Stranded baby whale raced to NY Aquarium

By TED LOUD
The Register

ABERDEEN — Police and marine experts embarked on a late night rescue mission Saturday, which involved loading an 800-pound baby pilot whale into a van and driving it to the New York Aquarium.

With its huge tail protruding from the vehicle, the black, 12-foot whale — found stranded on Cliffwood Beach — was raced to the aquarium where it was immediately placed in a large salt water tank.

Driven by township police officers, first aiders, and volunteers from the Stranded Marine Mammal Recovery Unit, the van first had to be stripped of its seats to accommodate the animal.

The baby, whose sex has not yet been determined, is now swimming around in its own private pool at the New York Aquarium on Coney Island, Brooklyn.

While the most recent reports indicate that the young whale is doing well in its new environment, its future is somewhat uncertain.

"My sources tell me that, as of 4 p.m. (yesterday), it was still swimming merrily away," said Sgt. Frank Fletcher of the Aberdeen Police.

But an official of the Stranded Marine Mammal Recovery Unit, located in Brigantine, said he hoped the aquarium would not keep the whale in captivity to use as a "showpiece."

A spokesman for the New York Aquarium could not be reached for comment last night.

Bob Schoelkopf, director of the Recovery Unit, said he is satisfied that the whale did not suffer any serious injuries, and he said the best medicine for the whale would be its return to its natural habitat on the high seas.

On Saturday evening at around 7 p.m., township police received a report of a shark sighting in Raritan Bay, which was referred to the Coast Guard, Fletcher said. He added that he is convinved that the shark sightings were actually the result of people mistaking the whales for sharks.

"In 25 years here, I've never heard of a shark in Raritan Bay," Fletcher said. He noted that he has heard of several whale beachings, and most of them ended in death for the beached whales.

Parkway plan might not ease traffic woes

By BRIAN TRUSDELL
The Associated Press

To every motorist who has finished up a New Jersey shore weekend at a standstill in miles of bumper-to-bumper traffic on the Garden State Parkway, the $400 million five-year plan to expand the roadway should be good news.

But the New Jersey Highway Authority, which runs the 173-mile parkway, isn't sure if the project will be enough.

A strong economy and a push to increase tourism has flooded the parkway with weekend motorists. Increased commercial construction and development in Monmouth and Ocean counties also have turned the parkway into a road used daily by commuters.

There has been a 26 percent increase in use of the parkway since the start of the decade, from 217 million vehicles in 1980 to 274 million last year, and authority officials anticipate a growth rate of 2 percent to 3 percent annually through 1990.

"We hope these tie-ups will be greatly alleviated," said George Zilocchi, executive director of the authority. "We feel we're keeping abreast."

Authority Chairwoman Judith Stanley said she thinks the current problems are largely due to bad timing.

"We've tried to anticipate with traffic," Stanley said. "But all of these things hit us at once."

The most massive jams are reported in two sections, the Irvington-East Orange area on weekdays and Raritan-Toms River area on weekends.

"The population growth of that area has far exceeded the rest of New Jersey. The parkway is being used more and more as a commuter road," Zilocchi said.

"So it's just not a parkway problem, it's a local problem too," Stanley said. "We alway's come off looking like the bad guy, but it's a lot of things out of our control."

The five-year expansion plan, begun in 1984, will add more toll booths to almost all of the parkway's 11 toll plazas and widen 51 miles of roadway. The authority announced Thursday it had awarded contracts to prepare plans for widening the Toms River, Barnegat, New Gretna, Essex and Bergen toll plazas.

Many drivers believe that the traffic congestion could be solved by moving the toll collectors off the roadway and onto exit ramps, but parkway officials don't think so.

"The biggest problem is when you go from three lanes to two," said the authority's traffic engineer, Mary DiPietro. "It doesn't matter about the toll plazas, if you cut your (lane) capacity by 50 percent."

"It's very easy to attack the toll barriers," Zilocchi said. "But the volume of traffic has been the biggest problem."

Zilocchi also noted that the parkway authority must collect revenue at a rate sufficient to meet the obligations set forth in the bonds sold to build and maintain the road. And James Conlon, the parkway's chief engineer, said it would be too costly to move the toll plazas.

Musician lets his oboe speak for his talent

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — Few classical musical lovers realize that Englebert Brenner began his musical career 50 years ago playing the violin and then the saxophone for a dance band before he joined the New York Philharmonic as an oboist.

What they do know, however, is that he was considered one of the world's leading English horn soloists during part of his 42 years with the New York Philharmonic.

Sitting outside his Atlantic Higlands home, the Austrian-born immigrant is quick to joke about his music — his "second language."

"A mouse is walking with her children, when she is confronted by a hungry cat," Brenner muses.

"The cat eyes the mother, then the children, then crouches in the grass, ready to strike. Frantic, the mother races up to the cat, stares it in the eye and barks. As the frightened cat runs off, the mother mouse turns to her children and says, 'I told you it pays to know a second language.'"

"That's what I try to teach my students," Brenner says, "Music can be a second language."

In his long career with the N.Y. Philharmonic, Brenner's second language has taken him to major concert halls in Japan, Europe, the Middle East, and the Soviet Bloc. He has performed in more than 6,000 concerts with virtually every major conductor, from Arturo Toscanini to Pierre Boulez.

Day-care law in New Jersey getting tough

TRENTON (AP) — Tough regulations governing the licensing and operation of New Jersey's day-care centers and nursery schools will take effect next week, in response to growing concern over child abuse at the facilities.

Under the new provisions of the state's existing child care center licensing law, centers may suspend workers under investigation for child abuse or neglect, and must notify the state if a child is believed to have been the subject of abuse, said Geoffrey Perselay, acting human services commissioner.

"The new regulations are designed to prevent abuse in child care centers and to more fully protect the 100,000 children who are enrolled in such programs," he said.

The regulations take effect Sept. 1 and will affect the 1,750 day-care or nursery centers in the state.

The law requires all day care facilities serving at least six children to be licensed every three years.

Another amendment will establish stricter methods for screening potential child abusers who apply for day-care jobs.

Centers will now be required to allow parents of enrolled children to visit the facility at any time without prior notification. They must provide staff members with a list of persons authorized by the parents to visit the child or take him or her from the facility.

The new provisions also require centers to establish advisory committees with parent representatives and set policies that allow direct parental participaation in the activities of the school.

Michael J. Fox

Short but talented

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Michael J. Fox, who rocketed to stardom with the summer hit movie "Back to the Future," says he is undaunted at being a half-foot short of leading-man height.

"Instead of thinking, 'Michael J. Fox is too short to play this role,' directors will say, 'We'll have to change this part. It's written too tall for Michael J. Fox'," the 5-foot-4-inch actor jokes.

Fox, who looks younger than his 24 years and plays an ultra-conservative teen-ager on TV's "Family Ties," said he modeled the character after his older brother.

"My brother is the funniest," said Fox, visiting his family in suburban Burnaby. "Now I tend to get into that dry humor a little bit, too. But just when I think I'm on a roll I go home to visit my family, and my brother puts me under the table."

Looking for Noah's Ark

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Former U.S. astronaut James Irwin has launched a fourth attempt to find Noah's Ark on Mount Ararat, a published report said Sunday.

Turkish officials Saturday allowed Irwin, of Colorado Springs, Colo., to renew his quest after delaying permission due to reported Kurdish guerrilla raids of mountaineering camps on the 16,000-foot mountain.

Irwin and his six-member climbing group planned to reach the peak by Monday and complete their search by Wednesday. They were accompanied by 30 Turkish soldiers for security reasons, according to the the independent daily Hurriyet dispatch.

According to the Bible, Noah, his family, and two of every kind of animal escaped the great flood in an ark that landed on Ararat after 40 days of rain.

Drab Russian television

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Soviet television may be bland and didactic compared to the escapist glitter of American TV, but it reflects the ordinary lives of the Soviet people, novelist Bel Kaufman says.

Ms. Kaufman, who speaks Russian and spent three weeks in the Soviet Union observing its television industry for TV Guide, said the programs are designed to teach rather than entertain.

"Soviet programs appear drab, didactic, repetitious and limited," the author of "Up the Down Staircase" wrote in the Aug. 31 issue of the magazine. "At the same time, I was touched by their unpretentiousness, the warm, personal 'dear friends, we hope you enjoyed our program."

TV cop hospitalized

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Martin Milner's hospitalization after a traffic accident has closed a local production of "Mass Appeal," in which the veteran TV actor was starring.

Milner, former co-star of "Adam-12" and "Route 66," suffered several broken ribs in the collision early Saturday morning. He was listed in fair condition at Munson Medical Center.

Milner, 54, of Del Mar, Calif., was a passenger in a car that was hit by another vehicle near Suttons Bay. The driver of the second car said she lost control after her vehicle skidded on wet pavement, police said.

The Cherry County Playhouse canceled the final three performances of "Mass Appeal" because it had no understudy for Milner's part, a spokesman said.

Happy Birthday George

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George Wallace, who turned 66 on Sunday, said he was surprised that 2,000 well-wishers turned out for his first public appearance since returning home after spinal surgery.

"I didn't know so many people would come to see a man who has had too many birthdays," Wallace told the crowd at Garrett Coliseum on Saturday.

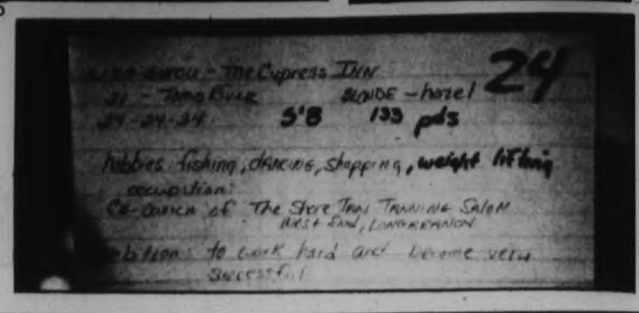

The governor spoke in a firm voice but appeared on stage only five minutes in the sweltering heat. He blew kisses and waved when serenaded with "Happy Birthday."

The birthday celebration doubled as a fund-raiser. Wallace supporters said any money left over from the $5-per-person event would go toward a 1986 gubernatorial campaign should he decide to seek re-election.

Whale

At approximately 8 p.m., Cliffwood Beach residents reported seeing one or more "large fish with prominent dorsal fins" off the Cinder Hill section of the beach, Capt. Jim Moore of the South Aberdeen Emergency Services reported.

The fish seemed to be confused, and what was later identified as a pilot whale became grounded by the outgoing tide, despite the efforts of a number of onlookers to "shoo" it back out to deeper water, according to Moore's account.

Fletcher said the whale appeared to be trying to stay in the shallow water, near a sandy part of the beach just northwest of a rocky seawall.

The veteran police officer organized local onlookers and several fellow policemen to bring buckets to keep the whale's skin wet so that it wouldn't go into shock. Crowds were maintained in order to keep the whale from getting too excited.

Although whales are not naturally aggressive, Schoelkopf said a frightened or injured one could hurt someone with a swipe from its huge tail. Some have even been known to bite, he said.

But this whale — who has not been given a name yet — did not hurt anyone. Both Fletcher and Scheolkopf praised the restraint of onlookers for not taunting the animal.

Shortly after arriving at the scene, Fletcher, who happened to be on duty at the time, had set up a "command post" on the beach. He termed the rescue an "all-hands operation," utilizing police, first aid, fire and public works officials.

When Schoelkopf informed police that the Brigantine facility did not have a tank large enough to accommodate the whale, the New York Aquarium was alerted. Although the aquarium did have a large enough tank, it had no available means of transporting the animal.

As time appeared to be running out, Moore's van, which he said was fortunately "oversize," was stripped to accommodate the whale. Using a makeshift "stretcher" made of a canvass sheet and several poles, the animal was loaded into the van, Fletcher said.

He said it took 20 people to carry the stretcher.

The van arrived at the aquarium at 12:50 a.m. yesterday, and by 1 a.m. "the animal was swimming around like it lived there," according to Moore.

Pilot whales, which grow to 20 feet in length and are believed to live at least 30 years, are black, with white undersides, and very large fins, Schoelkopf said. They are protected under the federal Marine Wildlife and the Endangered Species acts, he said.

"I see a definite intelligence in these animals," Schoelkopf said of both whales and their fellow marine mammals, the dolphins.

Like most species of whales, the pilots are "very family-oriented," Schoelkopf said. He said initial reports of a group of whales being sighted in the bay are consistent with the animals' tendency to travel together, and he suggested that the other whales may have been in the area to help the one in trouble.

In the last eight years, the marine mammal unit has dealt with about 12 whale strandings, but only two of the animals were recovered alive, Schoelkopf said.

Although they frequently travel near the coastline, the whales mostly dwell in an area between 100 and 200 miles offshore.

Schoelkopf said he hoped the aquarium would see fit to transport the whale to a pilot whale habitat area at sea, adding that the creature stood a good chance of finding those of its kind.

Musician

But his fondest memory, Brenner says, is of his first performance on Feb. 27, 1927 at New York's Roxy Theatre under the direction of Erno Rapee. That date, as well as others, have been recorded in photographs, old newspaper clippings, and books, the 80-year-old musician-turned-teacher keeps stored in his third-floor bedroom studio which he sheepishly refers to as "Rogue's Gallery."

Brenner's interest in classical music was sparked by his mother while still a youngster growing up in Vienna. She played the zither and needed someone to accompany her, so she bought her son a fiddle and found a little German violinist for him to study under.

Brenner said he became interested in horns while watching the Six Brown Brothers, a group of saxophonists who dressed as clowns and performed with a traveling circus.

"I got in trouble for following them around one day so my parents said no bicycle for your birthday. Well, I said if I can't have a bike, maybe I can have one of those horns," Brenner said.

He still vividly remembers a day in 1927 when he and his parents caught their first glimpse of the new country as their ship pulled into Ellis Island.

"A man there looked at me, then looked at my father and asked how I was going to make a living. My father just held out his hands and the man let us pass," Brenner recalls.

His father was an interior designer in the upholstery business who had hoped his son would some day follow in his footsteps. But as a teenager, young Brenner was making more money playing in dance bands and orchestral groups than his teachers in the High School of Commerce. Discouraged by his marks, Brenner dropped out of school but returned years later to finally receive a bachelor's of music degree in 1954 from the Manhattan School of Music.

The young musician quickly made a name for himself playing with a local training orchestra and eventually earned himself a place in the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra as an oboist.

His lucky break came at the age of 27 when he landed a job playing for a summer season with the N.Y. Philharmonic.

"On our way to Wilmington, we had to pass through Philadelphia, and Toscanini's personal manager asked me if I wanted to take an earlier train, and stop in Phillie to audition for this guy that he said I might enjoy playing for. I said what the heck, I've got nothing to lose," Brenner says.

Little did the young musician know that his next stop would be Toscanini's motel room.

"I wasn't nervous," Brenner says of the experience, "I was in shape and in the mood to play. The maestro looked me over then said 'get going,' so I played a couple of things for him and afterward he said 'bella voce' which means — good voice."

"I didn't hear anything after that until I was visiting my parents on Christmas eve when a telegram came saying 'the maestro has accepted you as a member of the New York Philharmonic. Some Christmas present," he recalls.

In 1937, Brenner became the Philharmonic's assistant first oboist after a fellow musician became ill. He then had the opportunity to play the English horn at the Metropolitan Center during a Fourth of July concert, when an English hornist had a tooth extracted.

Finally, in 1960, Brenner was named English horn soloist with the Philharmonic and performed under the batons of such legendary conductors as Bruno Walter, Leopold Stokowski, Charles Munch and John Phillip Sousa.

But it is the fiery tempermental genius of Toscanini that conjures up the most favorable memories, Brenner says.

"He (Toscanini) only yelled at the stupid people," he says, "One day, while we were on the road, we asked him why he yelled all the time. He said 'I no get sick. You get sick.' In other words, why should he aggravate himself. He got it all out of his system during rehearsals," Brenner laughs.

Today, when he could retire from professional life, Brenner teaches instrumental music at Kean College in Union as well as "keeping his whistle wet" performing with the Monmouth Symphony Orchestra.

Of the younger musicians, Brenner says, "Many of them are more alert, more up, than the old timers who were raised in conservatories which were pedantic. But today's musicians don't have the wood that we used to. They're too delicate. They don't have the guts," he says.

Parkway

But although widening of lanes is the focus of efforts to relieve the tie-ups, in some places the parkway already has five lanes in each direction and additional widening would include the costly process of condemning large number of homes.

In the Irvington-East Orange area around interchanges 143 to 142 and 147 to 148, two more lanes are expected to be added to the existing six by the end of the year.

Two lanes also are to be added for a 15-mile stretch in the Toms River-Raritan area. Between interchanges 91 and 98, two lanes were tacked on last spring. The section between interchanges 88 and 91 will be increased to six lanes by 1988 or 1989, while plans call for adding two lanes to make a total of eight between interchanges 98 and 103 by 1988.

