Two die in plane crash on golf course

Trail of plane after it hit in foreground

By JOAN KAHN

WALL TOWNSHIP— Two Shore area residents were found dead in the wreckage of a light plane yesterday, at least 12 hours after they were believed to have crash-landed on a Fairway at Spring Meadow Golf and Country Club here.

The victims were identified as John H. West, 26, the pilot, of Bijou Villa, W. Sylvania Ave., Neptune City and his passenger, 24-year-old Mrs. Catherine Twidle Mileski, of 510 Ninth Ave., Belmar.

The bodies of the two were found about 7:40 a.m. yesterday on the ninth fairway of the state-owned country club, when the club's greenskeeper, Leon Morgan, was making his early-morning rounds of the course. Mr. Morgan, using a citizen's band radio, alerted rangers at the adjacent Allaire State Park. Wall Township police and New Jersey State Police were called to the scene, as well as federal and state investigative agencies.

Investigators speculated that the two were headed back to Colts Neck Airport in the white and brown Piper Cherokee three-seater plane, after a one-hour trip to Robertsville Airport, near Trenton. The $25,000, nearly-new plane was rented to the pilot at the Colts Neck Air facility and was owned by Wilco Aviation.

Mr. West was described as a regular at the Colts Neck Airport by airport manager Paul Wille.

Herbert W. R. Banks, an air safety investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, Bureau of Aviation Safety, a federal agency, said the plane's wreckage was taken to Monmouth Airport, here, where it would be sifted and the engine inspected for proper operation.

Investigating the accident under a joint probe are the safety board, the Federal Aviation Agency and the state of New Jersey department of aviation.

The investigation will also include the testing of blood samples and tissues taken from the pilot's body at the Aerospace Medical Laboratory, Oklahoma City, Okla. After all of the evidence is sifted by investigators, a report of the probable cause of the acccident will be released by the safety board's

The latest: Cautious hope over reactor

Gas bubble in reactor shows decrease

Anna Rosenberg, 92, shows disaster tag

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — While atomic engineers expressed their most optimistic assessment to date in eliminating the dangerous gas bubble inside the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, a federal official said today that radiation in the plant's reactor had exposed some vital instruments to more radiation than they were designed to withstand.

"We know many of these systems may be at or beyond their design performance," said Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

He said that if too many instruments should fail, "You start losing confidence that you know what's going on in the system." This could impede the safe shutdown of the plant.

Abraham said the instruments may last long beyond the radiation limits set by the reactor's safety specifications, but for how long was not known.

Meanwhile, officials hoped for a day of quiet progress as they activated a "hydrogen recombiner" to further draw dangerous gas from the atomic powerhouse.

Just two days after widespread pessimism and speculation of an unprecedented public evacuation, officials believed they were making progress in taming the hydrogen and oxygen bubble that has complicated efforts to bring the reactor to a cold shutdown.

A cold shutdown is the point at which the reactor no longer poses any risk of escaping control. Water in the reactor, some 60 degrees hotter than the boiling point, must be brought below boiling and the pressure relieved.

Yesterday, Harold Denton, the NRC's operations chief in Harrisburg, said the bubble had shrunk "dramatically." He and other officials said signs were positive and that the bubble had shrunk to a much safer size, with less threat of displacing the reactor's cooling water.

The officials also said the reactor's temperature had dropped significantly. Only two fuel cells, out of 177, were over 400 degrees as of Monday, Denton said.

But another NRC official, Richard Vollmer, said of the bubble, "We believe it is prudent to sit and wait a little while to make sure it's not coming back."

Vollmer said the instruments and vital safety equipment were designed to withstand severe accident conditions, including high radiation, and that "we would expect that those would be capable of taking it."

If some devices fail, he said, it would still be possible to control the reactor and complete its shutdown if enough other devices continued to function.

And if necessary, he said, "We could take specific steps to initiate the cool-down faster."

Bob Bernero, NRC assistant director for material safety standards, said engineers were studying which instruments were sensitive to radiation and hence might be likely to fail first.

Denton said Monday that one piece of nonessential equipment failed "due to radiation" inside the reactor containment building. It was an instrument for measuring water flow in a portion of the reactor that was not in use.

JCP&L to pass on its share of nuclear accident cost

By MARK MAGYAR
Statehouse Correspondent

TRENTON — Jersey Central Power & Light Co., which serves all of Monmouth County, plans to pass on to the consumer its share of losses which could run as high as $500 million in connection with the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island.

Because of antic[illegible] JCP&L's parent corporation, General Public Utilities, has declared a freeze on hiring and "non-essential" construction, which may halt construction of JCP&L's controversial Forked River nuclear plant in Ocean County.

JCP&L, a subsidiary of General Public Utilities, owns 25 percent of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa. Two other General Public Utilities subsidiaries, Metropolitan Edison Co. and Pennsylvania Electric Co., own the other 75 percent.

JCP&L spokesman George Metzger confirmed that the utility would seek a rate increase when the costs of the disaster are determined.

"In any industrial plant where there are operating and maintenance problems, the costs are passed on," Mr. Metzger said. "We're no different from any other industry."

New Jersey Public Advocate Stanley Van Ness "will oppose any attempt by JCP&L to pass its losses on to its customers," Al Drake, the Public Advocate's press aide, said yesterday.

Mr. Metzger declined to speculate on the costs of the Three Mile Island accident.

But a General Public Utilities spokesman said that the anticipated financial loss has already forced JCP&L to "re-evaluate" its plan to offer a $75 million mortgage bond issue on Wall Street next month.

JCP&L, which serves Monmouth County and all or part of 12 other New Jersey counties, receives 58 percent of its electricity from nuclear power plants, including approximately 10 percent from each of the Three Mile [illegible] nuclear units.

A General Public Utilities spokesman said the three utilities with shares in Three Mile Island have been spending $600,000 a day to replace the electricity that would have been produced by the damaged Three Mile Island No. 2 nuclear unit.

The three utilities have been spending another $500,000 a day to replace electricity lost from the adjoining Three Mile Island No. 1 nuclear unit, which was shut down for refueling shortly before the accident and will remain shut down "until the situation stabilizes," the spokesman said.

With a 25 percent share in each of the Three Mile Island units, JCP&L's losses come to $275,000 a day.

General Public Utilities carries $300 million worth of insurance on [illegible] Mile Isl. No. 2 unit, but the spokesman admitted that the cost of the radiation leak could very easily exceed that.

Mr. Metzger said the insurance would cover all costs of evacuating people from the area of Three Mile Island if Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh orders an evacuation.

Spokesmen for both JCP&L and General Public Utilities declined to comment on the possible cost of suits brought by residents of the Three Mile Island area who were exposed to radiation, or businessmen and homeowners who might contend that the accident diminished property values.

The worst financial catastrophe for the utilities would be if the Three Mile Island No. 2 nuclear unit was damaged beyond repair.

The three utilities have a total investment of $780 million in the unit, including its nuclear core.

Mr. Metzger refused to comment on the possibility of a

Schlesinger pushing for more 'nuke' plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger says Congress should act to speed up licensing for nuclear power plants despite the Three Mile Island accident.

Schlesinger acknowledged the reactor accident near Harrisburg, Pa., will make it more difficult for the administration to get such legislation through Congress.

But he said there's no real way around nuclear power if the nation wants to reduce its heavy dependency on Mideast oil.

"It's a question of trading Iran off against Three Mile Island," the energy secretary told a reporter.

Schlesinger predicted President Carter soon would resubmit to Congress his bill — unsuccessfully proposed in 1978 — to reduce from 11 years to about six years the time it now takes to approve, license and begin building a new nuclear plant.

Testifying at a House hearing Monday, Schlesinger warned against rushing to any judgment on the Three Mile Island accident until all the facts are in.

"There should be a total technical review of what did indeed take place and until that review is completed we should be careful in drawing conclusions either way," the energy secretary testified.

The licensing speed-up bill has been criticized by opponents of nuclear energy on grounds it provides too many short cuts. But Schlesinger said that, "the purpose of that bill is to cut back on paperwork. In no way is that licensing bill intended to reduce any consideration by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission of safety issues."

The measure would give states more say in environmental considerations and siting, encourage standardized reactor designs and eliminate review of the same issue by more than one agency.

Schlesinger said the Three Mile Island accident would have a bearing on future decisions Carter makes on nuclear power, noting the president "will certainly be contemplating his energy decisions in light of this recent incident."

Carter is expected to include nuclear issues and mention the Three Mile Island Accident in his upcoming energy speech to the nation later this week, officials say.

In related developments on Capitol Hill:

—Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of the Senate nuclear regulation subcommittee, said all states with nuclear power plants should update their emergency response and evacuation plans within 30 days.

—Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., proposed a blue-ribbon panel consisting of both critics and advocates of nuclear power to investigate the reactor accident.

—Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., ranking GOP member on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a statement that the national interest requires keeping the nuclear option alive and "to re-

Campus gun compromise suggested

By DORIS KULMAN

LINCROFT — The Brookdale Community College Senate yesterday voted to recommend that the campus police be allowed to carry guns 24-hours-a-day, either in holsters or locked in patrol cars.

The senate recommendation, which goes to Brookdale President Donald H. Smith, says that the limited right of the campus police to carry guns should be broadened to permit them to wear firearms 15½-hours-a-day — from 5 p.m. to 8:30 a.m. — and to carry them locked in their patrol cars during other duty hours.

The compromise decision goes against a public opinion poll which showed 65 percent of the voters in last week's senate election opposed to arming the police 'round-the-clock. It waters down the recommendation of a senate ad hoc committee that the police be allowed to wear sidearms 24-hours-a-day, as the force wants to do.

The recommendation stipulates that the senate set up a Judicial Review Board to conduct public hearings on complaints against police actions and to scrutinize candidates for the force. It also stipulates that all members of the force be required to have a yearly psychological examination and to take special in-service training.

Those stipulations were part of the recommendations made to the senate in the report of its ad hoc committee. That committee's stipulation that the first two rounds of ammunition be "short stop" — lethal only at close range, to protect bystanders — wasn't incorporated into the senate's recommendation to Dr. Smith.

Dr. Smith will present his recommendation on changing the firearms policy to the county college's Board of Trustees, possibly at the board's April 26 meeting.

The compromise decision was approved by a vote of 19-0, with one abstention, after a motion that the senate adopt as its own the ad hoc committee's recommendation to arm the police 24-hours-a-day died in an 11-11 tie vote.

The compromise decision came after Paul Emberger, a faculty member and one of the five members of the ad hoc committee, filed a minority report calling for a review of the entire issue of campus security before any decision was made on changing the firearms policy.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedien Shecky Greene remained hospitalized in Las Vegas on Monday after complaining of chest pains the day before.

Greene was expected to resume his engagement at the Sands Hotel.

TORONTO (AP) — Margaret Trudeau says in her memoirs that she tried to plunge a kitchen knife into her breast after her husband, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, accused her of being unfaithful.

The Toronto newspaper, The Star, reported Monday in the first excerpts of a week-long serialization of the book "Beyond Reason" that Mrs. Trudeau said she fell madly in love with a "high-powered American" at a tennis tournament in New York.

When her huband confronted her with being unfaithful, Mrs. Trudeau wrote that she screamed, "Okay! I've fallen in love!"

She wrote that she grabbed a knife and attempted to stab herself, overcome with guilt.

"You are sick," she said Trudeau told her.

The book said the episode took place in 1974, when Trudeau had just won a decisive election victory and the couple was ostensibly happily married.

Her much-publicized nervous breakdown after the election was false, Mrs. Trudeau wrote.

She said in the book that Trudeau followed her psychiatrist's advice and allowed her to fly to the United States for a brief meeting with the man to bring an end to the affair, but the relationship did not end.

Mrs. Trudeau wrote that the love affair with the unidentified "charming Southerner" marked the beginning of the end of the Trudeau marriage, although the couple did not officially separate until three years later.

NEWTOWN, North Wales (AP) — British actress Julie Christie tried in vain to revive a baby boy who drowned in a duck pond at her home, an inquest was told Monday night.

Coroner E.B. Roberts recorded an accidental death verdict on 22-month-old Harry Theophilus Heale, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Heale, share a house owned by Miss Christie at Cefn-y-Coed.

The drowning occurred last Saturday.

Heale and his wife Lesley, both artists, are friends of Miss Christie. Neighbors said they met her while in San Francisco and accepted her offer to live with her and run her farmhouse home while she was away.

"But I remember her insisting, 'They're not my type. They're boys,'" Ms. Pepitone says in the May issue of Playboy magazine.

Ms. Pepitone said the actress told her John Kennedy did not act like a president when he was around her. "He was always telling her dirty jokes, pinching her and squeezing her ...," the former maid said.

PSE&G requests 15.8 percent rate hike

NEWARK (AP) — Public Service Electric and Gas Company, New Jersey's largest utility, has requested an overall 15.8 percent increase in rates for 1980, the company announced yesterday. PSE&G said it is seeking $289.6 million in additional electric revenues and $84.9 million in annual gas revenues. The proposed electricity rate increase is 17.8 percent while the rate request for gas is an increase of 11.4 percent. The utility said it had filed the petition with the New Jersey Board of Public Utilities in the hope that "hearings in the coming months would result in a board's decision by March 1, 1980." In its last request, PSE&G received a 7 percent increase effective June 1, 1978 after it had asked for 20 percent. "If we get a decision on today's petition by March 1 of next year, 21 months will have passed during which we will have been dealing with double digit inflation and spiraling costs that threaten our company's financial integrity and our ability to provide safe and reliable service to our customers," Robert I. Smith, PSE&G chairman of the board said.

Nuclear plant to shut down briefly

LOWER ALLOWAYS CREEK TOWNSHIP (AP) — Public Service Electric & Gas Co. will shut down the Salem Nuclear Generating Station for refueling and regular maintenance. PSE&G spokesman Frank Hummler said engineers at the artificial island plant on the Delaware River will start cooling the No. 1 reactor today and expect to have the plant out of service by early tomorrow morning. Hummler said this the first time since the reactor became commercially operational in June 1977, that it will be refueled. The operation has been scheduled for about a year, said spokesman J. Brian Smith and is not related to any problems encountered at a nuclear plant in Pennsylvania. Forty of the 193 fuel assemblies in the reactor will be replaced with fresh fuel.

15 arrested in anti-nuclear protest

MOUNTAIN LAKES (AP) — Fifteen anti-nuclear protesters were arrested yesterday during a "die-in" at the General Public Utilities plant. The demonstrators sat in the rain blocking the entrance to the utility's headquarters protesting radiation leaks at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania. Police said those arrested were all New Jersey residents and included one juvenile. The adults were charged with trespassing under a state disorderly conduct law. The youth was charged with delinquency. They were arraigned before Mountain Lakes Municipal Court Judge Lawrence Willner and released on their own recongizance to appear in court April 17. Protesters were dragged from the entrance steps to a waiting police wagon shortly after noon. The arrested demonstrators were part of a crowd of about 50 protesters, some garbed in black with black masks, who milled in front of the two-story utility headquarters. The rally was organized by the Safe Energy Alternatives Alliance, an activist group opposed to nuclear power.

Court to rule on live-in case

TRENTON (AP) — A New Jersey businessman has asked the state Supreme Court to overturn a judge's order that he support his one-time live-in mate for the rest of her life. Thaddeus Kozlowski and Irma Kozlowsi lived together for 15 years without the benefit of marriage. A lower court ruled that a contract existed between the pair, and ordered Kozlowski to give $55,000 to his former lover, who coincidentally was married to a man with the same last name. The award was based in part of Mrs. Kozlowski's life expectancy. She is 65. The court reserved decision on the suit, which is similar to the California case involving actor Lee Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin. If the Supreme Court upholds the order, it would sanctify a relationship that is contrary to public policy, Kozlowski's lawyer, Ben Slavitt, told the court yesterday.

Urges promotion of gasohol industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New Jersey congressman is urging that a gasohol industry be promoted in the United States through a tax credit plan. Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, a Republican member of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, said 20 processing plants built for a total of $10 billion, could reduce gasoline consumption by 10 to 15 billion gallons a year in two to three years. "With new technology and mass production, the costs of gasohol would be brought down to the current price levels of gasoline," he said. Gasohol, methanol mixed with gasoline, is said to be more efficient and less polluting than gasoline. But studies show gasoline has a higher energy output per gallon, Rinaldo said. Rinaldo said the mixture of 10 or 15 percent methanol with gasoline would require no change in engine design. He said a grain-based gasohol is being sold at between 78 and 83 cents a gallon in the midwest to to fuel farm machinery.

Son declared dead after 10 years

CALDWELL (AP) — Sal and Jeanne Mascari have spent the last 10 years waiting and wondering if their son Phillip who was shot down over Laos was dead or alive. The U.S. Army ended that wait yesterday when it declared Phillip dead. "After 10 years of living in limbo, maybe now we can put this to rest," said Phillip's father Sal. "There's a possibility that some of the 729 men whose planes were shot down over Laos may still be alive. If this is true, one of these men may be my son," he said. In February 1969 at the age of 24, Mascari was sent to Vietnam as a pilot. He flew 32 missions before his plane was shot down over Laos on May 2.

Bond issue ruled constitutional

TRENTON (AP) — A voter-approved $100 million bond issue lumping prison construction with projects for the mentally retarded and the handicapped is constitutional, the New Jersey Supreme Court has ruled. Promising a full explanation later, the court said in a 7-0, one-page statement yesterday that it was in the public interest to rule now on the bond issue approved by nearly a 3-2 margin last November. The court reversed a December ruling by the Appellate Division of Superior Court that rejected the bond issue because it listed multiple projects for funding. The New Jersey Association on Correction, a prison reform group opposed to the renovations at Trenton State Prison, claimed in a suit the state was trying to secure approval of the prison project by lumping it with the proposals for the mentally retarded and the handicapped. "I'm extremely disappointed, but not surprised," said David Mintz, director of the association.

Summit conference soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev could meet at a summit as early as next month if the Kremlin approves American proposals to remove the last roadblock to a new strategic arms limitation treaty. Word from Moscow is expected by the end of the week. But the two leaders might not meet in Washington, where Brezhnev, burdened at 72 by several ailments, would have to endure tiring ceremonies and dinners. On several occasions during the protracted negotiations, the Soviets hinted that Brezhnev would also find a long trip difficult. As a result, a summit might be held in Hawaii or Alaska.

Beating meat prices? Nope!

Consumers who've been trying to beat the high price of beef by switching to non-meat substitutes may be out of luck. An Associated Press marketbasket survey indicates that the alternatives are getting more expensive. The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey. Here are highlights of the latest findings: The price of eggs — a high-protein alternative to meat — went up at the checklist store in 11 cities. The price of a pound of butter went up at the checklist store in nine cities. Experts say the rising demand for cheese — another substitute for beef — means there's less butterfat to go into butter and that drives up prices. Meat prices show no signs of leveling off. Chopped chuck increased at the checklist store in eight cities last month and pork chops went up in five cities. Pork supplies are expected to increase later this year and that could take some of the pressure off prices.

Mom seeks to halt execution

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The mother of condemned killer John Louis Evans III petitioned a federal court yesterday to block the execution of her son despite his pleas that the electrocution proceed as planned. The petition was assigned to U.S. District Judge W.B. Hand, who was to review the petition today. The appeal charged that Evans is "incapable of maintaining the proceeding himself or of protecting his own federal contitutional rights not to be subjected to the illegal sentence of death." Evans, 29, a drifter from Beaumont, Texas, has said repeatedly he prefers death to a lifetime behind bars. His execution is set for 12:01 a.m. Friday, and Evans has rejected efforts to stop it. The new document was filed on behalf of Betty Evans of Beaumont, Texas, by Evans' former attorney, John Carroll, of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery.

$400,000 for Stradivarius

BOSTON (AP) — A violin made 300 years ago by master crafstman Antonio Stradivari has been sold for about $400,000, the most ever paid for a stringed instrument, a dealer says. The instrument — special because it is one of only 10 Stradivarius violins decorated with inlaid wood — was bought by an anonymous collector. J. Bradley Taylor, a Boston violin dealer who owned the instrument briefly before last month's sale, said yesterday that no other violin had ever brought more than $300,000.

The violins of Stradivari, a 17th century Italian, are considered the finest in the world. Taylor said the violin, called "the Hellier" after an English family that owned it until about 100 years ago, fetched such a high price because of its inlaid decorations and its condition.

Lockout may delay autos

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a dozen auto plants went on short shifts yesterday and the prospect of product shortages and other disruptions loomed as a trucking industry lockout of 235,000 Teamsters took hold across the country. The lockout, ordered by industry executives after the union launched a limited weekend strike over a contract dispute, could halt a sizeable portion of interstate shipments of general freight — from fresh foods to factory parts — within days, industry officials said. About 235,000 of the 300,000 Teamsters affected by the contract dispute are employed by the 500 trucking firms participating in the lockout, according to the industry. However, Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons said the industry group behind the lockout was greatly exaggerating the possible impact of a shutdown in order to pressure the government into seeking a back-to-work court order.

