are used two times a day for slow moving freight. To nullify the applicants testimony, Samara Drive has continued its saleability despite the railroad and commercial property abutting their land.

As we now retain a stable population of 3,225, this complex alone could increase our community by 20 per cent.

A few questions we feel are warranted, should this variance be granted, include:

To what extent could Shrewsbury Grammar schools absorb an influx of possibly 300 or more students?

To what extent could a volunteer fire and ambulance service support an additional 700 citizens?

We presently have a small number of children faring Sycamore Ave. traffic without the aid of sidewalks. Should we increase this fear with a greater number of children?

The present traffic situation need not be elaborated upon.

We ask, therefore, that with the knowledge of 40 per cent of Shrewsbury as open, developable land that we all take an active interest/participation in requesting a moratorium on all such variance grants until the Master Plan is approved. This plan, due by June, should provide for an orderly, deliberate growth of this town to ensure proper housing, recreation and services for each of us.

The decision on the Lone Oaks variance request will be given on Sept. 28. Your declared opposition, prior to that date, in writing to Chairman Charles L. Kroll, Zoning Board of Adjustment, will help effect Shrewsbury's character.

Backs faculty

(Editor's note: The following letter was received before the apparent settlement of the Brookdale faculty salary dispute).

To the Editor:

As a 1977 graduate of Brookdale Community College I feel compelled to respond to the Board of Trustees' unwillingness to negotiate the faculty's salaries to put them on a par with other state community colleges.

While reading the Register's coverage of this dispute I could not help but think of the excellent instructors I've known at Brookdale and their tremendous enthusiasm for their work that was frequently transmitted to their students. Often they gave of their time and energy to help us well beyond the call of duty.

I also thought of the large sum of money that is spent on Brookdale's beautiful landscaping and buildings and student and community activities that make it one of the best community colleges anywhere.

However, with all this exterior glamor I cannot understand why Brookdale's faculty is not paid a fair wage. Since no agreement can be reached and a strike seems imminent, would it not be wise to call upon an outside arbitrator to mediate for an equitable solution?

Everyone would suffer should a strike be called: the faculty and their families, the Board and especially the students seeking an education.

It saddens me to see this happening at Brookdale where, for me, my teachers always made education an exciting, adventurous growth experience. To the Board of Trustees I would like to say: give the faculty the fairness they deserve so they may continue to light up many more minds with their infectious inspiration.

Subsidies hit

Red Bank, N.J.

To the Editor:

Following is a copy of a letter sent to Congressman James J. Howard on the subject of government subsidies to tobacco growers:

Dear Jim:

I found your letter of Sept. 6, 1977 in regard to the above subject very disappointing.

How in the world the United States Government can underwrite the nefarious practice of cigarette smoking which probably contributes to tens of thousands of deaths of Americans annually in the United States is beyond me.

All you say in your letter is that you are going to keep my views in mind when legislative proposals before Congress to eliminate such tobacco-growing subsidies are discussed. I would have been much more pleased with your support of elimination of tobacco growing subsidies.

I realize that elimination of tobacco growing subsidies will not outlaw the sale of cigarettes but at least it would demonstrate that the Federal Government, which is spending hundreds of millions of dollars in cancer research and research for heart disease, is at least not spending money working against these researchers who have established beyond any shadow of a doubt that cigarette smoking contributes to coronary heart disease and lung cancer deaths.

To the Editor:

Following is a copy of a letter sent the Rumson-Fair Haven Regional Board of Education:

Dear Mr. Buckley and Members of the Board.

This summer, after being chosen to represent Rumson-Fair Haven Regional High School, I was fortunate enough to be selected over a score of competitors from Monmouth County to be one of two county representatives at the New Jersey Scholar Program. Our group, which spent the month of July as guests of the Dodge Foundation at the Lawrenceville School, consisted of 14 students representing seven counties in New Jersey.

We spent quite a lot of our leisure time talking about our schools and their respective programs. I was very pleased to find out that among those schools represented, Rumson-Fair Haven was definitely one of the best.

Our special programs, including modular scheduling, the senior program, and the senior open-campus policy were looked upon very favorably by the other students. Many of them felt that these types of programs could possibly benefit their schools. They felt that the traditional seven-period day and strictly limited choice in subjects created apathy, especially among seniors and those students who had excelled academically.

I was very pleased to be able to honestly praise our school, and proud that it was admired so highly. I wish to thank Mrs. Lentz and the members of the faculty and board for choosing me as Rumson-Fair Haven's candidate.

Opposes Byrne

Long Branch, N.J.

To the Editor:

As a private citizen, I am very concerned about ethics in public life. It appears to me that the vast majority of our public office seekers go to great lengths in telling the voters how good they are and how sensitive they are to our needs. They promise, all of them, viable solutions that trouble our society: crime, taxation, leadership (or lack of), education, etc. Invariably, once elected, they forget their promises. They become unresponsive, and outright arrogant in their neglect to the electorate, who in good faith, voted them into office.

To recall them should be what they deserve. To limit their tenure to one term is being lenient. To reelect them is deserving all the ills they have been and will deliver!

We, the people, cannot condone frauds, cheats and liars, regardless of their intent or purpose! That is why, in my opinion, the present governor of New Jersey should not be reelected.

He made promises which got him elected. He is attempting to dismiss his failures with errors in judgment. As I see it, he did not keep these promises and therefore should not get our confidence.

Only this way, I firmly believe, better qualified, not necessarily "blue-blooded" people would seek public office.

Only this way, our next generation of officials can and will understand that the power is with the people and for the people; that they are servants and we are the masters. We cannot continue to condone breach of ethics, fraudulent neglect to the will of the people by officials whose only goal is for their egocentric enrichment.

COLTS NECK — The Colts Neck Fire Company, No. 1, Rt. 537, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the hose company with a gala dinner-dance at the firehouse Oct. 8 at 7 p.m.

All present and former members of the fire company and firemen's widows are invited to attend the celebration. Frank Porter, a former fire company member, will return from Florida where he now lives to emcee the dinner dance.

Firemen are also seeking the addresses of former fire company members who have moved from the area and may want to attend the celebration.

Heritage unit to convene

FREEHOLD — The second meeting of the Monmouth County General Heritage Committee will be held Saturday from 10 to 12 a.m. at the Eastern Branch of the Monmouth County Library, Route 35, Shrewsbury.

George Goodfellow, chairman of the committee, said that coffee and Danish will be served beginning at 9:30 a.m. Following the General Business Meeting a program will be offered which will be devoted to the Battle of Monmouth.

Charles T. Lyle, Director of the Monmouth County Historical Association, will show an audio-visual presentation entitled "The Battle of Monmouth," which combines slides, narrative, music and sound effects into a clear and dramatic explanation of the battle, according to Mr. Goodfellow.

This program, which the Junior League of Monmouth County has cooperated in producing with the Association, will circulate to Monmouth County schools during this year and next. Historical societies and other non-school groups may obtain the slide-tape portion of the program by contacting Mr. Lyle at the Association, Court Street, Freehold.

Reservations for the meeting may be made by contacting the Monmouth County Department of Promotion and Public Information, Hall of Records, Freehold.

Wall Twp. facility backed for county airport

The Daily Register

SHREWSBURY, N. J. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1977 9

By JOAN KAHN

FREEHOLD — Monmouth Airport in Wall Township remains the prime choice for the establishment of a county-owned airport.

For the second time in 10 years, airport surveys maintain that the 710-acre, privately owned facility would be the ideal site for the county to acquire as an airport. And yesterday the airports owner indicated he is willing to consider selling it.

The Monmouth County Airport Development Committee yesterday released the results of a preliminary survey to decide on an airport location.

Laurence E. Gesell, project manager for consultants Howard Needles Tammen and Bergendoff of Fairfield, said the site selection had been narrowed from 11 possible sites to three, with Monmouth Airport leading the location possibilities.

Another site which may still be considered is Colts Neck Airport, off Rt. 537, and near a Colts Neck horse farm area located in the vicinity of the original Delicious Orchards salesroom.

Yet another site still under study lies in the southern sector of Tinton Falls, between West Park Ave. and Asbury Ave., west of the Garden State Parkway and near the Monmouth County Reclamation Center.

However, the selection of this site was termed unsuitable by Jerome S. Reed, Tinton Falls administrator, who asked that the location be excluded from consideration.

Mr. Reed said his municipality had lost one-third of its land areas to tax exempt public use, including acquisitions by the New Jersey Highway Authority for the Garden State Parkway, the county and the federal government.

"On behalf of the borough, I would like to pull out of consideration for the airport," Mr. Reed said.

The possibility that the county will move to acquire Monmouth Airport, over the other sites, is considered likely because of the receptiveness of airport owner Edward I. Brown.

When the original study recommending county acquisition of the Rt. 34 facility was issued 10 years ago, Mr. Brown publily declined to sell and said then he would fight any move to take over the facility.

But yesterday, Mr. Brown indicated that he had changed his mind and would consider a fair offer by the county.

"I'm still open and fair minded for anything," he noted.

The Monmouth Airport (under the corporate designation Wall-Herald Corp.) is assessed in two separate parcels on the Wall Township tax rolls. The main airport sector of 142.60 acres is assessed at $740,500 for the land and $906,600 for the buildings, for a total assessment of $1,647,100.

An adjacent section which contains several buildings, including an office building and commercial structures, is assessed at $648,000 for its 568 acres and $88,600 for the buildings, for a total of $736,600. Presumably the county would seek to purchase both parcels because of the necessity to preserve land for the extension of runways in the future.

The bulk of the cost of the airport would be borne by a 90 per cent federal subsidy, if the county decides to conclude negotiations by 1978 when the federal grant expires. However, the question remains of how the balance of the airport acquisition would be financed, since a state representative said at yesterday's meeting that the state would not commit itself at the present time to spending any money for airport development.

John Kaiser, principal engineer for the N.J. Department of Transportation, Bureau of Aviation Planning, said the state did not have any funds for the project now, but he declined to rule out future funding.

Monmouth Airport's assets for county acquisition include its 5,000-foot-long paved runway, which could easily be extended to 6,000 feet to accommodate sophisticated aircraft. The facility also has maintenance and service facilities, and is located near industry.

In addition, the site was preferred because it is convenient to population centers, but would have little adverse ecological impact, such as noise for any residential housing.

Of the other alternate sites, the Tinton Falls location was considered adequate because the land is flat, open and undeveloped, and includes Fairy Field, a glider landing area.

The development of Colts Neck Airport as a county-operated facility was deemed a costly project despite its open flat terrain with room for expansion.

Ruled out was Preston Airport in Marlboro because of its landing obstruction, including power lines, hills and railroad tracks, and its limited room for expansion.

Belford airport was also ruled out because of its sandy soil, which would need a large amount of landfill, and anticipated resident resistance to the project.

A site south of Freehold was eliminated because of its proximity to residential development and the danger of ecologic damage to Turkey Swamp Park, while a parcel in the western part of the county—Manalapan near Iron Ore Road—was eliminated from consideration because of power lines at the site and its remote access from centers of population.

The consulting firm will continue to survey the remaining three sites and will narrow down its choice to one recommendation in about two months. The final survey is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Thomas R. Crane, chairman of the county airport advisory committee, said he was satisfied with the timetable the planners presented and believed that the county would have sufficient time to acquire a site before federal funding elapsed.

MCAP defers certification of its election in Bayshore

By MARK MAGYAR

LONG BRANCH — The Monmouth Community Action Program (MCAP) executive committee voted yesterday to defer certification of its Bayshore election until charges of election improprieties are fully investigated.

Joseph B. Hawley of Atlantic Highlands, who finished fifth in a close race for the two Bayshore seats on the MCAP board of trustees, challenged last week's election in a letter listing 14 charges of election improprieties.

The MCAP executive committee recommended certification of the election results from the Red Bank-Long Branch, Asbury Park and Freehold districts, where the other five community representatives on the MCAP board are elected, because no charges have been filed there.

The executive committee also recommended board approval of a $30,000 short term bank loan to meet next week's $29,600 employe payroll, Reinaldo Nazario of Long Branch, MCAP board chairman, reported.

Mr. Nazario originally called an emergency board meeting yesterday afternoon, but most board members didn't hear about the 5 p.m. emergency session until after they arrived home from work and the meeting was already over.

Since four of the six board members who showed were also members of the executive committee, and four out of eight executive committee members constitute a quorum, the emergency session was hurriedly voted into a makeshift MCAP emergency executive committee meeting, Mr. Nazario said.

All recommendations were unanimously approved by the four executive committee members and the two MCAP board members present, and are expected to be easily approved by the full MCAP board at the next board meeting, Clarence Gale of Red Bank, one of the two board members present, asserted.

"The $30,000 loan is necessary because once again the federal government is slow in paying us the grants which they have already approved," Mr. Gale said angrily.

"We want all of our dollars to go to the poor, not to the bank for interest on loans, but our employes have to eat," Mr. Gale said.

Clarence Lewis of Red Bank, Andrew Mackey Jr. of Tinton Falls, Barbara Priester of Asbury Park, Lester Puryear of Neptune and Eunice Reed of Englishtown will be sworn in as MCAP board members next month, but Bayshore victors Dorothy Rice of Matawan and Juan Andujar of Keansburg will have to wait until MCAP completes its investigation.

Mr. Hawley, who said before the election he would ask for an investigation whether he won or lost, originally went to the Monmouth County Prosecutor's Office, but the prosecutor said he had no jurisdiction over MCAP, which is largely a federally funded agency, Mr. Nazario said.

Mr. Hawley said Robert Ryan, assistant county prosecutor, was going to call him today on the question of jurisdiction.

If the case is outside the county prosecutor's jurisdiction, Mr. Hawley said he would bring the matter to the U.S. attorney's attention.

Meanwhile, MCAP will conduct its own investigation of Mr. Hawley's charges.

Mr. Hawley charged that MCAP:

— Did not check voters' identification.

— Did not make voters sign registration books, making it easy for people to vote more than one time.

— Did not get its mobile vans to voting sites on time.

— And set up a system of polling places and voting vans that discriminated against rural and suburban residents in favor of urban residents.

"On 12 of Mr. Hawley's charges, we're waiting for him to produce some sort of substantiation, something more than just his word," Mr. Gale said.

"But on his other charge that our operation of polling places in Keyport and Cliffwood, and mobile vans throughout the rest of the area, was inequitable, I can say we did the best we could with limited resources, and we challenge anyone else to do better," he said.

Five finalists are selected

FREEHOLD — The five finalists in the Freehold Area Hospital charity ball queen contest were announced recently in conjunction with a fashion show in their honor at the American Hotel. The lucky ladies are: Randi Hurd of Freehold Township; Vicki Johnson of Manalapan; Donna Pearce of Clarksburg, Millstone Township; Cindy Veselis of Colts Neck; and Janice Wallis of Manalapan.

The group has been raising money since the spring via raffles, ball tickets, ads for the ad journal, and projects.

The eight girls competing in the contest have successfully raised over $33,000.

A queen will be officially announced Saturday at the Rumble Seat Ball at Freehold Raceway.

A showing of fall fashions was provided by Sandy Emhoff and Alan Wallace of Breeches, Main St., Freehold, and Judy Emhoff and Til Wilensky of The Bon Prix, West End, Long Branch.

Judging of the finalists in the queen contest is scheduled today. Five qualified judges from outside the greater Freehold area will further rank the finalists according to poise, personality and appearance.

Miss Veselis was selected as Miss Congeniality, an honor bestowed on her by her fellow running mates.

Margie Federici, 1976 queen, will crown her successor the night of the Rumble Seat Ball. "Cousin" Bruce Morrow will emcee the contest proceedings, and the ball will also feature Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass.

A "Speakeasy Supper" will be served around midnight.

Roaring Twenties costumes are encouraged, and prizes for the best-dressed couple, male and female will be awarded.

A "Stars of the Twenties" backdrop will decorate the stage, according to Harriet Lombardi, decorations chairman.

Vegetables stay on plates

By ERMA BOMBECK

Do you know what is the biggest complaint children have against their parents?

According to a recent survey, 58 per cent of the children interviewed resented the fact that parents make them eat food they don't like.

In all fairness, I have to tell you that I gave birth to children with unusual diets. They tolerate only hot dogs that cost $1.25 in the ballpark, hamburgers 1/15 of an inch thick, asphyxiated by secret sauce, charred marshmallows speared on a bent coat hanger, and anything left under a car seat that has touched a dirty hand.

They refuse to eat anything they haven't danced to on TV.

Okay, so I lied when I told them it was good for them. I lied when I told them it would make them big and strong. And I lied when I said there were one million children in Argentina waiting in line for their Brussels sprouts.

But I did not stretch the truth one bit when I told them to clean up their plates—they were killing their mother. The way I licked their plates clean after every meal, you'd have thought I was sired by a cocker spaniel. I drank milk out of glasses that stuck to my lips, pork chops that have been used as gavels, whipped potatoes that had served as dams for gravy, and vegetables so cold you could taste them.

And did they appreciate it? They did not. We have an entire generation of kids growing up (58 per cent to be exact) who regard Waldorf Salad as a form of punishment. My kids never shaped up until I threatened, "You keep that up and I'll put you to bed WITH SUPPER!"