Zilocchi said the expansion project did not start sooner in part because of the lower rate of use of the parkway during the mid- to late 1970s, when the recession, the energy crisis and skyrocketing gas prices limited car travel.

Looking to future rates of parkway use, Zilocchi said: "It's very difficult to call. What if we get another energy crunch like we did in the mid-70s. We can't go on an enormous unexpected growth. We have to take a wait-and-see attitude."

"We have to pick a middle of the road," added Stanley.

Pesticides can be dumped

FREEHOLD — The county Board of Freeholders last week announced plans for an "Amnesty Day" in which residents can get rid of unwanted pesticides in an environmentally safe manner.

Residents will be able to bring in any amount of old pesticides with "no questions asked," said John E. Westlake, clerk of the freeholder board.

Westlake said the pesticide disposal day will be held some time in October, but he did not provide an exact date.

The amnesty program is made possible by a $5,000 grant to the county Health Department from the state Department of Environmental Protection, Westlake said.

Health officials are concerned that toxic pesticides dumped with the general trash flow at the county Reclamation Center, Tinton Falls, or at other landfills, could penetrate to the groundwater, potentially poisoning drinking water supplies.

DIGEST

Gardening class ready

NEW BRUNSWICK — Home gardeners will have the opportunity to spend a day in college on Saturday, September 21, when Cook College of Rutgers University holds a fall session of its popular Home Gardeners School. Participants will be able to attend five of the 33 sessions offered during the day.

Five new topics this fall include a workshop on fresh flower arranging, along with sessions on pickeling, fermented foods and beverages, solar hot water installation, and wildflower gardening.

Topics in the September program are designed to help gardeners prepare for the winter months. Lawn care, pruning, garden design, fall vegetable gardening, preserving the harvest, winter weather and its effects on plants, indoor plants and their care, and garden photography are among the subjects to be taught by Rutgers faculty and representives from New Jersey horticultural industries.

Registration forms listing topics are available from Monmouth County Extension Office, 20 Court Street, Freehold, New Jersey 07728. Completed forms, indicating choice of topics and a registration fee of $14.00, should be returned by September 11.

Dredging schedule listed

WEST LONG BRANCH — New Jersey Senate Minority Leader S. Thomas Gagliano, R-Monmouth, announced the state Division of Coastal Resource's timetable for dredging projects in northeastern Monmouth County.

The Army Corps of Engineers will receive bids next week for the dredging of the main channels of the Navesink and Shrewsbury Rivers. They are including a section of state channel called the Monmouth Beach Channel. Work should begin shortly after October 1, the senator said.

Five creeks in the Long Branch area will go out to bid early next year, with work to begin in the fall of 1986. They are Branchport Creek, Troutman's Creek, Buxton Creek, Manhasset Creek and Blackjack Creek. The dredge spoils will be used for beach replenishment in Monmouth Beach.

In September of this year, bids will be received for Blackpoint Creek, with work scheduled to begin this winter, the senator said.

The Swimming River dredging project awaits the signing of a disposal site agreement.

Next summer, Town Neck Creek, Little Silver Creek and Rumson Club Channel bids are scheduled to be received. Work should begin that fall.

"Finally, there are no timetables yet for Oceanport, Parker and Blackberry Creeks. But the State is committed to all of these projects, and I intend to continue to monitor progress very closely," he said.

"I feel that dredging our channels is overdue, but I am pleased that many of these projects are finally getting the attention they deserve," Gagliano said.

Energy quiz displayed

WALL — Do you know what percentage of a homeowner's energy bill goes toward heating water, or how much house heat is lost if an attic floor is not insulated properly?

These and other conservation-related questions are included in an easy-to-play computer game that is part of an energy exhibit now on display in the first-floor lobby of New Jersey Natural Gas Company headquarters, here.

The company is located in Monmouth Shores Corporate Office Park, 1415 Wyckoff Road. The public is invited to view the exhibit from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

"In addition to the many conservation programs we offer to consumers, we have developed this display and computer game to make learning about conservation interesting and fun for children and adults," said Senior Vice President Thomas J. Kononowitz.

Several sections of the exhibit feature information about weatherstripping, caulking and insulation, and tell how a homeowner can take advantage of the home energy audits offered by New Jersey Natural Gas.

The home audit includes a complete basement-to-attic examination and provides a computer readout of the findings and what steps can be taken to improve a home's energy efficiency.

Organizations interested in booking the exhibit may call 938-1260 for more information.

Man charged in robbery

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS — Police arrested an 18-year-old man in connection with a robbery here August 19.

Atlantic Highlands police said Vincent Tedesco, 18, of 28 Fifth Street, Highlands, was arrested and charged with one count burglary and one count criminal mischief.

His arrest came, the police said, after Tedesco allegedly entered a home on the west side of Atlantic Highlands through a window in an apparent burglary attempt.

However, police said, once inside the house he was encountered by the owner's daughter, who prompted him to jump back out the window and flee the scene.

Tedesco was released after posting $500 bail.

Mortgage warning aired

WOODBRIDGE — H. Daniel Pincus, president of the New Jersey Builders Association, warned recently that stricter mortgage underwriting requirements announced by the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), threaten to disqualify thousands of lower-income home seekers from the housing market.

The new requirements would make it more difficult for consumers to qualify for conventional mortgages and required higher incomes for home buyers to obtain five percent downpayment loans.

"Over the years, Fannie Mae has made it possible to house literally millions of families all across the nation who would never have otherwise been able to own their own home. Fannie Mae has been instrumental in helping make America the best-housed country in the world," the NJBA president said.

Water company to expand Neptune plant

By TED LOUD
The Register

NEPTUNE — Monmouth Consolidated Water Co. officials have announced plans to begin tapping water from the proposed Manasquan River Reservoir system as early as 1987, three years before the reservoir is completed.

Water from the Manasquan River is needed to meet the growing demands of county residents, particularly in the Bayshore and the shore communities of the southern part of the county, said Paul Burdan, vice president and general manager of Monmouth Consolidated.

Officials from the state Water Supply Authority devised the Manasquan Reservoir project, scheduled for completion in 1990, to ease the county's reliance on dwindling groundwater supplies.

Many Bayshore and coastal communities have traditionally relied on drilling wells to meet their water supply needs. However, state environmental and water supply officials have warned that an over-reliance on wells has depleted groundwater supplies, and they have called for a more extensive use of surface water supplies.

Several Bayshore communities, including Keyport and Aberdeen, have been forced to shut down some wells because of salt intrusion, one result of tapping groundwater supplies too much. The underground aquifers also do not replenish themsleves quickly enough to keep up with demand, Water Authority officials have noted.

While the reservoir, which will be able to hold five billion gallons, will not be ready for at least five years, water collection facilities will be installed by 1987 on the banks of the river, at a point in Wall Township, Water Supply Authority officials said.

The authority also plans to build its own water treatment plant, and sell the treated water to local and regional utilities authorities throughout the county.

But Burdan said Monmouth Consolidated customers would realize a cost savings if the company used its own treatment equipment.

"Buying raw water and treating it ourselves at our expanded Jumping Brook Treatment Plant is estimated to cost $1,200 per million gallons, as opposed to $1,530 per million gallons if we buy treated water from the authority," Burdan said.

Plans call for doubling the capacity of the water company's Jumping Brook Treatment Plant, here, within two years, Monmouth Consolidated officials announced at a press conference here last week.

By 1990, the plant will be able to treat four times as much water as it currently handles, company officials said.

In the meantime, to protect the county's water customers from the effects of a drought, the company is also constructing a 2 million-gallon-a-day well at its Glendola Reservoir, Wall, Burdan said. In addition to Glendola, the company also operates the Swimming River Reservoir, surrounded by Middletown, Colts Neck and Holmdel.

Phase 1 of the treatment plant expansion will cost $4 million, Burdan said, adding that the first part of the expansion will allow the plant to draw 5 million gallons per day from the Manasquan.

Three consulting firms will soon place bids for Phase 1, which will increase the plant's capacity from 10 million to 20 million gallons per day.

However, the utility company must receive approval from the state Department of Environmental Protection to draw the water from the Manasquan. That approval is expected within the next few weeks, Burdan said.

Last week, representatives from the three consulting firms reviewed tentative plans presented by John S. Young Jr., director of planning and engineering concepts at American Water Works Service Co. Inc., a subsidiary of Monmouth Consolidated.

The three firms — Camp, Dressor & McKee Inc., Edison, Havens & Emerson, Saddlebrook, and Malcolm Pirnie Inc., Paramus — are expected to submit proposals for the Phase 1 construction by Sept. 17.

The improvements, which will also allow the plant to treat more water from existing surface supplies, will include the building of a temporary intake structure on the Manasquan and a pumping station at Hospital Road in Neptune. At the Old Corlies Road treatment plant, plans call for construction of chemical feed and water processing equipment, pumping facilities, a clear well for storing treated water, and related structural changes.

Construction is set to begin in June and completion is set for may 1987. Phases 2 and 3, planned for 1988 and 1989, will increase capacity to 30 million gallons per day, and Phase 4, which will put capacity at 40 million gallons per day, will be completed by 1990, according to current plans.

Two weeks ago, Burdan anounced plans to pipe Monmouth Consolidated water from the Swimming River Reservoir to Marlboro and Manalapan, two communities which rely completely on groundwater and which will not be served by the Manasquan River Reservoir.

Monmouth Consolidated currently serves about half the county's residents, with hook-ups to over 66,000 households and businesses, or about a quarter of a million people in 23 communities, Burdan said.

Three arrests, 2 officers hurt in family spat

EATONTOWN — Three people were arrested here last night after a family argument led to the injury of two borough police officers, police reported yesterday.

Police said Charles L. Thorpe, and his wife, Dolores J. Thorpe, of 97 Lewis Street, were arrested on various charges including the aggravated assault of two Eatontown police officers. Mr. Thorpe's sister, Elizabeth B. Kingery, who was visiting from Fort White, Florida, was arrested and charged with interfering with a police officer making an arrest.

Police said Patrol Sergeant Reginald Grant was treated at Monmouth Medical center for a concussion and head lacerations requiring seven stitches after he was allegedly shoved into the back of his patrol car by Mr. Thorpe. Patrolman John Cleary sustained a bruise under the eye after being hit by Mrs. Thorpe, police said.

According to police, Mrs. Thorpe called police after she and her husband became involved in a fight after a family argument. When police arrived at the scene, police said, Mrs. Thorpe and her husband injured the officers while resisting their arrests.

As the arrests were taking place, police said, Kingery interfered.

West Long Branch, Oceanport, and Shrewsbury police were then called to the scene to assist in the arrests.

In addition to the aggravated assault of a police officer, Mr. Thorpe has been charged with the assault of his wife, criminal mischief to a police vehicle, and other pending charges.

Mrs. Thorpe, who has also been charged with the aggravated assault of a police officer, faces other charges including the simple assault of her husband, interfering with an arrest, and criminal mischief.

Mrs. Thorpe and Kingery were released late Saturday night and Mr. Thorpe was released yesterday morning.

NJ cable office issues warning on VCR units

NEWARK — The Office of Cable Television of the Board of Public Utilities is continuing to receive complaints from customers who have bought television sets or video cassette recorders (VCR's) advertised as "cable ready" and find they still need additional equipment to receive a desirable service.

Board president Barbara A. Curran urged that cable subscribers check with their cable operator before buying sets with cable-ready features, particularly with a "cable-ready" remote control feature, to make sure they will be receiving the desired value from the added expense.

"Cable operators must also prepare to give knowledgeable answers to customers on the usefulness of cable-ready sets on their systems as part of their service obligations," she said.

So-called "cable-ready" television sets, now the most common type sold, contains equipment within the set to convert cable signals to television channel frequencies — in effect, built-in converters. The operators of some systems in New Jersey, however, employ a special frequency plan, which "offsets" the standard television frequencies somewhat. Some "cable-ready" sets cannon accommodate the offset frequencies, and an additional converter may be required.

More sigificantly, many cable systems operators in New Jersey are resorting to various scrambling techniques to disort the signals to cable customers for the optional pay-channels, such as Home Box Office and Showtime.

The scrambling techniques are considered preferable by these cable operators to the utility pole filters, or "traps," initially used to control the flow of pay-cable signals, to provide better security against cable service thieves. Such scrambling techniques, however, render so-called "cable-ready" television sets or video cassette recorders inoperable.

She sees the light through radial keratotomy

By ARMANDO MACHADO

NEPTUNE — Nora Witting has seen the last of her contact lenses and glasses, and she's glad of it.

Witting, 29, became one of a growing number of people who have undergone radial keratotomy (RK), a surgical procedure for correcting nearsightedness.

The operation, first successfully performed in The Soviet Union in 1974, has become widespread here, with about 200,000 operations performed in the U.S. in the last three to four years, according to Dr. Theodore Perl, the West Orange ophthalmologist who performed Witting's operations.

Before her operations this summer, Witting had 20/200 vision on her right eye and 20/175 vision on her left eye, she said. She now has perfect 20/20 vision.

"I feel like this is a miracle," said Witting, a part-time waitress who also models with her two small sons. "I just think that it's fantastic. I think the techniques are very advanced." She had her left eye operated June 25, and the right eye six weeks later. Each operation lasted about 20 minutes.

She said she wasn't really nervous the first time, just exited that her vision would improve. But by the second time "sunk into me that a knife was actually being (inserted in) my eyes." However, she felt no pain because of a local anesthesia, she said.

The anxiety was worth it. "Now I get up in the morning and I can see across the room," she said.

Witting lives with her husband, William, a Holmdel police officer, and their two sons, Jay, 5, and Matthew, 18 months.

"At first I was skeptical," said Mr. Witting about his wife's operations. "But with the amount of experience (Dr. Perl) had, it alleviated my skepticism. He's had no problem at all with his patients."

Mrs. Witting's mother, Kay Mahan, Hazlet superintendent of recreation, said that before her daughter's operations (at St. Barnabas Medical Center, Livingston), "It was nerve racking; you never stop being a mother. I was just as nervous as I was when she had an appendectomy when she was a little girl." Mahan said, however, that she was "tremendously relieved" afterward.

According to a report prepared for the Metropolitan Eye Institute for Corneal and Refractive Surgery, West Orange, radial keratotomy, performed on an outpatient basis, involves making four to 16 incisions in the cornea, the clear portion of the eye that covers the iris and pupil. There is immediate improvement the patient's vision, but it takes up to 90 days for the incisions, invisible to the the naked eye, to fully heal.

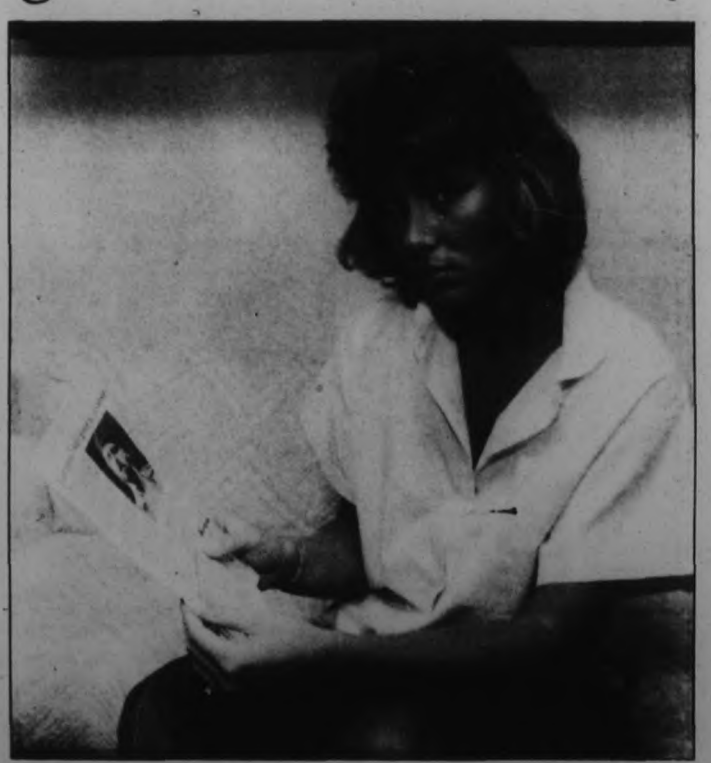

Nearsightedness (myopia), occurs when the cornea becomes steeper than normal, the report says. After RK, the cornea, which functions like a camara lens, flattens as the incisions heal. The flattened cornea permits images to fall directly on the retina, the nerve tissue in back of the eye which sends messages to the brain through the optic nerve.

In myopia, the corneal curvature is greater than normal, and the images fall in front of the retina, the report says.

Dr. Perl, Eye Institute director, said RK "has the potential of being one of the most commonly performed operations," noting there have been close to 400,000 RKs (on individual eyes) performed worldwide — mostly in this country and the Soviet Union.

The main risk in RK is infection — as in all operations — which may lead to partial or complete blindness, according to Dr. Perl. However, there have been no known cases where complete blindness occurred, but there been about six occurences of partial blindness, he said. Infection occurs in four of out of 100,000 RKs, he said.