Cable tv freed from deadlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cable television industry now is free to develop at its own pace, spared by the Supreme Court from meeting government deadlines for lending part of its operations to the public. The high court ruled yesterday that the Federal Communications Commission exceeded its authority three years ago when it confronted cable TV operators with broad, new requirements that included setting aside channels for public access. Unless specifically ordered by Congress, the FCC cannot require such channel set-asides, the justices said by a 6-3 vote.

More mistakes on IRS forms

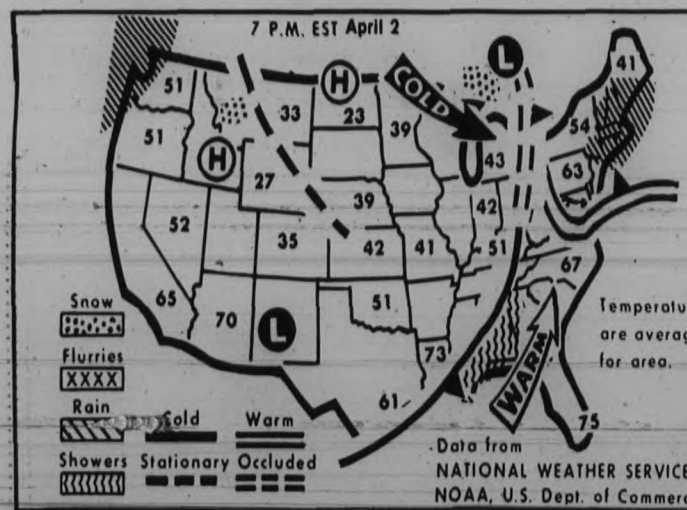

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although most Americans are doing well at filling out their income tax returns this year, the error rate on the forms processed so far is still higher than last year, the Internal Revenue Service says. "The major error i people picking up their tax from the tax table incorrectly," IRS spokeswoman Ellen Murphy said yesterday. Other common mistakes on the government's 1040 form, she said, include miscalculation of medical deductions and math errors in determining the refund or taxes due. As a result, Ms. Murphy said, nearly 6 in 100 returns have errors. This is slightly above last year's error rate of 5.7 percent, despite changes in the instructions intended to make tax preparation easier for the public.

Insulin 'factories' promising

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — I researcher at the Medical College of Virginia here says that tiny insulin factories implanted in the body may someday replace daily injections for millions of diabetics. "The prospects are tremendously exciting," Dr. Franklin Lim, associate professor of clinical pathology at MCV, told a news conference. After 10 years of research, Lim said, he recently succeeded in containing living tissue in tiny capsules in such a way that it can continue to live and grow.

Marlboro compromises with Prime, Feather & Down

By CORSON ELLIS

MARLBORO — In what several members called the most difficult decision they have faced, the Township Council last night agreed to an out-of-court compromise with the Prime, Feather, and Down Co., ending eight years of costly litigation and political in-fighting over the company's plan to build 390 garden apartments.

The compromise, approved at last night's special council meeting by a four to one vote, will allow the Brooklyn-based company to build Planned Adult Communities - single-family, clustered housing - on two tracts of land off Ryan Road. It will also create a townhouse zone on 40 acres of land on the south side of Ryan Road zoned for six units per acre, and will downgrade the zoning of approximately 200 acres of Ryan Road property from 20,000 square foot lots to 15,000 square foot lots, for single-family housing.

Councilman Howard Klau, the only councilman to vote against the settlement, called the measure "an absolute give-away."

Leading the pro-settlement forces was Council President John F. Croddick, who said last night that the vote showed that "everybody finally realized that the compromise was in the best interests of the township."

The settlement came on the eve of the township's appearance before Superior Court Judge Merritt Lane Jr. The township attorney, Herbert B. Bierman, will appear before Judge Lane today to offer the settlement, and Mr. Bierman said last night that he was confident that Prime, Feather, and Down would agree to the compromise.

The most controversial parts of the settlement were the creation of the townhouse zone, and the "down-zoning" of the Ryan Road properties to 15,000 square foot lots.

Prime, Feather, and Down originally planned to build 390 garden apartments, but the compromise would replace the garden apartments with 240 townhouses in the new townhouse zone.

Most members of the council expressed doubt about the legality of the present zoning ordinance, given the Mt. Laurel zoning decision in 1976. That decision, handed down by the New Jersey State Supreme Court, required municipalities to provide a variety of housing for its residents, including a significant amount of low-cost units.

Under the township's present zoning ordinance, complete development of all available land would have added 10,700 single-family dwellings and 900 multi-family units. Several members have questioned whether the 900 units, or less than 10 percent of the total, would satisfy the Mt. Laurel requirements for multi-family housing for low-income residents.

Mr. Klau, who was joined by most of the 150 people who packed the meeting room, fought the compromise, and attacked Mr.(Croddick for his part in pushing the measure through the council.

"Mr. Croddick has been dealing with the builder in private negotiations, and has given the builder what he wanted," Mr. Klau said. Mr. Klau claimed that Mr. Croddick had, during the negotiations with the company's attorney, said that "we have plenty of room to negotiate," and added that the resulting settlement gave the builder 90 percent of what he wanted.

"I was ashamed for the people sitting at home, because it wasn't an equitable settlement," Mr. Klau said. "The land barons are clicking their heels in joy tonight."

"The eloquent speeches tonight for the kompromise eze just coverups for their ineptness at the negotiating table," he added.

Mr. Croddick denied the charges, calling Mr. Klau's statements "cheap shots."

"He would have been against everything we would have attempted," Mr. Croddick said. "It's not the easiest thing to make a compromise."

The council's decision followed two hours of public discussion at the hearing, with most of the speakers opposing the compromise and urging the council to stand by its zoning ordinance before the courts.

Richard Previte, the local Republican municipal chairman, said that the council should take the case to court.

"If we have a zoning ordinance, then we should stick by it, or we will be coming back month after month before the courts, to defend ourselves in front of other builders," he added.

Thomas Augustan, a resident who lives near the properties, said that Prime, Feather, and Down was controlling the destiny of the township.

"I want to do what we want, not what the builder wants," he said.

Saul Hornick, another local Republican leader, warned that "if you let the developers run with the town, you will have nothing in a few years."

Councilman Hyman Grossman was involved in an angry exchangewith one resident, who played a tape recording of a Feb. 8 meeting in which, he maintined, the councilmen vowed to fight the case in court. Mr. Grossman said that four of the five councilmen had voted to introduce the ordinance at the time, and charged that the man was "playing games with tape."

In a twenty minute explanation of the eight-year case, Mr. Bierman pointed out that the township zoning ordinance, which then excluded all housing other than single-family units, was successful in the early years of the suit before the Mt. Laurel decision raised doubts about the legality of the ordinance.

But after the Mt. Laurel decision, the Appellate Court sent the case back to Superior Court Judge Lane, who then ruled against the township, finding the zoning ordinance illegal under the precedents of the Mt. Laurel decision. Judge Lane set a 60-40 ratio the as amount of single-family units versus multiple-family dwellings.

The township appealed that decision and the court ruled against the numerical formula, but agreed with Judge Lane's ruling that the zoning ordinance was illegal.

The township drafted a new ordinance in response to a demand from the court, but the new ordinance was igain attacked by Prime, Feather, and Down as illegal. And this ordinance was the guideline that was amended last night.

By BARBARA KATELL

FREEHOLD — Frank R. Licitra was sworn in as chief of the investigative unit in the county prosecutor's office yesterday morning....and by afternoon, he and County Prosecutor Alexander D. Lehrer were already planning an expansion and restructuring of the 31-member force so as to make it the best law enforcement unit attainable.

Mr. Licitra, who specialized in narcotics investigations during 25 years with the state police, also promised a new emphasis on combating organized crime and on promoting narcotics investigations in the county which would concentrate on street dealers of hard drugs as well as on the major distributors.

And both Mr. Licitra, who resigned after 17 months as public safety director in Long Branch to take the prosecutor office job, and Mr. Lehrer said they shared a goal of giving the county the best law enforcement possible through cooperation with all levels of government.

But before discussing their plans for the future, the two men each voiced their high opinion of the other.

Mr. Lehrer noted that it took him four months of persuading to get Mr. Licitra to resign as public safety director in Long Branch and assume the county job. And the prosecutor said he was "thrilled Chief Licitra will be in our office.

"He is a true gentleman," Mr. Lehrer said. "He is one of the few people I have met who after being in law enforcement for so many years, has gained the respect of judges, prosecutors, police, defense attorneys and even the defendants whom he has apprehended and convicted. He tempers justice with mercy. It is an honor to have a man like Frank R. Licitra head the investigative unit of this office."

"Mr. Lehrer is a young, aggressive, and intelligent prosecutor," responded Chief Licitra. "He has many ideas for revamping the criminal justice system in the county as it involves investigations at this level of government. Before I agreed to take the job, we had many conferences, and he made clear his desire to give the people of the county the best law enforcement possible. I hope to serve toward these goals. It is a new challenge for me."

Mr. Lehrer said that Chief Licitra expected to restructure the former detective squad into squads of specialists who will focus on such areas as sex crimes, narcotics, white collar crime, major crime, intelligence and organized crime.

Mr. Lehrer said he expected the new investigative unit to help municipalities with highly specialized crimes and also to carry out independent county-wide investigations with the cooperation of federal, state and local law enforcement units.

"Cooperation, that is the key," Chief Licitra said. "We need the cooperation of every level of government. Only in that way can we accomplish anything. We will do all we can to open doors at all levels of law enforcement. And we will develop in our office an intelligence unit to gather all information on crimes throughout the county, evaluate the information and put it to use."

Mr. Lehrer noted that Chief Licitra had shared his dream of a narcotics strike force. And the prosecutor said not only was the force now operational, but he has received pledges from 15 municipalities for immediate manpower for the force, and pledges from all the municipalities for future cooperation.

"For many years, I was supervisor in the state police in narcotics work," Chief Licitra said. "We made many raids at two levels — at the level of the street dealer and the level of the major distributors. But I realized that eventually the state police would de-emphasize the street sales level and concentrate on the higher echelon trafficker.

"But a tremendous amount of crime is related to street level narcotics traffic," Chief Licitra continued. "In the past, previous prosecutors were not that interested in a narcotics strike force. I felt it was essential — that it would strike at the heart of crime. In my experiece there was a drop in such crimes as b and e's (breakings and enterings) whenever we made a major drug raid.

Wires garbage cans and kills four-year-old

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — A man who apparently wired his trash cans to an electrical outlet to shock dogs scattering his trash has been charged with murder in the electrocution of a 4-year-old boy, authorities said.

Travis Fry was killed Sunday when he stood in a puddle of water and grabbed his small bicycle, which was leaning against the cans wired into 110-volt household current, police said.

Neighbors found Fry, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Fry, and took him to a local hospital. He was dead on arrival.

Vernon Houston Smith, 43, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Spencer Brown on Sunday and released on $10,000 bond.

Plan for tax rate hike OK'd

By ROSEMARY O'HARA

KEYPORT — The Borough Council last night approved a $2.1 million local municipal budget calling for an estimated five cent increase in the local tax rate from 95 cents to $1, per one hundred dollars of assessed valuation.

The total tax rate, including both local school and county taxes, is estimated to increase by 36 cents, from $3.77 to $4.12 per one hundred dollars of assessed valuation.

An estimated $1,049,809, up approximately $47,216 from last year, will be raised by taxes to support the municipal budget. The current municipal expense budget within the limits of a 5 percent cap (a state-mandated ceiling on municipal spending) totals an estimated $1,197,609, up approximately $32,533 last year.

General appropriations in the new budget total $2,129,398, up $94,283. The reserve for uncollected taxes amounts to $287,000, up $8,565. Total municipal debt service excluded from 5 percent caps totals $119,042, up $468, with $70,000 coming from the payment of bonds principal, $45,043 coming from the payment of bonds, anticipation notes and capital notes and $4,000 coming from interest on notes.

The five cent increase in the local tax rate is attributed in the budget to the added cost of $36,244 to participate in the Bayshore Regional Sewerage Authority and to a $34,020 increase in the Garbage and Trash Removal Contract.

Keyport Mayor Richard Bergen said it took a lot of work to keep the local tax rate increase at five cents. He said the budget would be "tough to live with" since "people will have to get used to spending less money."

The budget also includes an outline of capital budget improvement projects for the next three years.

Improvement of Fireman's Park, at a cost of $100,000, is earmarked as the number one project. Bergen said, however, that the schedule was drawn up "to please the state" and does not represent projects in line for funding, which can only be decided by a separate bond ordinance.

Set aside money for senior bus

FREEHOLD — Money for the purchase of a senior citizen's bus was set aside by the Borough Council at its regular meeting last night.

The resolution, which appropriates $1,500 in municipal funds, has become necessary since the opening of the Hudson Manor senior citizens' complex on Bennett Street here last month, officials said.

Approximately 100 residents of those apartments will use the bus, according to Councilwoman Lynn Reich.

Currently, the borough provides transportation for senior citizens with part-time use of a bus designated for the Freehold Recreation Committee.

That bus transports senior citizens to shopping areas, municipal buildings and other community sites. The new bus appropriated by the council last night will be purchased, used, from the First Baptist Church, Freehold.

The council also passed a resolution approving work sites for the General Employability Program.

Poll: No confidence in Smith

By DORIS KULMAN

LINCROFT — Brookdale Community College president Donald H. Smith has tallied a 62 per cent "no confidence" vote in a campus-wide public opinion poll.

The question on confidence in Dr. Smith's educational leadership was on the ballot in last week's week-long college Senate elections. There were 982 responses, 610 of them "no," 163 of them "yes," and 209 "no opinion."

The Senate will meet in special session Thursday to decide what recommendation it will make to the county college trustees on the poll returns.

Of the faculty, 103 voted "no," 11 each voted "yes," and "no opinion." Of the students, 357 voted "no," 106, "yes," and 155, "no opinion." Of the administrators, 37 voted "no," 14, "yes," and 12, "no opinion." Of the non-academic staff, 110 voted "no," 23, "yes," and 28, "no opinion." Of the police, 3 each oted "no" and "no opinion" and 9 voted "yes,"

Unions representing the faculty, administrators and non-academic staff have called for Dr. Smith's resignation and the student association has voted "no confidence" in him.

The recommendation to the trustees will be made by the current lame-duck Senate. The Senate elected last week will be seated next month.

George Abel, the Senate parlimentarian, reported that a total of 1,004 votes was cast. He said that 15 per cent of the students, 46 per cent of the non-academic staff, 74 per cent of the faculty, 80 per cent of the administrators, and 123 per cent of the 16-member campus police department voted.

"I think our voting list of police wasn't complete," Mr. Abel said.

CARPENTER ANTS
AN INCREASING THREAT IN NEW JERSEY.

Carpenter ants nest in different areas within the walls of a building. Their damage to property can be in several areas at the same time. A home with peeling paint, wooden clogged gutters, or trees and shrubbery touching the building can have carpenter ants.

Evidence of one or two of these insects may be the only sign of infestation as the nests are in concealed areas in the walls. A nest numbers around 4,000. Several nests may be within the building at the same time.

Unlike the usual household ant, carpenter ants cannot be eliminated by spraying, treatment has to be made where the nest or nests are present inside the walls of the building.

These insects are more troublesome than termites and can be more destructive.

Proper treatment requires a thorough inspection before an estimate can be given. Our company gives estimates free of charge to homeowners.

Miss Ethel Harper, was known as 'Aunt Jemima'

MORRISTOWN (AP) — Ethel Ernestine Harper, known to millions of Americans as Aunt Jemima, has died at the age of 75.

Miss Harper, who died of a heart attack on Saturday, became known as Aunt Jemima in Quaker Oats' advertising campaign for a pancake mix during the 1950s. She touted the pancake mix and syrup while wearing a red and white gingham kerchief on her head.

Later, during the civil rights movement of the 1960's, blacks protested the use of Aunt Jemina as a commercial symbol demeaning to blacks.

Orphaned at the age of nine, Miss Harper lived with her brother and his wife in Alabama. Graduating from college at 17, she taught school for a while, then decided to try her hand at something new.

She moved to New York City and began a successful show business career. In addition to her role as Aunt Jemima, she was in the theatrical production The Hot Macado and The Negro Follies.

Miss Harper was also one of the Three Ginger Snaps, a singing group that toured Europe and became well known in many countries, especially Italy.

Ethel Harper

Miss Harper is survived by one nephew and a sister-in-law. Memorial services will be held Saturday in St. Margaret's Church in Morristown.

False alarms prompt action

By ROBIN GOLDSTEIN

LONG BRANCH — A sharp rise in the number of false fire alarms during the past few weeks has prompted the city fire department to limit the number of fire engines responding to alarms in certain problem areas.

The overwhelming majority of false fire alarms are entered when one of the fire boxes in the city is activated from the street, Fire Chief Anthony Melina said. When a box alarm sounds, all of the city's nine fire companies would, previously, respond to the scene.

Chief Melina said the rise in the number of false alarms from the boxes on the streets has forced the department to single out the problem boxes, where most of the false alarms originate, for a more limited response.

Under the new policy, only the closest company will respond when an alarm is sounded from the street boxes at Fifth Avenue and Slocum Place, at Cooper Avenue and Grant Street, at South Broadway and First Avenue, at First Avenue and Laird Street, and at the Woodrow Wilson Homes.

The drivers from the other companies will, meanwhile, stand ready when the boxes are pulled but will not respond to the scene until there is confirmation that there is a fire.

"It's a very serious problem," Chief Melina said. "We have to do something about it, and this way, it will keep a lot of the trucks off the road."

The policy should help minimize the fear that response time to a real fire may be impaired because fire engines are out responding to a false alarm.

Chief Melina also said he hoped that not having all the trucks answering those selected alarms might dampen the enthusiasm of the juveniles who are often involved in the false alarms.

"It may not seem so exciting when all the trucks aren't coming," the fire chief explained.

Last night, a 15-year-old city boy was arrested after two separate false alarms were called in from a box on the street at Cooper Avenue and Grant Street. The juvenile has been charged with one of those false alarms, police said, and has been released in the custody of a relative.

Although the culprits in many of the false alarms prove to be juveniles, police recently arrested an adult in connection with a false alarm. The adult was found guilty and fined $450 for the offense, Chief Melina said.

"Catching them isn't enough," the fire chief observed. "They have to get more than just a reprimand."

During the past several weeks, city firefighters have responded to at least one false alarm just about every day. Last night there were two false alarms, on Sunday night there were two, and one was reported on Saturday, Chief Melina said.

Although no figures for this year were available, in 1978 about 75 percent of all the box alarms activated proved to be false — 153 out of 212.

Most fires are reported by telephone, and the incidence of false alarms among the telephoned reports is much smaller, Chief Melina said.

Out of 806 phone-in fire alarms last year, 66 were false.

Chief Melina said the large percentage of false alarms coming in from the street boxes is forcing the department to examine more closely the use of street boxes.

Wherever possible, he said, the department would like to eliminate street boxes in areas which are near police telephones.

Chief Melina said he didn't think that the new policy of a limited response would impair (the efficiency of the fire department.

"When a box comes in, all the other drivers will be sitting in the driver's seat ready to go," the chief said.

Lehrer stands firm: chain letter still illegal

By BARBARA KATELL

FREEHOLD — Some county residents are angry. They thought they had found a sure get-rich-quick scheme for making as much as $200,000 from a single investment of $100.

But over the weekend, the county prosecutor and other law enforcement officials in the state issued warnings that the Golden Circle chain letter scheme, which was supposed to be a passport to undreamt-of riches, is illegal.

Despite the phone calls that are pouring into his office and into newspaper newsrooms from unhappy "investors," County Prosecutor Alexander D. Lehrer is sticking by his original opinion.

"The Golden Circle chain letter is illegal," Mr. Lehrer said yesterday. "Other county prosecutors in the state have also issued opinions that participation is a violation of federal mail fraud laws and probably of the state gambling laws.

"I have read that some citizens of the county question my authority to issue an opinion as to the chain letter," Mr. Lehrer continued. "But I am mandated by law to warn honest citizens against criminal activity, to protect them against violations of the law. And the chain letter is not only illegal, it has a large potential for fraud."

"I'm not telling people how to spend their money, nor am I offering an opinion on whether they intentionally violated the law," Mr. Lehrer said. "But any further violations will be reported to the U. S. Attorney for New Jersey for investigation and any further phone calls to this office will be referred to him."

The chain letter scheme calls for each participant to "invest" $100. The buyer pays the seller $50 and mails another $50 to the person whose name is on the head of a list of 12 people on each letter.

The buyer then crosses the name off the top of the list, adds his own name to the bottom so he becomes number 12 on the list, and then sells two copies of the letter for $50 apiece, supposedly getting back his original $100 investment.

Supposedly if each buyer in turn pays $50, sends off $50 in the mail and resells two copies, the number 12 person will collect over $200,000 by the time he gets to the top of the list. However, Mr. Lehrer has noted it would take 4,000 people participating in an unbroken chain for someone to get to the top of the list on all the multiplying copies of the letter and collect the $200,000.