Thanks to my diligence and eating all their proper foods, I was the one who grew up to be big and strong. One day, I turned on the disposal and as the motor whirred around noisily, I heard one of my children's playmates shout, "Hey, Andy, I think I hear your mother calling."

From that day forward, I gave up cleaning my children's plates. The first time I initiated my new philosophy I said to my son, "If you don't eat this, I'm going to throw it out."

"That's not much of a recommendation," he said.

Now they tell me.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

Hospital faux pas admitted

By JULIE McDONNELL

LONG BRANCH — The Community Relations Department at Monmouth Medical Center here has made a diplomatic boo-boo against one of its sister hospitals.

The departmemt, which is in charge of fund-raising, sent out a brochure this month appealing directly to Red Bank residents for contributions.

The orange-and-white flyer, mailed to homes in Shrewsbury, Tinton Falls, and Fair Haven, as well as to some in Red Bank, includes a letter from Robert C. Stanley Jr. of Middletown, hospital president.

The letter opens, "Do you know how much Monmouth Medical Center means to you, your loved ones, and your neighbors in Red Bank?" — with the words "Red Bank" underlined there and in four other places in the letter.

The letter appears to be stepping on the territorial toes of Riverview Hospital, which is located in Red Bank.

But Robert Jenkins, community relations director at Monmouth Medical Center, says it was all a big mistake.

"The letter should have said 'Red Bank area,' not Red Bank," he said. "We deliberately avoid mailing brochures of this type to Red Bank out of deference to Riverview."

The mailings were directed at Fair Haven, Tinton Falls, and Shrewsbury, he said, but a few may have wound up in Red Bank because several of the towns have the same zip code.

Mr. Jenkins also said the figures quoted in the brochure, such as 343 Red Bank residents admitted to Monmouth Medical Center last year, and 860 visits by Red Bank residents to the hospital's emergency room and outpatient clinics, "are incorrect."

Those figures are for the Red Bank area, Mr. Jenkins said, meaning Shrewsbury, Tinton Falls, and Fair Haven. They don't even include tallies of visits from Red Bank residents, he said.

This is not the first time mailings have been sent to those three towns, he said, adding that his office sends periodic requests for contributions to towns in the medical center's "primary coverage area," a 20-mile radius from the hospital which generates 94 per cent of Monmouth Medical Center's patients.

"Last year we had 144 patients admitted, and 425 outpatient visits, from Tinton Falls," Mr. Jenkins said. "From Shrewsbury, it was 115 admissions and 227 outpatient visits; and from Fair Haven, 84 admissions and 208 outpatients.

"From these towns alone we feel there are a significant number of people whom we consider prospects for fund-raising," he said. "But we do not conduct direct mail appeals to Red Bank out of deference to Riverview."

John K. Pawlowski, administrator at Riverview Hospital, said yesterday that he had not seen the brochure but added that he "wasn't upset" by it.

Public is against Panama treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Panama Canal treaty, backed strongly by President Carter but a center of controversy in the Senate, is opposed overwhelmingly by the American people, according to a nationwide Associated Press public opinion poll.

The survey found 50 per cent of adults questioned oppose the treaty, under which the United States would relinquish control of the canal to Panama by the year 2000. Twenty-nine per cent favored the pact, and 21 per cent were undecided.

While opposition cut across regional, party, educational, age and income lines, the treaty was least popular among persons over 60. Only 20 per cent of the persons in that age group backed the treaty, while 53 per cent were opposed and 27 per cent had no opinion.

One of the strongest shows of support came from persons in the 18-to-29 age group, where 35 per cent approved compared with 47 per cent against and 17 per cent undecided.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee opens hearings next week on the canal treaty, which President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos signed in Washington on Sept. 7 amid a ceremonial show of enthusiasm by hemisphere leaders.

There actually are two treaties, but they are considered indivisible. One calls for the United States to relinquish sovereignty over the Canal Zone to Panama by the year 2000. The other would always permit the United States to militarily ensure the neutrality of the canal.

The AP poll, with findings similar to those of other recent surveys, showed Carter's efforts have failed to win support for the treaty within his own party and among residents of his native South.

But with the ratification vote not scheduled until next year, Carter has several months to gain sympathy for the agreement. He has said he thinks public sentiment is turning in favor of the canal treaty, and is banking on a national "education" effort to help win the two-thirds vote needed for Senate approval.

The poll, based on telephone interviews with 1,548 adults, was conducted Monday for The AP by Chilton Research Services of Radnor, Pa.

Democrats opposed the treaty by 44 per cent to 34 per cent, but Republicans polled were against it by 61 to 26 per cent, and independents by 54 to 25.

Poor people operated on twice as often as others

By DR. IRWIN J. POLK

Poor people get operated on twice as often as the general population. That statement comes from a House subcommittee and is the result of a study that looked into surgery on Medicaid patients.

The study also reported wide differences in rates of surgery and types of operations in various state Medicaid programs. This surgery was paid for by Medicaid which uses a mixture of local, state and federal funds to pay for medical care of indigent patients.

This year the cost of Medicaid will be $38 billion of which the federal government will pay $20 billion.

The present study reported on 3.3 million operations paid for in 1976 by Medicaid in 22 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands. A similar study by the same committee last year reported that the American public spent $3.92 billion on unnecessary surgery in 1974.

This time the subcommittee did not indicate how many dollars were spent on what it might call unnecessary surgery. Instead, the committee sought to prove that some types of elective operations were more likely to be done on Medicaid patients that on the general public.

HERE'S TO HEALTH

Hysterectomies, for example, were done on 436 women of every 100,000 on Medicaid which the report stated was twice the national average. Similar data were reported for operations to remove tonsils, breasts and gall bladders. All of these data will be reviewed next month in public hearings on surgical procedures.

Why were Medicaid patients more frequently operated on than the general public? Assuming that the data were correct and can stand unchallenged, why do doctors operate more frequently on poor people than other people? There are several possible reasons.

Medicaid patients see the doctor more often than the rest of the population. Medicaid visits have increased by 50 per cent in the 10 years since the program began. So if Medicaid patients see doctors more frequently, they may be expected to have more procedures of all kinds, including operations.

Medicaid patients are usually sicker than the rest of the people, for many reasons, social and economic. They get a poorer start in general health, often are unfamiliar with good health practices or unable to follow them.

They often wait before seeing a doctor until their health has suffered severely. Overall, disadvantaged patients tend to be in poorer health than other people. So they are more likely to need surgery when they finally get to the doctor.

Patients have their treatment tailored to their circumstances. A patient with a hernia who has to load boxcars needs surgery without a doubt. But if he has a desk job, the hernia repair can wait for a while, sometimes forever.

The same goes for gall bladder disease: a patient who can be observed closely and frequently by the doctor can sometimes wait a bit to have his operation.

But a truckdriver who may be in California one day and Florida a week later should have a definitive procedure done as soon as possible. Tonsillectomy is another case in point. Recurrent tonsil infection can be treated with medicines as each episode occurs or it can be treated once and for all time by removal of the tonsils.

Since doctors are still undecided about the best way to manage infected tonsils, patients who can be counted on to check with the doctor for each tonsil infection can be managed expectantly. Others may need a tonsil operation as a definitive though controversial treatment.

There are differences between the Medicaid population and the general population of the country. These differences are reflected in the medical decisions and therefore the medical care each group gets. This does not mean that Medicaid patients are treated worse than other people, only that they are treated differently.

Doctors call this tailoring the treatment to the specific needs of the patient. So in offering more surgery to Medicaid patients, doctors may be providing exactly the individualized care Medicaid was designed to provide.

Discount programs for senior citizens are spreading

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of senior citizens are learning that it sometimes pays to grow older.

They are taking advantage of discount programs offering older Americans up to 50 per cent off on products and services.

The programs, most of which were begun in 1975 or early 1976, are spreading across the country. They vary in organization and eligibility requirements, but they all have the same goal: to help senior citizens, particularly those on fixed incomes, save money.

One of the most ambitious efforts is Ohio's "Golden Buckeye Card." Joe Gall of the Ohio Commission on Aging said it is the only statewide program in the country.

The Golden Buckeye plan started in March 1976. Ohio residents 65 and over can apply for a card at any one of about 1,500 locations.

Holders of the cards are then entitled to discounts on everything from auto repairs to groceries at participating merchants.

As of the beginning of September, Gall said, 517,465 persons had applied for cards and 17,178 merchants were participating. He said the state had started a campaign to reach shut-ins and others who normally would not hear about the program through organized senior citizens clubs or activities.

A nationwide discount program is available through the American Association of Retired Persons, a Washington-based group with 10.8 million members. Anyone 55 or over can join the group — you don't necessarily have to be retired. Members pay a $3 annual fee and receive discounts at nine national hotel and motel chains and two rent-a-car companies, Hertz and Avis. They also can take advantage of a pharmacy service providing home delivery of prescription drugs and medical items at low cost.

Information is available from the association at 1909 K. St., Washington, D.C. 20049. The association, in conjunction with the National Retired Teachers Association, also published a comprehnsive "Retirement Information Guide," available from Fulfillment Section, NRTA-AARP, P.O. Box 2400, Long Beach, Calif., 90801.

Individual stores in some areas also offer discounts on particular products on particular days. A New York supermarket chain, for example, gives senior citizens 10 per cent off on fresh produce one day a week. Korvettes, a New York-based chain of discount department stores, recently announced it would offer senior citizens a 10 per cent discount on merchandise in all its 58 branches every Wednesday.

Senior citizens in Illinois not only get store discounts, but also can participate in special programs of entertainment and recreation thanks to the VIP Council of Illinois, Inc., in Wheaton. VIP, a nonprofit group which receives some government funds and makes up the rest of its budget from fund-raising events and donations, has issued 35,000 cards to persons over 60. There is no charge for the cards, but the council accepts donations from those who can afford them.

The elderly aren't the only beneficiaries of the discounts. The merchants themselves benefit through increased business. "There's lots more buying by senior citizens than by the young," said a spokesman for the Los Angeles Department of Parks, which started a Senior Citizen Discount Program last year.

Parkway cops nab speeders

WOODBRIDGE — Radar traffic surveillance on the Garden State Parkway from April 29 until Sept. 19 has produced 1,126 speeding violations, it was announced by William F. Smith, commissioner of the New Jersey Highway Authority.

"Our State Police, under the direction of Captain Harold Cain, have been very effective in curtailing speeding on the parkway," Smith stated. "The ten radar equipped police vehicles, which are plainly marked, have proved very effective. We are now in the process of putting into operation ten more radar equipped vehicles."

Smith pointed out that the plainly marked radar police vehicles have gone a long way in keeping motorists from speeding on the parkway. The State Police find that one of the biggest problem areas as far as speeding is concerned is in the inner roadways from the Raritan Toll Plaza to Asbury Park.

Most of the speeders on this section of the road are picked up during the early commuter rush hours in the morning and the late commuter hours in the evening. There is very little speeding during the high density commuter traffic. In addition, motorists also have a tendency to speed on the northern part of the parkway where traffic is very sparse.

With the additional equipment, the State Police are expected to be more effective in deploying all their vehicles on the 173 mile road. All police vehicles on the parkway are painted white and carry the words, 'State Police'.

STARTING STEPS — Suzy Prudden Sussman helps 15-month-old Brooke Gelb navigate on a ladder apparatus recently in Mrs. Sussman's exercise program for infants in New York. Mrs. Sussman says a child develops and establishes 50 per cent of its physical potential by the age of three.

Exercise program devised for infants

By The Associated Press

Suzy Prudden Sussman is a physical fitness teacher with a dream to develop the American Heroine — the first female Olympic gymnast to win a gold medal.

With that in mind, Mrs. Sussman took an innovative step in the field of physical fitness and created the first exercise program in the country for infants. It is designed to develop from infancy the habits and characteristics needed in a gymnast.

At her school in New York, Mrs. Sussman starts with children as young as three months old, developing them into strong and well-coordinated children. As they progress in age and development, she continues their instruction with hopes that they will develop the interest and ability to become a competitive gymnast.

Her first crop of young girls will be old enough next year to enter beginner competition. It is too early to tell, but there may be a gold medal winner somewhere in that group.

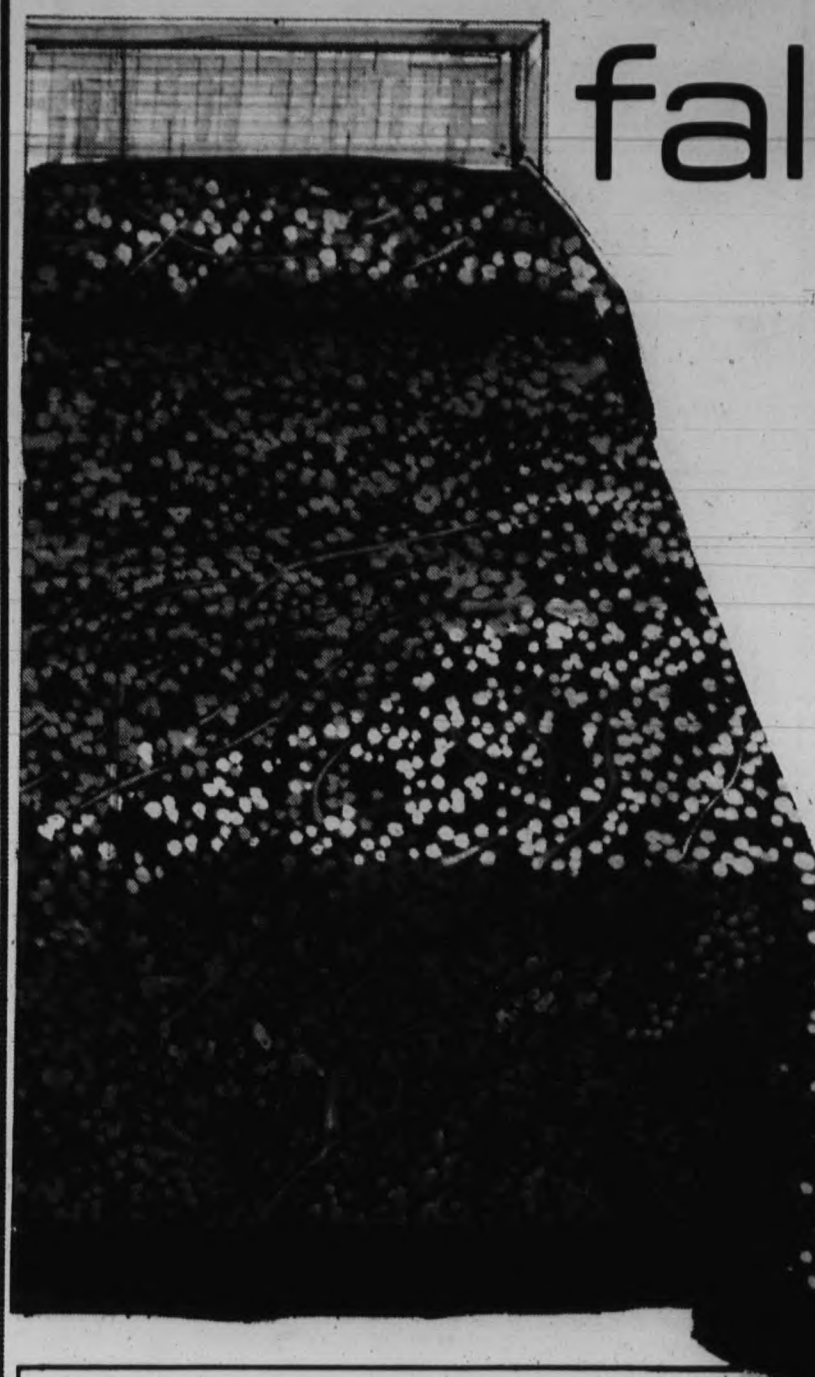

HANG IN THERE — Suzy Prudden Sussman guides 2½-year-old Cory Meister on the rings recently in Mrs. Sussman's New York gymnasium for infants. Mrs. Sussman started her program in hopes of developing the first female U.S. Olympic gymnast to win a gold medal.

HELPING HANDS — Six-month-old Clara Knudson gets a helping pair of hands from Suzy Prudden Sussman during session at Mrs. Sussman's exercise program for infants in New York City. The program is the result of a dream of Mrs. Sussman — she wants to develop an American Heroine, the first female gymnast to win an Olympic Gold.

WORLD'S TALLEST CLOWN — Buck Nolan, the world's tallest clown, will be one of the attractions at the Great American Circus Sunday at 3 p.m. near the Florence Ave. School in Union Beach. The circus is being sponsored by the Union Gardens Fire Company. Tickets are available from fire company members or from personnel at the firehouse. Mr. Nolan, by the way, measures seven feet, six inches.

5 bus tours to be offered by Brookdale

LINCROFT — Brookdale Community College will sponsor five guided bus tours for the public this fall to locations of cultural and historic significance.

The first will be a scenic drive along the Hudson River to Wave Hill Conservatory, Philipse Manor Hall, and the Hudson River Museum in Westchester. The trip is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 29.