The average cost for radial keratotomy is $1,500 per eye. However, most insurance companies do not cover it because it's considered cosmetic surgery.

D.C. homeless may lose shelter for 800

WASHINGTON (AP) — Activist Mitch Snyder said yesterday the Community for Creative Non-Violence will appeal a judge's ruling that the federal government may shut down a crumbling 800-bed shelter for homeless people on Aug. 31.

"We're seeking an injunction to keep them from throwing us out," Snyder said. "If the government's contention that they have enough beds to send these people to is false, the case is effectively resolved because there won't be a building there anymore."

Snyder said his group planned to file the appeal today.

Meanwhile, CCNV had to contend with a more immediate crisis yesterday when power was shut down in the building near Capitol Hill by crews working on electricity in the area.

Potomac Electric Power Co. officials said the General Services Administration, which owns the building, gave permission for the electricity to be shut off for the day. The city government provided emergency generators to light the building for those who entered in the early evening. Power was to be restored last night.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey said Friday he could not step in against the government because the matter no longer rests in his court.

Richey had said earlier last week that the Department of Health and Human Services would have to find alternative space for the residents of the CCNV-run shelter before it can move them from the shelter. But his order Friday, although sharply critical of the government's efforts to find the space, conceded that he could no longer intervene.

"He permitted them to throw us out in the street," said Snyder. "It's just another instance of someone washing their hands of us."

Dixon Arnett, HHS deputy undersecretary, said the government has "tentatively" identified 780 alternative beds for shelter residents — a claim hotly disputed by city officials and local groups representing the homeless.

Reagan informed for FBI

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — A California newspaper reports that FBI records show President Reagan served as a confidential informant in his acting days, but the White House said yesterday the records contain nothing new.

The San Jose Mercury News said the documents, which the newspaper obtained through a freedom of information request, showed that Reagan kept FBI agents informed about suspected pro-communist influences in the Screen Actors Guild and other Hollywood organizations.

Albert R. Brashear, deputy White House press secretary, said he was told by White House Counsel Fred Fielding that the documents contained no information that had not previously been public knowledge.

Brashear said the FBI told him that Reagan's involvement with the bureau was "very minor" and added, "I'm not sure this reference to confidential informant is quite what it sounds like."

In Washington, FBI spokesman Manuel Marquez said he had not seen the documents, but questioned the description of Reagan as an informant. "People give us information all the time," Marquez said.

The Mercury News said the records showed that Reagan and his first wife, actress Jane Wyman, provided the FBI with the names of actors who they believed were members of a faction sympathetic to communists.

In his own memoirs, Reagan has written of his efforts, as president of the Screen Actors Guild, to rid the union of communist influences.

The newspaper said that in one FBI interview contained in the documents, Reagan criticized attempts to fire suspected communists from film work.

The Mercury News said the first recorded FBI interview with Reagan was on Nov. 18, 1943, while Reagan, 32, was serving in the Army Air Corps Motion Picture Unit.

It said the interview was connected with investigation of an unidentified person suspected of sympathy with the German Nazis. The FBI said Reagan told of nearly "coming to blows" with this person because of anti-Semitic remarks at a cocktail party.

After World War II, when the FBI and the House Un-American Activities Committee were investigating communist influence in the film industry, Reagan and Miss Wyman told the FBI there two groups within the Screen Actors Guild that on all questions of policy "follow the Communist party line," the Mercury News said.

Reagan was elected president of the guild in 1947, the year HUAC held hearings on suspected communist influence in Hollywood.

The HUAC hearings polarized those working in the motion picture industry between supporters and opponents of 10 writers who refused to testify and became known as the Hollywood 10.

In his 1947 testimony before HUAC, Reagan said: "There has been a small group within the Screen Actors Guild which has consistently opposed the policy of the Guild Board."

County's beaches OK, state inspects others

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Associated Press

A state environmental official said yesterday that a decision would be made this week on when to allow bathing again in the sewage-polluted waters off the southern New Jersey coast.

Meanwhile, water samples showed that ocean waters off Monmouth County are safe, following a similar sewage contamination scare that curbed swimming on Friday, said Richard Dewling, deputy commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Dewling said that one-third of the about 20 water samples taken from a five-mile stretch of beach along the Wildwoods and Lower Township in Cape May County indicated contamination with fecal coliform bacteria above the acceptable limit.

He said conditions could temporarily deteriorate because the heavy rainfall yesterday placed additional pressure on the already owerworked sewage system in North Wildwood where the contamination originated.

Dewling said the DEP, the state Department of Health and Cape May County officials would determine today when the warnings against ocean bathing will be lifted in the contaminated area.

Anyone swimming in the waters tainted with the bacteria risks suffering nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and infections of the skin, eyes, ear, nose and throat, officials have said.

Baby abandoned in plastic bag

PATERSON (AP) — Authorities continued their search on yesterday for the mother of a newborn who was found alive in a plastic bag hidden in high weeds here, police said.

The male child, nicknamed "Baby Doe" at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center, was in stable condition Sunday, said a hospital spokeswoman.

The child was found in a debris-strewn lot on Friday, said Sgt. John Cotte yesterday. Cotte said a passer-by heard the cries of the baby and notified authorities.

The infant was 3 days old when found, he said.

The infant was dressed in a jumper, and was found in a green garbage bag, said Cotte, who added that police were checking local hospitals for assistance in locating the child's mother.

Would-be Miss N.J. appeals case

TRENTON (AP) — The Miss America Pageant is only two weeks away, but the runner-up in the state beauty contest will try one more time to wrest the title away from reigning beauty queen.

Second place finisher Laura Ann Bridges contends that Miss New Jersey, Toni Georgiana, should not be allowed to represent the Garden State in the national finals in Atlantic City in September because she was not eligible to compete in the state contest in the first place.

But a Hudson County Superior Court judge upheld Miss Georgiana's right to wear the crown.

Miss Bridges' appeal is scheduled to be heard by a state appeals court tomorrow.

Miss Bridges, a dental student at Fairleigh Dickinson University, has said Miss Georgiana falsely represented herself as a student at Trenton State College. She also charged that Miss Georgiana, until last week a Pennsylvania resident, only enrolled in a two-week health course at the school to become eligible for the New Jersey pageant.

But Miss Georgiana's attorney said his client complied with pageant rules which simply require a contestant to be a "bona fide" college student.

Miss Georgiana moved to New Jersey last week from Philadelphia and has said she plans to enroll at Rutgers University.

College chemical fire injures 10

PEMBERTON (AP) — Ten firefighters sustained minor injuries yesterday while putting out a fire in a cement chemical storage vault at Burlington County College, authorities said.

The fire broke out about 9 a.m. in a 10-foot by 20-foot cement chemical storage vault where volatile chemicals are kept, said college spokesman Richard Pokrass.

Smoke and flames from the fire in the Lewis Parker College Center building were spotted by a passerby in a car who notified police, Pokrass said.

Police Detective Sgt. Hector Gonzalez said the four-alarm fire was contained to the vault and the fire was put out within an hour after firefighters arrived.

"The fire is believed to be accidental," he said. "The origin has not been determined yet."

Six firefighters were taken at about 11 a.m. to Memorial Hospital of Burlington County, where they were treated for such things as smoke inhalation, eye irritation and minor burns of the wrist, said a nurse who would not identify herself.

They were released within two hours and four more firefighters were brought to the hospital at about 4 p.m., she said. They also were expected to be released after treatment for minor injuries, the nurse added.

The injured ranged in age from 18 to 38 and were from Pemberton and Browns Mills.

Pokrass said the building was empty when the fire broke out.

He said the state Department of Environmental Protection was called to the scene.

"They've been given a complete list of chemicals in the vault," he said.

Registration for fall classes was scheduled to occur in the building tomorrow and Wednesday, but Pokrass said it might be moved to another building.

Police make gruesome discoveries

MOUNTAINSIDE (AP) — A search begun after a police officer discovered a severed human leg in a plastic bag on a Union County park roadside Saturday turned up two more garbage bags containing body parts — a head and two arms, authorities said.

"We're not yet able to determine if they're from the same body," said county spokesman Frank Goodstein.

He said the discovery could be linked to the finding earlier this week in a remote area of nearby Union of a dismembered woman's body.

A county police officer patrolling the 2,000-acre Watchung Reservation Saturday found the leg at about 2 p.m. after smelling a foul odor and stopping his car to investigate.

A search by about 25 law officers and the county sheriff department's canine unit discovered the head four hours later in a wooded area off another park road in Scooth Plains — about one mile from where the leg was discovered, he said.

A half hour later, a bloodhound found a third plastic bag about ½ mile from where the head was found, this one containing two arms, said Goodstein.

He said the search was called off at nightfall and would resume Sunday morning, adding that the extremities were removed to the state medical examiner's office for an autopsy.

The spokesman said all three bags were close enough to park roads to have been thrown quickly from a vehicle.

Because of certain similarities with the discovery Wednesday of a dismembered woman's body in Union, detectives from that township were called in to assist investigators from the county police and prosecutor's office in the probe, said Goodstein.

The woman's body, which was found in several garbage bags in a remote area often used for illegal dumping near the Kean College campus, has not yet been identified, said Union Township police officer James Foster.

6 Jersey lawmakers are lawyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six current New Jersey representatives came to Congress practicing a profession that the House ethics committee and the American Bar Association warn must be separated carefully from law-making.

They are lawyers.

All of them say they have abandoned or sharply curtailed their practices since becoming congressmen, and none reported earning significant sums of money as lawyers last year. Most earned nothing.

The six say Congress leaves little time for practicing law.

"Trying to be a father, husband and member of Congress is quite enough. And even if I did have time to practice, I feel I owe fulltime loyalty to my job as a member of Congress," said Rep. James Courter, the Hackettstown Republican and lawyer.

Attorneys in Congress also contend with ethical restraints designed to prevent lawmakers from using their positions to benefit their legal careers — or the fortunes of their old firms.

The ABA, for example, admonishes that lawyers-turned-lawmakers should not let their firms bear their names unless they continue "actively and regularly practicing law as a member of the firm."

Courter and Frank Guarini, the Jersey City Democrat, have retained their names on their firms' letterheads. Rep. William Hughes, an Ocean City Democrat, is listed as "of counsel" to his old firm.

Courter and Guarini say they no longer practice law, but provide advice to their firms' partners. Hughes says he devotes "one or two hours on a Saturday or Sunday" to a handful of estates he has handled for years.

Democratic Reps. James Florio of Pine Hill, Peter Rodino of Newark and Robert Torricelli of Hackensack say they have left their old firms, and do not provide advice or practice law anymore. None of the three reported any income from law practice last year.

House rules allow members to practice law. The American Enterprise Institute, a conservative research group here, says 200 of the 435 representatives were lawyers in 1983.

The three New Jersey congressmen still affiliated with firms say the connection creates no conflict of interest for them.

Up $20 million in county

Property taxes seen rising 4%

By The Associated Press

Property taxes in New Jersey's 21 counties are expected to be about 4 percent higher this year than in 1984, according to preliminary statistics compiled by the state Division of Taxation.

For the last few years, the property tax rate has been going up slightly each year, partly because of inflation, higher energy costs and skyrocketing insurance premiums for municipalities, division spokesman Samuel Temkin said yesterday.

According to the preliminary figures, the total property tax bill in all 21 counties is $5.3 billion, up $233 million from last year.

About $2.8 billion go for school taxes, up $100 million. County governments receive $1.3 billion, up $56 million. Local governments get $1.3 billion, up $67 million.

Local property taxes to support county governments have increased 4.5 percent, while the tax money spent on local governments went up by 5 percent. Property tax money used to support local public schools increased by 3.7 percent.

At the same time, $4.4 billion in state aid are going to the 21 counties, most of the 567 municipalities and all of the 605 school districts in the current fiscal year.

Officials have said the additional money is needed to pay for higher wages, expanded services and state laws requiring local and county governments to pay for certain programs.

Temkin said the totals being tabulated by the Local Tax Branch of the Division of Taxation might change because of court cases in Atlantic County and partial returns from Hudson and Burlington counties. However, he said, the reflect the local property tax situation in the state for 1985.

The county-by-county property tax totals are:

Atlantic County (pending the Atlantic City court case) $200 million, up $19 million; Bergen County $803 million, up $64 million; Camden County $308 million, up $14 million; Cape May County $99 million, up $9 million; Cumberland County $61 million, up $3 million; Essex County $601 million, up $20 million; Gloucester County $115 million, up $8 million; Hudson County (pending North Bergen budget review) $316 million, up $12 million.

Also, Hunterdon County $75 million, up $6 million; Mercer County $214 million, up $7 million; Middlesex County $476, up $29 million; Monmouth County $386 million, up $20 million; Morris County $393 million, up $30 million; Ocean County $272 million, up $18 million.

Also, Passaic County $288 million, up $13 million; Salem County $30 million, up $2 million; Somerset County $202 million, up $15 million; Sussex County $90 million, up $5 million; Union County $386 million, $23 million; and Warren County $51 million, up $3 million.

Indians say thanks to cons for toys

SOUTH AMBOY (AP) — Members of Indian tribes from the United States and Canada sang tribal chants and performed traditional dances for crippled children here yesterday as part of a goodwill mission to offer thanks for donated toys that went to the tribes' children.

"We wanted to thank the people here for what they've done for our people," said Betty Owens, a delegate from the Cherokee nation in Miami, Okla. "We've come to share some of our culture with New Jersey."

The tribes recently received several large truckloads of toys collected by inmates at Rahway State Prison. The toys were distributed by Elks club members as part of the ongoing Ayuda Toy Drive.

At the invitation of the Elks, Indians representing the tribes came to New Jersey for an eight-day goodwill tour that started Friday.

About 75 Indians appeared yesterday at an annual picnic for crippled children sponsored by the Sayreville Elks Club.

Among the tribes was the Mohawk nation from St. Regis, Quebec, which brought along the Standing Arrow singing group and the Mohawk Traveling College, said Robert Skidders, a chief of council of the tribe.

"We're showing our appreciation for the toys we received," he said. "What it shows is that prisoners are capable of helping other people."

The groups delighted the 65 children by singing intertribal chants and performing ritual dances. Many of the children and Elks members joined in some of the dances.

The performers wore traditional tribal attire, including headdresses, colorfully beaded buckskin outfits and moccasins.

The Indians brought with them artifacts, including jewelry, dolls and leather goods.

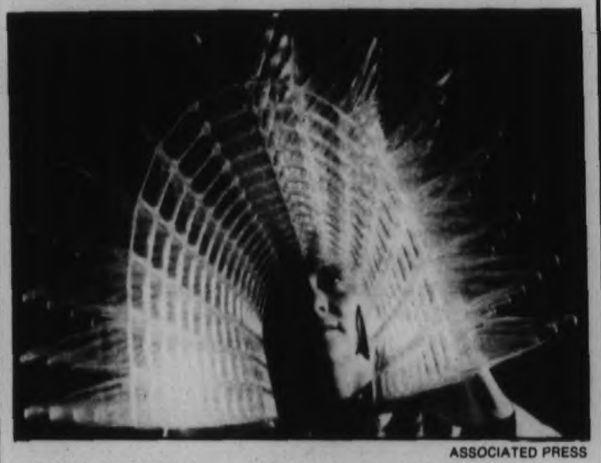

Participants said the visit has helped dispel some of the stereotypes of North American Indians created by movie makers.

"Some people know only what they've seen in the movies," said Ms. Owens. For example, she said, her group was greeted by someone who asked them what kind of tepee they lived in.

For the remainder of the tour, the Indians will visit Atlantic City, the Six Flags Great Adventure amusement park in Jackson Township and New York City and go on a fishing trip, said club member James Gillette.

Other Indian tribes that came to the state were the Sioux of South Dakota and the Mohawk, Cheyenne, Kickapoo, Ottowa, Creek, Wyandot, Seneca, Shawnee, Iowa, Comanche and Apache in Oklahoma, said Gillette.

The Ayuda Toy Drive has been sponsored for seven years by the prisoners and the Elks, who donated about 150,000 toys to the North American Indians, said Rick Rowe, an inmate involved in the effort.

Klansman wants rallies in state cities

By NICHOLAS G. KATSARELAS
The Associated Press

NEWARK — The president of the NAACP chapter of this city whose populace is 58 percent black says a Ku Klux Klan leader who is running for governor will be "taking his life into his own hands" if he holds a planned rally here.

"There are going to be people who see (his appearance) as an affront, and they would not be able to stand idly by and watch this man," Keith Jones of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Friday.

Richard M. Bondira, a chaplain of the Invisible Empire Knights of the KKK, says he wants to hold political rallies in Trenton, Newark and Metuchen, and a full-fledged Klan rally in the Warren County community of Oxford, where he lives.

The 34-year-old steelworker has not yet received a response from Trenton officials, while Metuchen officials rejected his request to hold a Sept. 14 rally at town hall.

The Newark Law Department sent Bondira an application for his planned Sept. 12 rally in the state's largest city, but the local NAACP chapter is working to stop the gathering.