Apparently, the original promoters of the scheme are collecting lots of money. But law enforcement officials throughout the state are warning that most people will be lucky if they can sell their letters and get back their $100.

Any gambling scheme is bound to spawn more losers than winners, they warn. And they also warn that anyone who fails to report winnings is not only probably violating the federal mail fraud laws, and the state gambling laws, but is also looking for big trouble with the Internal Revenue Service.

Man's death may be due to hit and run

ABERDEEN — Local police believe that an unidentified man found dead along Route 35 near the Matawan Creek Bridge early Sunday morning may have been killed as a result of a hit and run accident.

Lieutenant Detective John McGinty said that the "indication" was that the man — described as a white male in his early 20's, five feet, eight inches tall and about 200 pounds with black hair — had died as a result of a hit and run accident on the highway.

The lieutenant stressed, however, that police will not know for certain the cause of death until an autopsy is performed today.

The body was reportedly discovered lying beside the southbound lane of the highway at about 4:10 a.m. by a pedestrian.

According to County Prosecutor Alexander Lehrer, the victim's right leg has not yet been recovered.

The victim was also reported to be missing both his upper and lower teeth.

The prosecutor said that authorities located a hub cap from an early model Thunderbird near where the body was discovered.

Aberdeen Detectives Lts. McGinty and Joseph Booket are being assisted in the investigation by county Investigator Charles O'Connor.

No safety director interview yesterday

LONG BRANCH — An interview which had reportedly been scheduled for yesterday with a leading candidate for the Public Safety Director post here did not take place, but is expected to be rescheduled for later this week.

Howard J. Graff, a former state police major, was to have been interviewed by Mayor Henry R. Cioffi yesterday as a possible replacement for Frank R. Licitra, who left the public safety director's post on Friday. Mr. Licitra is now Chief of Investigators for the Monmouth County Prosecutor's office.

Mayor Cioffi last night said he would not comment on whom he was talking to about the job, or when they would be interviewed.

He did acknowlege, however, that no interviews had taken place yet, although the interviews would be scheduled in the near future.

Capt. John J. Foy had been named as acting director of the department until a new director was named, but injuries he suffered in an accident over the weekend are keeping him out of work for an indeterminate period.

City Administrator Eugene Bedell said yesterday that Capt. Vincent Maccioli would take over the interim duties in Capt. Foy's absence.

11 dead in crash of two trains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A passenger train and freight train collided in central Thailand yesterday and 50 houses were set afire when loaded tank cars in the freign train exploded, a spokesman for the state railway said.

He reported 11 persons were killed and 15 were injured, but did not say if all the victims were aboard the trains or if some were burned in their homes.

The head-on collision occured at a junction in Saraburi Province, 60 miles nort of Bangkok, and both trains derailed, the spokesman said. Province officials reported the fire was brought under control by firemen summned from throughout the area.

The railway spokesman said an initial investigation indicated the engineer of the freight train ignored a red light and moved his train onto the tracks ahead of the oncoming passenger train.

INDEPENDENT INSURANCE REVIEWS
Complacency can be dangerous. This is a fact regarding many situations but it's especially true concerning insurance. Being on the "safe" side all the time is a "must" in this area. But does the policyholder realize this, and what can he do about it?
A businessman, for example, places his insurance with an agent who recommends the proper coverage. The forms are filled out, the policies bound, and the insured feels secure in the knowledge that he has maximum protection. The businessman may know a little about insurance, but he really relies on the know-how of an agent.
Is anything else necessary? Yes! A complete and exhaustive review and analysis of the policies by a third party...an Insurance Consultant. The Consultant can view the coverage objectively because he IS a third party. He can make sure the policies are of the correct type and dollar amounts to reflect current values. The Insurance Consultant, like the agent, is also a professional, and by having him periodically review the policies, the insured gets double protection!

Foulks named head of Middletown GOP

By BOB BRAMLEY

MIDDLETOWN — Former Mayor Harold H. Foulks was named local Republican leader by acclamation last night as more than 50 county committeemen and party members met in Buck Smith's restaurant, East Keansburg.

Accepting the party leadership, Mr. Foulks expressed his gratitude to outgoing party leader Peter J. Carton, also a former mayor, who recommended Mr. Foulks to replace him as he stepped down to be able to devote more time to his career as a lawyer and to his family.

"It's good to be back after seven years away from politics," said Mr. Foulks, who served as a township committeeman from 1963 until 1972 and was mayor in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Declining to seek re-election in 1972, he was inactive in local politics until accepting a post as county committeeman last year.

In a brief address to his fellow Republicans, Mr. Foulks recalled that the GOP contributed a new library, a new township garage, a sewerage system and the beginnings of a comprehensive sidewalk and water program to the township when it was in control.

"The Republicans had imagination; all the Democrats have is the ability to fill high-paying jobs with their friends," Mr. Foulks commented.

He recalled the successes of the local GOP under the leadership of former state Sen. Joseph Azzolina, who stepped down as local leader in favor of Mr. Carton three years ago.

"Then up stepped young Mr. Carton after serving time as our mayor, with a lot of horizons to conquer. He was leading us in the right direction, showing us the right way. But time got more demanding on him, so he turned to many Republicans, including me, to seek a successor. We had serious talks a few months ago and I said I would consider it if the transition was smooth," the new leader explained.

Mr. Foulks pointed out that the GOP in Middletown has a hard task ahead, but one that can be done. The Republicans must win the election this November, when Committeeman Frank A. Self, the only Republican on the committee, is up for reelection. Only by winning this year can they put themselves in a position to seize control in 1980, when two more seats on the five-man committee will be at stake.

"In the campaign last year, the Democrats spent $40,000; we spent only $12,000. We'll need $20,000 this year, and we can get it with a little hard work. I don't see why we can't win the next two elections," Mr. Foulks declared.

He pleaded with his fellow party members to bury their differences and work for unity against the Democrats.

"If we do have differences, let's keep them inside the organization and talk them out. The buck is going to stop here," he said, pointing to himself. "The name of the game is organization and communication," he added.

Mr. Foulks, who spent most of his adult life as an insurance salesman, said he intends to run the local GOP "like a sales club.

"I've been sales minded all my life. We have to sell ourselves and sell Frank Self," he said.

Goals of the local GOP will be to win big this year and next year, to raise $20,000 for this year's campaign, to achieve 100 percent unity, to find a permanent Republican headquarters, to sell Frank Self and to sell the Republican party and the twoparty system, Mr. Foulks stated.

"The greatest thing in the world is not where we stand, but where we're going," he concluded.

Mr. Carton, presented by his fellow party members a commission to have a portrait of his new home in the Hartshorne area of Locust painted by local artist Mary Sheehan, outlined a number of campaign issues and urged his colleagues to go out and tell the voters about them.

Harold H. Foulks

"The EPA matter and the possibility that the township may be fined $118,000 for putting the wrong kind of gas in its vehicles is unforgivable," the former mayor declared.

"And the fact that the Housing Authority chairman will not release to the public the financial report from Haskins and Sells which was the basis for firing Andy Praskai — I can't see how by any legal reason, they are justified in withholding it. And cable TV — Mayor Eckert and Committeemen Callahan and MacDonald voted for the franchise award to a corporation which had been formed only the day before the presentations were made. The three Democrats said they voted for Monmouth Cablevision because of the extras they offered — a super channel and a local broadcast channel for local events, and now it turns out the government says none of these can be done by the franchisee.

"It was going to raise the tax rate about 6 cents, a pretty fair rate considering all the built-in raises, but now it turns out to be 14 or 15 cents because the state Division of Local Government disallowed more than $400,000 in anticpiated revenues.

Ocean Twp. seeks land to construct senior center

OCEAN TOWNSHIP — Township Council last night passed an ordinance authorizing the acquisition of property on Roosevelt Avenue for construction of a senior citizens recreation hall.

The project, which will be paid for by a $90,000 Community Development Block Grant from the federal government, will not get underway until the property can be acquired by the township through condemnation proceedings.

The township's offer of $46,000 for the property was turned down by the owner. However,if the township condemns the property, the owner will be forced to sell it at a price determined by a judge, according to Gregory Fehrenbach, township manager.

Councilman James Garrity said the township had three independent appraisals of the property before making their offer of $46,000. The council expects to get the property for a figure close to that.

"After condemnation, the township, the owner of the property and a judge will sit down and work out the price that is to be payed for it," Mr. Fehrenbach said.

Mr. Garrity said no concrete plans for the hall will be made until the property is purchased. He said the council hopes to use the garage, the only structure on the property, for a purpose that is benefitial to the senior citizens.

Currently, the senior citizens have only a small meeting place in the Poplar Village senior citizens housing complex.

The new hall, which would be located within walking distance of the complex, would be used for meetings of senior citizens groups and other activities, according to Mr. Garrity.

He refused to give an estimate on the completion date of the project because of the unpredictable nature of legal moves such as the condemnation proceedings.

In a related matter, the council made three appointments to the board of directors of the Ocean Senior Citizens Housing Corporation.

Under the corporation's by-laws, the council is to appoint nine members to the board — seven of which must be representatives of the community and two of which must be residents of Poplar Village.

The council appointed Raymond L. Ross to fill an unexpired term that ends April 30, 1980; Jack Conine, for a term beginning May 1 and ending April 30, 1981; and Frank J. Fischer, for a term beginning May 1 and running through April 30, 1984. Councilman Saul J. Rubin said the appointments were made on the basis of the appointee's skills and qualification for the job.

Attendance is urged at bond hearing

LITTLE SILVER — A commuter activist last night urged members of the Borough Council to attend a state hearing tomorrow night on the state's proposed $600 million "Transpac" bond issue.

The hearing, to be held in the Manasquan Elementary School on Broad Street, Manasquan, is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., according to Joseph McChristian of the Shore Commuters for On-Time Service (SCOTS).

"We don't like Transpac at all," Mr. McChristian told the councilmen.

The $600 million bond issue, proposed by state transportation Commissioner Louis J. Gambaccini, would include $65 million for the electrification of the North Jersey Coast Line. If approved by the state legislature, the bond issue would be presented to the voters in the fall of 1980.

Councilman Henry A. Pope Jr., the council's liaison to the commuter movement, thanked Mr. McChristian for reporting to ths council about SCOTS' activities. He criticized state officials for scheduling a meeting at 7 p.m., noting that it would be very difficult for most commuters to get back from work by that hour.

Mr. McChristian noted that SCOTS endorsed the selection of Mr. Gamabaccini as state transportation commissioner when he was first appointed, but said that their "good relationship" had "deteriorated rather steadily since then."

He charged that commuters have been "getting a lot of contradictory information" from the state Department of Transportation (DOT) about the proposed electrification of the Norhth Jersey Coast Line. The $65 million included in the Transpac proposal may be enough money to pay for electrification of the line as far south as Long Branch. Most of the Transpac funds would be earmarked for bus and highway work.

Iranians say U.S. press 'distorted'

WASHINGTON SCENE

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The new revolutionary regime in Iran has been getting a bad press in the United States, and it appears to be as undeserved as the adulatory treatment that was given the lately deposed shah for so many years.

Most of the American correspondents in Iran — and the pundits in this country — completely missed the story of what was going on in Iran. This was partly because they were blinded by the shah's slick, multimillion-dollar public-relations campaign, which often included royal treatment of reporters and editors.

And it was partly because they bought the official Pentagon-State Department-Central Intelligence Agency-line that the shah was one of our few dependable anti-Soviet bulwarks in the Middle East, as well as a source of oil.

Now, after years of protecting the shah, the U.S. press is determinedly and none too subtly attacking the Ayatollah Khomeini, whose Muslim activists shoved the shah off his Peacock Throne. In the process, the American media are winning few friends for this country among the people who are now running Iran.

Our diplomatic sources tell us that officials of Khomeini's revolutionary government are incensed over what they consider the "scandalous distortions" that have appeared in the American press.

At the very beginning of the revolution, for example, the shah was depicted as a loyal ally being attacked by communists, fanatics and ignorant mobs. When this canard didn't hold up, it was said that Khomeini would be done in by either the leftists, the military or both.

None of this, it is now clear, was true.

The ayatollah easily won over the common soldiers, contrary to alarmist predictions in the American press that a bloody civil war was in the works. One of Khomeini's associates told us: "I personally advised the State Department of the folly of depending on the soldiers to defend the shah. I advised them not to incite any military coup; such an act would create enmity that would last for years. I told them that Iranian soldiers are first Muslims, then they are soldiers."

The trumpeted communist threat to Khomeini's power has never materialized either. There have been leftist demonstrations, but they were sparsely attended; our sources believe many participants were "curious spectators," and others were pro-shah people who would support any anti-Khomeini movement. At any rate, one insider told us, the ayatollah's followers deliberately let the leftists have their say to avoid making martyrs out of them.

Iranian officials deeply resent their portrayal in the American press as religious zealots and know-nothings who have no programs and no ability to govern. They acknowledge there has been a certain amount of lawlessness and confusion. But this, they say, is the inevitable result when a nation breaks free after years of suppression. "It happens anywhere a despot is overthrown," one source told us.

Khomeini's defenders point convincingly to the fact that 98 percent of the Iranian workers returned to their jobs at the ayatollah's request. And the oil fields were back in production in four weeks — instead of the eight weeks minimum predicted by foreign experts.

As evidence of the "chaos" in Iran today, news correspondents have cited the public disagreements between Khomeini and his prime minister, Mehdo Bazargan, who has traveled twice to the holy city of Qom to take issue with the ayatollah's edicts. There was even one report that Bazargan has resigned — an outright lie, our sources say.

Far from indicating confusion, one official told us, the differences between Khomeini and Bazargan reveal the health of the new system. One insider eloquently compared the ayatollah's role with that of the Supreme Court in this country: He advises, interprets, sets rules and shapes policy. It is his job to criticize. "This is our type of democracy," one official said. "We tried the Western solution and it didn't work. Now we are trying our solution, and it is working."

The biggest distortion of all, the Iranians told us, is the persistent theme in the American press that the new government is suppressing women.

They point out that Iranian women have been "liberated" for years; they have the vote and the right to divorce their husbands. Yet this has been lost sight of in American press reports on the ayatollah's controversial order that women dress modestly.

Khomeini's primary concern, our sources told us, was that civil servants reflect the traditional tone of the new government and help to remove the class barrier that had existed between the bureaucrats and the devoutly Muslim peasants they serve.

As for American feminist Kate Millett's celebrated visit in support of her Iranian "sisters," one angry Iranian official said, "It is another form of chauvinistic imperialism. These people like Kate Millett are trying to force their values on our traditional society."

Millett had the bad manners to refer to the Iranians' revered holy man Khomeini as a "male chauvinist," and was finally kicked out of the country. Two other American women activists, Gloria Steinem and Bella Abzug, made plans to go to Iran. Steinem later changed her mind. Abzug's visa was revoked after she demonstrated at the Iranian consulate in New York.

Footnote: Steinem told our associate Joe Spear she had planned to go to Iran to help get police protection for demonstrating Iranian women. But Millett accomplished this, Steinem said, so she changed her mind. We could not reach

The Protection Act of 1979

CONSERVATIVE VIEW

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A House committee completed hearings last week on an innocent little bill to amend the Federal Flection Campaign Act of 1971. The bill might more accurately be titled the Incumbents' Protection Act of 1979, for that is its primary purpose — to make the untouchable incumbent even less touchable than he has been before.

The ostensible aim of the bill, sponsored chiefly by Abner Mikva of Illinois, is to provide for the payment of public funds to candidates for the House of Representatives in general elections. The bill would not apply to primaries, and it would not apply to races for the Senate (Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts has a bill in the upper chamber for that purpose).

It is hard to quarrel with the theory behind the bill. The theory is that by limiting individual contributions to not more than $1,000, and by limiting a candidate's total expenditures (including federal matching money) to $195,000, the pernicious influence of fat cats and influence peddlers could be reduced. Sweetness and light would prevail; the principles of right conduct would triumph, and confidence would be restored in the honesty and integrity of the House.

But there is more to this proposition than meets the eye. Without challenging the purity of Mikva's intentions, it has to be observed that the effect of his proposal would be to buy further political insurance for incumbent members of the House — and these pampered darlings are marvelously comfy as it is.

A year or so ago, Americans for Democratic Action made a study of the advantages of incumbency. At public expense, a sitting representative is provided with staff, with office equipment, with stationery and supplies, with a handsome budget for long-distance telephone calls. An incumbent gets a home office, also staffed at public expense. He has the use of cut-rate radio and TV studios. His newsletter, praising his achievements, is mailed at public expense. He travels to and from his district at public expense. All told, said the ADA, an incumbent begins his run for reelection with a j567,000 advantage over a challenger.

That is not all. The incumbent has an enormous, incalculable advantage over the typical challenger: The incumbent is news and the challenger often is not news. The incumbent is constantly voting, speaking, posing for photographs. An analyst for the Heritage Foundation observes that this intangible asset of newsworthiness is probably "worth more than all the other benefits put together."

Given these circumstances, it is no wonder that Democrats who dominate both House and Senate look with favor upon any law that would stifle their opposition. It is equally understandable that Bill Brock, Republican national chairman, would regard the Mikva bill as a stroke of deliberate discrimination against the GOP.

Writing in the current issue of Commonsense, Brock pours it on. Public financing of congressional elections "will deal the final death blow to our two-party system." The scheme would be impossible to administer; it is a waste of the taxpayer's money. The expenditure limits, he argues, are especially invidious, for they effectively limit challengers only. The "extravagant perquisites" of an incumbent are not counted toward the expenditure ceiling.

Brock raises another objection also, and this one is fundamental: A limit on campaign expenditures, because it limits free speech, violates the First Amendment. This was what the Supreme Court held in an earlier test of the act relating to presidential campaigns. Brock contends that Congress cannot now slip around the high court's ruling by imposing limits as a condition for receiving public funds.

The Committee on House Administration (17 Democrats, nine Republicans) presumably will report the Mikva bill, but the record of recent Congresses indicates that the measure will have rough going on the floor. Republicana oppose it almost unanimously; many Southern Democrats, safe in their one-party districts, want no part of a bill to finance Republican challengers. Others believe, with Brock, that the bill inevitably would promote third-party and single-issue candidates. The bill, in my own view, is a bummer. I hope the whole House shoots it down.

Fort Monmouth boost

While the Pentagon's announced proposal for major transfers of military operations threatens Fort Dix cutbacks which will have severe economic and social impact on the Ocean-Burlington counties area, the news for New Jersey is not all bad. Fort Monmouth, which has suffered losses of personnel and operations in similar transfers in recent years, stands to gain almost 500 new jobs in the realignment plan.

While the prospective local gain will hardly compensate for the damaging potential Dix loss — a blow we still fervently hope can be fended or softened — Monmouth County and the state are fortunate that Fort Monmouth will be bolstered. The latest action is a good sign, indicating that the Army still recognizes the value of the facilities and siting of the installation here. We agree with Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., who announced the plan, that "this is incredibly good news that caps months and years of determined effort to keep Fort Monmouth a viable installation and a major employer in Monmouth County."

Under the Army's "preferred alternative" realignment proposal, 259 civilian and 229 military personnel would be relocated to permanent duty at Monmouth. They would include 95 military and 206 civilian employes of the Electronics Materiel Readiness Activity (EMRA) from Vint Hill Farms, Va., and 53 civilian and 134 military personnel from the Army's Chaplain School at Fort Wadsworth, N.Y.

Like the Fort Dix cutback proposal, the Fort Monmouth bolstering plan is subject to final approval after a 30-day period of public comment. In that period, Congressman Howard has warned, "we must work to see that competing interests do not take this away from us."

Mr. Howard is to be commended on his untiring effort to protect and upgrade the status of the local fort — an effort which now finally has brought a victory after a series of losses.

Asks mayors join forces

FROM OUR READERS

Letters to the editor must be signed and have the writer's complete address and telephone number. They must not exceed 300 words. Not acceptable are poetry, endorsements of candidates for office or endorsements of commercial products.

Little Silver

Open letter to Monmouth County Mayors:

I am writing to solicit your support in a common cause of Monmouth County - the future of railroad transportation. The result of a recent meeting held in Eatontown has been the creation of confusion and misunderstanding about electrification, its cost and extent, and the upgrading of service and equipment of the North Jersey Coast Line.

It is imperative that the Mayors of Monmouth County be completely informed of the present status of Department of Transportation plans and be afforded the opportunity to suggest future action for the benefit of their communities and the County.

We have each received notice of the Transpac Hearings scheduled to be held in Manasquan on April 4, 1979. Representative Howard and Senator Gagliano have called upon the State of New Jersey to schedule additional hearings.

I believe that Monmouth County Mayors must join together in a Task Force to consider the questions and problems of the Department of Transportation and to offer our advice and judgment on the future.

Please let me know whether you will serve on a Task Force in this manner.

'Poor Taste'

Middletown

To the Editor:

In response to Mr. Graven's article on the Middletown North High School Frolics, I considered it in poor taste with distorted facts and half-truths. The article was written without proper sources and is a mockery to the readers of the Register.