Wave Hill has been the residence of Mark Twain, Arturo Toscanini and Theodore Roosevelt. In addition to its historic interest, it houses a 28-acre contemporary horticultural conservatory, replete with sculpture gardens and greenhouses.

After lunch, a visit will be made to Philipse Manor Hall, antique home of a wealthy Dutch landlord. A stop will also be made at the nearby Hudson River Museum for a guided tour of the tri-state area art show, and the works of nationally known artist, Romare Bearden.

New York's east sixties means "Bloomingdales" to most, but that is only one of the wonders of this part of town. "Castles and Clubhouses" will be visited on a two-hour guided walking tour of the area.

The group will view the wonderful architecture of Franklin Roosevelt's townhouse and some neighborhood churches. The curious will be able to peer through the heavily draped windows of the prestigious Metropolitan Club, and see old aristocrats, seated in red, plush easy chairs, probably conversing about their investments.

Lunch will be selected from the ample menu at Serendipity III after which a visit will be made to one of New York's least known museums, the Nicholas Roerich. Roerich, a Russian-born artist, is famous for his paintings, books, sets and costumes about the ballet. His work is displayed in a large row house.

The bus will leave at 8:15 a.m. and return at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 3. The rain date is Oct. 10. Walking shoes are a must.

A bus trip to historic Staten Island is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 5.

The tour troup will see a unique complex of Greek revival buildings which once housed aged merchant seamen at Sailor Snug Harbor. They will proceed to Richmondtown Restoration, which represents the evolution of an American village over a three-century period. Although the village is still undergoing excavation, many buildings have been restored and furnished, providing visitors with fine examples of historic architecture and artifacts.

Outside of Staten Island, few persons realize that the Italian patriot Guissepe Garibaldi lived there for a time. His Gothic revival home, which is now a museum, will be the last stop on the trip.

The famous West Point Military Academy will be the destination of another excursion, scheduled to depart at 8 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 12.

The Point provides a physical tribute to American history and military achievement. The names of countless American heroes who attended West Point are inscribed on granite walls; Eisenhower, McArthur, Grant and Patton are memorialized there. The military museum is the largest in the Western Hemisphere. West Point can be visited solely for its sheer beauty. Nowhere is a view of the Hudson River more magnificent than at Monument Point.

Luncheon will be provided in the gourmet restaurant at the Hotel Thayer. Thomas Shostak, Brookdale associate professor, is tour guide.

Unparalleled as a cultural and historic landmark, Ephrata Cloisters is an extensively restored 18th century German Protestant monastic settlement in the Pennsylvania Dutch country.

The excursion will depart at 7:45 a.m. and return at 6 p.m. on Oct. 19.

The medieval residents of this colony believed in serving God through austere self-denial and pious simplicity.

After a morning spent in this Spartan atmosphere, the tour group will surely be prepared to enjoy a sumptuous Pennsylvania Dutch lunch at the overladen tables of the nationally known Good and Plenty Restaurant. A tour of the Pennsylvania Farm Community will follow. The guide is Robert Salem, Brookdale associate professor.

Carella is given OK to represent casino

TRENTON (AP) — The state Commission on Ethical Standards yesterday told New Jersey Racing Commission Chairman Charles Carella he can represent a casino developer without conflict of interest.

The commission by a vote of 6-0 unanimously adopted the opinion of its executive director Mrs. Elaine Goldsmith that Carella was not in violation of the racing agency's code of ethics or the state conflict of interest law.

The panel ruled only after Carella asked it to determine whether his engagement as legal counsel by Kupper Associates of Piscataway put him into an official conflict of interest.

Kupper has announced plans to build a major resort complex in Atlantic City including a marina and casino hotel.

During a brief discussion of the Carella issue the commission chairman, state Motor Vehicle Director John A. Waddington, said the finding that Carella was free of conflict was comparable to other decisions made by the panel.

He likened it to determinations that bankers serving on state advisory boards should not be barred from dealing with the state.

Waddington said: "We have reasoned that the state needs their expertise in this area and the state shouldn't place impossible restrictions on these firms in doing business with other state agencies."

Mrs. Goldsmith's opinion said Carella fell within the definition of "a special state officer" under the 1971 conflicts statute. She said, "it would be unreasonable to expect that such persons would be free of any interests which may involve the state."

She said, "No allegations have been made nor has any evidence been submitted that either Mr. Carella or any member of the law firm in which he is a partner has performed any act to violate the public interest in any matter involving racing."

Mrs. Goldsmith said also that Carella's work for Kupper "will be related to the New Jersey Casino Control Commission within the Department of Treasury wherein Mr. Carella has no authority to exercise. Carella was appointed unsalaried head of the racing agency by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne in 1975 after serving for 18 months as the governor's executive secretary. They are long-time associates.

Carella served as an assistant to then Essex County Prosecutor Byrne during the 1960s at the same time that Joseph P. Lordi, the chairman of the new Casino Control Commission appointed by the governor, served as the first assistant prosecutor.

Carella is the second state official retained by the company for legal assistance to guide its interests through the state machinery established to license and monitor the casino gambling industry in Atlantic City.

UNITED WAY DRIVE — Monmouth County Freeholder Director Harry Larrison Jr., left, presents a proclamation to James Dolan, Shrewsbury, Chairman of the Annual Fund Drive for the United Way of Monmouth County. Mr. Larrison yesterday proclaimed the month of October United Way Month, and urged all county citizens to support the Eleventh Fund Drive of the organization. The United Way of Monmouth County allots funds received to 28 health, recreation and social service agencies throughout the county.

Stay ruling pending Manalapan's appeal

FREEHOLD — A court order directing Manalapan Township to amend its zoning ordinance to provide housing for low and moderate income families has been stayed while the township appeals the ruling to a state appeals court.

Superior Court Judge Merritt Lane Jr., who last February invalidated the township's zoning ordinance and had given the township 180 days in which to amend the ordinance, has stayed his ruling until the Appellate Division of Superior Court rules on the township's appeal.

While noting the township's lack of action in amending its zoning ordinance to conform to the state Supreme Court mandate on housing, the judge said the township has a right to appeal, adding that this is an appeal of a law that is still developing.

The judge also noted that the township, as are all municipalities in the state, is under a legislative mandate to amend its zoning ordinance under the municipal land use law. The municipalities have until Feb. 1 to complete this amendment.

Judge Lane said that if he denied the township's motion to stay the judgment, the township would go to the appeals court and get the stay pending disposition of the appeal.

Judge Lane had invalidated the township's zoning ordinance because it failed to make provisions for housing for low and moderate income families. While the zoning ordinance provides for town houses, it requires that they be owner occupied units.

The township's zoning ordinance had been challenged by owners of a 397-acre tract off Rt. 33 and borders Woodward Road and Millhurst Road. These owners wanted to construct a full range of housing and commercial units on their land. The ordinance also had been challenged in another lawsuit by owners of a 245-acre tract off Rt. 33 who also want to construct a housing complex.

Manalapan named in suit

FREEHOLD — The Manalapan Township Planning Board was named defendant in a lawsuit filed by a Brielle corporation which wants the board to grant it site plan approval for construction of a building for retail service stores at Union Hill Road and Wild Turkey Way.

Bonphil Inc. of Brielle said in its legal action that it is contract purchaser of a 4.8-acre tract in a highway business zone.

After the township zoning officer denied the company's application because retail and service stores are not permitted in that zone, the firm applied to the planning board. That board, however, last Aug. 25, denied its application for site plan approval.

The legal action, filed by Marvin E. Schaefer of Ocean Township, charged that the board's denial was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and contrary to law. It wants the court to direct that site plan approval be given.

Dr. Raihall to speak

EATONTOWN — Dr. Denis T. Raihall, vice president for academic affairs at The American College, Bryn Mawr, Pa., will speak at Old Orchard Country Club at noon Sept. 29 for a luncheon meeting of the Monmouth-Ocean Chapter, American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters.

Hyland to rule on advertising

TRENTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. William F. Hyland revealed yesterday he is ready to open the way for greater advertising of professional services in New Jersey.

In an address prepared for delivery in Cherry Hill before the Better Business Bureau of South Jersey, Hyland said he is preparing a legal opinion to the 19 professional regulatory boards. He said he would advise the boards they can no longer enforce a blanket prohibition against the advertising of professional services and charges.

The attorney general said his opinion would be ready in a few days and would require the 19 boards to examine the limitations on advertising by professionals like doctors, lawyers and pharmacists.

It will also ask the boards to make certain that any advertising that is permitted will meet standards.

Hyland noted that legislation pending action by the governor would add a second public member to each of the boards.

The bill also would give the attorney general veto power over any action taken by the professional regulators.

He said such a veto would assure "that where proposals are made for providing professional services to the public at less cost but with similar quality they will not get pushed aside by those in the profession interested in keeping high costs."

He noted that the U.S. Supreme Court ruled this year that attorneys could advertise certain of their services and fees.

Hyland said his opinion would extend the principles established in the case on legal advertising.

The attorney general conceded there is public concern with over regulation by government. But he said "when the abuses mount, the public asks government why it didn't act to curb these abuses earlier through tighter regulations."

Pollution suit is advocated by Kennedy

TRENTON — A resolution authorizing the state attorney general to sue the city of New York and the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to get New York to stop dumping raw sewage into the Hudson and East rivers and the Atlantic Ocean has been introduced by Assemblyman Brian T. Kennedy, R-Monmouth.

Mr. Kennedy, who is running for the Senate seat now held by Sen. Herbert J. Buehler, D-Monmouth, said the dumping of raw sewage by New York is causing irreparable damage to the New Jersey coast.

"We must stop this pollution now or we will lose our beaches here in New Jersey," the 10th district legislator said. "Time is of the essence and the stakes are too high. The time has come for us to get tough here in New Jersey and take what legal action is necessary to halt this disgraceful dumping into the ocean."

Mr. Kennedy said Manhattan alone dumps over 200 million gallons of raw sewage into the water everyday and Brooklyn dumps another 50 million gallons a day. He pointed out that while the city continues to dump this untreated sewage into the New York Bay area, whose currents carry it down to the north Jersey coast, municipalities and sewerage authorities in Monmouth and Ocean counties have spent approximately $662 million on sewerage systems and treatment plants to stop pollution.

"The only way to stop them (in New York) is to sue them and that is exactly what I intend to do," Mr. Kennedy said.

'We'll still go nude'

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "We'll still go nude — they won't stop us," a disappointed backer of America's only municipal nude beach said yesterday after voters ordered a halt to "swimsuit optional" bathing San Diego.

San Diego's first referendum on the nude beach summoned a near-record turnout Tuesday, and the message to the City Council was clear: Rescind the 1974 ordinance designating the 900-foot swath of beach as "swimsuit optional."

With nearly all the votes counted, the tally was 86,113 in favor of rescinding the ordinance, 70,884 against the move.

Although 55 per cent of the voters called for a ban on beach nudity, a few supporters of the practice at Black's Beach vowed to fight.

The vote was "advisory, it's not a landslide," said Robert Jacobs, chairman of the Nude Beaches Committee. He said the council will be urged to disregard the referendum.

But Stan wood Johnson, chairman of the Save Our Beaches Committee that fought nude bathing, said now that "the people of San Diego have spoken, it is up to the City Council to act."

The approval of a ballot proposition directing the council to prohibit nudity "on all public beaches" was described by Johnson as an upset. Many residents, including some owners of the $200,000-$300,000 homes that overlook the beach, said they were surprised by the outcome.

The beach borders the University of California at San Diego campus and the Salk Institute in the posh La Jolla section.

Paul Omundson, who identified himself as an occasional bather at Black's Beach, said the vote "won't stop us" from going suitless.

"There are little pockets of beach all along the coast where people will always go nude," said Omundson, 28. "It's an expression of freedom that can't be outlawed."

The swimsuit-optional ordinance is expected to be withdrawn within a month, a council spokesman said.

MCAP gets grant

TRENTON (AP) — New Jersey will receive nearly $1 million in new grants from the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the state announced yesterday.

The largest grant is $578,846 to the Monmouth Community Action Agency for a Project Head Start program to serve 200 disadvantaged children of nursery school age.

Others were: $141,771 to Jersey City State College and St. Peter's College in Jersey City for remedial programs for college students; $66,000 to the state Department of Education for research in involving citizens in educational planning; $85,969 to the Department of Education for assisting local school districts in dealing with problems arising from discrimination; $100,000 for the New Jersey Council of the Arts for programs in local school; and $17,039 in additional funds for the Mercer County Head Start program.

New bird guide has good features, shortcomings

By WILLIAM F. SANDFORD

OUTDOOR WORLD

For a year or two now it has been our opinion — hinted at least once in this space—that there was a need for a new bird field guide for our region.

Now there is a new eastern U.S. bird field guide (and another one for the West). And there is still a need for a new one.

The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Birds (Alfred A. Knopf; $7.95) corrects the deficiency that was most evident in the earlier guides — outdating. But it introduces deficiencies of its own so that we still don't have a single updated reference that will serve all the birder's common needs afield.

For the active and practiced birder, the new volume, of which John Bull is the senior author, is no doubt useful as a supplement to the established guides. It is up to date on species names and ranges, both of which have changed in some cases ever since the 11-year-old Golden Book guide was published. For the backyard and kitchen-window watcher, Bull's book probably will become the first reference, somewhat easier to use for those not familiar with characteristics of bird families and standard listings.

Even the casual birder, however, may have to fall back on one of the older references to solve the more difficult identification problems.

Two major departures from standard field guide practice distinguish the work. The most important one is the use of photographs instead of drawings for illustration. That's the feature that doesn't always work.

Illustration is a vital part of any field guide. It has to be qualitative, definitive. The artist is free to "pose" his subject just as he wants it to bring out the diagnostic characteristics. The photographer has no such choice, and with wild, lively subject matter like birds, it's rare indeed that he catches just the features needed.

Let it be said that some of the color photos in the Knopf guide (there are 584 in all) are exceptionally good. Most are adequate to the purpose, but too many aren't, and few are all but useless. If you want to see what many of the birds really look like, you're going to have to consult one of the other guides.

One of the problems is that most of the photos that are exceptionally good — like some of the ducks and warblers — are of plumages that are easily recognized anyway. It's the difficult species with the subtle distinguishing points that don't come off well.

The other major change in approach is in the arrangement of species. Instead of being in taxonomic order, they are arranged to make finding them easier for those to whom that order is meaningless. To those of us accustomed to the standard listing, it's annoying to have to look up each species in the index because we have no idea where it might be in the book. But to those who haven't used guides or check lists, it may be somewhat more convenient to use.

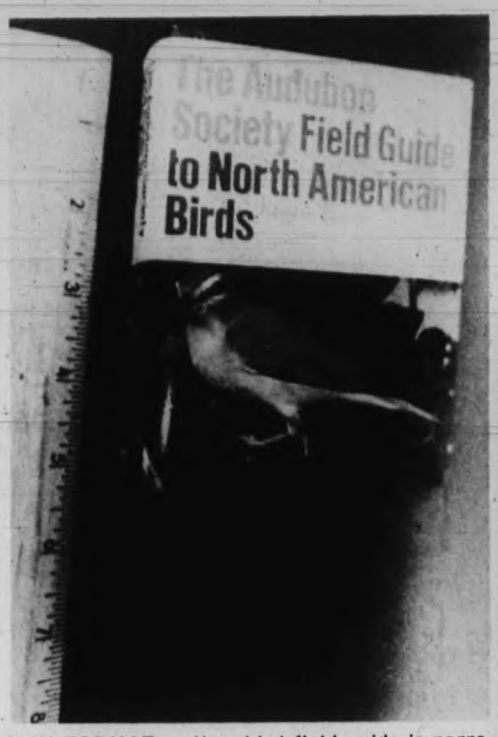

After the introductory notes come the color photos — more than 250 pages of them — grouped according to 13 types, long-legged waders, gull-like birds, upright-perching water birds," etc., ending with perching birds. Within the groupings the species are arranged by color or other similarities.

The text comes next, and here the order is according to habitat — open ocean, seashore, salt marshes — in 12 categories, including two special ones that are geographic — "Florida Swamps and Keys" and "Texas Thickets and Second Growth."

While it's a bit novel for bird guides, the departure from scientific order in favor of "visual organization" is not new with field guides. The Field Guide to Wildflowers in the Roger Tory Peterson series has the species grouped by flower colors. It does make finding a subject somewhat easier.

The format of the book is compact, practical and attractive. IT is narrower than the Golden Book or Peterson guide, of the same depth, and will fit a jacket pocket. With more text than the other guides — and with all those pages of heavy slick paper for the color photos — it is somewhat thicker than the others at 775 pages. The plastic cover is pliable and should be serviceable.

John Bull is author of the 1964 edition of "Birds of the New York City Area" and the more recent "Birds of New York State." Co-author of the new guide is a fellow member of the ornithology staff at the American Museum of Natural History, John Farrand Jr.

SLIM FORMAT — New bird field guide is narrower than older "pocket" manuals, of same depth and, with 775 pages, somewhat thicker.