"We are clearly against his coming to a city that is 58 percent black and more than 20 percent Hispanic," said Jones, who added that he has asked Mayor Kenneth Gibson to prohibit the appearance.

"He'll be taking his life into his own hands," said Jones.

Metuchen Mayor John Wiley said Friday there is no ordinance that permits political demonstrations at town hall, and noted that there has been a "tradition" against allowing such rallies.

But an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union questioned whether the rejection would stand up in court.

"Tradition is not law," said Steve Latimer, president of the New Jersey chapter of the ACLU.

"If there is an ordinance that says nobody shall hold a political meeting at town hall and it applies across the board to him as well as to Democrats, Republicans, liberals, then town council is within its rights," he said.

"But if it's merely a tradition without the force of law and he promises to hold a rally in a reasonable time, place and manner, then I don't think they can deny him simply because of the fact that he's a Klansman," he added.

Repeated telephone calls to Bondira's Oxford home went unanswered Friday.

Bondira said earlier this week that he may decide instead to hold a rally on private property, or canvass door-to-door in Metuchen, where he grew up and lived for 22 years.

"We're not looking for trouble for anyone," he said.

John Pidgeon, an attorney for Newark, said the city's Law Department would review Bondira's application for a rally permit and make a recommendation to the Division of General Services, which will ultimately make the decision.

He would not say whether he thought the application would be approved, but said attorneys for New Jersey's largest city would have to consider whether Bondira's presence would incite a disturbance.

Jones said there would invariably be individuals attending the rally who would be offended by Bondira.

"There are going to be people who see (his appearance) has an affront, and they would not be able to stand idly by and watch this man," he said.

He added that Bondira "would be taking his life into his own hands" if he appeared in Newark.

Bondira said three of his intended appearances would be political, but the one in Oxford would be a tradional Klan rally with the flowing white robes, hoods and a cross burning.

Town council members told him they are considering his request. Its counsel, John Coyle, could not be reached for comment on Friday.

GROUNDED TWICE — Joe Engle, commander of the shuttle mission, says "we'll do it tomorrow" as he and his crew wait for problems to be resolved.

Computer glitch KO's Discovery's launching

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A spacecraft computer failure scrubbed yesterday's second attempt to launch space shuttle Discovery and NASA decided to let two days pass before trying again.

The delay reduces NASA's opportunities to catch and repair an $85 million satellite that is drifting lifelessly in a low orbit.

"It goes without saying the team is pretty disappointed in having been denied two days in a row from getting this very ambitious mission going," said Bob Sieck, launch operations director of the Kennedy Space Center.

A start yesterday had been possible for the satellite delivery and repair mission. But Sieck and the Johnson Space Center's Arnold Aldrich said the extra day is needed to inspect ducts between low and high pressure pumps on the shuttle's three main engines to ensure that the plumbing has not been deformed in on-again, off-again cooling and warming.

The shuttle's fuel, liquid hydrogen, is chilled to 423 degrees below zero.

"Each time the duct is filled with cryogenic fluid it gets very cold," said Aldrich. He said any deformation in the plumbing could restrict the flow between the pumps and "the engines could go into a shutdown."

It was only the second time in the shuttle program that launches were scrubbed back to back. Sieck said the launch teams were polled and said they would like to try again today.

But, he said, "they could use the rest and that's one of the advantages of going the 48-hour turnaround."

On their eight-day flight, the astronauts are to release three communications satellites — one per day beginning on the day of launch — then chase after the disabled satellite, called Syncom, in an attempt to repair it in orbit.

Originally, NASA had said there was only a four-day period, beginning Saturday, in which the shuttle could be launched on the proper path to catch up with the satellite. Since then, computer studies have extended that period through Wednesday.

Sieck called the weather outlook "marginal" for tomorrow and uncertain for Wednesday because of developing tropical weather in the Caribbean.

If Discovery can't be launched by then, officials said they would fly a shortened mission to deploy the three commercial satellites. But the repair of the Syncom satellite would be abandoned, possibly forever.

Bad weather forced a halt in the first attempt Saturday to launch Discovery and was a source of concern yesterday until the computer problem rendered it irrelevant.

The countdown was stopped at the 9-minutes-to-launch mark when it became apparent that Discovery's backup computer had suffered a hardware failure. That meant the fault was not in the device's program — which might have been fixed — but with its machinery.

A computer, the size of a suitcase, was taken from sister ship Challenger and installed in the Discovery middeck.

Four identical primary computers aboard the shuttle process information that governs every detail of the ship's operations from liftoff to landing. In essence, the computers "vote" among themselves and if one disagreees with the others, it is cut out.

A tie brings in a fifth computer to decide, and it was that backup that failed. NASA rules forbid a launch with a malfunctioning computer. If the backup fails in flight, the astronauts can pull a spare from a locker and plug it in.

The problem showed up simultaneously in Mission Control and in the spacecraft. In Mission Control an "I failed" light flashed on consoles. In the spacecraft, commander Joe Engle spotted an "X" on his display screen.

Mission Control "dumped" the computer's memory, reloaded it and reactivated the computer. It gave the same indications.

"It would be my recommendation that we scrub the launch," Engle said.

"All indications are we have a hardware problem," said Mission Control.

Minutes later, Sieck called off the attempt.

New Jersey suffragette recalled in ceremonies

MOORESTOWN (AP) — Political strategies developed by suffragette Alice Paul at the beginning of the century are still viable for feminists today, a historian said Sunday as some 400 women here celebrated the 65th anniversary of women's suffrage.

Ms. Paul, a life-long resident of this Burlington County community, played a key role in the passage of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution on Aug. 26, 1920. The amendment granted nation-wide suffrage to women, ending a battle that had begun 70 years earlier.

To mark her achievements, members of the New Jersey chapter of the National Organization for Women and the Alice Paul Centennial Foundation toured Ms. Paul's home, her high school and other sites yesterday, said historian Ammelia Fry who is writing the suffragist's biography.

Some 100 NOW members also participated in the annual 10-kilometer "Walk For Equality" to raise funds and celebrate the anniversary.

Ms. Fry said that during her years as an activist, Ms. Paul developed a five-point agenda that still holds up today. The recommendations include educating the younger generation of women about discrimination, using shock techniques when political strategies fail and keeping the focus on the single issue of gender equality.

"Alice Paul's point was that you can erode a good issue by letting it get connected to other issues," said Ms. Fry. "We all have a big laundry list of things we want to do. Her point was that first we have to have the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment)."

As a Quaker, Alice Paul abhorred violence, but became skilled in using techniques of non-violent protest, such as hunger strikes, demonstrations and picketing, said Ms. Fry.

However, she always kept in the background and let others take center stage.

"She was brought up in a period when Quakers had strong feelings aboug going out and making a spectacle of yourself," said Ms. Fry. "She would map the strategy, but never lead the parade or make the speech."

For a long time, suffragettes were divided over whether to work through state legislatures or seek a federal constitutional amendment.

By 1913, 12 states and territories had granted women the right to vote and the National Woman's Party, under Ms. Paul's leadership, sought to use the voting power of the enfranchised women to push a suffrage resolution through Congress.

Following the 1920 passage of the amendment, Ms. Paul turned her attention to the ERA for which she lobbied in Congress every year until her death in 1977 at age 92.

Iraqi planes hit Iranian oil artery

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi air force jets attacked Iran's principal oil loading terminal yesterday for the second time in 10 days, marine salvage executives reported.

In Baghdad, an unidentified Iraqi military spokesman said in a radio broadcast that eight 1,100-pound bombs were dropped on Kharg to "impede work on extinguishing fires resulting from the previous strike." He said all planes returned safely.

"Kharg (Island) has been hit again by Iraqi military aircraft, apparently to aggravate an already unfavorable oil loading situation caused by the mid-August raid," said one gulf-based executive, who spoke anonymously.

The executive said it was "too early to expect a precise estimate of damage." But he said ships in the Persian Gulf near the stricken terminal had radioed that the island's jetties sustained substantial damage.

In London, Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said it had received no independent confirmation of the attack on Kharg Island, which is about 140 miles southeast of the Iraqi coast.

Iran issued no comment on the reported raid.

The Kharg Island which handles about 90 percent of Iran's crude oil exports. Iraqi warplanes first hit it on Aug. 15.

Industry sources said that until the August raid, Iran was exporting an average of 1 million to 1.5 million barrels of oil daily. Shipping sources in Bahrain variously estimated that attack reduced Kharg's loading capacity by 25 percent to 40 percent.

Employee robs armored car co.

NEW YORK (AP) — An employee of an armored car company pulled a shotgun off the rack and handcuffed two co-workers Saturday evening, then escaped with a bag holding $400,000 to $500,000 in small denomination bills, police said.

No one was injured in the incident, and investigators were trying to find the man, whose identity is known but was not disclosed to the public, said Sgt. Ed Burns, a police department spokesman.

The holdup took place at 6:45 p.m. EDT at the Loomis Armored Car Co. at 2222-17 Northern Boulevard in Queens, said Burns. A man answering the phone at the company declined to comment and hung up.

Investigators with the 111th Precinct and the Federal Bureau of Investigation said they were searching area airports for the man, who usually worked with the company at its Kennedy International Airport branch office rather at Northern Boulevard, said Sgt. Dan Cotter. The suspect worked with his partners Saturday for two hours before the robbery occured, police said.

The robbery was discovered about 30 minutes after the man had handcuffed his two co-workers, Cotter said. There was no evidence that more than one person was involved, he said.

"He held them up with their own shotgun," Cotter said.

The suspect left the shotgun, which was loaded, and fled, he said.

An employee of a different firm at that location saw the two men handcuffed out at the back of building and notified police, Cotter said.

No other details were immediately available, investigators said.

AIDS victim in school via phone

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy barred from attending seventh grade classes because he has AIDS begins school today — by telephone.

Ryan White, a hemophiliac who contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a blood transfusion, has been out of school since December, when Western School Corp. Superintendent James O. Smith refused to enroll him.

Smith said he feared White could infect other pupils with AIDS, which destroys the body's ability to combat disease.

School officials suggested the telephone system, which links the boy's Kokomo home to Western Middle School in suburban Russiaville, after they could not find a tutor to teach the boy at home.

In each class, Ms. Donahue said, a teacher will assign a student to dial Ryan's phone number, making it possible for Ryan to hear classroom activities. By pushing a button on the speaker phone, Ryan will be able to ask his teachers questions.

The school will pay for the cost of the telephone.

AIDS can be spread by sexual contact, contaminated needles and blood transfusion, but there is no evidence it is spread by casual contact.

Four die when bus rams bridge

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — A chartered bus carrying horse racing fans rammed a bridge abutment yesterday, killing four passengers and injuring the other 14 people aboard, state police said.

Several passengers were thrown onto Interstate 70, and at least two were hurled more than 100 feet down to a bank of the Monocacy River, which the bridge spans, said state police Sgt. Bill Tower.

The bus was traveling from Baltimore to Charles Town, W.Va., for races yesterday at the Charles Town Turf Club when it crashed.

"Apparently the bus was traveling at such a high rate of speed, the initial impact was quite severe," said Tower.

The force of the impact nearly tore off the front of the bus, leaving a gaping, jagged hole, said Tower, who was at the scene.

"Everybody was injured," he said.

The victims' identities were being withheld while relatives were notified. Most of those aboard the chartered bus, owned by Baltimore Motor Coach, were from the Baltimore area, Tower said.

Collision dumps acid in Pacific

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A cargo ship collided with a barge yesterday outside Long Beach Harbor, seriously damaging the barge and spilling more than 136,000 gallons of caustic soda from it, the Coast Guard said.

The chemical, which kills fish on contact, "is heavier than water so it sinks and disperses," said Coast Guard spokeswoman Pat Milton.

No injuries were reported in the collision of the 600-foot Israeli container ship Zim California and the 250-foot Dow Chemical barge, said Ms. Milton. The spill was two miles offshore and presented no danger to humans, she said.

The Coast Guard planned to pump the remaining soda out of the barge's rupture tanks to undamaged tanks and tow the craft into Long Beach harbor, about 25 miles south of downtown Los Angeles, Ms. Hamilton said.

Engine trouble delays airliner

CLEVELAND (AP) — A United Airlines Boeing 737 with 74 people aboard was delayed from taking off for 44 minutes yesterday after a valve malfunctioned on one of its two engines, an airline spokeswoman said.

Spokeswoman Mary J. Swanson said the engine involved was similar to an engine that exploded on a British Airtours Boeing 737 during takeoff in Manchester, England, last week, touching off a fire that killed 54 people.

The valve, which is found on almost all jet engines, takes air from the engine and uses it for pressurization and air conditioning, Ms. Swanson said.

"It is located on the engine, but is not an integral part of the engine," she said.

The engine in yesterday's incident was a Pratt & Whitney JT8D-7 engine, Ms. Swanson said. The engine in the Manchester disaster was a Pratt & Whitney JT8D-15.

The engines in both incidents were the same basic model, with the one involved in the British fire being a modified and improved version, said David M. Long, a Pratt & Whitney spokesman.

United Flight 1030, with 69 passengers and a crew of five, taxied back to a gate where mechanics fixed the problem in the leaky pneumatic bleed valve, said Ms. Swanson.

The plane, which was scheduled to leave at 11 a.m. on a flight to Washington's National Airport, took off shortly before noon without further problems.

German spy scandal widening

By KENNETH JAUTZ
The Associated Press

BONN, West Germany — Federal prosecutors announced last night the arrest of a secretary suspected of being an undercover agent, the first arrest in West Germany's burgeoning espionage scandal to touch the executive branch.

A newspaper reported that officials expected to make three more espionage-related arrests in the rapidly growing spy scandal.

The woman secretary, who was not identified, was the fifth government employee sought on spying charges in the past month. A spokesman for the prosecutor's office, Alexander Prechtel, told The Associated Press she was arrested Saturday night.

Prechtel declined to give details. "We do not want to hinder the course of further investigations," he told The Associated Press.

Die Welt newspaper and West German television said the secretary worked in the office of the president, Richard von Weizsacker. Television reports said she was not his personal secretary.

Die Welt said authorities grew suspicious of her while checking government employees who came directly to Bonn upon emigrating from communist East Germany.

The Cologne Express, citing unidentified intelligence sources, said security officials expect to arrest "three more Bonn secretaries suspected of being spies in the next few days." It said the three had been under suspicion "for some time," and under observation since counter-spy Hans Joachim Tiedge defected last week.

The spy scandal began Aug. 6, when Sonja Lueneburg, a longtime aide to Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, was reported missing.

Authorities said after opening an investigation that the aide was suspected of leading an East German spy ring.

Officials began similar spy probes against Ursula Richter, a Bonn lobbyist, and an unidentified employee in the Bonn Army Administration Office.

All three were reported missing, and Bonn security officials said privately they may have fled to East Germany.

The bombshell came last week when Tiedge, one of West Germany's top counter-espionage officials, defected to East Berlin.

The mass-circulation Bild newspaper reported in its Monday editions that Tiedge was living in a villa on a lake near East Berlin, and was "being fed cavier and champagne" and being guarded around the clock.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said that, "there will be a damage assessment among our NATO allies." Spokesman Charles Redman had said earlier that Washington would consult with Bonn to "determine what damage might ultimately have been done to our interests."

Earlier yesterday, an official said the Interior Ministry was planning a major shake-up in intelligence agencies following reports that Tiedge was a debt-ridden problem drinker.

The source, speaking on condition he was not identified, said: "There's talk of some heads rolling and many changes."

Michael-Andreas Butz, an Interior Ministry spokesman, said security experts would meet to discuss the reorganization today.

A Bonn chancellery official said intelligence directors knew Tiedge suffered personal problems that included heavy debts and depression over his wife's death, but did not tell Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann.

"Zimmermann is furious," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "He feels he was not kept adequately informed."

Bonn-based diplomats privately expressed concern that Tiedge could have gathered information on other Western security services, including American agencies, during his lengthy career.

Tiedge worked in the Constitutional Protection Office, West Germany's counter-espionage office, for 19 years and rose to the position of department chief in charge of counter-espionage involving East Germany.

Government sources said some Interior Ministry officials were demanding the resignation of Heribert Hellenbroich, director of the West German Intelligence Service and head of the Cologne-based Constitutional Protection Office until Aug. 1.

Hans Neusal, an Interior Ministry undersecretary, has told reporters Hellenbroich and other intelligence chiefs knew of Tiedge's personal problems, but judged him capable of carrying out his duties.

Chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost denied Sunday that Hellenbroich was under pressure to resign.

The Bild on Sunday newspaper, citing Tiedge's friends and neighbors, reported that Tiedge was nearly $83,000 in debt and drank heavily.

The conservative Welt on Sonntag said Tiedge was burdened with unusually high monthly mortgage payments and was known by his colleagues to have a serious drinking problem.

Red Chinese pilot defects, but 2 die as plane crashes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A defecting Chinese air force pilot crash-landed a twin-jet light bomber in South Korea, killing the navigator and a farmer toiling in a rice paddy, officials said yesterday.