It seems to me that Mr. Graven did not adequately find the truth before publishing his article. Ihe blame could be extended to the publisher for putting such trash on page one.

As a member of the act and not participating in the "rear showing," I feel both insulted and misused by the press. I expect the press to be objective and responsible, and not to rely on rumors and hearsay evidence.

The act that was done was not of the earthshaking nature. Certainly not deserving front page attention. The article destroyed the entire validity of the news on page one, and it forced readers to read Mr. Graven's ridiculous article before the important world and local news.

Just what exactly is the Register trying to prove? Are they trying to say all school supported activities are malicious and in poor taste? Where is the positive attention when all the other events go on successfully? The article is an injustice served both to entire student body and faculty of Middletown Hi9h School North.

What impact?

Morganville

To The Editor:

I believe that it is clearly time for the state legislature to re-evaluate the budget caps aspect of the Thorough and Efficient legislation in comparing their original intent to the actual impact it has had on education in New Jersey.

Surely the intended goal was to improve education for our children, not force communities through their school board to decide which part of their program they have to dismantle each year and which teachers have to be fired.

It is one thing to require each school district to justify the educational value of their programs and struggle with the problem of providing basic skills for today while preparing children for the world of tomorrow. But to establish an arbitrary cap on the budget that is out of touch with the real world escalation of the cost of living and spiraling inflation is to make our schools the scape goat for our society's inability to solve our economic problems.

If you are going to limit expenditures for education surely it should be in relation to the ever increasing real costs of fuel, utilities, labor, building etc. so that children don't have to lose part of their education every time there is an oil crisis. John W. Batton, Jr.

County parks program

The Monmouth County Park System has published its spring program brochure — a copy of which was included in the March 25 issue of the Sunday Register — and we continue to be increasingly impressed with the magnitude and excellence of park offerings. There definitely is something — lots, in fact — here for everybody.

The brochure is 24 tabloid newspaper-size pages of listings of park activities that run the gamut from two-hour nature walks within the parks to elaborate series of instructional sessions in arts, crafts, hobbies and sports. There will be workshops and special programs covering a multitude of subjects, and trips to museums, theaters, sports arenas, preserves and sanctuaries. Not only every interest, but every age group and capability is served by the program with offerings catering to tiny tots, children, young adults, the mature, senior citizens and special need groups, including the handicapped.

The program , covering activities for April, May and June, includes so much of interest and value that it is a reference to be saved and consulted until the summer program is issued three months hence. It would be wise now, of course, to mark one's calendar with those items of particular personal interest.

Our County Park System program has grown remarkably in recent years, and its benefits are being shared by every segment of the county's society. We must count it as among the major blessings of local living, and the parks' directors and staff are to be congratulated and thanked on their accomplishments.

It's school elections day

Voters in every school district in our county are going to the polls today to elect board of education members, pass judgment on proposed school budgets and, in some instances, decide other school referendum questions. For the first time ever here, voting on both local and regional boards — usually scheduled a week apart — will be conducted at the same time. Thus residents of those municipalities in which local boards operate the elementary schools while regional boards govern secondary institutions will be expected to vote two ballots.

We feel we must again urge voters to exercise their right and responsibility to participate in the government of their schools by making their feelings known on candidates and budgets at the polling places today. Every vote cast will demonstrate an interest in the welfare of our educational system and the youth who will be our leaders of tomorrow.

Polls in most districts will open in the early afternoon — 1 or 2 p.m. — and remain open until 8 or 9 o'clock tonight, the hours varying slightly between districts.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1979. There are 272 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1865, during the Civil War, the Union Army occupied the former Confederate capital of Richmond, Va.

On this date:

In 1776, Harvard College conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws on Gen. George Washington.

In 1860, Pony Express service began between St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif.

In 1936, Bruno Hauptmann was executed for the kidnapping and murder of the baby of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh.

In 1941, British troops evacuated the Libyan port of Bengasi during World War II.

In 1948, the United States allocated more than $5 billion for a massive aid program for 16 European countries.

In 1964, the United States and Panama agreed to resume severed diplomatic relations and seek a prompt settlement in their conflict over the Panama Canal.

Today's birthdays: Actor Marlon Brando is 55. Actress Doris Day also is 55. Pianist Garrick Ohlsson is 31.

Thought for today: A man's true wealth is the good he does in this world — Mohammed, 570-632.

Sues for damages in crash

FREEHOLD — A 19-year-old Red Bank man filed a lawsuit for damages yesterday for injuries he suffered when his car caught fire from escaping propane gas that ignited after his car struck a gas valve behind Red Bank Regional High School last year.

The legal action was filed by Douglas L. Haviland of McLaren St., Red Bank, who reportedly had suffered burns over 75 per cent of his body.

Named defendants are the Red Bank Regional Board of Education; the state Department of Education; Suburban Propane Gas Co.; Hamnett, Bouman and Blancke,an architectural firm; Bickford and Spaeth Associates, construction engineers; Robert W. Patterson Inc., plumbing contractor; Gumina Building and Construction Co., general contractor, and Anthony S. George, 18, of McLaren St., Red Bank, who also was burned as a result of the explosion.

The legal action charged the defendants with negligence by creating an inherently dangerous condition. It charged negligence in the design, construction, installation and maintenance of the liquified petroleum gasoline tank which was serviced by Suburban Propane Gas Co.

In his legal action, Mr. Haviland said he was operating a car last June 25 upon property owned by the regional high school when his car came in contact with the inherently dangerous condition.

Liquified propane gas was released in the atmosphere and ignited by the negligent act of Mr. George, maintained the legal action, adding that this resulted in an explosion and fire which "horribly burned and injured" Mr. Haviland.

Police had reported at the time that Mr. Haviland and Mr. George were riding in a 1968 Mercury Cougar behind the high school when the car struck a 12-inch valve protruding from the lawn behind the school cafeteria. The value was attached to a 500-gallon underground propane tank which contained about 350 gallons of gas before the accident, said police.

The two apparently heard a hissing noise under the car and looked underneath, thinking there was a flat tire, said police, adding that one had a cigarette lighter and lit it, resulting in the explosion.

The two were rushed by Coast Guard helicopters to St. Barnabas Medical Center Burn Unit, Livingston after being treated at Riverview Hospital, Red Bank, shortly before midnight.

The hospital reported at the time that Mr. Haviland was burned over 75 per cent of his body, and Mr. George was burned over 63 per cent of his body.

Average temperature was 45

Folks who felt that last month was a mild one will find their guess supported by the statistics.

March's average temperature was an even 45 degrees at the Fair Haven weather station operated by Paul Croft. And that, says Mr. Croft, is just five degrees above normal.

We did well on snow last month also, Mr. Croft reports, with only a trace measured for the entire month in which the average snowfall is 5.1 inches.

After two months of abnormally heavy total precipitation, that moderated too last month, despite quite a few wet days. Total for the month was 4.22 inches, just .17-inches below the March average. There was some rainfall on 15 of the month's 31 days, including every day of its first week. The total precipitation for the year to date stands at 19.79 inches, melted, well above the 11.29 inches which is the norm for the first three months.

What will April bring?

Mr. Croft believes it will be a bit warmer than usual — about two degrees above normal. He expects rainfall to be scattered, but coming in heavy bursts, making prediction a bit difficult. But he predicts it should be within a half-inch, either way, of normal.

Harbor Light aides are feted by W & J Sloane

AERIAL VIEW — A Selig sectional in Marimekko print is featured currently in the front window of W. & J. Sloane, Red Bank, setting for yesterday's Harbor Light Ball committee meeting. All the pieces, including two chaise groupings which are partially visable in the rear, total almost $6,000 and are on sale.

By MARGUERITE HENDERSON

RED BANK—The Harbor Light Ball committee convened yesterday in the "Home of Affordable Elegance."

Translated, that means that gals (yes and guys, too) planning the Sept. 28 Harbor Light Ball follow to the Sea Bright Cup Race in August, spent yesterday a.m. being treated to coffee and Danish and white wine in W. & J. Sloane, Broad Street.

Among the handful of gentlemen in attendance was Vincent Mendes Jr., president of the Sea Bright Marine Education Foundation (beneficiary of the Harbor Light Ball) which provides scholarships for young people majoring in marine-related studies. Mr. Mendes wore a tie embroidered all over with miniature captain's wheels.

Also in attendance was Gerart Decker, in charge of the Harbor Light Ball journal (he wore his tie with the seagulls) and artist Donald Voorhees, who brought along a framed work, "Summer Images," a signed and numbered lithograph of a watercolor done (in the fall!) by Mr. Voorhees of the broken pilings by Surfrider Beach Club, Sea Bright.

Mr. Voorhees (currently in the process of moving his studio and gallery from Atlantic Highlands to Route 35, Middletown) has contributed the work as a special Harbor Light Ball gift. He says he couldn't do "Summer Images" in the summer because the beach was too full of bodies!

Also received yesterday as a Harbor Light gala gift was a lamp from Sloane's, presented by store manager Joseph Amecangelo of Eatontown, who comes to the store by way of Red Bank Catholic High School, Monmouth College, and Macy/Bamberger's, where he worked under Herbert Raab, now president of W. & J. Sloane.

This was the first time that the ambiance of Sloane here was loaned for a committee meeting. And a lovely thing it was ...

— to plant one's posterior upon an upholstered sectional instead of an "on loan" folding chair.

—to see yourself in the reflection of a bronze mirrored glass dining table by Cicci or a beveled mirror cocktail table by The Glassworks.

— and to ogle a display of wallpaper/fabric/carpeting combinations as shown by Sloane interior designers Marilyn Krinzman, Nancy Vandiver and Julia Graziano. Their expertise, it was explained, is available to Sloane shoppers for a $100 retainer fee, which is deducted from the price of whatever one buys — even if one buys only a couch.

Of course, some of the sectional couches these days are priced like a Depression-day home. The Selig sectional in Sloane's front window, for instance, that extends eternally and is covered in a handsome handblocked Marimekko print totals close to $6,000 — and that's on sale.

Marilyn Krinzman was spokesman for the interior design trio. She told us (among many things) that the whole range of apricot colors — everything from rust to flesh — is very big these days.

As if to underline that statement, Judith (Mrs. Hugo) Pribor of Monmouth Hills, one of the Harbor Light Ball vice chairmen, turned up in her luscious apricot suede blazer. Sarah (Mrs. Anthony) Villane of Elberon wore—with her Puerto Rican tan—an apricot turtleneck sweater and deeper-toned skirt, and Regina (Mrs. George) Carter of Red Bank, looked chic in a rust-colored suit, apricot blouse and apricot scarf with a pale blue print.

Now is this group smart, or is this group smart?!

ISLAND BED — A Henredon bedroom furniture grouping, shown now at W. & J. Sloane, features an island bed, pier cabinets and connecting light bridge and mirror. It is of knotty oak in nutmeg finish and with solid brass trim. The pillows, largest of which is tagged at $90, are of natural Haitian cotton. The wall hanging was hand-painted in India.

Mrs. Carter had as her special guest, youthful artist Angela Donaruma of Hazlet, who was one of Regina Carter's prize first grade pupils when Regina taught in St. Benedict's, Holmdel. Also on the young side was Steven Michael Sullivan of Chicago, 2, who came with his grandmother, Mrs. Clyde Sullivan of Locust. And youngest committee guest of all was nine-month-old Alexandra Abson of London, England, who is visiting at Cobble Close Farm, Middletown, with her paternal grandmama Pamela Hall.

Presiding at the Harbor Light segment of the session was Patricia Fons of Little Silver, general chairman. Vice chairman with Mrs. Pribor is Mrs. Lillian Pratt of Monmouth Hills.

Ad lib

By ERMA BOMBECK

According to "the Wall Street Journal," liberation of women has brought about an increase in the number of men who shop for groceries.

This, in turn, has loused up the advertising campaigns. Men obviously buy products for different reasons than women.

Offhand, I'd guess that men don't get too choked up about whether their wives would prefer dressing to potatoes, get fussy about peanut butter for their children, or care much if their cats danced all the way to dinner.

If someone offered my husband $50 for his old shirt in a laundromat, he'd throw in his entire closet.

AT WIT'S END

Advertising is geared toward women who are serious about taking care of their families. If their coffee is mountain grown, they'll have a successful marriage. If they can get their husbands' bad breath in remission, they'll be promoted. If they force-feed a bowl of hot cereal into their children, they're good mothers.

Did you ever watch men shop? I divide them into three categories. There's the Little Old Listmaker. He has a list that is so rigid, he will not deviate one single item. If the list says, "Pick up laundry," he'll buy one on the way home.

At the other end of the apectrum is the man I call the Party Shopper. Old Hats-and-Horns goes up and down the aisle like he knows exactly what he is doing. At the checkout, he will rack up $87 worth of smoked oysters, assorted crackers, chips, dips, and enough beverages to supply a PX during a siege.

There's the man whose mother was a procurement officer and passed down her philosophy on volume buying. If you can buy four rolls of toilet tiasue for 80 cents, think what a saving you could rack up on 62 rolls.

To get to men, I suspect advertising executives will have to use the macho approach.

Any day now you'll probably see Robert Conrad put a can of Tidy Bowl on his shoulder and challenge you to "Knock it off! I dare you!" Or a man who mixes a pitcher of Kool-Aid and says to his kids, "You only go around once in this life and you might just as well go around with all the gusto you can get!"

Until this happens, men are just going to be content getting a cheap thrill out of squeezing the you-know-what with Mr. Whipple.

Plane-talk is therapy with anonymity

By ELLEN GOODMAN

BOSTON — For the past several weeks I've been involved in a dubious effort known as "plugging your book." "Plugging your book" is an activity on a moral par with plugging your husband, as in: "She plugged him with a .38."

But during this time, I also have received a crash (if you will forgive the expression) course in the wonders of constant air travel.

I have learned, for example, that if a person is hungry enough that person will, against the advice of millions, and over her grandmother's dead body, actually eat a corned-beef sandwich served on a cold roll with BUTTER.

I also have learned that when a plane is in serious trouble, the flight attendants' faces do, indeed, turn white. As a contender for the Transcontinental Flight Attendant Face Watchers Title, I have always wondered whether I would really be able to read their expressions. Now I know. .

How did I discover this? Let me put it this way. When they used up the fire extinguisher on Engine No. Three, it wasn't for a birthday candle.

In these few weeks I have also adjusted to plane-speak, as opposed to plain talk. I know what they mean when they say, "Please extinguish all smoking material." I have even used the word "de-plane." I understand that they choose big words, odd words and non-words for their calming effect.

During my recent adventure over Minneapolis, a friend on the ground learned from the airline people that we had experienced "a maintenance." "A maintenance problem?" he asked. No, Lord no, no problem..."just a maintenance."

But the thing that fascinates me most as I log my air miles is Airplane Conversation Etiquette.

On any flight that is longer than a newspaper and shorter than a novel, the traveler eventually faces the choice of either reading Black Enterprise magazine or talking with the person next to him. Given those alternatives, he does something which is socially unacceptable on buses, streetcars and assorted monorails. He strikes up a conversation.

The appropriate opening line in the air is not, "Come here often?" That belongs to the dating bar. It is rather, "Are you coming or going?" This is not a philosophical question, mind you; it's a geographic one.

Once these niceties are over, travelers, especially those plied with free drinks in order to obliterate the memory of "a maintenance," begin to tell you the story of their lives.

I am not the friendliest person who ever took her white knuckles into the stratosphere. I am an accomplished defensive reader. Yet I spent a recent guilt-trip from St. Louis with a parent of a Moonie, and winged back from Phoenix last fall with a man who was coming out of the closet and going home to tell his parents. He tried out his speech on me.

In the last weeks I have been given the details about two divorces, one unplanned pregnancy and three mid-life crises. It has begun to occur to me that they should rename "As the World Turns" and call it "As the World Flies."

Not everyone has a story. I spent one flight in the company of a computer salesman, who explained the fine distinctions between hardware and software. Complete with charts.

But apparently a person from Ohio seated next to a person from Texas on a plane to Pennsylvania will confess all. Only one question is considered improper to ask: his name. It is common to share histories. It is common not to share names. And that is the point.

Air travelers indulge in one of the rarest commodities of life — anonymity. Anonymity is a kind of public privacy.

Some people are clearly most able to confide when they are unknown. The airplane is their modern confessional — their technological bartender.

There probably is an urge for soul-baring and protectiveness in most people. These two urges come together at 35,000 feet. Here at last is Intimacy with Anonymity, Confiding without Revealing. An encounter session that ends at the baggage counter. Air travel is at times a verbal one-night stand.

The airlines should advertise tax-deductible therapy for the SuperSaver. It makes more sense than what they're promoting instead: the food.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Neatness counts 100 percent in sewing

DEAR HELOISE:

As my family's seamstress, thought I might pass on some ideas which I have found to be of help when doing home sewing.

Since my family has gotten smaller, the best thing I have now is a sewing room all my own. In it I have my sewing machine, ironing board, work table and a small TV. I leave it all set up and ready to go for a quick few minutes of sewing or a few hours.

One of my favorite pieces of equipment is my secretarial chair. It gives marvelous back support at the machine. An added bonus is being able to scoot around on the wheels to reach things.

I find neatness is so important. Everything "put back in its place" is my rule. It takes only a few minutes to clean up and then everything is ready for the next project.

Besides a chest of drawers to hold fabric, etc. I have a nuts and bolts cabinet (found in any hardware store or department). The little drawers are about two by five inches and have a place for labels on the front. Mine is full of buttons filed by color, snaps, hooks, bobbins, machine attachments, etc:

I also find it advisable to buy needed helpers such as a pressing ham, sleeve board, or pressing iron. These all contribute to the beautiful finished look of a garment.

My family (and friends) are so appreciative of my productions. My answer is "My sewing machine and I thank you." — Joyce

I can see why they would be! And you're so smart to be so organized. It makes any job go smoother, and especially sewing.

And gals, if you aren't fortunate enough to be able to use a whole room for your sewing, at least try to fine a corner somewhere and convert it into a sewing center, even if it's on a small scale.

Also, take Joyce's advice and invest in some gadgets to make your job easier. Browse through notion counters at your fabric or department stores if you haven't done so lately. You'll be amazed at the things available to help you make your sewing more professional-looking. Good luck! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When boiling eggs or potatoes, put a small amount of vinegar in the water.

Keeps the pan from turning dark. — Helen Samuelson

DEAR HELOISE:

When starting plants for my garden, I place the seeds on plastic meat trays between two pieces of paper toweling. I keep the paper towel moist at all times, covering with wax paper to keep the moisture in. Within a few days, the seeds begin to sprout.

Then, I put soil in egg cartons and in each egg cup I place one sprout. Place on windowsill and water each day and give them plant food every two weeks until the danger of frost is over. Place in garden.

Since all seeds don't sprout, this method avoids guessing whether or not they are sprouting in the ground. — Ann Carlucci

THIS COLUMN is written for you... the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

European eyecatcher

Dear Ann: I'd like to address my remarks to "Still Boiling," who is so upset about her husband's friend who urinated under her kitchen window.

Well, I'm a 27-year-old mother of a small child and my advice to this lady is, "Cool it, you ain't seen nothin' yet." I lived in Europe for a few years while my husband was attending school. "Boiling" would have been beside herself if she had seen, as I did, men urinating on street corners, against the wheels of cars and telephone poles — anywhere and everywhere they felt like it.

So tell "S.B." not to fight with her husband over this small incident. Americans are very fortunate to have so many toilets conveniently located. Also, tell her that when the "clod" unzipped his jeans, she shouldn't have been watching! — Seen It All

Dear All: My original conclusion still holds. The guy must have had too many beers. I agree, however, that once he unzipped she should have put her eyeballs back in her head and busied herself with another project.

Dear Ann Landers: I started talking to myself after I read that letter from "Worried in the Midwest." Thirty years ago, before "Worried" was born, I gave birth to a "right" baby, so beautiful, so perfectly formed physically, bright and precocious that people would stop to stare. She was so lovable and happy at the age of four that our pediatrician complimented us on how well we were raising her.

Everything was fine until high school — then our world exploded. It wasn't drugs that sent our dream child to the first of a series of psychiatrists, four months in a psychiatric hospital, and as of now, ten years of psychotherapy. The problem was caused by an inherited weakness which proved emotionally crippling.

Would we have given this child away if we had known? God, no! The mother who wrote to ask to whom she could give her child if he wasn't "right," must be subhuman. We are — At Peace With Ourselves In The Midwest

Deam At Peace: Subhuman? No. Just frightened and illinformed. A great many people wrote to give her hell, but actually the poor girl didn't know any better. I urged her to get some outside help and I sincerely hope she did.

Dear Ann Landers: We would like your opinion of a university professor of law who brushes his teeth in the public water fountain. He leaves toothpaste and debris all over and it's enough to make you sick.

What can we do about this? The first time I saw it, I couldn't believe it. — Awaiting Your Counsel.