President given society OK for a quick mice kill

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may not know it but he has a go-ahead from the Humane Society of the United States to kill as quickly as possible the mice that inhabit the presidential offices.

Three White House sources reported that special devices that trap rather than kill mice have been installed near Carter's private office because, they claimed, conventional mousetraps are frowned upon by humane societies.

Nothing could be further from the truth, it seems. Said Charles Herman, spokesman for the national society:

"We stay away from rodents. Essentially, we're for the quickest possible kill for these pests. We're against cruelty."

When the local society was asked if it had advised Carter or his people against using everyday mousetraps, a spokesperson responded, "Doesn't he have enough problems?"

If anything, the type of trap that rests in Carter's outer office, near the desk of personal secretary Susan Clough, would seem to be potentially objectionable because it imprisons rather than kills. Baited with cheese, it has an advertised capacity of 30 mice at a time.

Ms. Clough, who prefers that designation, never has had to cope with any such quantity, however. When she finds a single mouse in the trap, she promptly calls the General Services Administration, which carts it off for belated, if humane, destruction.

Many devices employed

Mice are so prevalent throughout the White House complex that a variety of devices and methods are employed to fight them.

In the press center, for example, conventional spring traps are used — but with an unconventional bait. Instead of arming the triggers with bits of cheese, GSA employes periodically dab them with peanut butter.

Neither Jimmy nor Billy Carter put them up to this. It's simply a fact that mice often contrive to eat cheese bait without triggering a trap. When gooey peanut butter is involved, the task becomes impossible.

In Press Secretary Jody Powell's office, the trap of choice is a long narrow cardboard box, open at both ends, called a Mouse Tracking Station. It contains a green powder that Powell and his co-workers are cautioned — right on the box — from ingesting or inhaling.

An employe in Mrs. Carter's press office reported there were no traps in those precincts — just a saucer filled with something that looks like oats but presumably entails side effects that are best avoided.

Rumor occurs periodically

Intervention by humane societies, although an ill-founded rumor in the case of Carter's mice, has occurred periodically in recent White House history.

When squirrels began chewing up President Dwight D. Eisenhower's backyard putting green, some animal lovers were outraged by Ike's strenuous efforts to have them trapped and carted off to distant federal forests.

Eyebrows were raised anew by a campaign to rid stately White House trees of squalling, untidy starlings. The gimmick in this case was to capture a starling, truss him head down by his feet and record his shrieks of terror, which then were broadcast from loudspeakers placed in the trees.

In the intervening years, technology has advanced to the point where a more effective anti-starling method has been developed. To wit: a groundskeeper walks among the trees at the roosting hour banging two sticks together.

There is one dog, Grits, now in residence at the White House. But the President is not so attached to the mongrel, a gift to daughter Amy, that he is likely to repeat the sin of President Lyndon B. Johnson. LBJ offended a raft of humane societies by lifting his daughter Luci's beagles by the ears — just to hear them howl.

Marciante maneuvering blocks Byrne endorsement

By THOMAS G. DONLAN

TRENTON (AP) — As Gov. Brendan T. Byrne made a triumphal exit from the state AFL-CIO convention last week, most of the delegates cheered wildly. About halfway back on one side of the hall, there were a few men sitting on their hands.

Byrne was elated. He had just given a speech that people who have been listening to him for years considered his best performance ever.

He had given it with such success to an essentially hostile crowd, for even his backers in organized labor have been dissatisfied with New Jersey's efforts to pull itself out of the recession that has dominated Byrne's term.

It is possible that if the labor federation's Committee on Political Education had taken its vote right then, Byrne might have carried the two-thirds support needed for the COPE endorsement.

That's not the way it went.

State AFL-CIO President Charles H. Marciante had orchestrated the meeting to Byrne's disadvantage. The governor went on first. Then came Republican candidate Raymond Bateman. Then came Marciante himself, listing the failings of both candidates and saying, "We owe nothing to either one."

STATE HOUSE SCENE

Then came two hours of what could be called debate over parliamentary procedure, as the Byrne forces tried to undo some of the stacking Marciante had done to favor his call for no labor endorsement in the race.

The technical wrangling resembled a midnight session of the state Assembly.

Finally, a roll call vote consumed another two hours.

Byrne's momentum was lost and the men who sat unmoved by his speech turned out to represent enough rank-and-file union members in the weighted voting to deny him the endorsement.

The governor's labor supporters called the vote "a moral victory," arguing that pulling 63 per cent of the convention vote against the president of the state AFL-CIO was a good showing.

All the governor needs is a few more moral victories like that and his reelection bid will fail. The last thing an incumbent Democrat, already shown in polls to be trailing, needs is the loss of traditional labor support.

That holds true for the symbol of the AFL-CIO, even if all the member unions backing Byrne hold fast for him. He also loses the money, volunteers and "informational mailings" from COPE to union members.

Marciante said COPE kicked in a lot of money for Byrne four years ago, although he refused to say how much.

Marciante, on the other hand, has no reason for joy. "I wouldn't want 63 per cent of my members against me," said Carol Graves, leader of the American Federation of Teachers, which backed Byrne.

Marciante has put his power on the line in his political feud with Byrne several times and not come up a clear winner.

In 1975 he marked six Assembly members, including five Democrats, for defeat. Four were reelected.

Earlier this year, he tried to swing the labor endorsement in the Democratic primary to Joseph Hoffman. Other candidates blocked the move and Hoffman ran a poor fifth in June.

Considering that organized labor is split in New Jersey even within the AFL-CIO, Marciante's claim to be leader of the union movement appears to rest on the fact that nobody is challenging him for his job.

Then there are the other labor splits. In the battle for workers' votes, Byrne has the support of the New Jersey Education Association and the United Auto Workers, two big unions that are not members of the AFL-CIO but are politically active and powerful.

A group of unions backing Byrne have called a meeting next Monday in Trenton, apparently to shore up the governor's labor backing.

In all the political infighting, the labor issues have actually been somewhat obscured.

For the COPE convention, Marciante published a booklet detailing what he considers the anti-labor stands that Byrne and Bateman have taken.

Against Byrne, the complaints Marciante registered boiled down to inaction and too much stress on the environment.

The booklet complains that Byrne killed the Tocks Island Dam, dragged his feet on highway construction, discouraged offshore oil exploration and promoted "unreasonable, anti-business" environmental regulations.

As for Bateman, the booklet calls him "the father of the New Jersey sales tax," and says he has opposed organizing rights for public employes, increases in the minimum wage and improvements in workers' compensation benefits.

Spending cut seen favored

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 74-21 per cent, the American people take a negative view of the value they get from the tax dollars they pay to the federal government.

It is clear from the results of a recent Harris Survey of 1,491 adults nationwide that the public would be inclined to cut federal spending in a number of key areas if it had the chance. On the other hand, some areas, Americans believe, are relatively untouchable.

When asked "how serious a loss it would be if federal programs in certain areas were cut by one third," the following results emerged:

— A decisive 87 per cent of the publical express the view that a one-third cut in the Social Security program would be a "very serious" loss.

— An emphatic 76 per cent feel the same way about federal health programs.

— Close behind comes federal education programs, with 71 per cent of the public rejecting a one-third cutback.

— Sixty-eight per cent of the public are against trimming law enforcement programs.

— Sixty-four per cent feel it would be a "very serious" loss to pare back federal programs providing jobs for the unemployed.

— Defense rounds out the list of untouchables, with 54 per cent of the public feeling that a one-third cutback of its programs would be a "very serious" loss.

There no decisively strong feeling about three other areas of federal spending:

— Only 38 per cent of the public feel it would be a "very serious" loss if federal programs for the cities were cut back by one-third, although another 40 per cent think it would be a "moderate" loss.

— As for trimming programs in pollution control, 36 per cent see this as "very serious," with another 39 per cent feeling it would be a "moderate" loss.

— Thirty-four per cent believe that cutting farm-subsidy programs would be a "very serious" loss, with 39 per cent seeing it as a "moderate" loss.

The remaining eight areas of federal spending are prime candidates for a cutback, as far as the public is concerned:

— No more than 27 per cent of the American people feel that a one-third cutback in highway construction projects would be a "very serious" loss.

— An identical 27 per cent feel that way about dam building and other engineering projects.

— One out of four feels that a cutback in efforts to regulate business would be a "very serious" loss.

— Twenty-four per cent hold the same view about welfare cuts.

— No more than 21 per cent of the public nationwide think that cutting a third out of federal revenue sharing programs would be "very serious."

— As for space programs, foreign economic aid, and foreign military aid, the number of those who now feel that cutbacks would do no great harm is 18 per cent, 8 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively.

It is significant to note how many of these canidates for sharp cutbacks have been the traditional sacred cows in budget making and in Congressional appropriations.

Rt. 36 rezoning draws criticism

MIDDLETOWN — Township Committeeman Ralph A. Siciliano and his running mate, Robert J. McEvilly, who hope to return the Township Committee to GOP control in November, have questioned a master plan proposal to rezone Rt. 36.

"The Democrat tactic of loading our Bayshore with all the undesirable uses has got to stop here and now. The Rt. 36 master plan is an attempt by the Democrats to once again ram heavy commercialization and grossly excessive apartment and townhouses down our throats," Mr. McEvilly said.

After study of the Planning Board proposal for the area, the candidates agree on the objectives of Rt. 36 planning, but disagree with the planners on the recommended solutions.

"It's apparent that the Democratic controlled Planning Board, whose members include both our Democratic opponents, ignored existing reports and materials supplied by our citizens. The Citizens Advisory Board account submitted two years ago was entirely skipped and I don't know why," said Committeeman Siciliano.

"There appears to be no input from school, fire or first aid officials, or from the very citizens who will be so badly hurt by this ill-conceived plan of our Democrat mayor and his Democrat Planning Board," Mr. Siciliano went on.

Mr. McEvilly said overcommercialization of the area along Rt. 36 will lead to increased population which will in turn lead to even more multi-family housing sites in the township.

"Without stricter guidelines, Rt. 36 could become a row of townhouses," he warned.

Mr. McEvilly said also that the plan offered by the Democrats fails to recognize complications that might be caused by any growth of the Earle Naval Weapons Station. "We could have sleazy commercial development and transient multi-family neighborhoods in and around one of the loveliest sections of our township," he said.

"As we see it, this plan seems to be drafted so the Democrats can adopt it after the election," Committeeman Siciliano said. "We demand the Planning Board schedule public sessions immediately to learn the real wishes of the people and to allow the residents of the Bayshore to decide their own destiny," he concluded.

Northern coalition vows war on military spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a Northern bloc of congressmen threatened yesterday to organize a regional attack on U.S. military spending unless the Carter administration funnels more Defense Department funds to 16 states in the Northeast and Midwest.

Rep. Michael J. Harrington, D-Mass., chairman of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, accusing the administration of insensitivity, said "we are prepared to flex our political muscle, whether it be in a voting bloc against next year's military construction bill or tying up other defense related bills in committee."

The coalition Harrington heads released a 37-page report along with a group of six Eastern governors. The report charged that the Pentagon has been systematically short-changing the North by billions of dollars and thousands of jobs.

For example, the report said, the 16 Northeast-Midwest states have only one-fifth of the nation's military installations and only 16 per cent of the country's defense personnel. The states account for 43 per cent of the nation's population and pay about half the country's taxes.

In a separate statement, Gov. Hugh L. Carey, of New York who heads the six-state governors' coalition, noted the study said in the last 25 years defense employment in the nation increased by 35 per cent but dropped by 3 per cent in the North.

"The cutbacks and closures over the recent years have significantly contributed to our unemployment," he said, "while the shift of spending to other regions has only fueled their already-booming regional economies."

The Congressional coalition has 204 members. But there was no immediate indication how many would support Harrington's threat to vote as bloc to hold up military spending.

Harrington and Carey sent a letter to President Carter appealing for his help.

Rep. Donald J. Mitchell, R-N.Y., another coalition member, took a more conciliatory note. He appealed for help from Southern colleagues, noting it was a Northerner, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was instrumental in directing federal funds to the South when that part of the nation was suffering economically.

The study released yesterday sounded familiar themes. But the Northern officials contend that the report will help give them more force by documenting them with charts and tables which emphasize the severity of the problem.

Harrington said that up until now President Carter and the Defense Department have shown "a dangerous lack of sensitivity." He added, that the Pentagon, "the nation's largest employer and purchaser of goods and services, employes the fewest people and spends the least money in the states of the Northeast and Midwest."

Part of the generally accepted explanation for the imbalance has been the dominant role of Southern committee chairmen in Congress who have exercised their seniority in behalf of their home regions in unison with the military.

New Yorkers have been heartened by the Army's disclosure two weeks ago that it is considering Ft. Drum in upstate New York as a possible home for the 14,000-man Second Infantry Division if it is withdrawn from South Korea.

The New York delegation has been seeking Northeastern support for the proposed shift, contending that revitalizing Ft. Drum would help the entire region and not just New York state.

The study released by the Northeast-Midwest officials concluded that the 16 states in the regions received $3.5 billion in defense disbursements in 1975, the last year when such figures were available. The South received $10 billion and the West, $6.9 billion, the report said.

The states in the coalition, besides New York and Massachusetts, are Rhode Island, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

1,200 residents won't pay fuel adjustment charges

MANTUA TOWNSHIP (AP) — About 1,200 South Jersey residents who are suspicious of the "fuel adjustment charges" in their monthly utility bills have stopped paying the charges, says an oil company employe who organized the boycott.

"Some of the utilities send letters threatening to end service, but we know we are in the right," said Michael DiBernardo, 37, president of the 2,500-member Utility Users for Reasonable Rates Association.

DiBernardo said in an interview yesterday that he hasn't paid his "fuel adjustment charge" for five months. He wouldn't say what oil company he worked for, but he indicated he was a blue collar employe.

He pointed to a state law which allows consumers to withhold any part of their utility bills if they believe it is an unfair or inaccurate charge. The consumer must notify the utility company and the state Public Utility Commission that they are doing so and must request a hearing and an investigation.

"We have asked for a hearing but one hasn't been scheduled yet," he said.

DiBernardo said he was putting the unpaid charges into a bank account in case he is ordered to pay in the future. Most association members are charged between $30 to $70 a month, he said.

"We're not looked at as some crackpot group, either," said DiBernardo. "I've met with the top energy men in the state and they recognize what we're doing."

Earlier this week, DiBernardo met with state energy czar Joel R. Jacobsen and PUC head George H. Barbour to discuss the group's action.

"Jacobsen told me he will not tolerate threats by companies and said he will instruct them to cease and desist," he said. "After all, we are working within the state law."

He said the PUC has not set a timetable for the investigation his group requested.

DiBernardo's aim in his antifuel bill campaign is find out the truth about where fuel adjustment charges are going. "A fuel adjustment charge is when the utility passes on the higher cost for fuels to the consumer," he said.

"But I've come to learn that some utility companies are recovering labor, transportation and research costs with the fuel adjustment charges," he charged.

DiBernardo said he discovered the Atlantic City Electric Co. was using the proceeds from its fuel adjustment charges to pay for a 15-year, multimillion dollar contract for a fuel loading terminal.

"I read it in the company's report to its stockholders," he said. "It is unjust and unreasonable for the average consumer to pay for things like that. That's why we're protesting."

Dowd wants record kept of negotiations

ALLENHURST — William F. Dowd, Republican candidate for the Assembly in the 10th district, has proposed a plan to avoid teachers' strikes which calls for keeping records of all contract negotiations for public disclosure in the event of an impasse.

Under the plan, certified short-hand reporters would attend all negotiating sessions between school boards and teachers' unions at the request of either party. In the event negotiations reach an impasse or when either side feels the other is acting in "bad faith," then either side may request that a verbatim transcript of the negotiations be prepared by the short-hand reporter and released to the public.

"Such a procedure would end once and for all the tendency of one side to accuse the other of 'bad faith' without a factual basis for the accusation," Mr. Dowd, of Long Branch asserted in a prepared statement outlining his proposal.

He said that, if elected to the Assembly, he would contact both teachers and school board members to get their feedback on the plan before introducing legislation to implement it.

Mr. Dowd noted that nothing under existing law prevents open contract negotiations now if both sides agree but, he pointed out, such agreement is rare.

"Now, when one side says the other is guilty of bad faith, the public has no way of determining the truth," he said. "In such an impasse, a certified, verbatim transcript of the sessions would be a powerful incentive for both sides to resolve differences."

Mr. Dowd said it would be a mistake, however, to require public, open negotiating sessions as some degree of privacy or secrecy may always be needed to produce successful negotiations.

He maintained the cost of the plan he proposed to avoid strikes would be relatively small, especially when no transcript is prepared. The benefits, he added, would vastly outweight the cost.

"This proposal, if adopted, would not end strife, for it seems that wide differences between boards and unions are a virtually inevitable fixture of education today," Mr. Dowd said. "But if the proposal prevents even one strike, or encourages even one contract, that would be substantial progress."

Sheinwold's bridge advice

by Alfred Sheinwold

"This is the blackest crime of the century!" Sherlock Holmes exclaimed as he watched today's hand being played. Dr. Watson shook his head in bewilderment. What's so black about a bad break in hearts?" the good doctor asked.