They said the pilot sought political asylum in Taiwan.

China said the plane strayed off course during a training mission and made an emergency landing. It asked for return of the plane and three-man crew, including the man who died.

The first Chinese account came yesterday evening over official Peking television, a full day after the incident took place.

China and South Korea have no diplomatic relations, but state-run South Korean television said the government was in contact with Chinese authorities in a third country. Hong Kong was generally assumed to be the meeting place.

The Defense Ministry said the pilot, Xiao Tienyen, 33, suffered a fractured spine, but the plane's third crewman, radio operator Liu Shuyi, 37, was unhurt and wanted to return to China.

Lee Hung-shik, a ministry spokesman, said South Korean air force jets spotted the plane about 6 p.m. Saturday and tried to escort it to Kunsan Air Base, an American facility near Iri, about 110 miles south of Seoul.

But the Chinese bomber ran out of fuel and hurtled to earth, Lee said.

South Korean television showed the aircraft plowing through rice paddies and coming to a halt against the earthen wall of a canal, damaging its tail section and fuselage.

Lee refused to describe the plane, but military sources said it was an Ilyushin IL-28. China makes the Soviet-designed IL-28 under the name Harbin-5.

The authoritative publication says the IL-28 was introduced in the Soviet Union in 1948 and is a 3-seat medium-range tactical light bomber.

OURS

Lynch should reconsider

When the sun is shining and the temperature outside is 80 or 90 degrees, it is difficult to think about the possibility of people freezing to death. It is just not something we want to worry about in August.

But August is the time to worry about it. If we act now, when it is hot and cold weather is but a distant threat, we can ensure that the homeless of our county will have adequate shelter when winter comes. If we wait until December, it will be too late.

The problem of homelessness is a serious one; we cannot — we must not — ignore it. An affluent community such as northern Monmouth County has a special responsibility to provide for the less fortunate in its midst.

That's why we are baffled by the opposition of Freeholder Director Thomas J. Lynch Jr. to a plan that would provide warm, comfortable facilities for the homeless during the winter months.

The idea is to house some of the homeless at Fort Monmouth, in military quarters that might otherwise sit idle. The homeless like the idea; those who are concerned with the plight of the homeless like the idea. The Army has agreed to consider the plan.

But Lynch says no.

"I'm not going to put anybody behind barbed wire," Lynch said last week.

This is patent nonsense. We're not talking about a detention camp here. We're talking about providing a place to sleep for people who otherwise would be forced to seek shelter under boardwalks, in vacant buildings or in abandoned automobiles.

If there is barbed wire around the facility, so what? Maybe it will keep away the criminals who tend to prey upon the homeless.

Lynch's opposition to this plan is ridiculous and inexplicable. We urge him to reconsider.

Meanwhile, the entire community must accept responsibility for the homeless among us. Some way or other — through our churches, our service organizations, our governmental agencies, or through our own individual effort — we must help. There is no excuse for doing otherwise.

OTHERS

Springsteen is his own man

The comparison was inevitable, but it was also flawed. Elvis Presely, in his time, was the cult figure of the rock 'n' roll generation. It was an idolatrous celebrity that had far more durability than has been generally associated with this ephmeral profession.

Bruce Springsteen was cast in the same role in the early '80s, a vibrant, dominating figure who symbolized the future of the new rock generation. Several years ago, he was on the covers of two national news magazines in the same week, a billing and exposure that were hard to live up to professionally.

The gifted Mr. Springsteen, who has none of the undisciplined flamboyance of Elvis Presley, remains close to his blue-collar roots, which are the lyrical basis for the hard-driving songs in his repertoire. And, where Mr. Presley was the white trend-setter for rock based on black blues origins, Mr. Springsteen has expanded on this genre, relying heavily on social themes, the disillusionment of being "Born in the USA."

This has struck a strong chord among Springsteen followers, some of whom have misinterpreted the ironic cast of lyrics from the "Born in the USA" album's title song. But this, too, is what sets Mr. Springsteen apart from Elvis Presley, thier widely differing views on life and lifestyles.

There was a mystique about Mr. Presely that elevated him to an exalted status (almost "Semi-divine," according to one rock critic) among his fans. Mr. Springseen is his own man, as a performer and as a person.

But the performances on his current international tour, including the sellouts at Giants Stadium in the Meadowlands, attest to the fact that Mr. Springsteen can stand on his own in the rock pantheon-alongside Elvis Presley.

Onassis' pre-nuptial bargain

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — In the 10 years since Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis died, the public's curiosity about his tempestuous marriage to Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy has remained insatiable. This is due partly to both partners' obsessive desire for privacy, which merely whetted the appetite for details of the marriage.

We lifted a corner of the Jackie-Ari story on April 14, 1975, when we told how Onassis had negotiated a pre-nuptial agreement with the late Andre Meyer, financial adviser to the widow of President John Kennedy. We disclosed that a mysterious draft memorandum from Onassis to Meyer laid out the agreement's provisions in language more appropriate to the purchase of a show horse or an oil tanker.

Now our associate Les Whitten has seen that draft memo, with corrections scrawled in Onassis' distinctive handwriting.

It confirms what was rumored at the time: a request that Mrs. Kennedy receive a $20 million cash settlement up front. In the memo, Onassis observed that this gigantic sum might be more suited to "an acquisition instead of a marriage." He made a counter-offer of $250,000 to $300,000 a year tax-free, or a lump sum that would provide that kind of interest, even if he died or the marriage failed.

The details behind the long-secret memo are as fascinating as its contents:

On the night of Sept. 25, 1968, four weeks before the wedding, Onassis met with Meyer, then senior partner in the international investment firm of Lazard Freres, at the elegant Carlyle Hotel in Manhattan. It was late when Onassis returned to his office a few blocks away, and only an executive secretary, Lynn Alpha, was still there.

Ms. Alpha, who has since married and does not want her married name disclosed, recalled that Onassis appeared badly shaken. "Where's the bottle we keep around here?" he asked the secretary.

Ms. Alpha fetched a bottle of Johnny Walker Black. Knowing that Onassis rarely drank straight liquor, she held up her thumb and forefinger less than an inch apart by way of asking how much scotch she should pour. Onassis replied with a similar gesture, only with his thumb and forefinger twice as far apart.

While he sipped the whiskey, Onassis dictated a memo for Meyer, summarizing the just-concluded dickering session. Miss Alpha typed it and Onassis edited it — heavily. Then he busied himself with other papers while she retyped the corrected version.

Onassis then asked her to deliver it to the Carlyle, where she called Meyer and was instructed to leave the document at the hotel desk.

Ms. Alpha said that when she returned she asked Onassis if he didn't want a copy of the memo, and fished the original, with its corrections, out of the wastebasket. She recalls her boss gave her an ironic look and said, "Keep it for your dowry." The former secretary is now putting the unique document up for sale because of family necessity.

The memo details the meeting "between Mr. A.M. and A.O." concerning cash or income for a "person in question" who, by marrying Onassis, would lose benefits from a Kennedy family trust. To replace this loss, Onassis was to provide "cash immediately" with "no restrictions."

The memo noted a bit caustically: "It is hoped that it will be appreciated that by such arrangement (a) far-reaching advantage is being achieved to the benefit of the person in question." Onassis even agreed to cost-of-living increases.

But he hung tough on the $20 million demand.

New spin on smoking debate

Jeff Greenfield

Here's a marvelous case study for you amateur Supreme Court justices out there: What is the difference between a constitutionally protected practice, an obnoxious personal habit, and a disability?

The question comes to us courtesy of Amy Lipson of Baldwin, Long Island, who applied for a job at Fortunoff's jewelry store in the town of Westbury. In the course of her application for work, a question arose: Did she smoke? Yes, Miss Lipson answered. Thanks, but no thanks, the store said. We don't want smokers.

Miss Lipson then took up America's second most popular indoor sport, lawyer-shopping. She filed a complaint before the State Division of Human Rights, claiming that "I am disabled ... in that I am addicted to nicotine and am a smoker."

Under New York civil rights laws, an employer may not discriminate against a job seeker on grounds of race, religion, sex or a condition of disability. It is Miss Lipson's novel notion that puffing away on a coffin nail is on a par with a missing limb, or polio, or diabetes. The human rights division, for its part, thought enough of her argument to schedule a hearing for the near future.

Miss Lipson's argument is a fascinating illustration of how both society's mores and the law have changed over the years. Earlier in the 20th century, the major tobacco companies, through a massive advertising and public relations campaign, consciously set out to change the image of cigarette smoking as a habit engaged in only by wimpish men and fallen women.

Cigarette smokers filled the pages of mass-circulation magazines, in the most sophisticated and glamorous of poses. On screen, no drawing-room comedy would have been credible unless every lead character was standing by the mantel in dinner jacket or evening gown, cigarette in hand.

Today, as a recent Wall Street Journal story made clear, cigarette smoking is seen as a faintly ridiculous, if not overtly obnoxious social habit, reeking of lower-class status. Whether because of the health risks, or the smell and smoke, smokers are everywhere on the defensive -- a fact that, as a confirmed pipe and cigar smoker, I both concede and applaud.

What, then, can an employer do when faced with a job applicant who smokes?

Well, he can surely insist that an employee not smoke on the job, on the ground that a prospective customer is not likely to be happy examining earrings or silver settings in a cloud of smoke. In this sense, smoking is nothing like a constitutionally protected practice. By contrast, an employer who argued that a prospective customer might be "upset" if forced to deal with a black or Hispanic or female sales clerk would be given short shrift by any court. Smoking simply does not fall into this category at all.

Suppose, then, the job applicant assured her boss that she would not smoke on the job. Why would smoking then render her an unworthy hire? Several reasons come to mind.

Smokers are much more likely to contract one of several illnesses -- cancer, heart disease, emphysema -- and the costs, in the form of higher health insurance premiums or time lost on the job, are risks an employer may not want to take.

A prospective boss might also believe that smokers will be less attentive to work, more anxious to duck into the lounge for a quick puff or two. He may even believe that smokers are people with deep character flaws: at best, nervous and compulsive, like fingernail biters; at worst, too weak to abandon a life-threatening habit.

The question is, of course, not whether an employer believes these things, but whether he has a constitutional right to believe these things. He may also believe that Jews tend to embezzle, that the Irish drink too much, that blacks are lazy, but he could not legally refuse employment on those grounds.

Ms. Lipson, however, puts a totally new spin on this debate. She is arguing not that she has the right to indulge in the practice of smoking, nor that it is a sign of sophistication, but rather that she cannot help herself; that she is a victim of circumstance every bit as much as someone who has been hit by a car and is confined to a wheelchair.

In an earlier time, such an argument would have been laughed out of court. But remember: The killer of San Francisco's mayor successfully argued he was mentally incapacitated in part because of his junk-food habit. The attempted killer of the president of the United States successfully argued that he was insane because a jury could not find him sane beyond a reasonable doubt. So who is to say that Miss Lipson's compulsion to poison her body is her own fault?

I'll keep you posted on this case; meanwhile, if you're planning a telethon to benefit cigarette smokers, include me out.

The quietest kind of hero

Garry Wills

Two of my favorite sites in New York are the main reading room of the Public Library on 42nd Street, and the Racquet and Tennis Club. This week, the two were back in the news because of the one important thing that connected them -- Robert William Henderson. Mr. Henderson died at age 96. His death was little noticed, though he is one of the most important figures in the history of sports.

I say in the history of sports, not in sports itself — which is mainly a matter of myth and legend. Henderson is one of the few men who have been able to kill a myth. He set the record straight on one of the prime misunderstandings of American history — the idea that baseball is a distinctively American sport with a distinguishable date of origin and a distinguished progenitor. It is none of those things.

Mr. Henderson was the quietest kind of hero, a librarian. He was working in the 42nd Street library when it opened in 1911, and he retired as the chief of its main reading room 42 years later. The room is a galaxy of wonderful characters on any typical day, but the zookeeper proved as fascinating as any of his animals.

The Racquet and Tennis Club is another eccentric -- a Tuscan palazzo across from the Seagram's building, with a classical frieze of racquets and balls running round its cornice. It began a sports library in 1914, under Mr. Henderson's supervision, one that is perhaps the best of its kind in the world.

Henderson, like many librarians I know, learned what was in his books as well as what was on them. He began to notice the widely printed claim that Gen. Abner Doubleday (a major general during his Civil War service) invented baseball. He also noted some odd things — e.g., that Doubleday was attending West Point when he was supposed to be inventing baseball in Cooperstown.

He looked further and found no contemporary reference to show Doubleday even played or knew about baseball, much less invented it. The general's New York Times obituary in 1893 did not mention baseball, nor did a memorial volume dedicated to him in 1918 by the state of New York (where the game was supposed to have been born). Doubleday's own reminiscences of youth contain no reference to the game.

But "everybody knew" Doubleday invented the game by 1939, when Henderson published a Public Library monograph showing that the whole myth was supported by nothing more substantial than one old man's story told 68 years after the supposed birthday.

Myths die hard. "Traditionalists" rallied around Doubleday's challenged standard. But Henderson did not give up, either. In 1947, he published his views as part of an authoritative book, "Ball, Bat, and Bishop."

Finally, four years later, years after he had revealed it, the baseball establishment admitted the truth; the Official Encyclopedia of Baseball disowned Doubleday as father of the game. It did not hurt the orphan one bit. Truth rarely does. Bravo Henderson.

N.Y. Tribune, Moon-linked, closes down

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York City Tribune, which began publication in 1963 under ownership by associates of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, said yesterday it would cease publication until 1986.

Robert Morton, editor-in-chief of the daily paper, said in a statement that the suspension of publication until Jan. 1, when the paper will be produced at a new plant, was necessary because of its "ambitious reorganization."

His statement, which said today's would be the last edition until the new year, was made available to The Associated Press by The Washington Times.

Like the Tribune, the Times is one of four newspapers owned by News World Communications, Inc. The others are Spanish-language dailies in New York City and Los Angeles published under the name Noticias Del Mundo.

The other newspapers were not affected by the suspensjon of the Tribune's publication, said Arnaud De Borchgrave, editor-in-chief of the Times.

News World Communications is owned by associates of Moon, the Unification Church leader.

It was not immediately known how many staffers would be affected by the move or in what way.

BARBERSHOP PRESSURE CHECK — Hair stylist Carolyn Shaw Webb, checks the blood pressure of Leroy Geddis, in one of three barbershops in Baltimore participating in a program to reach those with the greatest risk of hypertension.

These barbers check blood pressure

By BARBARA MILFORD
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Three barbershops participating in a program to make free tests for potentially fatal high blood pressure more readily available to susceptible black men have referred 155 to physicians in just two months.

One was 68-year-old Abraham Sumpter. He hadn't had his blood pressure checked in years, but when he went to get his hair cut his barber found "it was pretty high" and sent him to a doctor.

"We wouldn't have known if it hadn't been for that," said Joe Shropshire, 48, Sumpter's son-in-law. "He doesn't tell you what's ailing him or what's hurting him.

"We can't get him to go to the hospital, but he was at the barbershop and it was done. It was a good thing."

The program, using automatic blood pressure machines and trained barber-operators, was started by B. Wayne Kong, an educational psychologist and executive director of the non-profit Urban Cardiology Research Center Inc.

"Only 25 percent of black males who need medication are actually on it," Kong said.

A 1982 statewide survey by the University of Maryland found that nearly 27 percent of all blacks had hypertension, compared with 18 percent of whites.

Of the 721 black men who have had barbershop checkups, 200 had diastolic pressure higher than 90, which is the threshhold of high blood pressure. Forty-five of the 200 people with high blood pressure already were taking medication, and 155 have been referred to doctors.

Barbershop personnel took three days of lessons taught at the University of Maryland School of Medicine by Kong and university staff.

Carolyn Webb, a hair stylist at Harry's Afro Hut who was trained in the first class in June, said the checkups are a great idea.

"We have one guy who's on blood pressure medicine. This way he's getting a regular check every time he has his hair cut instead of waiting to go to the doctor every six months," she said.

Kong set out in 1978 to reach out to the black community through non-traditional means.

He began by training volunteers at 100 black churchs in Maryland, a program since used as a model in other states, but found that 70 percent of those attending church were women. Below the age of 50, high blood pressure or hypertension is more prevalent in men.

The program is funded by Kong's research center. The center has received grants from the National Institutes for Health for specific programs, but it is supported mostly by individual or corporate donations.

Kong says the barbershop program should demonstrate to the NIH that the idea works, and he will apply next month for funds to expand the program.

It has cost about $1,000 per barbershop for training, materials and salaries of center personnel who periodically check on each barbershop. The automatic blood pressure machines cost $150 and are either given to the barbershop or sold at cost.

High blood pressure can lead to heart attacks, stroke and kidney failure, but usually has no symptoms.

"It's a silent killer. You can't tell," said Tyrone Allen, 31. He has known for six years that he has hypertension, but when he had the chance to have his blood pressure checked at a barbershop recently, he took it.