Dear Awaiting: I would go to the dean of the law school and ask him (or her) what to do about it. Name names and don't be bashful. The situation is disgusting and should not be tolerated.

Audubon Society still searching for home

By SHERRY FIGDORE

HOLMDEL — A year after it appeared that the New Jersey Audubon Society had found a permanent home in Ocean Township for its Owl Haven Nature Center, the society is searching for a new site.

The Owl Haven Advisory Council has appointed a new three-member committee to begin a search for a permanent home for the center, which has been operating from a local post office box and the home of Alice Forshee, Owl Haven's naturalist, here at 20 Glenn Way, since March, 1978.

After an investigation into several suggested sites, an Audubon delegation toured the 208-acre Deal Test Site in Ocean Township last April, and pronounced it an "exciting" and "delightful" location with suitable facilities available in the old satellite tracking station building on the site.

Owl Haven volunteers have conducted two birdseed sales at the Test Site from a trailer, but have never used any of the permanent facilities on the tract.

The society has now taken a second look and found, said Roger Thomas, a member of the advisory council and of the new search committee, that "after we had looked at all our contributory sources of funding, the site did not meet all our requirements."

Mr. Thomas said Richard Farrar, director of the New Jersey Audubon Society, was particularly perturbed about housing the nature center in the old tracking station.

Mr. Thomas said if the group could have moved into a large two-story building on the Test Site now occupied by the Ocean Township Board of Education, "we could have maintained all kinds of super educational programs. "But Rick (Farrar) was really somewhat concerned about the satellite tracking station and thought it really wasn't the kind of place that would allow the kind of programs we want."

Mr. Farrar has been talking to state officials about possible use of the Battleground State Park tract and the committee has been looking into an available parcel in Howell Township.

Mr. Thomas said Ocean Township officials and Audubon could not agree on lease terms, and the township wanted the organization to pay both utility bills for the tracking station and to be responsible for any structural damage.

Ocean officials estimated the annual utility bills at about $2,000 a year, Mr. Thomas said, but Mr. Farrar said the bill would run closer to $4,000 or $5,000, a sum too large for Owl Haven to handle, since the local center must be self-sustaining.

Audubon has also expressed concern that new recreational facilities planned by Ocean Township for the Test Site may not be compatible with the nature center.

Stephen Levy, chairman of the Ocean Township Environmental Commission and a major proponent of moving the nature center to the test site, expressed dismay last night that Audubon has changed its mind.

"I really hope they reconsider their decision," Mr. Levy said. "The commission is very upset that a major use planned for the Test Site will not be there."

The Deal Test Site was purchased by the township six years ago with state Green Acres funds paying half of the $1.97 million purchase price. Another Green Acres application for $1.1 million in development funds from the state, to be matched by the township, is now being reviewed in Trenton.

Mr. Levy said that members of the Ocean Township council had been favorably impressed with the Audubon proposal and had indicated at one point they would stake the center to a year's free utilities.

"The Audubon Society was supposed to comment on the proposed lease and resubmit portions it considered acceptable. Their attorney was supposed to be talking to our attorney," he said.

Mr. Levy said he was "perplexed" by the Audubon decision since the center "would have been provided with a sound structure and adequate parking areas, and would have been an integral part of an overall recreational plan for the site."

Mr. Thomas, who shares the search committee with Lionel Schusterman, chairman, and Frank J.Hulick, said the Audubon center realizes it can never find an ideal site.

"But we're regarding it now as a long-term project, of perhaps two or three years," Mr. Thomas said.

The committee is willing to look at any land that may be offered by donation, Mr. Thomas said. Since the Audubon Society is tax-exempt, a land donation could mean major tax benefits to the donor.

New Jersey Audubon currently maintains four other centers in the state.

LUNCHEON SPEAKER — Gen. John R. Guthrie, commander of the United States Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command, Alexandria, Va., will speak at Fort Monmouth, Friday, April 13, at a luncheon sponsored by the Fort Monmouth Chapter of the National Contract Management Association.

Residents to protest rent hike

By WENDY DILLER

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — Residents from Silvermead Mobile Homes on Route 9, will protest an application for a rent increase at a Rent Control Board meeting here Thursday night.

"Everyone is up in arms here about it — we're going to protest it. There was a meeting of the social club on Friday night, and everyone talked about it," Kathleen Erikson, a member of the Silvermead Homeowners' Association, said.

Last time he (the president of the mobile home corporation) did this about 70 or so people came."

Seymour Silver, president of Silver Enterprises, applied to the board for an increase in rent of two newly constructed mobile homes in March, asking that the rent not include heat, which it presently does. The new homes have not previously been occupied, but under the township rent control ordinance, an increase in rent in one section of a development can eventually affect the rents in other sections of the same development.

Mr. Silver, according to members of the association, applied for an increase in September to the board and was granted a rent increase last December. Silvermead Mobile Homes, which consists of approximately 300 buildings, is located on Route 9, between Elton Adelphia Road and Strickland road, and is bordered by Jackson Ave.

"We feel there is no control over the new units and that Mr. Silver will increase our rents even further." Mrs. Iris Rugby, president of the Homeowners' Association said. "Residents here are worried.

"Most of them are retired or approaching retirement, many are living on fixed incomes, and they wouldn't be able to afford rent increases," Mrs. Rugby stated. She said transportation would be provided to the hearing for residents needing it.

The number of homes for sale in the development in the past year has greatly increased, she said, maintaining that the developer is having more trouble than in previous years finding people to buy the homes.

Mr. Silver was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Carl Gross, attorney for Silvermead Enterprises, said that Mr. Silver is currently losing money on the development.

"The place is running at a loss," he said yesterday. He said he did not know the gross profit.

'Water emergency' slated May through September

By WARREN RICHEY

ABERDEEN — The Township Council last night passed a resolution declaring that a "water emergency" will take affect in the township between May 15 and September 15, requiring residents to restrict lawn watering during those months.

Mayor Edward E. Kaufman said the measure is a routine step taken by the council each year to insure that during times of low water supplies township residents conserve water.

The mayor said the council had been requested to designate the water emergency by the Aberdeen Township Municipal Utilities Authority as a result of a few summers when water supplies dropped to low levels.

The resolution calls for the following lawn watering schedule for all ATMUA water customers between May and September: on odd-numbered days; Brookview Park, Cambridge Park, Colonial Estates, Woodview Estates, Ivyhill Park, Mohingson Park, Pine Ridge, Arlene Woods and Juniper Park. Residents in the following areas are permitted to water their lawns on even-numbered days: Andover Park, Deerfield Park, Fordham Park, Fern Marc, Northland Park, Oxford Park, Wavely Park, Storyland.

The council also passed a resolution authorizing the funding of $500,000 in bond anticipation notes to finance a portion of the township's $1.5 municipal hall, which is currently under construction.

A resolution was passed giving support to a plan to apply for state funding to conduct a feasibility study to possibly set up a Bayshore regional municipal and school board insurance program.

Mayor Kaufman said that because of continually rising insurance costs, the municipalities and school boards might possibly save money by creating a regional insurance progam.

The mayor indicated that in addition to Aberdeen, Atlantic Highlands, Highlands, Middletown, Keansburg, Holmdel, Hazlet, Union Beach, Keyport, and Matawan might participate.

Frank E. Jurewicz of 27 Locust St. told the council that despite repeated reports to the chief of police and acting township manager, overloaded dump trucks continue to litter Cliffwood roads as they travel from the Midland Glass Plant.

Mr. Jurewicz said that two dump trucks, numbers 101 and 119, owned by Waste Disposal Inc., were traveling over Cliffwood Aven ue with loads above the sides of the trucks. He said portions of the loads of sand, paper and other refuse were falling off the trucks onto local roads.

He said he had reported it to local authorities on four occasions last month but that they "allow this to continue in blatant violation of State Motor Vehicle Section 39:477..."

Citing the law, he said, "No person shall operate or allow to be operated any vehicle which is spilling or scattering debris hen a load has been piled above the height of the sides or tail gate without covering the load with a tarpaulin or canvas."

Acting Txownship Manager Richard T. Schwartz said he received four complaints about the trucks in the past two weeks from Cliffwood residents. He said that as a result of the calls he contacted Waste Disposal and notified the company of the complaints. The acting manager said he has been given assurances that the trucks are now using tarpaulins.

He also said that truck drivers have been notified that if they are caught driving in Aberdeen without a tarpaulin cover over a highly loaded truck they will have(tg pay the fine out of their own pockets.

In other business, Tom DeGiglio, acting president of the Cliffwood—Cliffwood Beach Homeowner's Association questioned the council on why $4,500 was spent to retain an executive search firm to locate qualified candidates to fill the township manager position.

Mr. DeGiglia indicated that the previous council had chosen the township manager without a search firm, and he said he didn't feel the $4,500 expenditure was necessary.

Mayor Kaufman said that it was not necessary to hire the search firm, but he added that it was "preferable" for the township in order to increase the chances of locating the best candidate for the job.

Baseball finally gets tough on salaries

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

Baseball's bigwigs have drawn the economic line at last, and the poor souls who happened to wind up on the wrong side of it are the umpires.

Tired of paying large-sized player salaries, the result of contracts that they inflicted upon themselves with some old fashioned, hard-headed, rather dumb bargaining, baseball has decided to take a stand. Oh, not against the players. No, no. The players wouldn't stand still for that. No patsies there. The target the bosses chose were the umpires, who have dared, at last, to ask for their share of the pie.

It's fine with the men who run the sport that there are benchwarmers with $100,000 contracts earning more than twice the salary of the highest paid umpire. Benchwarmers are, after all, players and in The New Baseball, you just don't mess with the players. Fooling with them is like tugging on Superman's cape. It is ill-advised and it gets you nothing but trouble. Umpires, on the other hand, are another story.

The umps are easy targets, available and vulnerable. Because of some poor advice, they are in the middle of a five-year collective bargaining agreement which includes such goodies as "job security," a tidbit the bosses tossed their way in the last negotiations.

Do you know what their job security clause reads? It says that after the league president fires an ump, the ump can appeal his dismissal to the league's highest authority — the same president who just handed him the pink slip.

What could be fairer than that?

Now any union that could agree to a clause like that in a contract doesn't exactly sound like a negotiating heavyweight. Here, it seemed, was a place where the leagues could demonstrate some muscle.

Umpires can be found someplace above groundskeepers in baseball's feudal society. They are the serfs of the game, working or traveling non-stop, day after day for the six-month season. Families are forgotten. All that matters is the game.

And their reward for that loyalty is a salary scale that would send a fringe player's agent into a rage. In its eternal benevolence, baseball paid its most highly regarded umpires, the senior men in the two leagues, a top salary of just over $40,000 last year. And they didn't even have to buy tickets to the games, either.

Now, at last, the umpires have decided to stand up and fight for more than they've been getting. But baseball, fully aware that it must begin wrestling Marvin Miller in the next few months when negotiations with the players begin, has taken a tough line.

The position of the leagues is that the current staffs are entirely replacable. And they proved that last summer, yanking some guy off a soft drink truck to umpire a game in Toronto when the regulars walked out for one day. If anybody you drag in off the street can be an umpire, perhaps the same qualifications might be applied to league presidents.

Throughout this debate, Lee MacPhail and Chub Feeney have been rigid, a posture the owners must love. Fit them for powdered wigs and you'd think it was Marie Antoinette and Louis XIV running the American and National Leagues.

As a result, we face the start of the major league season this week with two of the 52 regular umpires ready to work. Rookie Ted Hendry signed an AL contract before the dispute began and will honor his agreement. Veteran NL ump Paul Pryor reached terms on a two-year deal at the end of last week. In a prepared statement urging his fellow umps to follow him so that the season might not be disrupted, Pryor concluded by saying "Let's play ball!"

That's the problem. The umps have been playing ball for too long. So when the season starts this week, they most likely will be on the sidelines, playing strike instead.

Not to worry, says baseball. The recalcitrants will simply be replaced by minor leaguers, amateurs and, most likely, a soft drink truck driver or two.

Pittsburgh's high-priced star delivers another costly victory

Parker, baseball's highest paid player at $900,000 a year, belted his eighth and ninth homers of the spring against Minnesota starter Geoff Zahn in the first and seventh innings.

Then the big Pirate outfielder broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth when he tagged reliever Mike Marshall with his RBI base hit.

The game was tied three times, reaching 6-6 in the eighth on an RBI single by Pittsburgh's Manny Sanguillen.

The loss by the Minnesota "A" squad was the second by a Twins' team Monday. The Minnesota "B" team was beaten 2-0 by the Houston Astros as James Rodney Richard and Gary Williams combined on a four-hitter.

Niekro Paces Braves

Elsewhere, Phil Niekro allowed three hits in seven innings in his final tuneup for the season, helping the Atlanta Braves defeat the Kansas City Royals 2-1.

George Hendrick's bases-loaded single climaxed a two-run rally in the ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Montreal Expos 2-1. Jerry Narron hit a one-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading the New York Yankees to a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Butch Hobson drove in the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 7-6 decisoon over the Philadelphia Phillies. Bill Nahorodny drove in five runs with a pair of homers to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 12-10 decision over the Texas Rangers.

Krane Homers

Home runs by Ed Kranepool, Ron Hodges and Elliott Maddox paced a 17-hit attack as the New York Mets routed the Toronto Blue Jays 11-4. Jerry Martin's RBI single in the ninth inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Toby Harrah's ninth-inning sacrifice fly, his third RBI of the game, gave the Cleveland Indians an 8-7 triumph over the Oakland A's.

The Detroit Tigers got a home run from Steve Kemp and some tight pitching to earn a 5-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Kemp's second home run of the spring with two mates aboard climaxed a four-run eighth inning to give the Tigers their 14th victory against 10 losses in Florida.

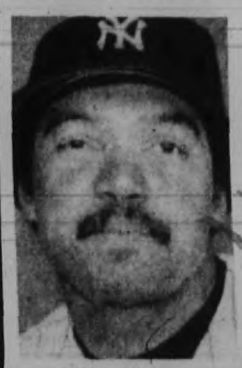

The Reds tallied in the first on a double by Ken Griffey and Dave Concepcion's single. Detroit tied the score in the sixth when Alan Trammell doubled and scored on a two-our error by Joe Morgan.

Ron LeFlore's first hit in 17 trips to the plate ignited the winning rally.

Two walks loaded the bases and with Kemp at bat, LeFlore scored on a wild pitch. The home run followed, giving the victory to Aurelio Lopez for two innings of relief work.

Fred Norman, the second Cincinnati pitcher, took the defeat.

Jackson in hospital with stomach virus

Reggie Jackson

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Slugger Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees underwent diagnostic tests for stomach problems yesterday, the team said.

Jackson, who was hospitalized Sunday night, has been complaining of feeling rundown and tired. His problem was diagnosed as a stomach viral syndrome.

The club said Jackson would be released from Imperial Point Hospital yesterday and would accompany the team north.

Pony League tryouts planned this month

RED BANK — The Red Bank Parks and Recreation Department will hold tryouts for the two local Pony League baseball teams on April 7, 14 and 21, at 3 p.m. on Memorial Fields. The Pony League is open to boys ages 13 to 15. Further information is available from the Parks and Recreation Department.

Yanks cut Beattie from parent roster

By the Associated Press

Jim Beattie, who pitched the New York Yankees to victories in an American League playoff contest and a World Series game last year, was one of several players cut from major league rosters as teams struggled to get down to the opening-day limit of 25.

The American and National leagues both play their openers yesterday.

Beattie was optioned to the Yankees' Columbus farm team in the International League

Other veterans who learned they wouldn't be around for the openers included reliever Ken Brett, waived by the California Angels, and pitcher Buzz Capra, who was trying for a comeback with the Atlanta Braves.

"I'm a little shocked. I didn't expect it," said Beattie, who was told by the Yankees that he might be recalled soon. "I don't know what their definition of 'fairly soon' is. I don't know what determines when I come back."

Beattie was 6-9 in the 1978 regular season but beat Kansas City in a playoff game and won the fifth game of the Yankees series against Los Angeles, pitching his first complete major league game.

He was muscled out of the pitching corps this spring by the Yankees' signing of veteran free agents Tommy John and Luis Tiant and the acquisition of Paul Mirabella from Texas.

Yankees President Al Rosen said it was better for Beattie to be pitching every fifth day with Columbus rather than sitting with the Yankees.

The Yanks also sent rookie pitcher Ron Davis and outfielder Tommy Cruz to Columbus, trimming the roster to 25.

Brett, a major leaguer for 11 years, was beaten out by rookie Mark Clear. Brett, who has a year left on his contract with the Angels, was 3-5 last season with a 4.95 earned-run average.

Capra, a 31-year-old right-hander, was cut as he tried to regain his job after surgery that sidelined him for most of last season. The Braves also sent left-hander Jamie Easterly and outfielder Eddie Miller to Richmond of the International League, bringing the roster to 26.

Boston optioned pitchers Allen Ripley and John Tudor and outfielder Gary Hancock to Pawtucket of the IL.

Carroll Rosenbloom

Rosenbloom's drowning shocks world of football

By the Associated Press

Carroll Rosenbloom was a father figure to many of his younger associates, but George Halas, founding father of the National Football League, remembers the deceased Los Angeles Rams owner who drowned yesterday for his business sense and farsightedness.

"We all in the National Football League share the loss and do the grieving with the Rosenblooms today on Carroll's death," said Halas, chairman of the board of the Chicago Bears. "I had known him since he took over the Baltimore Colts in 1953 and was immediately impressed with his farsightedness and business acumen.

"He shared those strengths with us at various league meetings," Halas said. "I consider him one of the NFL's pioneers. Of course, my deepest sympathies go out to his wife, Georgia, and son, Steve."

Halas was one of many — fellow NFL owners, executives, players and civic officials — who joined in mourning Rosenbloom, who drowned while vacationing at Golden Beach, Fla.

"I'm deeply saddened," said Don Klosterman, executive vice president and general manager of the Rams, who was with Rosenbloom when he owned the Colts. "He was like a father to me. Having had day to day contact with him all these years, this will create a terrible void in my life."

In New York, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle — an off-again, on-again combatant of Rosenbloom — issued this statement: "For 26 years in Baltimore and then in Los Angeles, Carroll Rosenbloom played a major role in the growth and success of the National Football League, both through the performance of the teams he produced and through his active participation in the league's decision-making process."

In 1975, Rozelle fined Rosenbloom when he criticized officials. Rosenbloom was never one to pale when he thought his toes were being stepped on.

In 1970, he found himself at odds with Don Shula. Shula, coach of the Colts under Rosenbloom, went to the Miami Dolphins, and Rosenbloom accused Miami of tampering.

"He certainly was instrumental in my career," Shula said. "He gave me an opportunity to become a coach at age 33. Although we had our differences later on ... they were patched up. I can now reflect on the good things, and there were many."

Mike Curtis, a former Colt linebacker now with the Washington Redskins, also considered Rosenbloom a father image. "He was concerned about everything we did from the football aspect obviously and preparing us for when we got out of football," Curtis said.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles said: "I am shocked to hear about the sudden death of Carroll Rosenbloom. He was a sportsman with tremendous energy and an enthusiastic competitor.

Fairbanks hears freedom's call

BOSTON (AP) — Wayward New England Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks, who tried to quit prior to the National Football League playoffs, is free to head west to take the head coaching job at the University of Colorado, Patriots owner, William H. Sullivan, said yesterday.

Colorado will pay an undisclosed portion of the remaining four years on Fairbanks' $150,000-per-season Patriot contract as part of the settlement of the dispute over the coach, said Sullivan.

The settlement, called "amicable" by both sides, came after five weeks of secret mediation initiated by Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Los Angeles Rams, said Sullivan. The agreement was disclosed shortly after Rosenbloom's accidental death by drowning in California.

Sullivan, who had refused to let Fairbanks jump his pact, said the National Football League team will have a new coach within two weeks.

"This period has been one of uncertainty...headaches and heartaches," Sullivan said, alluding to the 3 ½ months of the Fairbanks controversy.

"I'm relieved. I don't want to say that we have won. Let's just say that our position was justified," Sullivan said.

"We have stood up for the sanctity of a contract. If we hadn't, we would have set a pattern for players and coaches."

Sullivan said he agreed not to disclose how much Colorado is paying to extricate Fairbanks from his Patriots contract, but when the call from the university came yesterday, Sullivan said the Patriots accepted it immediately.

Fairbanks was not immediately available for comment.

Sullivan called Rosenbloom a close friend.

Sullivan said he had no doubt that Fairbanks was lost to the Patriots the day after the Pro Bowl last January when the coach submitted a formal resignation.

"I hadn't accepted that resignaion until today," said Sullivan, who added that Fairbanks had not been paid by the Patriots since Jan. 29.

The long-running tug-of-war eventually involveed 15 lawyers and thousands of dollars in legal fees. But Sullivan said it was worth it.

The Patriots owner added he harbored no ill will toward Fairbanks.

"He did a great job for the Patriots," said Sullivan. "He gave his total self. That's why the shock was so great."