Declarer took the ace of spades and led a trump to the ace. When East discarded the nine of clubs South conceded a spade, a heart, two clubs and a diamond.

Watson followed the great detective out of the card room, eager to find out what crime had taken place. See if you can detect it for yourself before you read on.

RARE PLAY

South should make four hearts. He should take the top hearts, top diamonds and the ace of clubs. Then he should lead a spade, allowing West to take a spade and the queen of hearts.

Now West has only spades left. When West leads a spade, declarer discards a diamond from dummy and a club from his hand.

West continues spades, and dummy ruffs while South discards his last club. South can then ruff his last diamond in dummy.

"The double discard is the rarest play in bridge," Sherlock Holmes explained to Watson. "You might wait a hundred years for your chance to play a hand like this, and it's the blackest crime of the century to muff your chance."

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player makes a weak jump overcall of two spades. You hold: ♠A4 ♡97643 ◇K84 ♣A74. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four hearts. A raise to three hearts would be enough if the opponent had bid only one spade, but it does not show the strength of your hand when the opponent has jumped to two spades. You must make a jump response to show that your bid is voluntary rather than under pressure.

Home sewing knit fashions are featured

MIDDLETOWN — Stretch & Sew Fabrics Center, Rt. 35 and Crestview Drive, will present its fall line in Soft Silhouettes Fashions tomorrow at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 1:30 p.m. Tickets for the shows must be purchased in advance. Proceeds will go to the Monmouth County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Each showing will feature gifts, refreshments and a special sale. Floral decorations will be by April Showers Florist and Gift Shoppe, Village Shopping Center, Holmdel.

As a follow up to the Soft Silhouettes show, there will be a series of four workshops featuring the pullover, boatneck, classic cardigan and designer sweaters.

Stretch & Sew is a full service center for sewing with knits. Featured are multi-sized master patterns, lessons for handling knits and quality fabrics that are color coordinated for a total look. Stretch & Sew techniques allow the home sewer to create clothing comparable to better ready-to-wear in a fraction of the time required for ordinary sewing.

From a company that started with a dress pattern traced on brown butcher's paper 10 years ago, Stretch & Sew has grown to a $74 million-a-year business amalgam of wholesaling, manufacturing, sewing instruction and 240 franchised and company stores in the U.S. and Canada.

Founded in 1967 by Eugene, Ore. housewife Ann Person, Stretch & Sew is an outgrowth of the classes in which Ms. Person taught the revolutionary methods she developed for home sewing of the then-new stretch knit fabrics. Friday she received the Horatio Alger Award presented by American Schools and Colleges Association to those for whom the American dream has come true in the style of rags to riches. Other recipients of the Award this year were Johnny Cash and Danny Thomas.

Terri and Lowell Schulz opened their store here in March and offer lessons in the Basic 8, Advanced 8, Men's Wear and Children's Wear with Christmas workshops planned for November and December. They also have home demonstrations called Super-Sew-In's and a One Girl Fashion Show is available to organizations. Interested persons may contact the store for further information.

Tickets must be purchased in advance and are available from Mrs. Perretto, 23 Sunnylands Court, Little Silver. Proceeds will be added to donations received in April by door-to-door canvassing conducted by the Little Silver Unit of the Cancer Society's Monmouth County Chapter.

Women's Center reactivates

LINCROFT — The Women's Center of Brookdale Community College will once again offer a variety of programs and services to community residents this year.

Women at all stages of life are welcome to browse in the free library and make new friends over coffee in the Center. Elsalyn Drucker of West Long Branch, who is a professional librarian, has brought together a collection of books and resource materials of interest to women. Information on education, divorce, careers, health, money matters, and other subjects is available for the asking.

The Women's Center, which is coordinated by Reva Shapiro of Freehold, has a staff of trained advisers who are available for individual counseling appointments. They are able to help women identify their needs and establish realistic personal goals. They also provide information about job markets, educational opportunities and volunteer work.

There is a resume preparation service for men and women of all ages, including persons entering the job market for the first time, re-entering after years of absence, or contemplating a career change. A two hour individual consultation provides an evaluation of life experiences, identification of abilities, and a professionally written resume. The fee is $25.

A wide diversity of seminars and workshops will be offered. From 9:30 to 11:30 Tuesday mornings, Oct. 11 through Nov. 1, a potpourri of free programs is scheduled. These include "Government Jobs for Women," "The Emerging Woman" (a film) and "Know Your County."

"How Did You Get That Job" will be a panel discussion held from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Oct. 4. Successful career women will relate their experiences in their fields of work. The fee is $1.

"Planning Your Future" will be a small group workshop to meet for eight sessions from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Oct. 5 through Nov. 23. A professional guidance counselor will help participants develop their own educational or career goals and take appropriate action. The fee is $40.

On Oct. 5, the Women's Center will bring its services to various county libraries to reach women who are unable to travel to Brookdale. The staff will provide free materials and information on life planning, job opportunities, child care programs and counseling sources.

A Women's Self Awareness Group will meet from 8 to 10 p.m. for eight sessions on Fridays, Oct. 7 through Dec. 9. In a supportive atmosphere, women will explore their feelings and attitudes toward the values and myths that shape their lives. The fee is $25.

"Pills Women Take" will be the subject of a panel discussion from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on Oct. 17. This program is cosponsored by the Monmouth County Board of Drug Abuse Services.

Social Security law will be clarifed in a presentation titled, "A Working Woman's Guide to Social Security." It will be held from 8 to 10 p.m. Oct. 26. The fee is $1.

The Brookdale Women's Center is open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and is located in the Community Resources Center on the Lincroft campus.

Persons wishing to receive the free Women's Center Newsletter and information on non credit fall programs may call Community Services on campus.

Zap! there goes that zipper

By HELOISE

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever had a zipper break in a pair of pants, then dreaded finding a new zipper, taking out the old one, and installing a new one?

I always ended up throwing the pants away in desperation, but not anymore.

For the past year, I've been using my own idea to solve the zipper dilemma for our household by using the self-gripping tape which can be purchased at any notions counter.

Simply measure off the required inches, machine stitch on the fly beside the old zipper. (You don't even need to use a zipper foot.)

For the top fly, stitch the outside edge of the tape to the zipper side, then top stitch on the same stitching line that is already there, using matching thread. The color of the tape you use doesn't matter because it doesn't show when "zipped."

In less than five minutes the job is done. By leaving the old zipper in, the pants still look zipped, plus, I've saved all the bother and frustration of ripping out and replacing the old zipper.

The same idea works if only the tab is broken.

By using this method, you can still zip the zipper but if it slides down, you won't be left gapping. — Pearl Swecker

Bravo for a super-clever hint! Bet you've saved zillions of pants from the scrap bag and untold hours of frustration from would-be zipper fixers. You're a real pal. — Love, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

One day, I wanted to remove the registers from the walls for cleaning, but couldn't find a screwdriver.

I inserted a dime in the head of each screw, then took the pliers, closed them on the dime, turned counter-clockwise and was able to remove the screws.

This might not work with all sizes of screws, but it sure was helpful to me at the time. — Jeanette Miller

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband borrowed a brace and bit from a neighbor. My 6-year-old son was very interested and wanted to use it on everything in sight, so I hid it under my mattress.

A few months later the neighbor came over to see if we still had his brace and bit. We hunted all over the house, garage and yard but never found it.

The next day, I read in your column that one should not only turn the mattress around, but over as well and I proceeded to do so.

Imagine my surprise when I found the brace and bit, and what a laugh my neighbor had!

We are both grateful to you and your daily hints. — Mrs. E. L. Hunt

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep a bedspread evenly hung at each side of the bed, pin a small safety pin to the edge of the spread (pillow end) in the exact center of the spread. This will not show when the bed is made.

It is so easy to put the bedspread on and just line the pin up with the center of the bed. — Mrs. Nobles

DEAR HELOISE:

An extension mug rack hung vertically over my washer or dryer makes a great storage rack for clothes hangers.

Each of the four middle pegs holds up to 15 hangers and you'll never have to untangle another hanger.

DEAR HELOISE:

Peeling rutabagas or similar extra hard vegetables is a difficult job especially if one is handicapped with arthritis.

I preheat the oven to about 350 to 400 degrees, then turn it off. Place the vegetable in the oven for about 15 minutes.

They will then peel like an apple — thin. — Mrs. Grace Reichert

THIS COLUMN is written for you . . . the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to thank you for the public service you rendered in the fight against child pornography. Because of your recent column on the subject, we received a number of calls and letters from citizens with information about individuals engaged in such activity.

Investigation of one such call led us to a highly placed professional person who, incredibly enough, works with young children. We learned that he has been engaging these youngsters in pornographic activity for quite some time and we are hopeful our investigation will end in a conviction.

By educating your readers to this reprehensible criminal activity and alerting them as to whom to contact you have performed a service of enormous magnitude. — Ilana Diamond Rovner, Chief, Public Protection Unit, United States Attorney, Northern District of Illinois

Dear Chief: Thank you for your kind words. I'm delighted to learn that the column was effective. Adult pornography is a bore. Anyone who enjoys such garbage as steady entertainment must have strudel in the noodle. "Kid porn" is not just pornography. It's child abuse, and anyone involved in that scummy racket should get the maximum. Good luck on the conviction.

Dear Ann: You are probably fed up with letters from C.B.'ers but I hope you'll find room for one more.

"K.A.I.D. -7777 North Carolina" should bone up before he calls "Mad In Illinois" ignorant. Power or no power, sunspots or no sunspots, it's illegal to communicate more than 150 miles from your station. C.B. radios are not toys, but that's how the "skippers" use them when they take an ego trip to see how far away they can get to say nothing.

When you want to talk to someone locally and all you can hear is the same ratchet-mouth bellowing, "Have a fine day!" it's enough to ruin yours.

The problem of illegal hogs doesn't mean anything until you are stranded in a car with a CB at your fingertips and you can't get through to ask for help because the "skippers" have all the channels tied up — including the emergency. And how sweet it is to be watching TV and all of a sudden some "Good Buddy" turns up the power so high it knocks out your picture and the sound goes dead — but you can hear him loud and clear — calling Canada.

Ask the FCC why they aren't doing their job of enforcing the laws, especially when the "skippers" are kind enough to give their addresses over the CB. — Also Mad

Dear Also: O.K. I will. Dear F.C.C.: Why aren't you doing your job? Since this CB flack has come up in my column, dozens of people have posed the question. If you can come up with an answer I'll print it.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you advised everyone to bathe or shower daily. I haven't taken a bath or a shower for three years and I'm fit as a fiddle and smell like a rose. The secret? I rub coconut oil on myself every day. It prevents sunburn, too. — Two-Gun Pete From Puerto Vallarta

Dear Pete: Did you say three years? Thanks for letting me know where you are. I don't think I'll go there.

Training for volunteers set by Planned Parenthood

SHREWSBURY — Mrs. Shirley Matlin, R.N., director of volunteers and counseling for Planned Parenthood of Monmouth County, announces the commencement of a three-session training for persons interested in volunteering for the agency. The training will be conducted on three consecutive Wednesdays to begin Sept. 28 at 10 a.m. and will be held at PPMC headquarters, 69 East Newman Springs Road.

The agency is seeking new volunteers to fill openings in family planning centers throughout the county. The new volunteer recruits will receive training and orientation about the agency, its history, philosophy and its varied services.

Volunteers are being sought to work day or evening sessions in Shrewsbury, Asbury Park, Freehold and Monmouth Medical Center.

Mrs. Matlin cites the success of the volunteer program in the placement of experienced volunteers in highly skilled positions within the agency. "All they need is to be interested and willing to give some time. We'll train them and place them in a position that is best suited to their ability," stated Mrs. Matlin. Assisting Mrs. Matlin is Mrs. Dorothy Nicosia, R.N., who is active in the Shrewsbury clinic in a volunteer capacity. Mrs. Nicosia stated "Planned Parenthood uses volunteers for its Speakers Bureau, in the center's library, as office assistants, clinic receptionist and interviewers. The program is very successful and rewarding, not only for the individual volunteer, but for the agency as well."

Persons interested in joining the volunteer training and placement program at Planned Parenthood of Monmouth County are asked to call the Shrewsbury Office, and ask for the director of volunteers.

Fans of 'Star Wars' will like 'Logan's Run' on CBS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If television viewers detect any resemblance between "Star Wars" and the new CBS series "Logan's Run," the producers will be delighted.

Not that Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts set out to make an imitation of the film world's biggest hit. They would be quick to point out that the movie on which the series was based predates "Star Wars" by two years. And the pilot film for the series was completed before anyone had seen the George Lucas film.

"I reserved my opinion at first, but now I'm very hopeful about the series," says its star, 27-year-old Gregory Harrison. "I saw the first show, a 90-minute version, and I think it compares favorably in appearance, even though 'Star Wars' cost something like $10 million and we've got a television budget.

"But I think the people who liked 'Star Wars' will like 'Logan's Run.' It has the same sense of fun, of idealism and discovery. And you can sit at home and enjoy it free, not stand in line and pay $3.50."

He applauded CBS's courage in buying the series before the release of "Star Wars" — "at a time when science fiction was bombing in television." He cited the failures of "Planet of the Apes" and "Fantastic Journey."

Greg Harrison almost didn't make the "Run." MGM had issued a call for a young leading man to play Logan, and Harrison's agent told him to drop by the studio for an interview. He surprised the casting agent by appearing in a beard; he explained he had grown it for an ABC television movie, "The Gathering," to start Dec. 6.

"Too bad," the casting agent said. "That's when we're shooting our pilot."

Harrison figured as long as he had made the trip from Studio City to Culver City, he might as well meet the film makers.

Debbie Reynolds

Debbie still belts out numbers

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) — Debbie Reynolds figures she has four or five "good years" left in her, and says she plans to stay around, playing clubs and doing Broadway shows as long as she's able.

Appearing in this Reno suburb for the third time this year, Miss Reynolds is still packing in the customers as she belts out numbers, does a little tap dancing, and does a little hard dancing.

"This is what I want to do, and what I have been doing for so many years in the business. I want to perform, and as long as I'm good I'm going to keep on doing it. You don't get hired if you don't fill the house, that's how you know when you are good," she said.

"I intend to keep dancing as long as I can. I'm 45 now, and most athletes say their legs go about 35. I can tell the difference, I'll tell you, but I still feel strong," she added.

Debbie Reynolds broke into the business when she was 16. She won a beauty contest in Burbank, got a shot at the movies, and hasn't been back to the chicken farm since. From the motion picture "Tammy" — and she stills sings that in her shows — to "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" and continued stage productions, the one-time darling of the screen continues to draw fans.

She has had her share of problems along the way — two marriages which ended in divorce, the latter accompanied by money problems.

"All that is behind me now. I can tell you, this is the first year in a while I've been out of debt and it feels good. I don't owe anything," she said.

Her show features excellent choreography and fast-moving numbers. In the middle are a number of impressions in which Miss Reynolds wins a room-full of laughs. She does Streisand, Dietrich, Mae West and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

"I'm thinking about adding a couple of new ones, maybe Charro," said Miss Reynolds, as she launched into an impression of the Latin singer.

When she isn't on stage in New York — she just closed a performance of "Annie Get Your Gun" — she usually can be found here or at Las Vegas, where she lives and performs.

"When you are up on stage you don't have any privacy. To have any, you have to stay home. I should have told you, I do have a hobby — it's talking. I love to talk."

'Five from Monmouth' at library

SHREWSBURY — "Five from Monmouth" will open the classical season at the Monmouth County Library's Eastern Branch, Rt. 35, with a concert from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

The program will include works by Beethoven, Poulenc, Moussorgsky, Faure, C.P.E. Bach, and Glinka. All are invited, with no tickets or advance registration necessary. This program is partially funded through a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The group includes these musicians:

Deborah Gussman, who is a bassoonist, began her studies at age 16. She attended Boston's New England Conservatory of Music, where she studied with Richard Plaster and Sherman Walt. After her return to New Jersey, she performed in several Brookdale recitals, including a duo recital with her husband. She is the principal bassoonist with the Monmouth Symphony and the Monmouth Wind Ensemble and has performed in many recitals and teaches privately.

Roy Gussman, who plays the clarinet, studied his instrument since his early youth. After receiving his B.A. from Jersey City State College, he attended the New England Conservatory, earning his Master's Degree in 1973. For the past six years he has served as instrumental music instructor in the Wall Township schools. Mr. Gussman belongs to the Monmouth Symphony and the Monmouth Wind Ensemble. In addition he has participated in chamber music recitals at Brookdale College and the Battleground Arts Center.

Mardee Reed, who plays the flute is a graduate of East Carolina University, where she received her Bachelor of Music in performance as a student of Beatrice Chauncey. She has also studied with Frances Blaisdell, Allen Traris, and presently with Marie Bird Garritson. Ms. Reed was 1970 winner of the Young Artists Talent Competition, and performed as soloist with the Garden State Philharmonic Orchestra. Ms. Reed is currently a faculty member of the Monmouth Conservatory of Music and Educational Consultant with Edu-Tainment Publishing Company, New York City. She is flutist with the New Jersey State Orchestra and the Navesink Woodwind Quintet.