His blood pressure was up slightly, so his doctor put him on medication and a low-fat diet and persuaded him to change his lifestyle.

"I used to stomp through the flowers," Allen said. "Now I take time to smell them."

Runners do not become immortal

The letter writer was a 51-year-old male who has been "a serious runner for eight years." The death of ex-Olympian John Kelly has shaken him up. Kelly was 57 and not a serious runner. His running was little more than a warmup and cool down. My correspondent competes in his age group. Until Kelly's death he had no concerns about his heart. Now he is not so sure.

Next to his letter was one from a mayor of a medium size city. He had turned to running a year ago to counteract the "negative influences in his life." Gluttonous dinners, innumerable cocktail parties, a generally sedentary existence and the stress of political life. His four miles on the road every other day had changed his life. "I do not need to relate to you," he writes, "how the apprehensions and pressures have dissipated."

But now the mayor wants reassurance. He believes, he says, in the wisdom of the runner's conduct. He can deal with the predictable comments of the three-pack-a-day overweight desk jockey. What worries him are the comments of physicians who minimize the benefits of running and indeed seem to counsel specifically against it.

That in fact was exactly what the 51-year-old competitive runner's doctor did. When the runner called to arrange some type of checkup the doctor told him he shouldn't be running at his age. He should walk or swim. When the runner asked for a stress test the physician said "It won't show a damn thing."

Both men are now in a quandary. They have reaped obvious rewards from running. They want to be assured, however, that it is safe, and, in the instance of the mayor, effective. His Honor is beginning to doubt that running has long term benefits. Both are beginning to question what they are hearing from their medical advisors.

There is no lack of advocates of running among physicians, just as there seem to be any number who feel it is a dangerous way to obtain uncertain results. Oddly, the majority of runners go blithely on their way attending to neither the praise nor the criticism of their sport. Running has convinced them that running is good for them.

Nevertheless, there are always those who look for certainty, who want the necessary tests, who ask for guarantees. I became familiar with them in my practice. They were never satisfied until the diagnosis I made had been certified by the appropriate test.

Unfortunately when you take a test you don't need you can get a result you don't want. An unnecessary stress test can put a runner on a conveyor belt of investigative procedures ending with coronary arteriography. Some cardiologists hold to the idea that only such drastic tests can certify running to be safe.

Under the circumstances, a runner should be reassured by the consensus of investigators in the field and the published research. There can be no doubt that intensive exercise decreases coronary risk factors, lowers the incidence of catastrophic cardiac events, and adds years to your life. Running is an absolutely superb way to combat the two major public health dangers cited recently by national committees on disease — high cholesterol and obesity.

When you become a runner, you join an elite group. You become a member of a low-risk group. The mortality and morbidity rates are lower than the average American. However, even the elite, even the low-risk category, will suffer casualties. Runners do not become immortal.

Some set their passion adrift on the wind

COLTS NECK — Early in the morning or late in the afternoon, when the sky is an almost windless blue, one of Paul Wille's hot air balloons can be seen rising like a colorful exclamation point in the skies above Colts Neck airport.

Even in this age of space shuttles and Concorde jets, the sight of a huge balloon gliding gently across the horizon still turns heads, reawakening, for many, a childlike delight in the pleasures of unfettered flight.

Interest in the 200-year-old sport of hot air ballooning has been enjoying a nationwide resurgence in recent years, a trend that is evidenced locally by a growing band of balloonists, fans and paying passengers.

For most, like the estimated 12,000 people who attended a June balloon festival in Freehold's Liberty Oak Park, just watching the vibrantly-colored balloons carrying basketfuls of adventurers over the treetops is enough.

But for others, like 47-year-old Wille, their initial fascination with ballooning eventually becomes both hobby and profession.

Wille, who is manager of the Colts Neck airport, first experienced the joys of the sport after giving his wife, Geraldine, a balloon ride as a Christmas gift several years ago.

Both licensed airplane pilots, the couple found that ballooning offered a special kind of thrill. "There's a sense of total freedom in a balloon", Wille explains. Now one of only two licensed husband-wife balloon teams in New Jersey, the Wille's own two balloons.

The expense of the sport — Wille says an average-size 77,000-cubic-foot balloon costs from $15,000 to $20,000 — is partially offset by the money the couple earns giving balloon rides and lessons. The $125 they charge for balloon rides is about average for this area, Wille says, although prices tend to be lower in the southern part of the state and higher in the north.

Earl Fenlay, of Spring Lake Heights, a systems engineer at Bell Laboratories in Holmdel during the week, charges $100 per person for the balloon rides he pilots on weekends. According to his friend and co-balloonist Patty Dooley, there is no shortage of customers. Fenlay, who has been ballooning for eleven years, was a full-time commercial balloonist in Tennessee, where his clients included the Wendy's hamburger chain, before moving here four years ago.

After a few years out of commercial ballooning, Fenlay began accepting paying passengers again last April. Most of the customers, Dooley says, come from contacts made at balloon rallies. But, she says, "Friends tell their friends who tell their friends" so that there is often a passenger waiting list.

Dooley had never been in a balloon before meeting Fenlay. Now, her enthusiasm for the sport helped her to recruit her mother as part of the truck team that follows a balloon to its eventual destination.

The truck team is responsible for assisting in inflating the balloon as well. Half an hour or more before takeoff, the balloon is taken off the truck, laid out on the ground and inflated using fans. Then the air inside the balloon is heated via propane torches. Once the balloon is fully inflated and the passengers are in the basket, the tethers holding it down are released and the balloon rises with its passengers into the air.

The balloon's direction is determined solely by the wind. As it travels, approximately 1500 feet above the earth, horns honk and people wave, says Dooley. "It's the prettiest thing," she added.

The balloon is landed in virtually any convenient open field, where the landowner is invited to share in the traditional champagne toast that concludes every successful balloon excursion.

On rare occasions, things are not quite that serene.

Once, Dooley recalled, her balloon landed in the middle of a baseball field while a game was in progress.

"Do you remember the movie, "The Blob"? Dooley asked. "It was just like that. People were running and screaming. It was a mad scene."

Another balloonist, Tom Curley, 38, of Middletown, traded in his job as a heavy construction supervisor last February in favor of full-time ballooning.Curley had skydived and piloted airplanes and helicopters before trying hot air ballooning five years ago. His enthusiasm for the sport led him to qualify for a commercial license and purchase his own balloon, a decision he has yet to regret.

"Just about every flight has been fun," he says.

According to Curley, balloon aficionados don't fall tidily into any income bracket, age range or profession. They may be in their late teens or their late 60's or even 70's, he says. But there is something they all have in common.

"They like to do unusual things. They're not generally people who sit around and watch television all the time," he says.

Most balloon-riders are celebrating a special occasion, Curley said, but some go just for the thrill. Another aspect is the social nature of ballooning. Often, three or more balloons will go up together, flying as a group. Passengers trade cameras and take pictures of and for each other.

All the balloonists agree that it is a relatively safe sport, so long as caution is taken and rules are observed, particularly in regard to weather conditions. Balloonists do not fly if winds are higher than seven to eight miles per hour.

"Everything has a certain element of risk," says Wille. "Yes, there are accidents. But I know of no accidents locally. I'm not a totally foolish person, I'm not a teenager testing his wings."

All the balloonists agree that it is a relatively safe sport, so long as caution is taken and rules are observed, particularly in regard to weather conditions. Balloonists do not fly if winds are higher than seven to eight miles per hour.

Health programs help companies up productivity

FREEHOLD — Freehold Area Hospital's Wellness Center, always an innovator in the healthcare explosion, is now offering a program designed specifically to meet the needs of the corporate, business and industrial arenas.

The hospital is providing companies with a comprehensive array of programs to improve health, increase productivity and reduce absenteeism.

Some of the programs offered include:

Be Trim — A comprehensive total weight loss system developed by the National Center for Health Promotion which shows employess how to permanently control their weight through stress management techniques and exercise.

Smokeless — A system developed by the American Institute for Preventive Medicine that encompasses a variety of principles, technique prevention and elimination of cigarette urges while minimizing any withdrawal discomfort.

Stress-Less — Teaches skills which help employees identify the various kinds of stress in their lives and how to reduce it.

Through cooperation with the Greater Freehold Area Y.M.C.A., the hospital is also offering courses in:

Ways to a Healthy Back — Simple exercises that prove effective in the prevention of back discomfort.

Joy Aerobics — Routines which offer generalized flexibility, muscular strength, and stress reduction.

Corporate Fitness — Enhances all aspects of fitness including flexibility, muscular strength, reduction of body fat and cardiovascular endurance.

Light Lunch Fitness — For the beginner or the sedentary, it offers stretching, flexibility and muscle tone.

Executive Exercises — Includes discussion and demonstration of exercise suitable for restricted areas.

Newly created corporate wellness center programs are described as follows:

Health Risk Appraisals

One way to determine which programs are best suited to a corporation's needs is to administer a Health Risk Appraisal to employees. This assessment describes a person's chances of dying or acquiring a specific disease within a defined period of time (usually 10 years).

The employee is asked to respond to a series of questions pertaining to his/her health history, lifestyle habits and certain clinical findings. The answers to these questions, in addition to detailed demographic information are analyzed by a computer and are then compared with mortality statistics and epidemiologic data.

Individual results are available to each participant and an aggregate data report is available to the employer.

Programs can then be implemented which correspond to the areas identified as the most valuable.

Healthy Life Program

This three-hour program is designed to address the most common health issues that enter the lives of all a company's employees. By using a comprehensive workbook, our trained facilitator leads discussions, offers insight and responds to questions concerning issues such as Medical Self Care, Stress, Nutrition, Weight Control, Fitness, Alcohol, Smoking and Dental Health. This program is a good place to begin when designing a health promotion program for your employees.

Health Speakers

One-hour programs available to suit corporate needs. They may be offered during a lunch hour, dinner hour or anytime a group of your employees can meet.Some of the most popular topics include the aging process, motherhood over thirty, nutrition education, cardiac care, sports medicine, stroke awareness and death and dying.

Clinic opens for those with eating disorders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — One recent rainy morning, six women sat in the comfortably furnished living room of a country estate discussing why women, more than men, risk health and even life to shed unwanted weight.

The women, ages 16 to 36, were patients at the Renfrew Center, the first private residential treatment facility in the nation established exclusively for people suffering from anorexia nervosa and bulimia.

The center, which opened in June, is located on a 27-acre estate which once belonged to a prominent Philadelphia family.

"This is not a fat farm," said Dr. Lee Combrinck-Graham, center medical director.

Dr. Leonard Levitz, clinical director, described anorexia nervosa as a multi-faceted illness that strikes primarily young women whose fear of being obese becomes an obsession.

They starve themselves, many times to emaciation, to reach an "ideal" weight, said Levitz, a specialist in eating disorders.

Without treatment, an anorexic can drop to 60 pounds, and hospitalization and intravenous feeding become necessary to keep the anorexic alive. Even then, 5 percent die, said Levitz.

The bulimic, he said, is most often a woman whose weight ranges from about normal to slightly above normal. She secretly binges on food, up to 10,000 calories daily, and then purges herself by self-induced vomiting or laxatives or diuretics.

Bulimia is regarded as less serious than anorexia. But repeated vomiting can cause tooth enamel to dissolve and can tear the esophagus, Levitz said. Bulimia also may create an imbalance in body chemicals which can lead to irregular heartbeat and sudden death.

No firm statistics are available on how many people suffer from the two disorders, but one estimate says 5 percent of the population suffers from one or the other, according to the National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders.

Both anorexia and bulimia are more than physical conditions, said Levitz, who narrowed the causes down to two primary ones.

"First of all, women suffering from them want to be in control of their bodies," he said. "Additionally, they are unable to cope with their bodily changes. Through anorexia and bulimia, starvation, they can remain childlike.

"They feel that through their eating behavior, they are in control."

"But really, they're hopelessly out of control," added Combrinck-Graham.

Many anorexics and bulimics seek treatment at hospitals and psychiatric institutions but only find temporary solutions, Levitz said.

"In hospitals, although their physical condition is treated, little attention is given to the psychological root of their problems," he said. "In psychiatric facilities, anorexics and bulimics are often grouped with people suffering from a wide range of psychological maladies, or they are treated on an outpatient basis, neither of which is very helpful."

Allen Davis, former administrator of the Horsham Clinic, a private psychiatric clinic in Philadelphia, and Samuel Menaged, in-house counsel to the Horsham Psychiatric Group, said they have received 200 inquiries since they founded the center.

The $275-a-day treatment encourages patients to take responsibility for their eating behaviors, said Combrinck-Graham.

Chef Tell Erhardt, a television cooking personality, not only directs the preparation of non-fattening foods, but helps patients change their attitudes about food by giving nutritional hints and by teaching a weekly gourmet cooking class.

The 30-day to 90-day treatment consists of a variety of activities, including stress management, relaxation and career counseling sessions. Patients work with the staff of 30 psychiatrists, psychologists, nurses and counselors in planning activities.

The families of patients also participate in the treatment process through visits and counseling sessions.

"There's no magic cure. You have to do it for yourself," said one patient. "Here, I have a lot of support. They make it as easy as it can be."

"I wanted to come to a quiet place with caring people," said a 31-year-old mother of two children and a bulimic for 13 years. At 18, the woman, who asked not to be identified, was hospitalized. She was 5 feet 7 inches tall but weighed less than 95 pounds.

"You think you're controlling it. But it's controlling you," she said.

"I've purged after almost every meal for the past 13 years. But I really believe I can stop doing it now," she added.

"I feel a lot different," said another Renfrew patient, a ballet dancer who also asked not to be identified. A bulimic for six years, she said: "I feel like a person."

Test your fitness

MIDDLETOWN — A statewide fitness challenge for police officers and firefighters is being sponsored Oct. 5 at Thompson Park, here, by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Jersey.

In addition to competing against each other, this year police and fire departments will also be trying to raise funds for a favorite charity. There is a $30 entry fee per team and the total amount of money collected will be donated to the favorite charity of the winning team. Registration ends Sept. 20.

This is the second year that Blue Cross and Blue Shield are hosting the fitness challenge as part of their health and fitness programs to promote healthier lifestyles.

It is being held in cooperation with the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports and the Garden State Games Committee. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Jersey have arranged for construction of 23 Parcourse Fitness Circuits — located at community colleges or county parks in New Jersey — to encourage residents to exercise regularly.

Each department participating in the challenge will field a three-person team which will compete on four of the 18 exercise stations along the Parcourse Fitness Circuit. One at a time, police officers and firefighters will do chin-ups, push-ups, sit-ups and use the vault bar.

A team's total time will determine the finalists, who will compete against each other in another run through the same exercise stations. Awards also will be given to the individual with the fastest time overall, and the top finisher in each of the following age categories: 18-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50 and over.

Fatigue is the body's way of requesting aid

Your Health

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Even after a good night's sleep I awake with an unbelievable sense of fatigue. It gets so bad that after breakfast I can hardly get through my day's chores. I have three children and I work hard at running my home. I have a feeling that my family and even my husband think this is all in my head. This makes it even worse. Aren't there real reasons why people get so tired? — Mrs. M.W., Maine

Dear Mrs. W.:

Many people like yourself may have no obvious evidence of illness. Yet they complain of the single, persistent symptom of fatigue.

Fatigue is a symptom that must not be overlooked. It is the body's cry for added rest and "understanding."

It is so easy for sympathetic and unsympathetic people to insinuate that your fatigue is "psychological" in origin. I doubt that it is.

Therefore, it is most important to get a complete physical examination and blood studies in order to rule out some of these fatigue producing conditions:

1. Low blood pressure
2. Low blood sugar
3. Anemia
4. Lowgrade chronic infection
5. Menstrual disorders
6. Psychological stress and emotional upheaval. These can be easily as exhausting as any physical illness.
7. Poor sleeping habits
8. Just plain overwork

The multiple obligations of "running a home" and taking care of active children can be overwhelming both physically and emotionally — especially to a conscientious housewife and mother.

Unfortunately, husbands, in-laws and families are not always around during the day to witness the frenetic, exhausting activity of taking care of a total household. If they were, they would be less likely to consider your fatigue as just being psychological in origin.

I am always astonished that so many women can expend as much energy as they do for long periods of time and still carry on their evening social obligations with pleasantness and charm. Frankly, I don't know where most women get their inexhaustible fund of inner reserve energy.

Just to be sure that there is no fundamental problem, get a complete medical examination. If no problem exists, learn to indulge yourself and get the added rest that you so well deserve.

Is he cautious or phobic?

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 26-year-old certified public accountant who used to date three and four women at a time. I kissed them all and took most of them to bed. But that was before so much had been said and written about genital herpes.

When I learned, after researching the subject carefully (I even telephoned the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta), that this sexually transmitted disease is indeed incurable, I became much more selective about the women I became intimate with.

Four months ago another fellow I work with confided that he picked up a severe case of herpes from his so-called "steady." (She is vice president of a bank.) I almost went into shock. It was then that I decided nobody is safe and I stopped having sex.