In Boulder, Colorado, where spring football practice was five days away, acting head football coach Doug Dickey said:

"We're certainly all happy that it's worked out that Chuck can come to this program and get to work. We know all the coaches and the players are delighted."

The Athletic Department issued a brief official statement saying: "The New England Patriots football club and the University of Colorado announce that they have reached amicable resolution of their differences concerning the employent of Charles Fairbanks...As a result Fairbanks will be free to take the position of head football coach at the university."

Fairbanks' exit, troubled by legal hassles between the coach, the school and the Patriots, was described as "amicable," by Patriots' Vice President Chuck Sullivan.

"Fairbanks will be free to undertake the coaching position with the university immediately," Sullivan said.

Sullivan refused to discuss the details of the settlement, but he said that the court cases concerning the dispute had become moot.

Arbitrator sets Horner's fate

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Horner's permanent major league address for the 1979 baseball season will be determined by an arbitrator. But the young slugger says he'll be ready to take up residence around third base when the Atlanta Braves open the regular season Friday.

The 21-year-old Horner, last year's National League Rookie of the Year, has been locked in a contract dispute with the Braves.

Cosmos week of rest a blessing

EAST RUTHERFORD (AP) — A week of rest awaits the travel-weary Cosmos after opening defense of their North American Soccer League season in winning fashion.

"I can't remember the last time we were home for a week," Coach Eddie Firmani noted. "It's been a very hard time for the boys."

Seninho's goal in the second overtime period gave the Cosmos a hard-fought 2-1 victory Saturday night in San Diego. After seven weeks of training, nine preseason games and a host of injuries, dissension began to creep onto the team.

The Cosmos now have a much-needed week at home before they play Sunday at Washington. They will be training all week at Giants Stadium — a welcome relief for the travel-weary players.

"We got want we wanted, a victory," Firmani said.

"For the amount of time we've been traveling, I think we played a very good game. We got a lot of long-distance work out of some players who are hurting. When Francisco Marinho came into the game, I think he gave us a big boost," he added.

Marinho, one of the Cosmos new players signed without Firmani's blessing, perked up the offense with six shots on goal in 23 minutes.

"We were dragging and he gave us quite a lift when they were playing dangerously in our end," Firmani said.

The victory over the Sockers was most gratifying for the Cosmos. San Diego is rated as one of the better teams in the league and were keyed up for the game. Every game the Cosmos play on the road is the biggest game of the year for the opposition.

The victory also was gratifying for Seninho and oft-injured forward Dennis Tueart. Seninho primarily was known as a playmaker in Portugal and Tueart missed most of the preseason with a sore Achilles heel.

Hickey, Espo lift Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Hickey scored two goals for the second game in a row and Phil Esposito added a deciding power-play tally at 8:23 of the third period last night, powering the New York Rangers to a 5-4 National Hockey League victory over the Los Angeles Kings.

The Rangers, who had won just one of their previous eight games, got off to the shakiest of starts.

Though Los Angeles was shorthanded two men because of penalties, Kings center Butch Goring put his team ahead at 5:19 by breaking in alone at sending a 15-foot shot past goalie John Davidson.

New York's Walt Tkaczuk tied it at 12:15, then Hickey — who scored twice at Philadelphia Sunday night — scored his 32nd goal of the year at 18:47 for a 2-1 Rangers' lead.

Charlie Simmer converted the rebound of a shot by linemate Marcel Dionne on a power play at 5:09 of the second period. But Hickey restored the New York lead on a breakaway just 2:36 later.

Ron Greschner broke neatly up right wing and went around defenseman Richard Mulhern before putting in a 10-foot backhand for a 4-2 New York lead at 14:22 of the second period.

Dionne, the league's second-leading scorer with 122 points, brought the Kings within 4-3 with his 57th goal of the year on a power play with just 30 seconds left in the second period.

But Esposito converted his own rebound from five feet for a 5-3 Rangers lead before Goring scored his second of the night — again bringing Los Angeles within one — with 3:19 to play.

Bouchard ready for Islanders

ATLANTA (AP) — Goalie Dan Bouchard will return to the Atlanta Flames' bench tonight when Atlanta meets the New York Islanders in New York, according to team officials.

But unless there is a last-minute change of strategy, rookie goaltender Rejean Lemelin will start in the contest.

"I think we might go with Reggie at least one more" game, Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton said yesterday. "He's been playing well, and I don't think it would hurt.

Bouchard was given a five-day rest after the Montreal Canadiens scored on their first four shots against him in a game last week.

Lemelin has won two games in a row since taking over Bouchard's starting spot.

Nets: Not exactly artistic success

PISCATAWAY (AP) — After over two years of bouncing around the country as the forlorn stepchild of the National Basketball Association, the New Jersey Nets have proven they belong.

Although they will go into the NBA playoffs with a .500 record at best — providing they win their remaining five games — Nets Coach Kevin Loughery calls this season a smashing success.

"The only way to look at it are there are 10 teams going home and 12 that are still playing," Loughery said yesterday. "and we're one of the 12."

The last couple of years have been tough on Loughery, associated with winning teams for most of his playing and coaching days.

"This season nobody really picked us for the playoffs. They picked us for dead last; this turned into a terrific situation," he said.

The look of satisfaction on Loughery's face last weekend told the complete story.

Minutes earlier he had skipped the length of the bench, slapping hands with his players as the Nets clinched a playoff spot for the first time in three years in the NBA.

Loughery was standing in the jubilant, champagne-drenched locker room, explaining the pain and humiliation he went through during the Nets first two years in the league.

"The humiliating part was everyone saying 'here's the has-beens and the have-nots'," Loughery said. "Now, when we walk into a town, people are worried about us. It was a matter of ego and pride being involved."

New Jersey won 46 games in its first two years in the NBA and would not have made it into their third year, if not for an 11th-hour sale of the club in September.

Loughery received a phone call in Las Vegas five days before training camp informing him the club had folded. Two days later, Roy Boe sold the foundering franchise to New Jersey businessman Joseph Taub.

On the court, the Nets are still not an artistic success. At the gate, the Nets are a flop — if they were Broadway play they would have closed on opening night — playing to half-empty audiences.

Considering some of the hurdles the club has overcome the last seven months, qualifying for the playoffs makes the season a success.

Loughery, the emotional and referee-baiting coach, and Bernard King, the emotional and tempermental forward, typify the obstacles the team has faced.

The 39-year-old coach has run afoul of the NBA law this season, accumulating 44 technical fouls to break the record of 42 he set last year.

King, an especially gifted forward, ran into serious problems with the real law.

The 22-year-old went into a shell after his Dec. 18, 1978 arrest when he was charged with driving while intoxicated without a license and possessing cocaine. He later pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of driving while impaired and the other charges were adjourned in contemplation of being dismissed.

Alydar shows solid recovery

MIAMI (AP) — After an impressive victory and a lame scare, Alydar has completely recovered from a broken foot, says trainer John Veitch, and is back on the vengeance trail of Affirmed.

Although it had been seven months since the Calumet Farm colt broke a bone in his left front foot, he made his debut as a 4-year-old in a seven-furlong allowance race at Hialeah Saturday and won it by seven lengths.

The son of Raise A Native turned in an impressive 1:22 2-5 time carrying 114 pounds. Jockey Jorge Velasquez never touched him. On the final turn, Alydar swept past the field and at the eighth pole, Velasquez asked him to run. He covered the remaining distance in :11 4-5.

"It's been too long since I've had the chance to watch this colt run and feel this good about it," said Veitch. "Too long."

About 45 minutes after Saturday's victory, Veitch had a moment of apprehension. Alydar was dead lame in his right front foot. But X-rays showed nothing and a couple hours later, Alydar was back to normal.

"The injury turned out to be very minor," said Veitch. Apparently the horse had stepped on a stone during the race.

Alydar is scheduled to leave for Oaklawn on Saturday where he will run in the Oaklawn Handicap. From there, it will be a summer full of stakes events before Alydar will go against his nemesis — Affirmed — next fall.

"I'm anxious to renew the rivalry with Affirmed," Veitch said.

Lieberman inherits cage award from the 'Blaze'

THEN AND NOW — Nancy Lieberman, right, recipient of the Wade Trophy as top female basketball player in the country, poses with Carol Blazejowski, the 1978 winner of the award. Lieberman paced Old Dominion with a 17.4 average, 254 assists and 144 steals.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nancy Lieberman has never regretted the times she sneaked out of the house and went down to the playground to rough it up with the boys.

"I never played against girls until I got in high school," says the 5-foot-10 All America point-guard, honored last night as the best woman player in college basketball.

WILL GRIMSLEY

"My parents hated it when they found out I was the one jumping up and putting finger marks all over the ceiling. The guys all resented me at first and my girl friends were envious. You have to take a lot of abuse but it was worth it."

Now, Nancy says, boys who used to yell "Tomboy, why don't you play someplace else?" greet her with a friendly, "Hello, Nancy — gee, we caught you on the tube. You're great."

A statuesque redhead, Miss Lieberman is the 1979 winner of the Wade Trophy, symbolizing No. 1 in the women's collegiate sport. A 20-year-old junior, she led the Old Dominion team of Norfolk, Va., to a 35-1 record and the national championship. Her contributions included a 17.4-point scoring average, 254 assists, 144 steals and 276 rebounds.

She was a combination of Larry Bird and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, so talented that Uncle Sam will build his 1980 Olympic team around her and Carol Blazejowski of Montclair State. Carol won the award last year.

Nancy is not discouraged over the slow public acceptance of women's basketball while the female gender is thriving in individual sports, such as tennis and golf.

Chris Evert collected another $100,000 for a weekend of tennis Sunday while Nancy Lopez, on a rival TV screen, missed in a bid for her third straight women's golf crown, losing in a rare five-woman playoff in a $150,000 tournament.

"Each year women's sports have made greater strides," Nancy said. "More doors are being opened to women athletes in every field. They are making more money and generating more excitement.

"Women's basketball is the quickest growing of all team sports. It is 100 times bigger than it was five years ago. At Norfolk, we often play to sell-out crowds."

This spectator appeal has not yet spilled over to the incipient pro game in the Women's Basketball League. Salaries in the 10-team league are said to range from $2,800 to $7,500 on some teams. Karen Logan of the New Jersey Gems is the highest paid at a reported $21,000. Salaries in the men's National Basketball Association average more than $125,000 with big name players drawing down $500,000 to $800,000.

Nancy and Carol both are looking to professional careers after the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, but they won't come cheaply.

"Olympic exposure should enhance our value," Lieberman said. "I don't think $21,000 would get either of us."

Nancy said Title IX, the law dictating equal athletic privileges for women in colleges, had done much to raise the status of women's sports but the greatest credit goes to dowager tennis queen Billie Jean King.

"Billie Jean was out front all the way," she said. "Before people knew about Title IX, she was screaming for equal prize money. She made herself heard."

Nancy gravitated naturally to sports. At age 10, instead of jumping rope and playing hopscotch, she was breaking into the boys' football, basketball and baseball games on the playground near her home in Far Rockaway, Queens.

"I got a lot of bumps and bruises — and a lot of ribbing at first," she recalled. "Sometimes I would stay on the concrete court for 12 hours a day. I wasn't as big as the guys and couldn't jump as high, so I had to work twice as hard.

County bowlers open tournament

MIDDLETOWN - Addon On Tools of New Monmouth took the early team lead during the first weekend of the 35th annual Monmouth County Bowling Association Championships at Middletown Lanes yesterday. The tournament will run for three more Sundays, excluding Easter weekend, with the finals April 22.

Addon amassed an 870-872-839-2581+750—3331 to rise to an early lead. Ed Matuszewski paced the attack with a 156-197-203556, while Tom Welter bowled a 205-168-170543. Mick Hopkins also went over the 500 mark with a 183-150-178—511.

T & T Coins of Atlantic Highlands moved into second place with an 852-887-960-270+522—3222. First Jersey National Bank of Port Monmouth (804-773-910-2487+690—3177) took third, Gallagher's Tavern of Spring Lake Heights (773-864-968-2605+543—3148) was fourth and Fokker's Limited of Atlantic Highlands (849-955-889-2693+459—3152) was fifth.

Welter and Schweitzer, both of New Monmouth, also pooled their talents to move into the top spot in the doubles competition. The duo took control with a 604-494-1098+300—1398.

Willie Marra and Tony Caltabilota of Oakhurst were only two pins behind the leaders with a 559-666-1225+171—1396. Third place went to Edward Lisle and Hank Kermes of Wanamassa (622-599-1221+141—1362), Robert Heffner and Barry Oslick of Lakewood (620-599-1219+135—1354) were fourth and Jim Stiles and Gary Shelnut of Oceanport (518-563-1181+168—1349) finished in fifth.

The first weekend singles lead went to James McConnell of West Keansburg, who fired a 265-208-205-678+57—735. Stiles was 20 pins off the pace with a 210-201-217-628+87—715. Third place was in the hands of Richard Sachleben of Shrewsbury (236-166-255-657+54—711), Richard Heinke of Middletown (222-176-199-597+78—675) held down fourth place and Charles Wehler of Keansburg (201-189-174-564+108—672) wound up in fifth place.

Poor Rangers' goalies: Victims of defensive unit

ED WALSH

The Rangers' goalies have not been victims of their own players backing in on them. The Rangers' defensive corps is usually so far out of position lately that they are skating full tilt trying to catch up to the oppostion.

It's a sad state of affairs and there aren't any quick remedies available.

The rosters are frozen so no trades can be made. New Haven is in the playoffs so there is no help coming from that direction.

"Just wait until Greschner gets back," was the cry two weeks ago. He's back.

"Just wait until Davidson gets back," was the next alibi. He's back.

"Just wait until Nilsson gets back." Nilsson? He won't be back this year. Anyway, he doesn't play defense. Carol Vadnais does. Greschner, Dave Farrish, Mario Marois, Dave Maloney and Mike McEwan all do. They do?

Vadnais put one heckuva check on a Philadelphia player Sunday night. The only problem is the check came about two full seconds after the player scored.

Dave Farrish looks like he's always in a three-legged race, Marois is going to kill one of his teammates or opponents with his golf-like swing at the puck along the boards and McEwan is not going to make it as a defensman, unless you don't care how many goals he is on ice for.

Greschner is trying, but his timing is off and Captain Dave Maloney, usually steady under pressure, has taken a bushel full of minor penalties over the past few weeks.

But the defensive breakdown is all over the ice.

The Rangers have been outscored 18 to 4 over the past seven periods of hockey.

The Flyers started it last Tuesday with four straight in a period and a fraction. Pittsburgh added seven in 60 minutes and Philadelphia grabbed another seven easy ones Sunday.

Don't look now, but only five teams have given up more than this "improved" New York team.

Remember earlier in the season when they lost, but gave it their all? I Don't think anyone was credited with a check in Philly.

Shots From the Point

—Bad habits also a trait of the Islanders last week. With the exception of the Buffalo contest on the weekend, the Isles took time off against Chicago and Washington and were shelled. Sunday night's match with the Caps was the first victory for the D.C. unit against the New Yorkers. Going into the game, the Isles stood at 17-0-3 lifetime.

—Is there really a Jocelyn Guevremont?

—I hope Paul Stewart of Fair Haven picks up mileage allowance when he is transfered. Stewart started out with Cincinnati of the World Hockey Association, then was sent to Binghampton, back to Cincy, to the Philadelphia Firebirds, back to Cincy, to Cape Cod and back to Cincy. What's next with the Stingers folding their tent at the end of the campaign?

—With all due respects to the writers who keep insisting the Rangers call up Bobby Sheehan from New Haven, the fact is Sheehan is not Rangers property. He is owned by the Nighthawks. Sheehan, although injured part of the season, scored more than 30 goals.

—Even hardworking Ron Dugay has forgotten how to mix it up since put in the center slot by Rangers' boss Fred Shero.

—Overlooked in the opinions of "Rookie of the Year" selectors is Washington's Ryan Walter. The 20-year-old went six weeks during one stretch without being on the ice for an enemy score. He should also score close to 30 goals.

—WHA was in existence seven years and visited 28 cities during its tenure. Franchise fees were $25,000.

For quality banking in the First Merchants tradition, just say Midlantic/Merchants.

As you may know, First Merchants National Bank recently became a part of Midlantic Banks Inc., the oldest banking organization in New Jersey, established in 1804. And to reflect this new relationship, we've changed our name to Midlantic National Bank/Merchants.

What's in a name? In this case, quite a lot. We now have 27 offices in Monmouth and adjacent Middlesex County and are part of a $2.6-billion banking network of 115 offices in 12 counties across New Jersey. Because of these greatly increased resources, we look forward to expanding many of our present services and adding some new ones, too.

But one thing won't change. At your local office, you'll continue to be served by the same officers and branch people who, over the years, have acquired an in-depth understanding of your financial needs.

Midlantic. The new name for quality banking. In the First Merchants tradition of more than half a century.

Residents battling builder

IS RUNNING BROOK RUNNING DOWN? — Residents say it is, and have mounted a campaign to pressure developers Meyer Gold and Mark Haber into making structural repairs on the homes, which are located on and around grant Avenue in Eatontown. The residents have been living in the houses on temporary certificates of occupancy for as long as 1½ years. Some of the alleged defective work includes short beams, improperly supported beams, drainage and warping of floors. A state inspector toured the development yesterday and Eatowntown Mayor J. Joseph Frankel told residents last night that all the repairs would be completed within 45 working days. Register staff photo by Carl Forino

By STEVEN L. LUBETKIN

EATONTOWN — Residents of the Running Brook development off Grant Avenue — fed up over what they claim has been months of excuses and postponements — yesterday showed their complaints o a state inspector.

The residents, whose complaints range from dangerous construction to improper drainage, to a car buried in the backyard, then held a stormy evening meeting at which borough officials vowed that the builders would correct the deficiencies.

Residents have been fighting a running battle to get developer Meyer Gold to fix defects in the homes which have prevented them from getting permanent certificates of occupancy, according to Peter A. Macaluso Jr., 19 Jeryl St., a spokesman for the residents.

Residents first complained about the situation in June of last year, Mr. Macaluso said. Mayor J. Joseph Frankel at that time directed the borough's building inspector to collect lists of problems from the residents, Mr. Macaluso added.

"Nothing was completed on any list in this development," he asserted.

During the inspection tour yesterday morning by Ralph A. DeVino of the Bureau of Construction Code Enforcement, Mr. Macaluso pointed out a beam in his cellar into which a hole had been cut, allowing a heating duct to pass through.

A floor in the Macalusos' living room is warping and buckling because plywood underneath was not nailed down properly, he added.

The developer has repeatedly broken appointments to fix the defects, Mr. Macaluso asserted.

Councilwoman Nancy S. Wolcott accompanied Mr. DeVino on the inspection tour of 22 of the homes, most of which sold for between $63,000 and $80,000, according to residents.

"The complaints can be fixed and the builder has assured the state inspector that they will be fixed," Mrs. Wolcott said.

'I want to know why nothing was done since June'

The builder's representative, who refused to be identified, but who residents later said was Bernard Schanzer, said the complaints would be taken care of.

"I would like to help them out," Mr. Schanzer said. "We have a manager out here, and I will see that he takes care of it."

Mr. DeVino said the problems in the houses could be corrected, and added, "It seems like the developer is being cooperative."

Mr. Macaluso produced correspondence relating to a drainage problem in his backyard, which indicated that the developer would correc tthe problem by April of last year.

The work has not yet been completed, Mr. Macaluso said.

Mayor Frankel said last night that the developers had promised to deal with all the residents' complaints within 45 working days.

"As long as I'm involved, you can be sure I'm going to push to get these things fixed," the mayor said.

Residents at the impromptu meeting, held at the home of John Zummo, told their own "horror" stories about conditions in their homes.

Mr. Zummo, who lives at 54 Emma Place, pointed to a gaping hole in his living room ceiling.

"Do you feel safe sitting under that?" he asked Mrs. Wolcott.

The beam had broken, and the stress was causing the whole house to sag outward, he said.

"My house looks pregnant," said his wife Pat. "The outside walls are bellowing out."

In the cellar, Mrs. Zummo pointed to a warped support beam that, contrary to building code requirements, did not run the length of the cellar. Other beams in the cellar showed signs of cracking, and electrical wires could be seen disappearing into heating ducts, another code violation.

Another resident, who asked not to be identified, said he had to move out of state May 1 to accept a promotion, but would not be allowed by his bank to sell the house without a permanent certificate of occupancy.

Ray Daniele, 15 Jeryl St., charged that the remains of a car were buried in his backyard.

"I only uncovered it after I pulled up some of the underbrush," he said. "It might have been there before the builder bou ght the land, but he didn't remove it."

The builder has said he would remove the car body, Mr. Daniele said.

Philip Mugavero, 31 Jeryl St., said the builder took two months to repair a leaky oil tank, during which time an estimated 100 gallons of fuel oil seeped into the foundation of his home.

Mr. Mugavero showed his front hall, which slopes distictively downward.

"When they brought my refrigerator in, I swear to God, they had to put a board under it to keep it from toppling over," he added.

Two floods in the foyer and basement caused walls to buckle and fostered the growth of moss, Mr. Mugavero said.