Ingrid Jacobson Clarfield, who plays the piano, gave a solo recital on Brookdale College's Concern Series. She has performed on the Monmouth County Library's Sunday Series, Showcase at Monmouth College, Monmouth Temple Festival of the Arts, several Monmouth Conservatory programs, as well as organizing a Benefit Concert for the Children's Psychiatric Center. Most recently, she and her duo-piano partner, Lillian Livingston, presented a Young People's Concert at the Monmouth Arts Center. They will open the Adult series of the Battleground Arts Center with their duo-piano program on October 29, 1977 at Marlboro High School. Ms. Clarfield teaches piano for the Monmouth Conservatory of Music, as well as in her home in Little Silver.

She is also the music therapist at the Children's Psychiatric Center — School for Emotionally Disturbed Children. Presently, Ms. Clarfield is the Vice-President of the Shore Music Educator's Association and its representative to the Monmouth County Arts Council. She is also on the Advisory Committee of the Artists-in-Monmouth-Schools Project.

Engelbert Brenner, who plays the oboe, continued his study of music after graduation from high school, and by 1927 he was playing oboe and English horn with Erno Rapee at the Roxy Theater. In 1928 he joined the Cleveland Orchestra, where he played English horn for three years.

It was in 1931 that the high school prediction was filled when, upon the invitation of Arturo Toscanini, Englebert Brenner played his first concert with the New York Philharmonic. In 1937 he became the Orchestra's assistant first oboist and in 1960 English horn soloist. During his 41 years with the Orchestra, he has played more than 5,500 Philharmonic concerts, and with virtually every major conductor. But due to the scarcity of solo concertos for English horn, opportunities for solo appearances have been few.

One of the most memorable experiences of his career was the Philharmonic performance in 1969 of the Prelude to the final act of Tristan and Isolde, with its famous English horn solo, under the direction of Leonard Bernstein. In addition to his Philharmonic activities and his teaching, Mr. Brenner is a one-man chamber-of-commerce (unofficially, of course) for Atlantic Highlands, N.J. where he makes his home. He is enthusiastically knowledgeable about the area's historical background and significance, as well as its current assests. An avid fisherman, he is delighted to tell the story about the 57-¾ pound striper he caught. Actively involved in aesthetic and ecological concerns, he displays proudly the I.D. card which documents his title: Commissioner for Shade Trees.

Women artists — what are roles?

LINCROFT — Brookdale Community College will sponsor a panel discussion on the conflicting roles of women artists at 8 p.m., Friday, Sept. 30. The evening will provide insights for women considering a career in art, and for those in other careers who are trying to meet the demands of running a household and pursuing a profession.

Members of the panel are Monmouth County artists. They are Judy Martin, Fair Haven; June Wilson and Carolyn Bloomer, Long Branch; Grace-Grupe-Pillard, Red Bank; Lillian Frantin-Edwards, Tinton Falls; Lilleen Sutton, Old Bridge and Geraldine Velasquez, Lincroft. Moderators are Mary Ann King, Monmouth Beach and Carol Jacobson, Sea Bright.

New anti-rejection process may help fight diseases

NEW BRUNSWICK — A process developed at Rutgers University to "disguise" enzymes and other proteins the human body would normally reject may lead to more effective treatment of a variety of diseases, including gout, allergies and cancer.

In theory, enzymes — the protein catalysts that promote most of the body's metabolic processes — can be useful in treating many illnesses, said Dr. Frank F. Davis, head of the Rutgers enzyme project.

While enzymes from human sources are not available for widespread use, enzymes can be obtained from a variety of other sources, including animal tissue and micro-organisms such as yeast, said Dr. Davis, an internationally known biochemist.

He explained, however, that enzyme therapy has a major drawback — the body's internal defenses will attack non-human or "foreign" enzymes, rapidly removing them from the blood and often causing the patient to suffer serious immune reactions.

Now an interdisciplinary team in the Bureau of Biological Research at Rutgers has developed a chemical modification procedure to disguise foreign enzymes.

The method consists of attaching to each enzyme several strands of a flexible, water-soluble polymer known as PEG (for polyethylene glycol), a derivative of the common automobile antifreeze ethylene glycol.

PEG strands are nontoxic and nonantigenic; that is, they do not stimulate the production of antibodies.

"PEG strands conceal the actual structure of the enzyme molecule," said Dr. Davis. "The immune processes of the body don't recognize the modified molecule as something foreign against which they should act."

Others associated with the enzyme project besides Dr. Davis include Dr. Theo Van Es, professor of biochemistry at Rutgers, who developed the methodology for attaching PEG strands to enzymes; Dr. Nicholas C. Palczuk, chairman of the State University's zoology department and the project's consulting immunologist, and Dr. John R. McCoy, head of the vivarium at the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey and the project's animals pathologist.

Dr. Abraham Abuchowski, a research associate at the State University, played a major role in bringing the concept into practice. He worked initially with an enzyme called catalase, which destroys potentially harmful peroxides in the body. Catalase obtained from beef liver was modified with PEG and injected into mice which were deficient in blood catalase.

The PEG-catalase was effective in raising the catalase levels in the blood for extended periods of time and appeared to be completely nonantigenic, even when injections were repeated many times, Dr. Abuchowski found.

When unmofidied, the foreign catalese quickly produced antibodies in the mice and could not be injected more than two or three times because of severe immune reactions.

Another enzyme studied extensively in the Rutgers project is uricase, which has potential in treating gout. Found in all mammals except humans and the great apes, uricase converts uric acid to a more soluble and readily excreted compound called allantoin.

The absence of uricase in humans may lead to gout, a disease marked by painful inflammation of the joints, deposits of urates in and around the joints, and usually an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood.

The Rutgers researchers found that uricase isolated from a fungus and modified with PEG remained active and produced no immune reactions in laboratory animals.

LOOKS GOOD — A method developed by Rutgers University researchers to "disguise" proteins the human body would normally reject may lead to more effective treatment of many diseases. Dr. Frank F. Davis, right, head of the project, views material in an analytical ultracentrifuge as Dr. Abraham Abuchowski, a research associate at the State University, brings the machine up to speed.

Both PEG-catalase and PEG-uricase appear to be ready for large-scale animal and clinical studies, Dr. Davis said.

Three enzymes that act against cancer cells will be tested in animals during the next several months under the direction of Dr. Palczuk.

These enzymes lower the level of certain amino acids in the blood. Amino acids are required in large amounts by rapidly growing tumor cells, and reducing the amount of amino acids in the blood appears to decrease the rate at which cancer cells grow.

Success in modifying the three enzymes could allow them to be used to treat patients for long periods of time without undesirable side effects, Dr. Davis said.

Other enzymes of potential therapeutic use, he said, are those that degrade cholesterol — of possible value in treating arteriosclerosis; also, enzymes that dissolve blood clots, and enzymes that can be used to treat inborn errors of metabolism, a large family of diseases caused by the absence of inadequate amount of needed enzymes.

Preliminary work has been done with trypsin, an enzyme that degrades blood clots. Chemically modified bovine trypsin appears able to dissolve blood clots and will probably be tested in animals in a few months, Dr. Davis said.

Some studies have also involved the hormone insulin, used to control diabetes. Insulin, which has a structure similar to enzymes, has been modified with PEG and found to be active and nonantigenic, Dr. Davis said.

Many diabetics develop antibodies to insulin, he noted, and must use various types of insulin or increase the frequency of their injections. PEG-insulin may have the potential to control diabetes more effectively, he said, but further research is needed.

The Rutgers group also hopes to modify antitoxins, which now can cause immune reactions. Antitoxins are used in treating many disorders including snake bite poisoning, diphtheria, tetanus and botulism.

Recent finding suggest that attaching small amounts of PEG to allergens may produce superior vaccines for the treatment of various allergies, Dr. Abuchowski said. Allergens are the substances, such as ragweed pollen and cat dander, that cause allergies.

The methodology for coupling PEG to proteins has been published and is available to other researchers. Projects under way outside of Rutgers are now investigating various uses of the Rutgers

"I think this work has tremendous potential," said Dr. Davis. "It's being picked up in other labs and I would expect within the next year or two to see applications we hadn't dreamed of."

NOT THIS WEEK — Matawan Regional coach Barry Rizzo won't be patroling the sidelines this week. The current teachers' strike at the school has forced the cancellation of Saturday's game with Neptune.

Matawan-Neptune game off!

By RICH NICOLETTI

MATAWAN — "We have officially called off the game," said Bruce MacCutcheon, Matawan Regional High School athletic director, concerning Saturday's Shore Conference "A" Division North football game in Matawan against Neptune.

Matawan, always one of the strongest high school football teams in Monmouth County, is a school on strike. As such, the school cannot compete in extra-curricular activities, namely sports.

The entire athletic program is shut down, and that includes all regularly-scheduled football games. Matawan will forfeit the game to Neptune unless the two schools can get together and set another date.

"I don't see how we can do that, do you?" asked MacCutcheon.

The answer to that is an unequivical no, unless the two schools agree to play the Saturday before Thanksiging Day.

"We're against four days rest before a game. It's just too short a time to prepare," MacCutcheon said.

MacCutcheon is somewhat optimistic about the future of this year's football fortunes which rest upon the settlement of the strike.

"Naturally, if the strike isn't settled, we'll have to forfeit the second game, too. I think the two factions will make some positive moves when they meet on Sunday."

As for Barry Rizzo, the longtime mentor of the Matawan Huskies football team, the entire affair has been a nightmare. Rizzo was not available for comment last night, but MacCutcheon knows how he feels.

"He's drained mentally and physically. They're his kids and he knows how disappointed they are," MacCutcheon said.

Rizzo, the 22-year veteran coach, led his team to a Central Jersey Group IV championship in 1975 when Matawan was en route to a 24-game winning streak. Rizzo also is a former Daily Register Coach of the Year.

"He's been coaching here so long. He's coaching a lot of kids whose families he knows well. Last Saturday the team had to miss an important scrimmage. That didn't do any good.

"We're going to go out scouting on Saturday and try to prepare for the next game. The kids have been working out on their own without equipment, and of course, no contact.

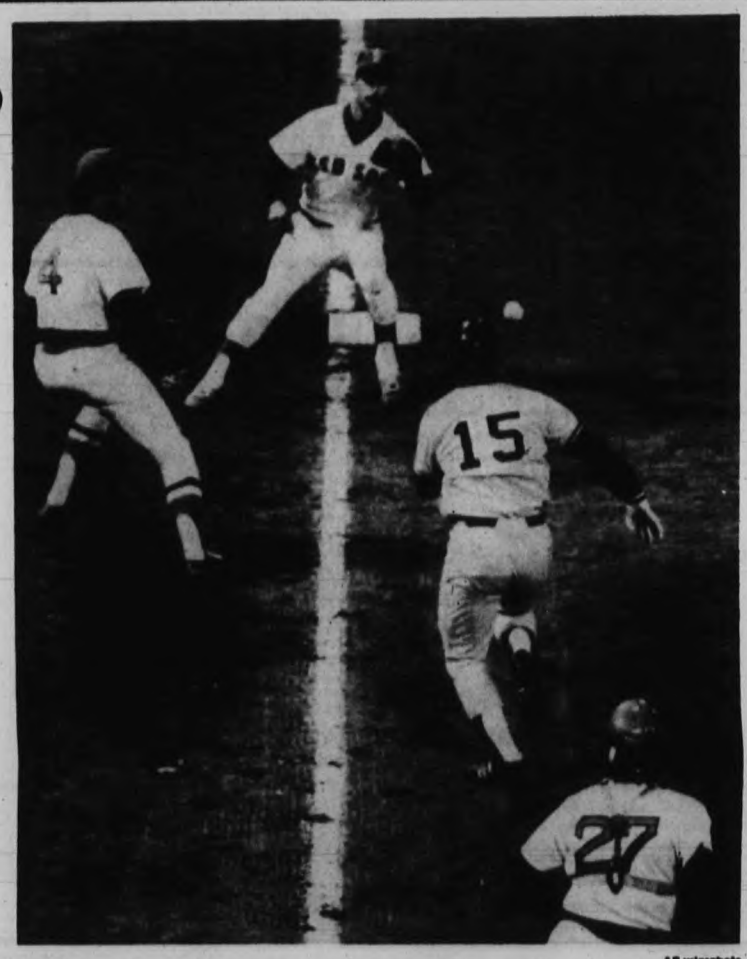

"It's a sad thing, very emotional, be glad when it's over."

The cancellation and probable forfeiture could make a third-straight qualification into the state playoffs difficult for the Huskies.

They beat Colonia, 7-0, in '75, to earn the CJ Group IV crown and were considered by many as the finest team in the state.

BOSTON (AP) — Hello, Broadway. Look out Yankees. The Boston Red Sox are alive and kicking.

The Red Sox kept alive pennant hopes Wednesday night with a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees, completing a sweep of a two-game, rain-interrupted series at Fenway Park.

"Did you ever think you'd ever see the day that Earl Weaver would be rooting for the Red Sox?" Boston manager Don Zimmer asked jokingly after the Red Sox completed an 8-7 season against the Yankees.

Boston's victory moved the Red Sox to within 2½ games of the Yankees in the American League East race. Baltimore charged to within two games with a 4-0 victory over Toronto.

"We're still breathing," Zimmer said. "This is what we wanted three days ago and now we'll take our chances.

"We're 2½ games out in the standings, but only two behind in the loss column. We've got 11 games to play — four in Detroit and then seven at home, four against Toronto and three with Baltimore."

"We're right behind New York, but we're going to have to play like hell the rest of the way," said Boston super star Carl Yastrzemski.

"This is what we had to do, two wins over the Yankees," the Red Sox' 38-year-old elder statesman added. "Now we've got to go into Detroit and win four in a row. Three out of four won't be good enough. The Yankees are playing good ball and we have to win every game."

"I just hope we win tomorrow night. We've got 11 games to go and I'm hoping to win every one of them.

"That's nothing new, though. I've been hoping to win every game since last April 7. I've missed out on about 60 actually 61 times."

New York Manager Billy Martin, notorious for his fiery temper, took the loss in stride.

"We were hoping for at least a split here, but we didn't get it," Martin said. "However, we're still two up in the loss column over both the Red Sox and Baltimore.

"That doesn't sound like much, but it's pretty big. It's not too bad at all. The pressure is on the others."

The Red Sox will send rookie right-hander Don Aase, 5-2, against the Tigers tonight. He is due to be opposed on the mound by Francisco Arroyo, 7-17.

George Scott snapped a 2-2 tie with his 33rd home run with two out in the sixth inning, then turned in a spectacular double play at first base to end last night's game.

After the Yankees pulled into a 2-2 tie on Lou Pinella's two-out single in the sixth, Scott unloaded his first homer since Sept. 8 against New York starter Mike Torrez, 16-13, a line drive into the right-center field bleachers.

Luis Tiant surrendered a homer to Piniella to open the fifth inning and then needed relief help from Jim Willoughby after Thurman Munson singled, Reggie Jackson walked and Chris Chambliss lined to center, all in the sixth.

Royals grab AL West tie; Phillies delayed Bucs win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Darrell Porter's 16th home run of the year touched off a six-run seventh inning Wednesday nigtt and the Kansas City Royals cruised to a 10-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins to clinch at least a tie for their second straight American League West title.

The Royals, posting their 20th victory in 21 outings, took a 4-3 lead into the seventh against reliever Ron Schueler. But Porter increased the margin to 6-3 with a two-run shot into the right field bleachers.

Amos Otis followed with a single and scored on Fred Patek's triple. Patek made it 8-3 when the Twins mishandled Frank White's bunt. Hal McRae was hit by a pitch and both runners tallied on George Brett's double.

Pirates 4, Mets 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Kison and Rich Gossage combined on a five-hit shutout over the Mets Wednesday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York 4-0, handing Jerry Koosman his 20th loss of the season just one year after he won 20 games.

Kison and Koosman matched shutout innings until the sixth when Frank Taveras singled, stole second and third and scored on a single by Fernando Gonzalez.

In the seventh, Duffy Dyer walked and was forced at second by Omar Moreno. When Kison singled to center, Moreno, who was running on the pitch, scored all the way from first.

In the eighth, Miguel Dilone sigled, stole second and scored on Bill Robinson's double. Robinson advanced to third as Al Oliver grounded out and scored on Ken Macha's single.

The last time a pitcher won 20 games in a season and then lost 20 the next year in the National League was in 1973 when Philadelphia's Steve Carlton was 13-20 after winning the Cy Young Award in 1972 with a 2710 record.

Koosman has allowed two or fewer runs in 16 of his 32 starts but has won only eight games.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

3PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hit shutout as the Chicago Cubs defeated Philadelphia 2-0 Wednesday night and slowed the Phillies' pennant push.

The Phillies began play with an eight-game lead over Pittsburgh in the National League East and a magic number of four, but Ivan DeJesus and Steve Ontiveros delivered RBI singles off Randy Lerch, 9-6, in the second and third innings.