Three weeks ago another co-worker in our office came down with AIDS. (He is gay.) Although I am straight I am now afraid to kiss a woman. In fact, I have pretty much stopped dating altogether because every woman I have explained my position to has told me I am off my rocker. Am I? — "Bernie" In Ohio

Dear Bernie: I wouldn't say you are off your rocker, but I strongly recommend counseling. Your fear of venereal disease has turned into a phobia that is crippling your relationships.

Reasonable caution should be exercised at all times, but your decision to refrain from kissing a woman for fear of getting AIDS borders on the hysterical.

Dear Ann Landers: These days, when so many farmers all over our beloved country are losing their land, it would be a great comfort if you would rerun a column my husband and I (Kansas wheat farmers) cut out several years ago. It is attached to this letter. — The D's From Hutchinson

Dear D's: I am happy to oblige. Here it is, with credit to the Arkansas State Plant Board News:

A FARMER'S PRAYER

As farmers and ranchers, dear God, please give us the wisdom and patience to understand why a pound of T-bone steak at $7.50 is considered high but a 3-ounce cocktail at $1.75 is not. And nobody complains about paying $1 for a soft drink at the ballpark but a 15-cent glass of milk for breakfast is inflationary. And, Lord, help me to understand why $5 for a ticket to a movie is a bargain, but $3.35 for a 60-pound bushel of wheat is unthinkable. Cotton is too high at 60 cents a pound, but a $20 cotton shirt is on sale for $18.50. And corn is too steep at 2 cents worth in a box of flakes, but folks don't bat an eye when they're charged 50 cents for a bowl of cornflakes in a restaurant.

And also, Lord, help me to comprehend why I have to give an easement to the gas company so they can cross my property with their gas lines and then double my price for their gas. And, dear God, please help me to understand the consumer who drives by my field and scoffs at me for spending $7,000 on a piece of equipment that he built, so he could make money and drive down that right-of-way they took from me to construct a road so he could go hunting and skiing. Thank you, God, for your past guidance and help. And now will you please help me to make sense out of it all?

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By STELLA WILDER

MONDAY, AUGUST 26

Born today, you are the possessor of a deeply inquisitive nature, one that can be at once an invaluable asset — one that opens doors and enriches your life and the lives of those you encounter — and a stubborn obstacle which is capable of bringing all progress to a standstill. Fortunately, you can learn to control your all but insatiable urge to dig deeper and delve further into all situations, and use it exclusively toward accumulating valuable knowledge and achieving success.

Within certain circles you are able to accept what comes completely at face value; when you feel you can trust those you are with completely and intimately, the need to probe and examine seldom arises, and you are free both to express yourself more openly and appreciate others more fully.

Also born on this date are Gen. Maxwell Taylor, World War II commander; James Franck, German physicist.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — An unusual situation may require tact and courtesy today. Do your best to prevent a rift between family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Personal wealth may take a back seat to community well-being today. Focus on group effort, achievement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — As you approach a turning point, your fears should be put to rest by friends who know you perhaps better than you do!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Do not exaggerate the importance of a minor impasse; get to the root of the problem and it should be easily ironed out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You may be introduced to a variety of foreign customs today — and reap much knowledge and enjoyment from the experience!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — An unexpected illness within the family circle may force a delay of plans — but do not abandon them completely!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You may awake puzzled or depressed today — but by afternoon the meaning becomes clear; be patient.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — A bad habit that friends may have warned you of gets in the way today; employ self-discipline, control.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You have the opportunity to point another in the right — or wrong — direction today; be sensitive, caring.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You may once again experience a "roller coaster" of misinformation. Satisfy yourself, ease tension, seek expert opinion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — The balance of power may shift strongly in your favor — but do not misuse newfound authority. As always, wisdom counts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Do not allow idle gossip or rumor to determine your course today. Situation calls for direct, firm action.

WHERE NEXT? — Hikers take a break, have a snack and check their map during a Monmouth County Park System-sponsored backpacking trip. An easy to moderate hike to Watchung Reservation is planned for Sept. 14, and a backpacking trip overnight in the Pine Barrens for Sept. 28 and 29. Pre-registration for both trips is required. Program reservations at Thompson Park, Lincroft, should be contacted.

Beauty help in pantry

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For the reader who wrote you asking for kitchen aids that can be used for skin and hair treatments, here are some of my favorites:

Use camomile tea as a rinse to give blonde hair a golden sheen. Beer is excellent for a quick setting lotion. Just pour it on your hair after the final rinse. If you live in an area where there is a lot of lime in the water, add two tablespoons of vinegar to your final rinse and it will help rinse out any lime or minerals.

To put life in dry hair use olive, almond or avocado oil as a conditioner. Warm the oil and saturate your hair, then wrap your head in a hot towel for 15 minutes, wash and rinse well.

Avocado contains vitamins and its oil, an excellent moisturizer and nourisher, is easily absorbed in the skin.

Use lemon juice as an astringent, unless you have very dry skin. Lemon juice has a drying effect. It also will whiten the skin. You can mix it with glycerine to make it less sharp.

Honey will protect, nourish and heal. It's a good facial treatment. — Mrs. Mary Berlin

Isn't it wonderful that you can open the refrigerator door or check out the pantry shelves and find such a wonderful array of natural ingredients to make you beautiful?

My favorite kitchen beauty aid is honey. I clean my face, put it on and relax for 10 to 15 minutes, then rinse well. It's wonderful. — Heloise

HELP WANTED ADS

Dear Heloise: When searching the want ads for employment, use a colored accent marker to circle the positions you are interested in. In this way, you have a quick reference when checking back on them. This sure saves time. — Kuitlela

STICKY CARMEL CORN

Dear Heloise: What would be a good paper to use to wrap popcorn balls so they won't stick to the paper so much? — Louise Carpenter

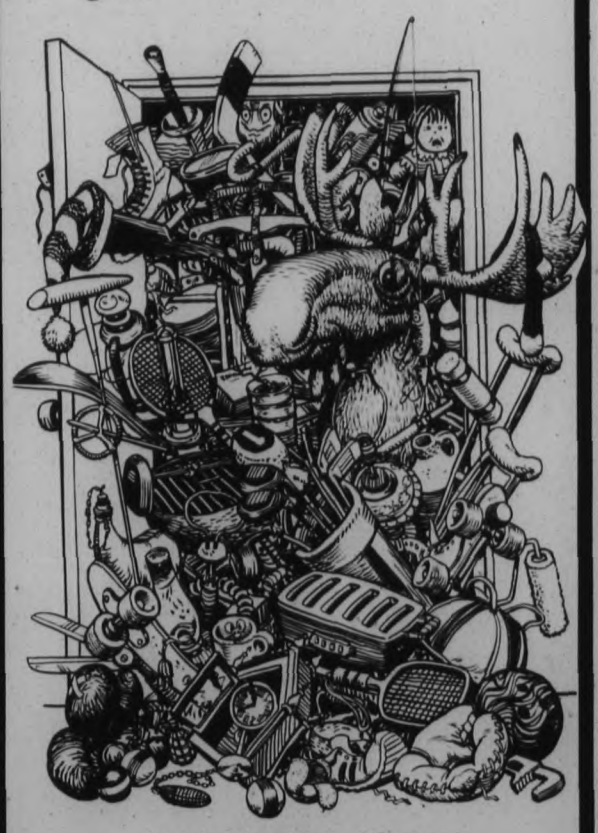

Any wrap made for food will do the job if it is lightly greased with butter or margarine. — Heloise

'Buck and Co. give Park superior meet

OCEANPORT — With all the attendant splendor of Spend a Buck, richly deserved, one must not lose sight of the fact that it takes hundreds of horses to provide the successful meeting that Monmouth Park has experienced.

Attendance is up almost 10 percent and handle is up over 11 percent. It takes an attractive melange of stakes, allowance and claiming events to bring the racing fans into the park to wager. Superior programs must be provided especially on Tuesdays and Saturdays. Tuesdays lure the heavy bettors from New York since racing is dark there on that day.

Racing Secretary Robert J. Kulina and his assistants have consistently provided quality cards to draw the people and increase the handle through the first 80 days of the meeting. They will continue to do so this final week. Racing continues at the Meadowlands on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 2.

Over the course of a season, certain horses stand out for one reason or another. Spend a Buck, second-leading money earner in thoroughbred racing history with winnings of $4,220,689, is the obvious one. Spend a Buck, currently the leading 3-year-old in the country, ran second to Skip Trial in the $305,000 Grade I Haskell Invitational Handicap on July 27 and came back to nip Carr de Naskra, a 4-year-old, by a nose in the $250,000 Grade I Monmouth Handicap on Aug. 17.

Spend a Buck drew crowds of 31,386 and 22,531 respectively on those two dates. He certainly crowned Monmouth Park's meeting, but regular everyday fans grew to know and appreciate horses of less spectacular fame, horses with more of a local flavor, who exhibited courage and stamina in whatever type of race they ran.

Three that stand out are Dee Jo Stable's Valiant Lark, trained by Henry L. Carroll, Mr. Zookies' Meru, conditioned by Alan Seewald and Middletown Stable's Jolly Dona, trained by Antonio A. Arcodia.

Valiant Lark, owned primarily by Basil Plasteras, owner of Squire's Pub in West Long Branch and Joe Palaia, New Jersey Assemblyman from Ocean Township, won the Salvator Mile at Monmouth Park to earn a shot at Spend a Buck in the Monmouth Handicap.

Valiant Lark ran fourth to Spend a Buck there, but was subsequently placed third through the disqualification of Rumptious.

The 5-year-old son of Buffalo Lark had two prestigious wins last year, taking the New Hampshire Sweepstakes Handicap on September 3 and the Styvesant Handicap at Aqueduct on Nov. 10. He ran out in an allowance race there on Dec. 1 and then was rested until June 8 here at Monmouth. He tired in his comeback and finished fourth, but then won an allowance test and finished second twice before the Salvator.

Meru, a seven-year-old, pressed Spend a Buck gamely for six furlongs in the Monmouth Handicap before tiring and finishing fifth, ahead of the disqualified Rumptious. The 7-year-old Dewan gelding defeated Valiant Lark in the Five Star Flight Handicap here on July 27 and then ran fourth to him in the Salvator. He has 84 career starts with 20 wins, 15 seconds and 16 thirds.

Valiant Lark and Meru are expected to renew their rivalry in the 1985 New Hampshire Sweepstakes Handicap on Sept. 2 at Rockingham Park.

Mr. Zookies is a pseudonym for Irving Antar, former general manager of Crazy Eddie's and Captain Video retail stores. Antar speaks glowingly of Seewald.

"He treats horses right. He's a working trainer," he said. "He gets down on his hands and knees. He takes the time. If he had 20 horses, he'd be the same way." Seewald, fairly new to Monmouth Park, has quickly earned great respect among those who understand racing.

Jolly Dona provides an amazing story. The 4-year-old Don Sebastian filly ran for a $6,500 claiming tag here on May 25, winning by five lengths. She then finished third in $12,500 claiming company on June 6 and won a $14,000 claimer on June 17.

Arcodia then jumped her into the allowance ranks and she won by two lengths on June 29. After a second in allowance company on July 9, she shocked racing fans with a nose victory over Nick's Nag in the Grecian Comedy Stakes here on July 20 at odds of 24-1.

Jolly Dona then ran out in her first turf try, but came back to get nosed out of a win by multiple-stakes winner Rainbow Colors here on Aug. 20 in a top allowance event.

Hundreds of horses provide hundreds of stories. These are four thoroughbreds who brought pleasure and prestige to Monmouth Park in 1985.

Becomes youngest ever

Gooden notches 20th victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden is a near-perfect 20-20, and he has a vision of even greater things to come.

Yesterday, the 20-year-old New York Mets right-hander became the youngest 20-game winner in major-league history, beating San Diego 9-3 for his 14th straight victory.

"It would mean a great deal to get 300 victories, like Tom Seaver," Gooden said, "but I just have to take one at a time until I get there."

Gooden, who now has 37 victories in less than two seasons, also would like to get the Mets, one game behind St. Louis in the National League East, into the World Series this year.

"Winning 20 games means a lot to me," Gooden said, "but a World Series would too, and I think we can do it."

While Gooden was less than his spectacular self yesterday, throwing 97 pitches in six innings' work, but he got some spectacular offensive support from his teammates, particularly Darryl Strawberry.

Strawberry had three hits, including a homer, four RBI and scored four times, making a loser of Eric Show, 9-8.

"Dwight didn't really have his good fastball today," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "I'm sure he would have given me another inning, but he threw 140 pitches his last time out and 90-some this time."

Gooden, 20-3, left with a 4-3 lead, but the Mets scored four runs in the seventh and another one in the eighth. Usually around 95 mph, Gooden's fastball reached a top of 93 mph and was clocked usually at 89-90 mph.

"You know," Johnson said, "Dwight has taken leads into the ninth inning twice, once here and once in Montreal, that we didn't protect for him. So, it's only fair we help him out this time. ... He's only human."

Despite losing, the Padres stayed 6½ games back of Los Angeles in the NL West, with the Dodgers losing 6-1 to Montreal.

"It's a break for us that Los Angeles lost," Padres Manager Dick Williams said. "We were behind the whole game. We gave them three runs in the first inning, all unearned.

"Gooden wasn't sharp today," Williams said. "That's probably the reason they took him out with a one-run lead. Gooden struggled all the way."

Gooden, 20-3, is the second pitcher this year to win 20 games. Joaquin Andujar, who has lost seven times, won his 20th for the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night.

Gooden's winning streak is the longest in the majors this year, equalling the string that Rick Sutcliffe of the Chicago Cubs put together last season in winning the National League Cy Young award. Gooden hasn't lost a game since May 25.

At 20 years, 9 months, 9 days old, Gooden is a little shy of a month younger than Bob Feller was when he won his 20th game for the Cleveland Indians in 1939. Feller was 20 years, 10 months 5 days old. The youngest previous National Leaguer to win 20 games was Christy Mathewson at 21 years, 1 month, 9 days old in 1901.

Gooden gave up three runs, one unearned, on five hits in six innings before being replaced for a pinch hitter. He struck out four, pushing his major league-leading total to 212, and walked one. Gooden's earned run average of 1.78 also leads the majors.

Roger McDowell replaced Gooden to start the seventh and earned his 12th save, allowing only an infield hit in three innings.

One of two third-inning runs against Gooden was unearned after his own error. Tony Gwynn knocked in the second run with a single.

The Mets took a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Strawberry's two-run double and scored on Howard Johnson's RBI single.

Strawberry homered to straightaway center field in the fifth inning, making it 4-2.

Gooden gave up another run in the sixth when Steve Garvey doubled, went to third on a fly ball and scored on Terry Kennedy's grounder.

New York broke open the game with four runs in the seventh on George Foster's two-run double, Rusty Staub's RBI single and McDowell's run-scoring double. Strawberry added his RBI single in the eighth.

Maltbie earns champs' cheer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The crowd cheered as Roger Maltbie walked up the 18th fairway of the Firestone Country Club course, a sure winner of the NEC World Series of Golf. It was the first time Maltbie had ever experienced that feeling, and he decided he enjoyed it.

"That's the first time I've ever faced that," said Maltbie, who finished at 12-under-par 268, four shots ahead of defending champion Denis Watson.

"I've never walked down the 18th hole knowing that I could almost do anything to win ... knowing that all I had to do was just put it on the green and not have a heart attack."

His four previous victories in a 10-year Professional Golfers Association Tour career were each by a single stroke. But yesterday, safely in the 18th fairway and ahead by three shots, Maltbie was finally able to savor a champion's welcome.

Maltbie was spared all worries after Watson's round disintegrated with a double-bogey on the par-4 14th hole that dropped him three shots off the pace. He finished at 8-under-par 272.

Watson, who worked as Maltbie's caddie during the 1977 British Open, took some credit for the victory.

"All those things I told him in '77 are finally starting to come around," Watson cracked.

Another shot back at 273 were Tom Kite and Calvin Peete, while Hal Sutton was alone at 274. Raymond Floyd, with a glittering 64 in the final round, closed at 275.

Maltbie clutched a one-shot advantage until Watson's disastrous 14th hole. The South African had shared the lead with Maltbie after the first and third rounds, and had birdied the 13th to get to 10 under, one stroke back of his playing partner.

But at the 14th hole, Watson caught the right fairway bunker with his drive, then blasted out short of the green. His third shot flew over the green and nestled in a muddy cart path, from where he hit a wedge short of the green. Finally, he chipped to within five feet and holed the putt for his double bogey.

Meanwhile, Maltbie was posting a par. Suddenly, a one-shot lead had become a three-shot advantage and the chase was over.

Maltbie said the key to his round was a string of pars on holes 12 through 17 as the challenges by Watson and Sutton fizzled.

HITTING HOME — Dr. Harold Nolan of Navesink reaches for the finish line in the Bill Lloyd Memorial Five-Mile Run held in Red Bank yesterday. Nolan was clocked in 25.29. See story in Sports Briefs.