Al Mazzo, 35 Jeryl St., said smoke from his oil burner had been seeping into the house for the past 1½ years.

The builders and local code inspectors gave him different reasons for the smoke, he added.

Water drains into the house's garage when it rains, Mr. Mazzo said.

"I want to know why nothing was done since June," he added.

Mayor Frankel said that he was unaware of the situation, because no residents had complained since the June meeting.

Mr. Macaluso said residents had not pursued the complaints because they felt they weren't getting anywhere.

Mrs. Wolcott promised the residents that the builder would complete all the repairs within the 45-day period.

"We will see to it that it is done, and if something has to be paid out of borough funds, it will be done," she vowed. "If the problems aren't solved in 45 days, the builders of Running Brook are going to wish they had been, I promise you that."

Residents told to hold fire

SEA BRIGHT — Several residents appeared at last night's Borough Council meeting already primed to protest a new ordinance that will limit the width of vehicles that may be parked on the borough's side streets after 6 p.m.

They were told to hold their fire, however, and make their statements instead during the public hearing on the ordinance, slated for May 7.

The ordinance, designed to keep a sufficiently wide lane open for emergency vehicles, would limit the width of vehicles to six feet, seven inches, including mirrors or other protrusions. Most borough streets are 21 feet wide.

Before he stomped out of the meeting, one resident declared angrily that the town would have to open up public parking lots somewhere if the council approved the ordinance.

But Council President John S. Forsman said the council and the police were both fed up with the constant complaints they have been receiving about the parking situation and said it was time to take some action. If the objections continued, Mr. Forsman said, the only alternative would be to ban parking altogether on one side of each street.

The council adopted another ordinance, "reluctantly," members said, that will establish a new three-member local assistance board.

The ordinance had to be adopted to conform with a new state law.

Councilman Leroy Gibson, chairman of the police committee, reported that contract negotiations have been completed satisfactorily with the police department, and final contracts are now in the hands of attorneys for the borough and the police.

Policeman shot in break-in OLD BRIDGE — A township policeman was shot at early yesterday morning, while thwarting a break-in at the rear of the Sun-Ray Drug Store in the Sayrewood Shopping Center, Route 9 and Ernston Road, police report.

Patrolman David Kanig was on routine patrol at 5:19 a.m. when he spotted a six-foot tall, black male attempting to break into the drug store, according to police. The officer got out of his patrol car, and attempted to apprehend the man, who fired one shot at Patrolman Kanig before fleeing on foot, police said.

The officer, who was not hit by the gunshot, fired two shots at the suspect and then chased him into a nearby field, where he fired two more shots at the fleeing man, police said. The man fled on foot through the field and into some nearby woods, but a search of the area failed to locate the man, according to police. He was not thought to be injured, police said.

Police said that no gun has been recovered in the investigation of the incident.

Council OK's money for improvement

LITTLE SILVER — The Borough Council last night approved more than $140,000 worth of capital improvements to the local roads, recreation fields and public property and other projects.

By unanimous votes, the council approved five separate ordinances for the projects, with almost all of the costs to be paid by bond issues.

The largest project is an $80,000 one for improvements to Silverside Avenue, between Bernard Terrace and Seven Bridges Road. The next largest is a $24,100 project ordinance to pay for the the construction of a salt shed for the road department, the purchase of a lawn mower and other projects.

People to People Banking...

MONEY-PHONE

The bill paying service that saves time, saves money!

Remember the last time you paid your bills? You pulled out the checkbook, the envelopes and postage stamps. Then, you spent considerable time writing and recording the checks, addressing the envelopes and licking the stamps. Of course, you still weren't finished. Someone had to drop the bills in the mailbox or post office. So much for the old way.

Now you can eliminate that routine with Money-Phone, a "People to People" banking service that helps you pay all your bills by phone. It's really very simple. You merely dial a toll free number and tell the Money-Phone teller what bills to pay and how much. You're in complete control. In addition, you earn 5¼% interest a year compounded daily on your deposits.* Then, each month you receive a descriptive statement showing all transactions, interest earned and service charges which are just 10¢ per bill paid. That's less than the cost of the postage stamp alone. For complete information stop in or call 775-3131 and ask for our Money-Phone brochure because . . .

Short weighting...it happens

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

By SYLVIA PORTER

"It seems a simple thing to ask that the weight declared on the label of a package of meat or chicken reflect the true weight of the meat or poultry at the time of purchase," said Carol Tucker Foreman, U.S. Department of Agriculture assistant secretary, in a speech to newspaper food editors a while back.

She was wrong.

When government regulation is involved, nothing is simple. This always has been true — but it is particularly so now that public opinion has swung from enthusiastic endorsement of regulatory actions toward an almost indiscriminate suspicion that all regulations are pointless and wasteful.

For a full year and a half, the USDA has been in a battle to correct flawed federal rules which allow meat and poultry to weigh less when consumers buy them than the package labels claim they do.

You almost surely believe that when you go to the supermarket to buy a single pound package of drumsticks or hamburger, and the label says one pound, you are getting 16 ounces. Not necessarily so. You may be paying for 13 ounces of chicken or beef and three ounces of expensive, flavored water.

This practice is called short-weighting. Vaguely worded federal regulations permit it, and if they aren't corrected soon, worried state officials fear they'll end up costing shoppers, wholesalers and retailers as much as $1 billion a year.

But in this current anti-regulatory climate, correcting regulations can be as tough as establishing new ones.

In December 1977, USDA proposed that the net weight listed on a package of meat or poultry must be accurate, within very small defined limits; when the customer buys it — not just when it leaves the factory, as is the case now. The USDA also suggested that the liquid which drains from the food and sits in the tray may not be included as part of the net weight on the label.

Many states have had similar rules for years, but in 1977 the Supreme Court ruled that federal laws, no matter how confusing, pre-empt state and local regulations. The ruling made it impossible for state weights and measures inspectors to protect consumers against short-weighting. Thus, USDA moved to remedy the problem by suggesting more specific federal rules at least as good as various state rules.

Lengthy hearings were held on the USDA proposals, with testimony presented by groups favoring and groups opposing them.

The department also commissioned the Consumer Federation of America to study the impact of its proposals on industry, the states and consumers. Various industry groups challenged the way the consumer group had obtained the study contract. The suits were dismissed.

As the proceedings were drawing to a close, former Rep. Warren Poage (D.-Tex.), since defeated but then a member of the House Agriculture Committee, aaked the General Accounting Office, an investigating arm of Congress, to do its own analysis of the proposals.

The GAO report, released this [illegible] December, recommended that the USDA not adopt the changes and that the department collect additional data. Like the CFA study, this too has been hotly criticized as being one-sided. In a letter to Elmer B. Staats, head of GAO, R. E. Rominger, director of California's Food and Agriculture Department, claims much of the report is simply a restatement of the industry position. He says his office was not told of the study, never even received a copy, and that extensive economic data given by both the states and industry during the public hearings were ignored.

Under pressure of such controversy, USDA has retreated to do still another study. It has directed its own Economics Statistics and Cooperative Service (ESCS) to look once again at the matter.

It's hard to imagine ESCS coming up with anything new. The evaluation is due by June. Only three people have been assigned to do it, one working only part-time. And the chief economist in charge of the study, Charles Handy, told my associate, Brooke Shearer, that "we're having trouble getting the data we need fast enough."

When the ESCS report is finished, it also will be available for public (your) comment.

After all these extended proceedings and voluminous records, will USDA officials then find it easier to reach to the heart of the merits of disputed issues? My own personal, negative answer is implicit in the question.

Profit improvement for Sears

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By David R. Sargent

Q— My husband acquired 344 shares of Sears, Roebuck (NYSE) stock while working there. His cost for the shares was $32. The recent popularity of the six-month certificates paying about 10 percent makes us wonder if we shouldn't switch to these. We are interested in income not growth. G.M. Florida

A— Your Sears shares are down over ten points from your cost price and are selling at 66 percent below the all-time high set in 1973. While some of this drop reflects stock market conditions, in large part it reflects problems at the company. Under the leadership of a new chairman, a comprehensive five-year reorganization plan has been set in place. Because of Sears' massive size, the full effects of the program will not filter down to profits for a year or two.

Merchandising profits for the year ended January 1979 were up marginally, but systemwide earnings gained 9 percent to $2.86 a share. Final quarter with earnings up from 35 cents to 52 cents. By limiting markdowns and cutting back on advertising, sales have suffered, while profit margins have improved. Balancing these factors will take time.

You stand to lose too much and gain too little by selling now. The stock is currently yielding over 6 percent, which means it would take you about 14 years to recoup — in added income — the capital you will lose if you sell. And, during that period, Sears' dividend will surely rise whereas short-term interest rates will inevitably fluctuate in both directions. Hold Sears for eventual recovery.

Q— I would like to begin to consolidate my list of holdings (see enclosed). Are any of them sells currently? If so, should I add to others from the proceeds? I read all the company reports but it isn't my favorite kind of reading material. I would rather not add to my two largest holdings. E.O. Florida

A— You have an excellent list with only one issue which should be sold, Union Electric (NYSE). Earnings and dividend growth have been well below average over the last five years. In view of the company's major construction program and the restrictive regulatory climate in its service area, progress will probably remain slow. Sell.

Depending on your objectives, you may add either to the more conservative erican Telephone or to Diamond Shamrock (NYSE). The latter company has just completed its merger with Falcon Seaboard, a major producer of steam coal. Sales for the conbomed company were $1.8 billion — 56 percent chemicals, 38 percent oil and gas and 6 percent coal — in 1978.

May waive fee for 4-H

LINCROFT — The county Parks and Recreation Commission will look into the feasibility of waiving its usual $80 daily fee for use by the county 4-H horse clubs of the East Freehold Show Grounds, Freehold Township.

The commission has established a policy of charging all groups, whether non-profit or commercial, the same daily rate for use of the horse-show grounds on East Freehold Road.

However, last night four 4-H adult volunteers asked the commission to make an exception for their organization because it is "an arm of county government" and the only non-profit group to hold horse shows at the show grounds.

"4-H is sponsored by the county; it is subsidized by the county," noted Henry Bolwyn, one of the volunteers. "The winners of the county 4-H qualifying shows represent the county in state-wide competions."

"We have a budget problem," explained Jane Hight, another volunteer. "There are 49 4-H clubs in the county, of which approximately one-third are horse clubs. The horse clubs are usually self-supporting and there is no money allocated to them in the over-all 4-H budget.

"We hold three qualifying shows at the East Freehold park, and we must pay for judges and for ribbons'" she continued. "The $80 a day you are charging us for use of the park comes to $240 for the three days.

"We are educational," added Judy Poulos, another volunteer. "We do charge the members an entry fee. But we don't feel we can charge the same fees as the open shows. If we did, some of the kids couldn't participate, and we would be depriving them of part of the 4-H program."

However, Ross W. Maghan, chairman of the commission, said that the commission had to consider other factors than the loss of $240 in revenue. He asked if the parks system would then also be asked to make exceptions for other worthy organizations such as senior citizen groups that want to hold outings at the golf courses.

"Will it be a question of $240 in lost revenue or $24,000," he asked. "We count on this revenue to balance our budget. And if we run short, there is little likelihood that the freeholders will give us more money this year."

"What about the East Freehold Fire Company," asked Robert Marks, a member of the commission. "What if they ask to use the show grounds. I think they are as worthy an organization as 4-H."

"What if MONARC comes to us," added, Martin J. Vaccaro, another commissioner.

Gulf pulling out of offshore site

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. said yesterday it was pulling out of the search for oil and gas in the offshore Baltimore Canyon Trough after its second exploratory well came up dry.

Gulf's wildcat well, located about 80 miles east of this resort, is the 11th dry hole reported off the mid-Atlantic coast.

Five wells still are being drilled in the area by Texaco, Exxon, Tenneco and Mobil.

Gulf said it lost more than $60 million in exploring the Atlantic Ocean here. Its second well was drilled to 12,813 feet below the ocean floor and "did not encounter any shows of hydrocarbons," said company spokesman James Walker.

Gulf's announcement was seen as another major blow to the promise of the Baltimore Canyon Trough area off New Jersey. Gulf's well was the fifth and last hole drilled into the "Great Stone Dome" rock formation between 60 and 81 miles east of here.

The Great Stone Dome is the largest, most well-defined geological formation found by scientists below the mid-Atlantic seabed.

Experts had hoped the dome would produce great quantities of gas or oil. The industry paid more than $650 million to the federal government in August 1976 for the right to drill into the formation.

On Feb. 28, the oil industry showed its disappointment in the Baltimore Canyon Trough in general by bidding $41.7 million, a very low figure, for only 44 of 199 additional lease tracts offered by the federal government in the area.

New down-sized compacts shown

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. showed off the first of its new "down-sized" compacts Monday, cars it's counting on to boost the company's fuel economy and push a lot of imports off the West Coast.

The company's Chevrolet Division opened the drum-beating in Riverside, Calif., and three other GM divisions — Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick — plan previews on succeeding days.

Chevrolet is replacing the Nova with the Citation. The others, near-duplicates of the Citation, keep their old names — Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark.

The 1980 models go on sale officially April 19.

It is no accident that GM is lifting the veil in California. Although the world's biggest maker of motor vehicles dominates the national market, making almost 48 of every 100 cars sold in this country last year, it runs second to imports in California.

Foreign cars accounted for 37 percent of all car sales in California last year, more than twice their share of the U.S. market as a whole. GM had about 36 percent of the California market.

Pricetags have not been announced, but trade publications estimate the bottom-line GM compacts will cost an average of $4,500 — Chevy and Pontiac probably less, Buick and Olds more.

That would be roughly half the price of the German-made Audi 5000 and $1,200 less than the Japanese Toyota Corona.

The cheapest Nova now lists for $3,995. The cheapest Ford Fairmont, one of Nova's competitors, lists for $3,770.

The new compacts are up to 800 pounds lighter and 20 inches shorter than the models they replace. The shrinkage is made possible by front-wheel drive and "east-west" engine mounting, with the crankshaft parallel to the axle. GM says the interior room in the new models is just as big as, or bigger than, the models being replaced.

Dollar scores very well

NEW YORK (AP) — Led by a strong performance against the Japanese yen, the U.S. dollar surged against most major world currencies Monday. Gold prices were mixed. In London, the price of gold rose by $1 to $239.75 a Troy ounce. The metal dipped in Zurich to $239.625 compared with $239.875 on Friday. "We've seen a very firm dollar for no clearly identifiable reason, apparently triggered off by substantial weakening of the yen in Tokyo," said one New York dealer. "What we're talking about is weakness of the yen rather than strength of the dollar."

Comedy is after dinner treat

By MARYBETH ALLEN

TINTON FALLS — The script of "Come Live With Me" would probably make you laugh if you stayed home and read it alone.

But what's funny on page is even funnier on stage. And Denis Lynch, who directs the Lee Minoff and Stanley Price comedy at The Dam Site, suits the action to the word.

The Denkath dinner theater production, being presented on Wednesdays, Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, features scores of witty lines — delivered as the show proceeds at a rapid-fire pace.

The show, set in London, revolves around Chuck Clark, an American writer of films, who is energetically portrayed by Mr. Lynch.

Clark, who was divorced several years ago, is under intense deadline pressure in the preparation of a script. But an even more pressing problem is coping with his live-in girlfriend. a

No sooner does she stomp off in a rage than neighbor Tristram Hawkins, a prim and proper British antiques dealer, appears at the door. He's portrayed to perfection by Thomas Michael Brady, who emerges as an audience favorite.

And, aside from his friendship, Hawkins offers Clark what appears to be the ideal solution to his woes: a live-in maid who will cook and clean for him — with no strings attached.

Clark buys the idea and, almost instantly Ingaborg is delivered to his door. Joan C. Wanchura gives a delightful portrayal of her as young, naive, and eager to please — but is at her best when she returns to Clark's apartment slightly tipsy after a night on the town in the company of Collette, a more sophisticated counterpart, portrayed well by Catherine English, who also has the role of Joanna, the weather girl.

The problem is that Clark has hired Ingaborg under false pretenses and keeps assuring her that he's a married man whose wife will be joining him soon. Sooner, in fact, than he had bargained for.

Nancy, portrayed brusquely by Mariadonna McCarthy, pays a surprise visit, sees her photograph prominently displayed on the wall, and instantly assumes that her ex-husband wants her back ... an unfortunate situation since she herself is en route to be wed again.

Adding to the amusing (to the audience) state of chaos is the arrival of Milton Rademacher, the producer who's eagerly awaiting the completion of Clark's script. Frank J. Mongiello does a good job of imbuing him with a personality that only a movie mogul could love.

It's an enjoyable show and, despite its implausible plot, characters are endowed with enough personality to make theater-goers care about their far-fetched fates. And, aside from characters, the show offers a plant which burps and, after being doused with a cocktail is dubbed "a potted plant."

FIRST AID IN A GLASS — Thomas Michael Brady, left, and Denis Lynch, who appear as Tristram Hawkins and Chuck Clark, are friends through thick and thin in "Come Live With Me," the comedy which is current dinner theater attraction at The Dam Site, Tinton Falls. During this scene, Clark dunks Hawkins' finger into a cocktail in an effort to kill germs possibly incurred from a cut.

Two concerts are scheduled

HOLMDEL — The All Shore Concert Band, composed of students from different schools in Monmouth County, will present a concert at 8 p.m. today at Holmdel High School.

The Middletown High School North Symphonic Band and Stage Band will present a Pops Concert in that high school's auditorium tomorrow night at 8:15.

Former Byrds are coming

WEST LONG BRANCH — Coming to Monmouth College are McGuinn, Clark and Hillman, formerly of The Byrds.

They'll be headline performers for a spring concert at 8 p.m. April 17.

Steve Forbert, guitarist, shares the bill of the program, to be sponsored by the College Center Council in Alumni Memorial Gymnasium. Tickets may be reserved through the college center.

The next night, at 8:30, The Monmouth College Stage Band will give a concert in Wilson Auditorium of Woodrow Wilson Hall — that's Wednesday, April 18. Selections will include "Shoutin' Brass," "Sweet Talkin'," and "Rock Exotica." This program is free of charge and open to the public.

Plane crash

headquarters in Washington, D.C., according to Mr. Banks.

Investigators speculated that the pilot and passenger left Colts Neck Airport about 5 p.m. Sunday, advising the airport that they would return later that evening, about 8 p.m. However, no flight plan was filed.

Before taking off from Colts Neck, 16 gallons of fuel were loaded aboard the plane, but no estimates were available yesterday on how many gallons the plane's tanks already held at the time of takeoff.

Mr. Banks said the plane came down two miles south of Monmouth Airport. Weather at the estimated time of the crash at Lakehurst, the nearest weather station, was, "partial obscuration," with broken clouds at 00 feet. A high deck of overcast clouds was seen, and surface visibility was reported at 1 3/4 miles with fog.

The temperature was 46, and the dew point was 44, according to Mr. Banks, who said that when the two figures near each other, weather conditions become conducive to fog.

The plane crashed while heading west, in the direction of Colts Neck, Mr. Banks said, and after coming down on the open fairway, "cartwheeled," turning over, and was completely demolished. Only the tail section remained intact.

Debris from the wreckage was scattered about 140 feet from the 150-horsepower plane's point of impact.

"When I saw the plane, (it looked like it was all rolled up in a ball," said the greenskeeper, who was first on the scene. Mr. West's body was lying at the side of the plane while Mrs. Mileski's body was found in the plane, according to Mr. Morgan.

State Trooper Robert Dafeldecker said the plane traveled about 45 yards after its impact with the ground, twisting into a mangled heap. The bodies of the two victims were taken to Freehold Area Hospital, Freehold Township, for autopsies.

Federal officials are checking to determine if the plane ever arrived at Robertsville Airport, and the condition of the plane's tachometer, which records the time the airplane spends in flight. Mr. West held a private pilot's license and was not checked out for instrument flight.

At the crash site, there was no evidence of explosion, and no fuel odor.

Investigators said they will try to learn if the plane ran out of fuel.

Both Mr. West and Mrs. Mileski were employed at Duke Gundaker's Autoland, Belmar, where Mr. West was an auto refinisher and Mrs. Mileski was a secretary.

Mr. West was born in Quonset Point, R.I., and lived most of his life in the shore area. He was a graduate of Neptune High School and was a communicant of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Roman Catholic Church, Asbury Park.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Frances MacKay West; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. West Jr. of Neptune; and a sister, Mrs. Valerie Reihlman of Tinton Falls.

The Francioni, Taylor and Lopez Funeral Home, Neptune, is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Mileski, was a life-long resident of Neptune, and was a graduate of St. Rose High School, Belmar. She was a communicant of St. Rose Roman Catholic Church, Belmar.

Surviving are her husband, Joseph Mileski, her mother, Mrs. Irene Twidle, of Belmar; two brothers, Glen and Joseph Twidle, at home; and two sisters, the Misses Victoria and Mary Ann Twidle, also at home.

The Reilly Funeral Home, Belmar, is in charge of arrangements.