With one out in the second, Lerch walked Mick Kelleher, Burris sacrificed and DeJesus singled the run home. Bill Buckner opened the third with a double, went to third on Gene Clines' single and scored on a single by Ontiveros.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mr. Buckeye meet Mr. Sooner; Mr. Sooner meet Mr Buckeye.

"Glad to know you," said Mr. Buckeye. "I've heard a lot about you. You have the Drumstick offense, don't your?"

"That's Wishbone, and the pleasure's all mine," said Mr. Sooner. "You're pretty famous in these parts. We try to watch when you play Michigan."

"Yeah, that game's a bloody war," said Mr. Buckeye. "The winner gets to go to the Rose Bowl."

"I think the Rose Bowl parade has the best floats," said Mr. Sooner. "How've you done in those games?"

"Our coach, Woody Hayes, tells us not to worry about final scores," said Mr. Buckeye. "He says the important thing is how you play the game. By the way, are you still being banned from bowl games because of that little cheating thing?"

"That's ancient history," said Mr. Sooner. "We won the Fiesta Bowl last year."

"Never heard of it," said Mr. Buckeye.

"Saw a copy of your play book," said Mr. Sooner. "You added a straight-ahead run to the run left and run right. That's progress."

"Defense, defense," said Mr. Buckeye. "You can run but you can't hide."

Who says it takes time to develop a bitter rivalry? This Saturday will mark the first meeting ever between Ohio State (Mr. Buckeye) and Oklahoma (Mr. Sooner), and it isn't being viewed as merely a non-conference game.

Packers waive Brockington

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) —John Brockington, running back for the Green Bay Packers, has been placed on waivers according to club officials.

The former Ohio State star rushed for more than 1000 yards in each of his first three seasons with the Packers, but was ineffective during the past three seasons.

Brockington was not immediately available for comment.

However, he had asked to be traded after the 1975 season, and made known his demands to news media just before the start of training camp last year. He said at the time he had been hurt when fans lustily booed him during the final game of the 1975 season.

However, he appeared to report with a renewed positive attitude this year.

"I don't want to say anything this year," he said shortly after camp opened. "I want to let what I do on the field speak for itself."

But as his frustration mounted as his ineffectiveness continued during the exhibition season, Brockington indirectly faulted the team's blocking.

"You can see it on film almost every time," he said after one game. "A breakdown here, a breakdown there, nothing. Otherwise it's 20 yards, just like that."

But Brockington praised his blocking after his finest showing of the exhibition season when he rushed for 40 yards in 11 carries in the preseason windup Sept. 9. Prior to that, he had gained 29 yards in 29 carries in five games.

"You get some holes and you can run with the football," he said after the Eagles game. "It's as simple as that. I felt quick out there, really quick, and the line came up with some holes. The right plays were called at the right time, and that's the name of the game."

While the question of what to do with Brockington was an ongoing dilemma for the Packers, Starr said it wasn't easy to cut him.

"We felt that with our fullback situation being what it is, with Barty Smith and with a promising young fullback in Jim Culbreath, we would be short-changing the team if we tried to go with three fullbacks," Starr said.

"We made a move that was tough to make," he said. "Any time you part with an established veteran, especially of the caliber of John Brockington, it's tough. Nevertheless, we made it."

Culbreath, 6-feet a 209 pounds, gained 24 yards in 12 carries and caught two passes during the preseason.

Shavers set for big one

Whaaaap.

"What are you gonna do to him?"

"Knock him out."

Whaaaap.

"The heavyweight champion of the world."

Luca put away the medicine ball, which doesn't cut into a well-conditioned man's gut nearly as deeply as a fist housed in an eight-ounce glove.

Earnie Shavers, a man who doesn't like fights, will be in Madison Square Garden the night of Sept. 29. A devestating puncher with a question-mark chin and suspect stamina, Shavers will fight Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight championship of the world. It's the only way Shavers would be there.

"I watch very few fights," said Shavers following his workout in the Garden's Felt Forum. "I'm not a fight fan. I'm not a sports fan. I like to fish and hunt."

But the 33-year-old slugger from Warren, Ohio, is not a fight fan, he's a fighter . . . and he's well aware of the situation he's in. It's more than bid at the heavyweight title for Shavers, it's a chance to make worthwhile all the days in the gym, the miles of running in early-morning darkness, the punches given and received, the humiliating years on the floor—years which are actually ticks of a stopwatch but which stay with a fighter for a lifetime.

"This is a must fight for me," said Shavers. "I won't get another shot at the title. I'll only fight four or five more fights, regardless."

Shavers has five daughters, aged 12-11-10-6-2, and when he was asked about the gap between the third and fourth oldest girl, he replied: "I wasn't making much money at the time."

The money is right in front of his bearded face now, not the $300,00 he is guaranteed for the fight in Madison Square Garden, but the kind of money that comes with perhaps the biggest individual title in sports, the kind of money that could be available to the conqueror of a living legend.

"I'm ready," he said.

Gil Hearne challenges Michel at Wall

WALL TOWNSHIP — Tom Michel of Manahawkin is in command in the Modified Stock Car point derby at Wall Stadium but Gil Hearne of Jacobstown is right on his rear bumper.

Michel, who has played the one-two game with Charlie Kremer Jr. of Toms River all year long, suddenly has to reckon with the hottest driver at the Rt. 34 Speedway in the person of Hearne.

Hearne vaulted into second place in the Modified ranks last Saturday night when he won his second feature in a row (eighth of the season) and his sixth in his last nine attempts. The other three race dates show a second, an eighth and a non-finishing 17th.

With four race dates on the calendar Michel's total for the year is 970; Heane's 934, and Kremer's 928.

The sportsman and Modern Stock Car point races are not as close but a mishap in the early going of any qualifying race could lead to no points for the night and shrinking of the leaders' point spread.

Chip Graves of Wall Township has the top rung of the Sportsman ladder with 720 points. Rick Sendzik of Brick Township is next up with 628 with Harry Reed of Englishtown closing fast with 614.

Evernham boasts of 854 points compared to 756 for Parkstrom and 746 for Butch Colosimo of River Plaza.

Racing resumes Saturday at 7 p.m. with 15 stock car races scheduled to be run under the stars. Gates open to the public at 5 p.m.

Rupp satisfactory

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Former University of Kentucky basketball coach Adolph Rupp remained in satisfactory condition Wednesday at the Albert B. Chandler Medical Center, where he has been undergoing tests.

Rupp, 76, entered the hospital Sept. 13, a spokesman said, adding there was nothing unusual about the length of his stay. It was not known when Rupp would be released.

N.Y. farm team dumps Yankees

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Syracuse Chiefs, the International League farm club of the New York Yankees for the past 11 years, will become a farm club of the expansion Toronto Blue Jays next season.

General manager Tex Simone said Wednesday the Chiefs' board of directors voted unanimously Wednesday to terminate a contract with the Yankees and sign on with the blue Jays.

Simone said the American League Blue Jays and the Chiefs had signed a two-year "player development" contract. He would not disclose details of the agreement, saying only "it will help."

Over the past year, Chiefs' officials had expressed dissatisfaction with their relationship with the Yankees and what they called the major league team's "negative attitude" toward them.

Players and team officials complained that the Yankees preferred to rely on established major league players to fill team openings, rather than developing and bringing up Chiefs' players.

Syracuse finished fifth this year in the standings of the eight-team International League.

FOOTBALL CONTEST RULES

ALL ENTRIES MUST BE IN AN ENVELOPE

NO POSTCARDS ACCEPTED

A prize of $100 will be given the person selecting the most winners from the 20 football games listed above.

In case of a tie, single winner will be determined by the closest to the total number of points scored by all teams on the contest card.

Mark an "X" in the square opposite the team you believe will win. If a game ends in a tie and you select one of the teams as a winner, it will count as a loss in your total. However, if you designate a tie and the game ends in a tie, it will count in your "win" column.

Each contestant is permitted up to six entries. Switch your selection around as you wish. Contestants are allowed to submit one hand-sketched facsimile. Entry forms reproduced electronically are not acceptable.

All entries must be in the Register office by 5 P.M. on the Thursday preceding the games. Only one award will be made to any contestant or household in any one week.

By participating in this contest, the winner or winners expressly consent to the use of their name, address and photograph in news stories and/or advertising promotion of this contest without further remuneration.

PROTEST PHILLIES — Some security guards picket along with Teamsters Union members outside Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia before the Phillies, Chicago Cubs game. They are protesting the Phils' management's refusal to allow security guards to seek union representation.

Teamsters picket Phillies' game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wednesday night's National League game between the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies was picketed by Teamster Union members supporting non-union security guards.

The pickets were protesting Phillies management's refusal to negotiate with the Teamsters as bargaining agent for the guards.

"The National Labor Relations Board today ruled that they could not be represented by the Teamsters," said Phillies vice president William Giles. "We have told them for a month that they would be free to negotiate as an dependent union."

The picket line was lifted after both sides agreed to begin bargaining about an hour before game time. Giles said a traffic tieup caused by pickets blocking stadium driveways delayed fans for about 10 minutes.

A union official said pickets were hoping to have players, fans, the press and other team and stadium employes honor their line. But players, fans and a large percentage of stadium employes entered without incident before the line was lifted.

The Phillies arranged to have minor league umpires on hand in case the National League crew honored the picket line.

Eagles dismiss Carlin in a power struggle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Leo Carlin, the Philadelphia Eagles' business and ticket manager, was dismissed Wednesday by the National Football League team, a spokesman said.

"I can confirm that he's no longer associated with the club. We're saying it's an internal matter," said the spokesman.

Carlin, 40, had been associated with the Eagles since 1966, a span that included their move from the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field to Veterans Stadium.

The Eagles have been sold out consistenly in recent years. However, Carlin fell into disfavor recently when he apparently sided with a front office faction that attempted to wrest control of the franchise from owner Leonard Tose.

Tose retained control when he borrowed money from a Detroit bank to pay off a loan for $5.1 million that had been called for payment by a local bank.

In addition to handling ticket sales, Carlin also had responsibility for paying club bills.

The Eagles missed selling out for the first time in 28 home games last Sunday in their NFL season opener against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Although they fell a few thousand short of a sellout, the team spokesman said that was not the reason for Carlin's dismissal.

King tip Morozova

MOSCOW — Billie Jean King defeated Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union 6-2 Wednesday night, as a four-member American squad won four of its first five matches in a U.S.-Soviet tennis tournament at Moscow's Lenin Stadium.

Playing on a frozen hockey rink with heavy-duty carpets covering the ice, the Soviet Union's Alex Metreveli downed Mike Estep, 6-4. The players met for only one set apiece while Kristien Shaw used a powerful backhand to easily defeat former Soviet champion Yevgenia Biryukova, 6-3.

In doubles competition, King and Shaw combined to beat Morozova and Marina Kroshina, 6-4, and King and Estep defeated Morozova and Vadim Borisov by the identical score.

The tournament continues Saturday in Tbilisi, Soviet Georgia, and next Monday in Lennigrad.

Lucchesi files suit

ORLANDO, Fla. — Former manager Frank Lucchesi of the Texas Rangers filed a civil damage suit Wednesday against Lenny Randle, the baseball player who punched him in a spring exhibition game in March.

James E. Shepherd, Lucchesi's Orlando attorney, filed the suit in circuit court here and said the papers would be served on Randle by the sheriff in New York, where the infielder plays for the New York Mets.

Although Lucchesi will reportedly seek $200,000 in damages, Shepherd said, "We are certainly not bound to that figure."

Under Florida law, a circuit court suit need only state that it is for damages in excess of $2,500.

"We will ask for a compensatory amount for my client's medical expenses and punitive damages, and that is a jury question," Shepherd said.

"I don't know right now how much Randle is worth. The more he's worth, the higher the punitive damages can be."

Lucchesi was quoted as saying Tuesday that he requested that Randle be served with the suit papers directly "so he can do a little thinking. I've had to suffer a lot with this thing and now I think it's time he started thinking about it too.

Middletown league opens

Carteret 6 Long Branch 2

In a strong defensive battle Carteret Rec edged Long Branch Rec 6 to 2. After a scoreless first half, Carteret set up their scoring play following a 30 yard Rich Hefferan to Bob Veteral toss to the one yard line. The next play Hefferan wasted no time in hitting Lenny Watson for the one yard score.

Danyl Brabheim and Donald Staten teamed up for Long Branch's lone score, a safety in the fourth quarter. As the game ended, Long Branch quarterback, Leroy Haine threw to receiver Dave Lewis in the end zone, but Ed Hennesey came up with one of his many outstanding defensive efforts to strip the ball from him and end the game.

Schnieders Tap Room 23 Blue Dolphin Inn 6

In the second game of the double-header, Schnieders Tap Room moved past Blue Dolphin Inn 23 to 6. Blue Dolphin Inn opened the scoring in the first quarter on a pass from Barker to Algood, but from then on, it was all Schnieders game. Jay Franks at quarterback ran for 120 yards and passed for three touchdowns. Don Mullans was on the end of one of those touchdowns while Marty Edwards corralled the other two. Schnieders Defense also accounted for a two point safety, along with four interceptions.

Middletown Athletic Club 19 Triples S Bar 7

Triple S Bar gave a super first half performance in the game for a new team. They outplayed the Athletic Club with strong defensive play to hold them scoreless and also strong offensive play to put the only points on the board. But in the second half the Athletic Club came out to play ball with QB Vinnie Dicontanzi hitting Mike Veth first for a touchdown and then also converging with Veth for the extra point. Ralph Heston led a great defensive effort with two interceptions. In the fourth quarter, Disconstanzi found receivers Dom Puccini and Frank Felski open for a touchdown apiece. Puccini gained 107 yards for a fine offensive effort.

European laurels to Tonna

MILAN, Italy (AP) — France's Gratien Tonna captured the European middleweight boxing title Wednesday night when defending champion Alan Minter of Britain suffered a cut on the forehead and the bout was stopped by the referee in the eighth round.

The European title was no novelty for Tonna, who already was a continental champion. He gave up the title, however, for a world bout against Carlos Monzon that he lost.

Minter suffered the severe cut in the sixth round. The devastating right hooks of the 28-year-old Frenchman worsened his injury in the following rounds, and Italian referee Domenico Carapellese ended the fight after 1:10 of the eighth round.

The victory at the Milan Indoor Sports Palace was Tonna's 43rd in 48 professional fights while the loss was the sixth for the 26-year-old English southpaw. The rest of the losses were also due to injuries.

Too much leisure means too little fitness

This is one of a series of articles on stress

If I am to exist I must accept stress. If I am to reach my potential I must do more. I must seek it out. Stress is the stuff that shapes me. The force that forces me to do my best. The stimulus that makes me the person I am.

But as society changes so does stress. We are faced now with less and less physical stress, more and more mental and psychological stress. That is our way of doing things. Man, as Ortega pointed out, is a technician. He expends effort to decrease effort. He strives to remove the need to work, and thereby concentrates on living well. The mission of technology consists in releasing man for the task of being himself.

The result is increasing security and leisure, protection from the elements, a decrease in physical work. A great deal of physical stress has been eliminated from our day-to-day living. Particularly the stresses that led to the strength of the body, the maintenance of vigour, and the development of endurance.

That is the crux of the matter. Physical stress is no longer obligatory. Once hardship meant health. The needs for fitness were also necessities; the most frugal way of living, long sojourns in the open air, and continuous exertion. Technology has liberated us from these boons to our physiology.

Now we have indoor plumbing and central heating; air conditioning and hot showers. We have transportation that virtually removes the need to walk. Time and space have been conquered. We have all sorts of labor saving devices. We have even reached the ultimate. We have put men in orbit and removed the final stress-gravity.

Physical stress therefore has become vuluntary. It must be sought. It must be self-administered. We have come to a point in our physical existence much like the spiritual crisis described by Pelagius "If we wish not to go backwards, we must run." Unless we run or its equivalent, we are doomed. Unless we become athletes we can never become the self that is our project on this earth.

That is my personal view. I use the Greek root to define the word athlete. It comes from two words, one meaning prize, the other, contest. The athlete then is anyone who competes in a contest for a prize. But in this contest that prize is no less than becoming one's self.

For each of us this athlete inside is different. Therefore the stress necessary to become an athlete is necessarily different. Mine is the stress needed to become a long distance runner. I administer it in measured doses of time and frequency and intensity. I run this far, this fast, this often. There are days I do hills for resistance and intervals for speed. And then I rest at a certain plateau of performance readying myself for another assault on the summit.

The principle for everyone is the same. The application of stress which is the alarm period. Then the period of adaptation or mastery (a wonderful word) followed by rest and recuperation. This is all scientific, but it is not that scientific. There is a formula for fitness and then there is really no formula for fitness. The body alone knows. And every body is different.

Training then is not a cookbook system. Guidelines work up to a point and then you are running by the seat of your pants. I must listen to my body. Know my body's wisdom. Learn to read what is going on inside.

Technique is another matter. There I must go with the best. Learn how to minimize stress. So I run with the least effort. I shorten and shorten my stride until it is as if I am riding a bicycle in low gear.

So too I must learn the best methods of rest and recuperation. Sleep and naps of course. But also relaxation techniques and biofeedback. All help to restore and revitalize. All set me up for another day, another try at my peak.

There are always missteps to be sure. That climb is never uninterrupted. Sometimes the stress is too much. The rest period too short. I break down with a cold. Or am possessed with exhaustion. Then nothing pleases. The run is a bore. The race a disaster.

But this only shows that I am responsible. Not only for defeat but victory as well. I can no longer blame chance or fate or technology for the bad things that happen. But I can also take credit if things go well.

One thing I know, the athlete is well started. No one of us is all we should be or longs to be. Seeking physical stress and the health and fitness and performance that comes with it, is a giant step in that direction.

PUBLIC NOTICE
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the New Jersey Department of Transportation will hold a design public hearing on Tuesday, October 25, 1977, in the auditorium of the Long Branch Junior High School, Westwood Avenue, for the proposed construction of Ocean Boulevard from Morris Avenue to the Monmouth Beach Borough line, City of Long Branch, Monmouth County. The hearing will run from 7:30 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.
The purpose of the hearing, as described in the New Jersey Department of Transportation's Action Plan (adopted April 14, 1975) is to "insure that an opportunity is afforded for effective participation by interested persons in the process of determining the location of the proposed improvement" within the corridor approved by the Federal Highway Administration as a result of a corridor public hearing held in Long Branch on February 16, 1977, and to provide "a public forum that affords a full opportunity for presenting views on the proposed construction and the social, economic, and environmental effects of the project."
The hearing will be preceded by an information session to be held on Monday, October 17, 1977 from 3:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Long Branch Municipal Building. Its purpose is to discuss the potential social, economic, and environmental impacts of the proposed project and all other data contained in the Final Environmental Impact Statement. Maps and renderings will be available for public inspection and comment.
The hearing itself will consist of an official presentation by the Department of Transportation personnel followed by an opportunity for citizens to give testimony regarding the proposed improvement. All testimony will be recorded and will become part of the official public hearing record. Questions posed as part of an individual's recorded statement will be officially responded to by the Department subsequent to the hearing.
In addition, a display and information area that will run concurrent with the hearing will provide an opportunity for individuals to pose questions and discuss issues related to the public hearing. These informal conversations will not become part of the official hearing record. Department personnel will be available in the information area beginning at 7:00 p.m. on the evening of the hearing.
In order to facilitate the presentation of testimony and to accommodate all persons who wish to speak, we are asking speakers to pre-register by sending their name, address, phone number and preferred speaking time to the Office of Community Involvement, New Jersey Department of Transportation, 1035 Parkway Avenue, Trenton, N.J. 08625. Pre-registrations should be submitted in writing as far in advance of the hearing date as possible, since requests for speaking time will be honored in the order in which they are received by the Office of Community Involvement. Each speaker will be allotted five minutes in which to present his or her testimony. In order to establish a reasonable schedule, pre-registrants should indicate 3 half hour periods between 8:00 and 10:00 p.m. that will be convenient. The Office of Community Involvement will notify pre-registrants of their assigned speaking time.
Persons wishing to speak who have not pre-registered must sign up to speak upon arriving at the hearing. They will be called upon in the order in which they have signed in if there are available time slots that have not been taken up by pre-registered speakers.
Pre-registrants who wish to give their time to another speaker may do so if they are present at the hearing when their name is called. Each pre-registrant may relinquish his or her time to only one other individual.
Written statements and other exhibits related to the Ocean Boulevard project may be presented in place of or in addition to oral statements made at the hearing. These statements and exhibits must be submitted to the Department of Transportation's Office of Community Involvement by November 9, 1977 (15 days after the close of the hearing). Persons interested in reviewing the hearing transcript may arrange to see and/or copy it at the Department Headquarters in Trenton. In addition, any individual or group wishing to contact the Office of Community Involvement during the Department's evaluation period is invited to do so in writing or by calling (609) 292-6802.
The Ocean Boulevard hearing is being conducted in accordance with the New Jersey Department of Transportation's Action Plan. In conformance with the provisions of that plan, all maps, drawings, and relevant data related to the engineering, traffic, environmental, and relocation assistance aspects of the project will be available for public inspection at the hearing. A full description of the project will be given during the Department's official presentation at 7:30 p.m.
In the event that the Ocean Boulevard project involves the acquisition of land owned by a municipality for public use, the provisions of the New Jersey Statutes Annotated Title 27:7-23 will be observed and considered in the conduct of this hearing.
In accordance with the Action Plan and the requirements of Section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, a Final Environmental Impact Statement concerning the effects of the proposed construction has been prepared. This Statement is available for public inspection and review at the following locations: the New Jersey Department of Transportation Library, Room 130, 1035 Parkway Avenue, Trenton, New Jersey; the New Jersey State Clearinghouse, 329 West State Street, Trenton, New Jersey; the Federal Highway Administration Division Office, 25 Scotch Road, Trenton, New Jersey; the Federal Highway Administration Regional Office, Federal Building, Albany, New York; the Clerk Offices in Long Branch and Monmouth Beach; and in local libraries. Copies will also be available for review at the public hearing and the information session.
Persons wishing to comment on the FEIS may do so by writing before November 9, 1977 (15 days after the close of the hearing) to: Mr. J. F. Andrews, Director of Division of Economic and Environmental Analysis, NJDOT, 1035 Parkway Avenue, Trenton, NJ 08625.

Wrong powder did it

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — An explosion from a simulated Civil War cannon which killed one University of Missouri-Rolla student and injured six others at a fraternity gathering was caused by the use of smokeless rather than black powder, officials said yesterday.

The cannon exploded as it was being used in a ceremony inducting 10 women into the Kappa Alpha fraternity's auxiliary organization, the Daughters of Lee. About 50 fraternity and affiliate members attended the ceremony on the back lawn of the fraternity house.

Randall L. Crustals, 20, a senior from Florissant, Mo., and a member of the fraternity, was killed in the explosion. He died of head injuries from flying metal. He was about 50 feet from the cannon.

The Associated Press erroneously reported yesterday that the victim's name was Ronald C. Crustals.

Police Detective Clarence Tomnitz said the fraternity's "keeper of the cannon," a sophomore, had been unable to find black powder for the ceremony and purchased the smokeless powder as a last resort.

Tomnitz said the student did not realize the smokeless powder was more powerful than the black powder customarily used.

No charge was filed against the student, who was not identified. He fired the cannon Tuesday night but was not injured in the explosion.

One Kappa Alpha member and a newly pledged member of the affiliate underwent surgery for injuries and were reported in satisfactory condition Wednesday at Phelps County Hospital. Two other fraternity members were in satisfactory condition and another member and a woman pledge were treated and released.

The cannon, a permanent fixture at the fraternity house, is generally fired on ceremonial occasions — less than a dozen times a year, officials said.

Thomas Dill, president of the fraternity, said the "keeper of the cannon" was on the gun crew last year and fired the cannon without incident on Aug. 20 when Kappa Alpha inducted its new pledges.

He said he was reasonably sure the gunner had followed standard procedure Tuesday night in firing the cannon.

An official university statement said that when the first charge was fired Tuesday night, it "fizzled ... The cannon was recharged, fired and exploded. The barrel split and metal fragments scattered over a large area."

Keansburg zone site change will be made if need be

By BOB BRAMLEY

KEANSBURG — Four of the five Borough Councilmen said at last night's meeting that if necessary to avoid undue delay they will introduce an ordinance changing the zoning of the senior citizens housing site at Main and Hancock Sts.

The site, approved by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, is in an area zoned for manufacturing. An amendment to the zoning ordinance could permit construction of a proposed senior citizens high-rise on the tract.

Mayor Eugene Connelly and Councilmen Thomas E. Kinlin, Thomas B. O'Brien and Walter M. Roeseman said they will introduce such an amendment if the Housing Authority meets undue delay attempting to get a variance from the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

Councilman Ronald N. Hayes stated he will make no commitment to "circumvent the Zoning Board unless it becomes necessary."

"I've heard nothing from the Housing Authority. When I do, I'll make my decision then," Mr. Hayes added.

The commitments from the other four council members came at the request of former Mayor Eileen Lloyd, who spoke during the public portion of the meeting, explaining that what the senior citizens want is assurance from the council that their new and badly needed project will not face unreasonable delays.

The project, which would supply 109 units on the 2.6-acre tract, which the seniors favor for its proximity to shops, banks and churches, has been pending more than two years.

An alternate 1.5-acre site at Beachway and Raritan Ave. was rejected by HUD last week.

Another former mayor, Harry Graham, a member of the Housing Authority who has consistently favored the Hancock St. tract, spoke to council before Mrs. Lloyd, attempting to pressure the councilmen into a commitment to rezone by charging they had already promised such action and warning that if they fail to do so, "the ball of wax will be in your lap, not in the Housing Authority's."

Mr. Graham got nothing from council except a statement from Mayor Connelly that council can take no action until it receives some official communication from the Housing Authority.

"We haven't even received any notification that HUD has rejected the alternate site; we haven't heard anything except what's been in the papers," Mayor Connelly said.

Mrs. Gertrude McVicker of 81 Bayview Ave., a member of three local senior citizens clubs and a delegate to the seniors' county and state groups, summed up the attitudes of her contemporaries:

"Let's put the darned housing up where it's approved!" she urged.

"We're saying the same thing," Mayor Connelly responded.

The borough has received federal approval of improvements to the water distribution system on the whole length of Crescent St. to be financed by $100,000 in second-year Community Development Act block grant funds. With the project cleared by HUD and the county, construction can begin at once.

Eugene J. Bedell, borough manager, reported the borough's Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program has been extended another year to September 1978, with a total of $344,751 allotted the borough. The new grant will allow the borough to continue its current force of CETA employes, Mr. Bedell said.

Two additional CETA employes were put to work this week in the court clerk's office and the tax office, the borough manager said.

Mr. Bedell announced appointment of Janet Flood of 5 Oceanview Ave. to the Recreation Advisory Committee.

Council adopted unanimously a resolution settling a law suit between the borough and engineer Charles C. Widdis of Long Branch, agreeing to pay Mr. Widdis $2,500 in engineering fees for sidewalk construction. The dispute has continued several years and would have come up in court Monday.

Adopted after public hearing were ordinances authorizing a service agreement between the borough and the Municipal Utilities Authority for water and sewer service in 1977 and appropriating $19,000 for reconstruction and paving of a number of borough streets. There were no objectors.

Postpone Gulrich hearing

SEA BRIGHT — A Municipal Court hearing scheduled last night for Kevin Gulrich of Middletown, lone survivor of the car crash that claimed six lives here June 2, has been postponed once again, to Oct. 21.

Mrs. Virginia Fichter, court clerk, said the postponement was requested by Mr. Gulrich's lawyer, John Colannino, because of the Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur, which began at sundown yesterday. Several witnesses would reportedly have been unavailable to testify last night.

Mr. Gulrich, believed by police to be one of the drivers involved in the two-car crash, is charged with possession of less than 25 grams of marijuana, as well as three traffic violations for reckless driving, failure to keep to the right, and unsafe tires.

Also postponed until Oct. 21 was a court hearing for John Forsman, borough council president, who faces charges of interfering with an arrest.

New radar leads to arrests

WOODBRIDGE (AP) — State police have caught 1,126 motorists speeding on the Garden State Parkway using 10 new radar units, New Jersey Highway Authority Commissioner William F. Smith said yesterday.

Smith said police were preparing 10 additional radar-equipped vehicles to patrol the 173-mile toll road.

Inner roadways from the Raritan toll plaza to Asbury Park have produced the greatest number of speeding violations during commuter rush hours, Smith said.

He said violation records showed there were few speeding tickets issued in the areas of high density commuter traffic.

Clam bed report asked by Assemblyman Kozloski

TRENTON — Assemblyman Walter J. Kozloski, D-Monmouth, has asked the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to submit to him an up-to-date report on water conditions of clam beds in Monmouth County so as to consider reopening a larger area for clammers.

Mr. Kozloski, who made the request to DEP's Water Quality Division, said it was prompted by the reopening of two areas off Long Beach Island to clamming. The two sites had been closed because of excessive pollutants in the bay area.

The 11th district legislator said that if mid-Jersey waters are showing a cleaner bacterial count, the state should give a closer look at Monmouth County waters.

"Just in Highlands alone, there are a vast number of men who could gain employment which is needed so badly," Mr. Kozloski said.

Ace is missing again, now they're worried

By BOB BRAMLEY

NEW MONMOUTH — Ace is missing.

The six-year-old black retriever has been gone since Sept. 8, when he watched his master, Bart Glowzenski, leave for the fall term at Fairleigh Dickinson University in the driveway of the Glowzenski home of 20 Millbrook Drive.

Last year, said Mrs. Helen Glowzenski, Bart's mother, Ace was also lost, that time when he watched Bart go off to classes in Mater Dei High School. After a few days he was recovered from a family along the way to school.

But this year there is no sign of Ace, despite repeated calls to the police, the Board of Health and the SPCA, Mrs. Glowzenski told The Register, adding that newspaper advertisements and radio announcements have not availed either.

"We think that maybe someone who doesn't read the papers or listen to the radio has picked him up," she said. "He's very gentle with children and will play with anyone.

"He doesn't have his collar on, because he had a tendency to get it hung up on things, but he had a flea collar on," she added.

Have you seen Ace? Or do you know who has him? If so, please call the police or Mrs. Glowzenski. It's time for Ace to come home.

Limiting traffic on N.J. Turnpike

NEW BRUNSWICK (AP) — Eastbound traffic on the New Jersey Turnpike's Newark Bay-Hudson County extension will be limited to one lane Saturday through Friday, Sept. 30, due to construction, a turnpike authority spokesman said.

The speed limit between Interchange 14C at Jersey City and the Holland Tunnel will be reduced to 35 miles an hour while bridge repairs are made, the spokesman said. He suggested motorists use the Lincoln Tunnel as an alternate route.

Joint project seeks to aid the physically handicapped

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — The Monmouth County Board of Social Services (MCBSS), the Easter Seal Society of New Jersey, and Monmouth County CETA have joined forces in a project to identify the physically handicapped in the county and their immediate and future needs.

A group of workers involved in the program is now stationed at the Board of Social Services here and work under the auspices of the Easter Seal-sponsored Project Interact, which was developed two years ago by handicapped people themselves.

Goals of the new program include a survey of housing, community accessibility, transportation and recreation for handicapped people; development of a list of barrier-free facilities; involvement of existing agencies, and recruitment of a volunteer group to provide chore services.

Ruth Hughes, an Easter Seal employe, organized and is director of Project Interact, and now supervises the six staff members based at the Board of Social Services who are employed through CETA.

Project Interact workers include Debra Rankine and Robin Straus, coordinators; Kenneth Crichlow, Valerie Hughes, and John Shevchik, program assistants; and Rechelle Williams, secretary.

English teachers sought

HOLMDEL — The Monmouth County Board of Social Services (MCBSS) is seeking men and women to serve as literacy volunteers to teach English-speaking adult illiterates to read and write.

A workshop to teach volunteers the Laubach method of literacy training will be held at St. Benedict's Church, 165 Bethany Rd., on Wednesday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p.m. Co-sponsoring the workshop with the MCBSS is the social action committee of St. Benedict's Church.

The importance of adult literacy training is underscored by statistics included in the 1970 census which revealed that more than 3,000 adult residents of Monmouth County have had no schooling at all and an additional 5,000 have had between one and four years of schooling.

Mrs. Diane Lukacs, a volunteer coordinator on the staff of the MCBSS volunteer services unit, who will conduct the workshop, emphasizes that it is not necessary for a volunteer to be a professional teacher in order to learn to use the Laubach method.

"Anyone who cares about people and has one or two hours a week to help an illiterate can volunteer," she said.

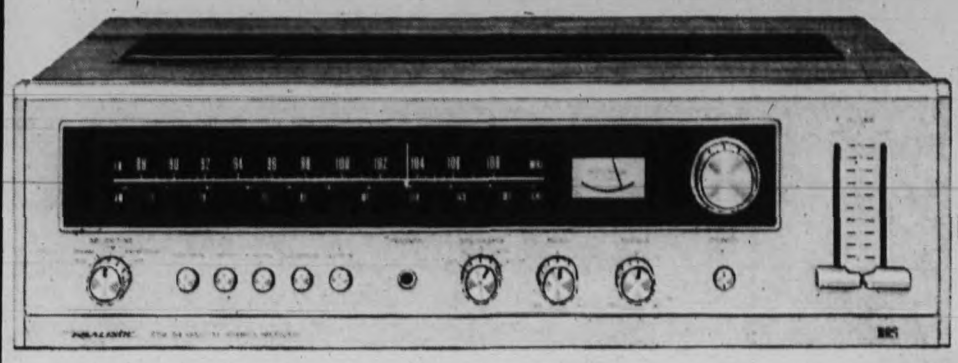

Individuals interested in attending the workshop and organizations wishing to arrange for Laubach training workshops should contact Mrs. Diane Lukacs, MCBSS, volunteer services unit, P.O. Box 3000, Freehold, N.J. 07728.