Considering park-ride facilities

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — The Transportation Committee is considering additional park-ride facilities for commuters because Manalapan Township has tabled its plans for commuter park-ride facilities.

President Jack Sadow said last night that the committee discussed several possiblilities but could not be specific.

Manalapan Township Committee decided last week to delay its plans to construct a park-ride facility because of expense complications.

Freehold Township, Manalapan and Freehold Borough had planned to construct a park-ride facility for commuters on Symmes Road and Route 9, for approximately 1,000 commuters. The project would be funded in part by all three municipalities.

Parent unit due

By J. SCOTT ORR

SHREWSBURY — In an attempt to unite parents whose children are enrolled in programs of the Monmouth Association for Retarded Citizens (MONARC), Elizabeth McLaughlin is forming a parents association that would keep parents informed and give them a stronger voice in the running of the agency.

Mrs. McLaughlin, whose daughter is enrolled in MONARC's Work Opportunity Center, Long Branch, is hoping the parents association will serve as a liaison between parents and the agency.

She said the association would not necessarily be in support of the 28-day-old strike of 38 of the 50 employees of the agency. "We want to start something very neutral. We want it to go on with or without the strike," Mrs. McLaughlin said.

The strike has served as a unifying factor among parents who have become confused over the complicated issues surrounding the strike. "Everybody's confused about the strike. We hope to be able to clear up some of the confusion," she said.

Although the association is still very much in the planning stages, Mrs. McLaughlin has been receiving positive responses from the parents she has contacted. She said she hopes to have at least a nucleus of the association together by the end of the week.

"Most of the parents think it's a good idea. They want to know what's going and on and they want a voice in it. There's no contact between the parents and the agency now," she said.

"The association could also pool the knowledge of the parents. Some parents with children in one program don't know about the other programs and what they have to offer. Some of the parents feel isolated and alone.

"Many of the parents don't know where their child is going, what they're doing and who's in charge. They want to find out what their children are entitled to," Mrs. McLaughlin said.

"If there's a program the parents particularly like, we'd ask the agency to enlarge it. If there's a problem, we'd tell them we want it stopped. It would be a much stronger voice for children who can't speak for themselves — 50 people talk with much more power than one," Mrs. McLaughlin said.

Currently the most pressing issue facing the agency, the strike, is also a major concern of the parents. Mrs. McLaughlin said the parents association would be made up of parents who support the strike as well as those who oppose it.

"Many of the parents have become disenchanted with the agency since the strike began"

Brookdale guns

The compromise decision also came after Brookdale Degective Sgt. Thomas McCabe, a senate member who voted for it, declared that the public opinion poll should be voided because of what he charged were "gross irregularities" in the election procedures.

Capt. Kenneth Foulks, who heads the Brookdale police, said later that he has misgivings about the stipulation for a Judicial Review Board "because, as written, it seems to have too much to do with personnel decisions.

"But I don't know in what form the president will take the recommendation to the trustees," Capt. Foulks said, "I will have to hear what he has in mind for a review board to do."

As outlined by the ad hoc committee, the board would be appointed by the senate's executive committee and would include one representative each of the non-academic staff, the faculty, administration, police department and student body.

For the past two years, Brookdale has required newlyhired officers to have a psychological evaluation. Mr. Auch said the college intends to mandate that in its police regulations.

In proposing that the police be permitted to wear guns for more night-time hours, Jack Needle, a faculty representative on the senate, said "that is the most dangerous time." He said that weapons locked in the patrol cars at other times "will be available in moments if needed."

In calling for a compromise, George Abel, also a faculty representative, wanred that "the senate can't vote completely contrary to the public opinion poll and keep its credibility."

Det. Sgt. McCabe denounced the poll, declaring that is was presented as a vote, that there had been electioneering within 500 feet of the polls, that ballot secrecy wasn't guaranteed, and that spoiled ballots had been counted.

There were 1,004 votes cast, 654 of them opposed to arming the police 24 hours a day. Students cast 410 of the "no" votes; administrators, 45; non-academic staff, 101, and faculty, 98. There were 16 police department votes, all of them "yes." There are 16 members of the force.

Brookdale police now are permitted to carry guns when the campus is closed, when transporting money or prisoners, and by special authorization of the college president.

In his minority report, Mr. Emberger said the hearings had produced evidence of "a lack of trust in the police...rather than generating a sense of safety and security...the police are responded to with fear and uneasiness."

Noting that because it is a police department, the small Brookdale force is compelled to go off campus to aid the Middletown police, Mr. Emberger suggested it would make more sense for Brookdale to return to having an unarmed security force and "call Middletown police to deal with relatively rare violent crime."

—An Energy Department report sent to Rep. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., suggests that an anticipated presidential decision to lift price controls from U.S. produced crude oil may do very little to increase production. The report suggests that oil companies already make enough money under the existing price structure to provide the incentive for seeking out new supplies.

—The Senate majority leader, Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., called on congressional committees Monday to investigate the nuclear power plant accident. He also indicated he would support proposed legislation giving the NRC more authority to step in and take control of the situation at damaged nuclear power plants.

—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said in a New York speech that the Pennsylvania accident will "slow the momentum of nuclear power development." He said the pause could be used to re-examine the use of nuclear power for energy.

—Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the accident showed current technology can control accidents such as the one at Three Mile Island.

Lewis was seen fleeing the victim's apartment at about 11:45 p.m., when the stabbing was reported.

Sunday night, police were called to Miss Pope's apartment after receiving reports of a domestic dispute with the suspect. No charges were filed in that incident, police said. However, last September, Daniels was charged with assault and battery on Miss Pope, and threatening to take her life, according to police.

Police were called to Miss Pope's apartment at about 11:45 last night by a neighbor.

She was transported to Jersey Shore Medical Center by the township first aid squad, and was pronounced dead a little more than an hour later by Assistant Monmouth County Medical Examiner Dr. Edward Schauer. According to police, she had suffered about nine stab wounds all over her body.

An autopsy will be performed today.

Police are searching for Daniels, who was reported seen leaving the scene at a high rate of speed in a green 1970 Ford Impala.

The suspect is described as a black male, 5-foot-6 and about 170 pounds.

Police said they believe the murder weapon to be a knife, although no weapon has been recovered yet.

According to police, Daniels had been Miss Pope's boyfriend, but the couple had been estranged for some time.

Police believe the victim and her former boyfriend had been quarreling before the incident occurred.

Detective Sgt. James Pierce is conducting the continuing investigation, along with Detective Sgt. James Ward, Detective Robert Freeman from the Monmouth County Prosecutor's office and Patrolman Do6nald Waddell.

JCP&L to pass

permanent closedown of the unit.

But Dr. Nancy Folbre of the New School of Social Research in New York City told a Bayville audience Sunday that "since the Three Mile station may never be used again, the consumer will probably end up paying for Jersey Central's investment."

George H. Barbour, president of the Board of Public Utilities, called the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission and the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission yesterday and asked that they investigate whether the Three Mile Island accident was caused by a defect in plant design.

"The Forked River nuclear plant that JCP&L is building in Ocean County is identical in design to the Three Mile Island plant," said Public Utilities Commissioner Edward H. Hynes. "The plant is only four percent complete and won't be finished until 1983, so there is no need to halt construction."

"But just the same, we want to be absolutely sure that there is no defect in its design that could lead to a tragedy here," he said.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission yesterday asked seven operating nuclear power plants in five states which use Babcock & Wilcox equipment similar to the equipment involved in the Three Mile Island accident to run safety checks and report on their findings within 10 days.

Cleveland Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich asked the Ohio Public Utilities Commission to keep the Davis-Besse facility near Cleveland, which has a Babcock & Wilcox reactor, shut down indefinitely "as a clear and present danger to the city of Cleveland." The plant was shut down Friday for routine maintenance.

And California Gov. Jerry Brown asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to shut down the Rancho Seco plant near Sacramento because it was also built by Babcock and Wilcox. Gov. Brown said he feared the facilities might share "a serious genetic defect."

"Gov. Byrne met with his Cabinet and decided against a precipitous course of action," Mr. Hynes said. "It would certainly be easy and probably politically popular to call for a halt to construction at Forked River, to take the approach Brown took, but it would not be responsible to do so."

The Ocean County Board of Freeholders filed suit last Wednesday against JCP&L, the state and the state Department of Environmental Protection in an attempt to halt construction of the cooling tower at the Forked River plant, which would in effect block construction of the plant itself.

Public Advocate Van Ness asked JCP&L to halt construction of the plant the following day in the wake of the Three Mile Island accident.

"Hopefully, some good will come out of the Three Mile Island accident in that we'll probably get better security and better engineering at nuclear plants from now on," Mr. Hynes said. "We'll make the utilities take longer to build them and they'll be safer.

"As President Carter said, we're going to err on the side of caution rather than haste from now on," he said.

Mr. Hynes said he has never considered nuclear energy to be a "panacea" for America's energy problems.

"I've always been concerned that we have not come up with an answer to the problem of disposing of nuclear waste," Mr. Hynes said. "I regard nuclear energy as one element in an integrated energy system, along with oil, coal and, to a lesser degree, natural gas.

"In the short run, we need power from the 91 nuclear plants in operation or under construction, especially after OPEC raised its prices for the umpteenth time on March 26," he said. "But even the utilities concede that nuclear power won't be an important energy source more than 30 years from now."

New Jersey has two operating nuclear power plants, a JCP&L unit at Oyster Creek in Lacey Township, Ocean County, and a Public Service Electric & Gas Co. plant in Lower Alloways Township, Salem County.

Four more are under construction: JCP&L's Forked River plant and three PSE&G units in Salem County.

Mr. Hynes said the country's energy future lies in solar energy, geothermal energy, wind power and domestic technologies to extract oil from coal and shale.

He called for a reassessment of safety procedures at nuclear plants and for the accelerated development of alternative energy systems.

Cautious hope

Denton said radiation inside the top of the reactor building was measured at 30,000 roentgens an hour, a rate at which a fatal dose would be absorbed in 30 seconds.

The bubble, potentially explosive and lethally radioactive, began shrinking Sunday night. The smaller it got, the less chance there was of a damaging explosion or a catastrophic melt-down.

In addition, one NRC official said that radiation drifting from the disabled powerhouse had dropped to low levels on site. It has been leaking since the reactor's cooling system failed Wednesday.

Technicians toiled to dissolve the bubble's hydrogen by defusing it into the constantly circulating cooling water piped into the reactor. Then, in another building, it bubbles up like soda pop does when a bottle cap is opened, releasing carbon dioxide.

Engineers also fired up one hydrogen recombiner, a device encased in lead bricks that blends oxygen to form water. The contaminated water is then treated and recycled.

The week-old accident has led to the continued evacuation of pregnant women and pre-schoolers from the immediate area. It was estimated that as many as 50,000 people had left the area by Monday, acting out of caution before the crisis seemed to ease.

Amin tells workers: go back to jobs

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin made a public appearance in Jinja, Uganda's second largest city, after a Tanzanian air attack, ordered frightened workers back to their jobs and claimed one of the two air raiders was shot down.

The Ugandan strongman in a broadcast last night also claimed the MiG-21 jets which Tanzania got from the Soviet Union or. China were American-made and flown by "Israelis and their agents."

Residents of Jinja, 50 miles east of Kampala, reported two Tanzanian MiGs dropped three bombs alongside the Libyan Arab Uganda Bank, wounding 15 persons but doing little damage, and then flew off.

The ources, who were reached by telephone, said townspeople were startled when Amin, who had not been seen in public for some days, arrived at an open-air bus terminal and told frightened employees to get back to work.

In a statement broadcast by Radio Kampala last night Amin claimed one of the planes was shot down over Lake Victoria. "The pilot must be having a good time with the crocodiles," he said.

Tanzania has not acknowledged the Jinja raid or a strike Sunday by its MiGs that cratered the main runway of Uganda's international airport at Entebbe.

Begin heartened by reception

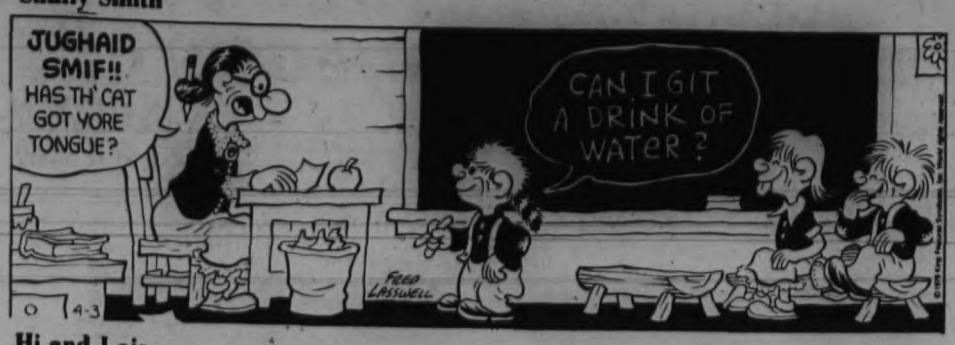

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Manachem Begin, heartened as his reception in Cairo seemed to warm up, confers with President Anwar Sadat today about steps to put their peace treaty to work.

Israeli officials said no agenda was set for the Begin-Sadat meeting, but it was likely to focus on where and when negotiations will begin to define the autonomy the Israelis have promised the Palestinians of the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Begin was to leave for home later today, ending the first state visit by an Israeli leader to an Arab capital after 31 years of conflict in the Middle East.

The prime minister was given a chilly reception when he arrived Monday, but the atmosphere appeared to warm up along with the temperature at he visited the pyramids, placed a wreath at the tomb of Egypt's unknown soldier, and was the guest of honor at a friendly state dinner at the Kubbeh presidential palace.

Your horoscope, birthday

TUESDAY, APRIL 3

Born today, you are an ambitious, determined and highly creative individual who will be a success in almost everything you try. You have an instinct for what will "sell." You know what will go over with the public and what they will reject even for the most illogical reasons. This is a trait which you will probably employ in the interest of gaining a personal fortune and — at least — a modicum of fame.

You are quick to form friendships. However, you are somewhat disinclined to give them the attention they deserve and need and, thus, many of them wither and die. A correspondence secretary would wor': wonders for your social life.

Also born on this date are: Henry Luce, noted editor and publisher; Washington Irving, early American author.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4

ARIES(March 21-April 19) -- Take care that in telling of your exploits you don't sound like a braggart. Don't put others off.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20) -- Postpone travel. If you are given an opportunity for free passage, turn it down. Keep close to home today.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20) -- A money-making scheme may backfire early today. Spend time recovering your losses — and your friends.

CANCER(June 21-July 22) -- Be open to suggestions from loved ones regarding recent setbacks. The answer may come hidden in a joke.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22) -- You may not be ready to give your all to a new project. Make yourself available, however, and try to learn.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- Your instinct for separating the friend from the foe should save you from serious error today. Be glad!

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22) -- Time favors your present activities on the home front. Be ready to sacrifice something else for them.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21) -- A close friend makes possible a material advance you thought lost to you. Show your gratitude at evening.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21) -- A creative endeavor may fall flat today, but not permanently if you are wise enough to pick up the pieces.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- Take care that a demonstration of impatience doesn't cause you to lose precisely what it is you're impatient for.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18) -- Consume only your share of what life has to offer today. Those waiting in the wings could cause you harm.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20) -- Take your own advice. Begin nothing new today. Go over plans with a fine-tooth comb. Work out the "bugs."

Sheinwold's bridge advice

By Alfred Sheinwold

If defeat teaches us lessons, as the sages say, South should have found today's hand instructive.

South took a diamond and the ace of spades, led a heart to the ace and discarded the queen of clubs on the king of spades. Then he took the king of hearts and gave up a heart.

East cashed the queen of spades, defeating the slam.

"Very unlucky," South complained. "Perhaps I should have bid six hearts instead of six notrump."

SHOULD PLAY LOW

After taking the ace of spades South should lead a low heart and play low from dummy. When he gets to dummy with the ace of hearts, South can cash the king of spades to discard the queen of clubs. He can then return to his hand and play the king of hearts, making the slam when the hearts break normally.

The important thing is to give up a heart before establishing the queen of spades.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: ♠ Q 9 8 7 ♡ Q J 3 ◇ 6 2 ♣ J 10 9 8. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. You have just barely enough for a response. Raise partner's major suit rather than show your anemic spades.

Making the Grade: Tests, what do they measure?

BY JOHN VICTOR
For The Associated Press

(Second of Ten Parts)

Students are tested so much and so often that they take tests for granted. For example, an algebra test appears to measure something about algebra, so that few students taking the test ever question whether or not the test does in fact do this.

When I was attending high school in the 1950s, students in my algebra class were required to memorize procedures for solving algebra problems. When it came time to be tested, nearly everyone had memorized the procedures and model problems. In order to get a spread in test scores so that everyone would not get an A or B grade, the teacher made up problems that required considerable calculation. This insured errors. The students who received the A's were the ones who were best at speed arithmetic. So, even though the tests looked like algebra tests, they were actually tests of speed calculation!

Because a test appears to measure intelligence, the ability to do algebra, or writing skills, does not mean that the test actually measures these things. In order to "beat" a test you must go beyond appearances and find out what the test actually measures. (In the case of the algebra tests just mentioned, a student would be more successful on the tests if he or she practiced speed calculation rather than studying basic algebra principles. However, if the student were to practice speed calculation for a math reasoning test the results might be disastrous.)

College entrance examinations such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test—SAT—are really tests of ability rather than of specific academic skills. The purpose of the SAT is to predict how well students are going to do in the college setting. This is much more difficult than measuring specific skills, since it involves the future as well as the here and now.

The questions that appear on the SAT are designed to measure a student's ability to reason through problems. The idea is that college performance depends to some extent on how well a student can "think." The main idea behind the SAT is to predict how well a student is going to do in college rather than testing for specific subject matter knowledge, although many of the items that appear on the SAT are similar to questions found on a test of specific skill.

Tests like the SAT are developed by first having experts in the field of education analyze what aptitudes a student needs to do well in college. For the SAT, these aptitudes are broken down into two main areas: verbal reasoning (ability to read and use words) and math reasoning (ability to use math symbols and math concepts).

Test questions that appear to measure these aptitudes are then written and checked out to see if they are technically correct and can be answered correctly.

The test questions are tried out on students. Only those questions with acceptable statistical properties will be used on the actual SAT. For example, if those who omit a particular question, or select a choice other than the intended correct choice, generally score high on the total test, the question is likely to be ambiguous or otherwise inappropriate for the group.

The last step in the test development process is to see if the test questions can predict which students are going to do well in college and which are not.

As you can see, the process of test writing is part theory and part experimentation. The test makers try to develop tests that measure just the aptitudes in question and eliminate other factors. However, they are not completely successful.

If we could break down what factors make for high test scores on the SAT and other similar tests, it might look like the diagram found in this chapter.

Specific knowledge of math and vocabulary words obviously will affect your score. This is not as important as the ability to set up and solve problems, but it is a factor.

Another factor in scoring well on college entrance examinations is the ability to take multiple-choice type tests. Test designers call this ability "test sophistication," and they try to keep its effects as low as possible. The College Board gives out sample tests and administers a "preliminary" SAT (the PSAT) exam to high school juniors, in order to prepare them for the test situation. Lengthy explanations at the time the test are given to insure that all test takers understand the mechanics of the test. But the fact is that some people are much more skilled than others at dealing with the mechanics of multiple-choice tests.

Random chance or "luck" also plays a part on test scores. We all have our "off days." If we are "unlucky" enough to be tested on such a day, we will score lower as a result. Sometimes the test just happens to cover some specific item that we have just studied or in which we have some expertise. This will, of course, raise our test scores.

Random chance factors have been carefully measured on tests such as the SAT. One way this is done is to give the test to the same group of people on two different occasions (possibly using the same or two different versions of the test) and comparing the scores. The differences are usually around 8 to 10 percent.

Random chance factors become important when comparing test scores that are close together or when comparing two individuals who have similar measured abilities. The closer the test scores are, the more likely the difference between them is due to chance. For example, the difference between a score of 500 and 540 on the SAT is very likely to be a chance occurrence since the student with the 500 score may very well have scored 540 on a different version of the test, on another day.

Contest winners named

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — Winners of the safety essay contest sponsored by American Legion C. Eugene Allen Memorial Post 141 have been announced by Michael Cassone.

They are Wendy O'Ree of St. Agnes Parochial School, first place; Patty Carlstrom of Atlantic Highlands Elementary School, second place, and Bonnie Doyle of Henry Hudson Regional School, third place. Ms. O'Ree and Ms. Carlstrom also received honorable mentions in the county-level contest.

George Himmel Jr. has accepted the position of finance officer, being vacated after 24 years by E. Joseph Bissonnette, who is moving out of state. The post is also supporting Mr. Himmel for the office of department vice commander.

John Dellert, a past commander, is in charge of the legion coloring contest. Winners will receive Americanism medals.

George Gasser, commander, announced plans for a Service Officers' School to be conducted April 20, 21, and 22 at Ft. Dix.