Pasqua helps Yanks gain

SEATTLE (AP) — Rookie Dan Pasqua tried to not think about the pennant race as he did his part in keeping the New York Yankees in the thick of the race.

"I realized that we're in a pennant race, but when I got to the plate I had to block it out," said Pasqua, who drove in four runs with a homer, double and single to lead New York an 8-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners yesterday.

The Yankees picked up a game in the standings on the Tornto Blue Jays, who lost 5-3 to Chicago, and are now three games back in the American League East.

"I just want to do something to help the team win," said Pasqua, who has been struggling at the plate since being recalled form the minors on Aug. 16. He had just two hits in his previous 15 at-bats.

"He was in a slump when he came back," said New York Manager Billy Martin. "He was even in a slump in batting practice."

Pasqua belted a three-run homer in first inning and added an RBI double in the sixth.

"Lou Piniella (New York batting coach) has been giving me little tips each day. Each little thing he tells me helps," said Pasqua. "I just have to keep working hard and hope that it becomes habit."

Don Mattingly added a two-run homer as the Yankees won for the 10th time in their last 11 games.

Ed Whitson, 8-7, sailed through the first six innings, allowing just one hit, but was knocked out in the seventh after yielding two-run homers to Alvin Davis and Jim Presley. Brian Fisher pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for his ninth save.

Mike Moore, 11-8, was the loser.

In the sixth, Pasqua doubled home Dave Winfield and then scored on a single by Butch Wynegar, giving the Yankees a 5-0 lead.

Rickey Henderson led off the seventh with a single and scored ahead of Mattingly's 23rd home run of the season. Mattingly now has 104 RBI, tops in the major leagues.

Seattle scored all five of its runs in the bottom of the seventh. Davis' two-run homer was his 12th of the season and Presley's was his 25th.

Spike Owen added a run-scoring single before Fisher got out of the inning by getting Phil Bradley to ground into a bases-loaded double play.

A groundout by Ken Griffey gave the Yankees' their final run in the ninth.

Jet-Giant clash resembles brawl

EAST RUTHERFORD — They've been holding the summer war between the New York Jets and Giants since 1969. None of those battles could surpass the 1985 version, won by the Giants, 34-31, in overtime Saturday night.

"It was really exciting, for the fans, the players, for everyone," said Jeff Rutledge, the Giants' second-string quarterback who was directly responsible for much of the excitement. "The intensity was high, the blood was really flowing, it was something."

Rutledge was something, too. The Jets led, 31-24, and were deep in Giants' territory late in the fourth quarter when Johnny Hector was hit at the 4. When he landed, he fumbled and the Giants recovered.

Rutledge, who had taken over for Phil Simms midway through the third period, marched his team 82 yards in nine plays to tie it on an 11-yard topuchdown pass to Lionel Manuel on a square-out with six seconds to go.

"I really couldn't tell (if it was a touchdown)," said Rutledge. "I just threw it, I didn't see it. I got hit."

Rutledge had made two big plays on the drive before teaming with Manuel. He found rookie Stacy Robinson for 19 yards on a fourth-and-9, then hit Manuel for 14 yards with 10 seconds left.

The Jets took the kickoff in overtime but couldn't move and punted. Rutledge drove the Giants 62 yards in 10 plays to Eric Schubert's 30-yard field goal at 6:26 of overtime and the Giants were 4-0 in the National Football League preseason.

The Jets, who played without regulars at virtually every position, are 0-3.

"It was a good effort by everybody, but we still lost," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "We can be proud of a lot of the kids who played hard and worked hard.

"I think with the injuries we had and with a lot of young kids out there, we did very well. We're still learning."

The Giants opened a 10-0 first period lead as they stymied the Jets on four possessions with a first down. Starting QB Phil Simms hit tight end Zeke Mowatt with a 40-yard pass down the middle just prior to finding Mowatt for 11 yards and a touchdown at 6:53.

Schubert, a native of Wanaque, N.J. then kicked a 33-yard field goal on the final play of the period. Schubert, signed because regular kicker Ali Haji-Sheikh has a pulled hamstring, was supposed to spend the day playing in a high school alumni football game.

It was almost all Jets in the second quarter as QB Ken O'Brien led a turnaround. Donnie Elder's 44-yard kickoff return sparked the Jets, and O'Brien found wide receiver Jo Jo Townsell for 29 yards, then in the end zone from the 11.

O'Brien guided a nine-play, 53-yard march which was capped by Hector's 1-yard plunge for a 14-10 lead, then O'Brien connected with Wesley Walker for a 38-yard score.

Simms brought the Giants back within 21-17, using the hurry-up offense to move 55 yards in five plays. The payoff came on a 36-yard toss to Byron Williams, who was all alone in the end zone after a Simms scramble.

The Jets weren't through, though. Larry Winters bobbled a John Misko punt with 17 seconds to go and Pat Leahy kicked a 55-yard field goal at the halftime buzzer.

Back came Simms and the Giants, tying it, 24-24, on Maurice Carthon's 1-yard dive, only to see the Jets go ahead early in the fourth quarter. A well-conceived 10-play, 76-yard drive culminated in Mickey Shuler's 10-yard scoring reception from Pat Ryan.

Then Rutledge staged his heroics.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Nolan wins Lloyd Memorial run

RED BANK — Dr. Harold Nolan of Navesink took the lead from the start and never looked back in easily winning the annual Bill Lloyd Memorial 5-Mile Road Run yesterday. The race is sponsored by St. James Roman Catholic Church and 182 runners finished.

Nolan, the defending champion, won the race with a 25:29 clocking. That was 13 seconds off the course record of 25:16 which he set in winning last year's race. Wet roads, rain and high humidity prevented what might have been another record.

"My plan was to take the lead from the start," Nolan said. "I ran bad in the Asbury Park 10-Kilometer race because I was sick. I wanted to start training for the Jersey Shore Marathon in November.

Nolan defeated runnerup Hoyle Mozee of Long Branch by better than a minute. Mozee was timed in 26:30. Former Henry Hudson Regional cross country star Bill Loughran was third. Steve Thompson (27:02) and Sean MacDonald (27:18) were fourth and fifth.

Rutgers University woman's track and cross country coach Roberta Anthes of New Brunswick was the first woman finisher. She was timed in 29:38. Krystal Hagen of Fort Monmouth was runnerup in 33:37 while Sue Cain of Silver Springs, Md. was third with a 34:05 clocking.

Spearel wins in Masters Rowing

PHILADELPHIA — Dick Spearel of Oceanport, representing the Navesink River Rowing Club, won the Masters Men over-40 event in the Alden rowing shell at the National Masters Rowing Regatta over the weekend.

Charlie Gross of Fair Haven and Ed Whitman of Toms River, also comepting for the Navesink River Rowing Club, were second and third respectively in the Masters Men over-27 Alden race.

The Navesink River Rowing Club Men's 4 finished fifth overall.

All races were 1,000 meters and 20 rowing clubs from all over the country competed in the two-day event held on the Schuylkill River.

The Navesink Rowing Club will meet the Burlington United Boat Club Oct. 5. The club welcomes any new members with experience.

Fair Haven River Rats

FAIR HAVEN — Ed Pitts (Rhodes 19) won both races in the Handicap Fleet yesterday in the Fair Haven River Rats series. Dave Muir (Rhodes 19) was second in both races.

Dick Plum and Al Schiavetti were the winners in the Sunfish class. Both skippers had a second while Sue Pulsch had a pair of thirds.

Becker cruises to ATP crown

MASON, Ohio (AP) — West German Boris Becker said he came close to teaching Mats Wilander a tennis lesson yesterday when he defeated the Swede 6-4, 6-2 in the finals of the Association of Tennis Professionals Championship here.

Becker, who won $48,000, said Saturday that in their last meeting, Wilander taught him a lesson by beating him 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 in the second round of the French Open.

"This time, maybe I didn't give him a tennis lesson, but it was close. Today, maybe I was just too good. At the French Open he was too good," Becker said.

The 17-year-old Becker this year became the youngest player ever to win the Wimbledon singles title. As a result of the victory, he was ranked the No. 9 player in the world.

Becker was seeded fourth and the 21-year-old Wilander, currently No. 3 in the world, was seeded first in the ATP event at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

"At the moment, I rank myself No. 3, behind (John) McEnroe and (Ivan) Lendl," Becker said after he defeated Wilander.

Wilander said his opponent should rank third or fourth.

Becker won $48,000 and Wilander $24,000 of the tournament's $375,000 purse.

Becker served 10 aces to Wilander's two.

Wilander came closest to Becker in the first set, when he served an ace to go ahead 2-1. After a five-minute rain delay, Becker and Wilander had a long battle from the baseline.

Then Becker made a short shot, and Wilander, in usual Swedish playing style, did not come up to the net.

Becker went ahead 40-0 in the fourth game, served an ace, then tied the score at 2-2.

Wilander then went ahead 3-2 in the next game. Wilander came up to the net a few times and did not allow the West German any points.

But in the seventh game, Becker broke Wilander's service for the first time, making the score 4-3.

In the second set, Becker broke Wilander's serve two more times, once breaking a 1-1 tie, the second time going ahead four games to one.

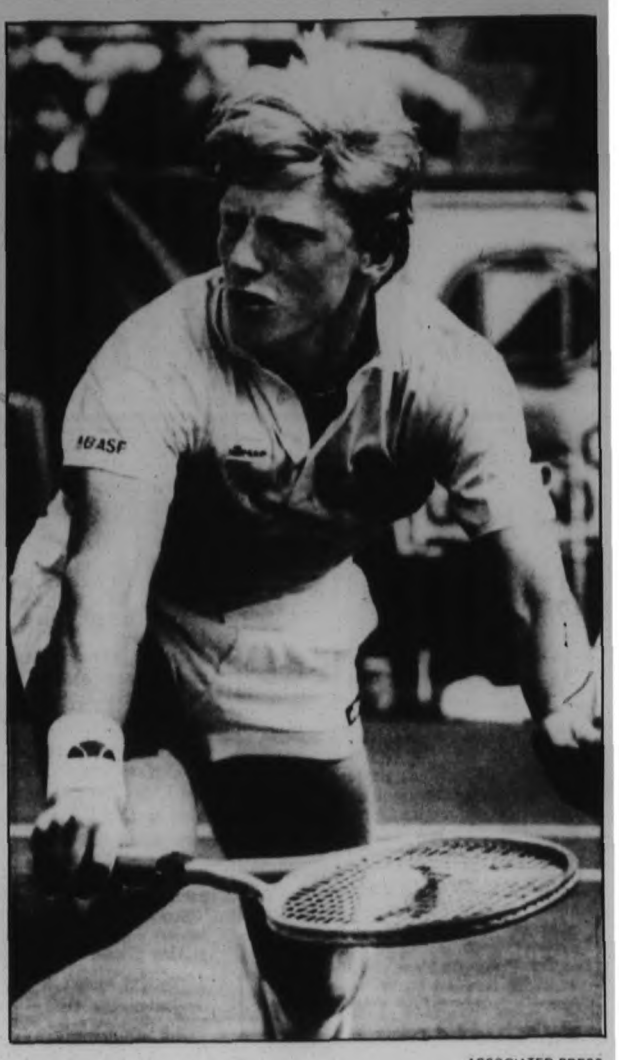

"I played bad when I lost two service breaks against Boris in the second set. Against Boris, because he serves so well, you can't afford to do that," Wilander said.

Becker's serves played an important part in the first set when he was ahead by one game, 4-3. With the score 15-15, Becker served an ace. Then he made a drop shot over the net, getting another point.

Wilander got the next point, but Becker came back with another ace, winning the game and going ahead 5-3 to cries of "Boris, Boris," from the capacity crowd of 7,488.

Becker served two more aces in the 10th game of the match to win the first set.

"Maybe I will be better in the Open," Wilander said in reference to the U.S. Open, which starts Tuesday in Flushing Meadow, N.Y. He and Becker play in the first round.

Rose misses date he picked for hit

CINCINNATI (AP) — It doesn't matter that the honored guest is a little late. Cincinnati Reds fans are geared up for their biggest baseball feast since the glory days of the 1970s.

That will come when player-manager Pete Rose, the city's favorite son, strokes the hit that surpasses Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191. Baseball fans already are salting away Rose-Cobb memorabilia, ranging from commemorative medals to T-shirts and books.

No one is dismayed that it has taken Rose a little longer than he originally figured to get his 95th hit of the season.

Rose didn't play yesterday in a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs and remained 12 hits shy of the mark. In the off-season, he had picked today as the probable target date for 4,192, a number he covets but doesn't worry about.

"I'm going to keep getting hits," he said. "That's my job. I won't stop after 12. I wouldn't be surprised if I get four the next day."

Last February, Rose made an appearance on behalf of Mizuno, the sporting goods line he endorses. A Mizuno official surprised Rose with a blown-up calendar of September, handed Rose a marker and had him to circle the day he thought he'd break Cobb's record.

Rose scratched out September and penned in "Aug.," then circled the 26th. He pointed out this weekend that, although he's missed the mark, it was never a scientific guess.

"There was no way for me to judge, no way for me to know," Rose said. "I didn't look. I just hit the 26th."

There's no sense of letdown that he's off the mark, and no sense of urgency in getting to 4,192.

Rose, 44, has been content to chip away at Cobb's mark, playing himself only against right-handed pitchers and using Tony Perez, 43, at first base against lefties. Perez had two hits Sunday to raise his average to .338.

Rose is sticking with the platoon system at first base even though it could cost him a shot at the record during the current homestand, which lasts through next Sunday. The Reds then leave for six games before returning home.

The matter of where he'll get the hit has been a little sticky. Reds owner Marge Schott would like Rose to get it at Riverfront Stadium, where large crowds are expected this week and during the next homestand.

"Obviously, I'd like to do it here," Rose said. "But it's not a do-or-die thing with me. It might be with Marge. She told me the other night, 'Boy, I want you to get that hit at home.' I want to get off the phone when she starts talking like that."

The city's ready to witness the historic hit and those leading up to it. A sign above a downtown office tower has counted down Rose's hits since Opening Day. Rose-Cobb shirts are selling briskly, and more than 106,000 people turned out for a three-game weekend series with the Cubs.

One city council candidate even made Rose a campaign issue last week, urging a cleanup campaign to make a favorable impression on Riverfront Stadium visitors.

There are Pete Rose billboards — some announcing future Reds games, others hawking "Wheaties" cereal. And Rose's office is usually filled with a stream of reporters and cameras detailing his days as he gets close to Cobb.

Rose is taking the charged atmosphere — which one reporter recently compared to a carnival — in good humor.

"It's always a carnival atmosphere. You guys are all clowns," Rose joked, drawing a room full of laughs. "How am I going to get rid of the carnival?"

Rains can't cancel horse show

By ANNE TINSDALE

FREEHOLD — In spite of the heavy rains which all but flooded the two inadequately drained sand rings at the East Freehold Showgrounds yesterday, the 17th Annual Eastern States Dressage and Combined Training Association Dressage Show went off as scheduled with few scratches.

Regular exhibitors on the Dressage circuit, to whom weather is apparently no deterrent, traveled here from all over New Jersey, as well as New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware. Although each ride is precisely timed and scheduled prior to the opening of the show, exhibitors graciously agreed to ride earlier or to put in an extra ride to fill a vacant time slot.

One of the basic elements in Dressage is a unique rapport between horse and rider. At all levels the degree of concentration on the test being performed seems to defy the interference of almost any distraction. Yesterday was no exception as elegantly clad exhibitors in formal riding attire, aboard equally well turned out mounts, seemed impervious to the moisture from above and the sloshing of mud beneath their feet.

A highlight of the afternoon's events was the freestyle Kur performed to a medley of patriotic music, by 16 year old Heather Mason and her 13-hand Welsh/cross pony, True Story, medalists at the USDF championships last October in Kansas City.

Heather and her pony were also trophy winners yesterday, taking back home to Lebanon, NJ the Family Nursing Service Pony Club Trophy awarded to the registered Pony Club member attaining the highest percent score of the competition. The pair which also earned the award in 1984, won this year with a score of 64.5 for the Kur, and an overall average of 59.66 percent.

Eighteen year-old Scott Hassler, of Quarryville, Pa., and his young Holsteiner stallion Cabarat, performed with exceptional grace and style to earn a total of 181 points and a high percentage score of 64.64 to win the First Level Test 4 as well as the Junior High Percent Score.

The pair also placed fourth with 190 points and 63.33 percent in First Level Test 3, an impressive score against such formidable competition as Emily Russell Mac Gowan and Jet Set, 211/70.33, Hans Dressler and Graf Grande, 206/68.67, and Sally Harden and Cicero, 197/65.67, placing first, second and third respectively.

Mac Gowan and Jet Set were the Senior High Percent Champions (Second Level and below), with the Senior High Percent Championship (Third Level and above) going to Anne Rawle and her Again & Again for their winning performances at Third Level, tests 1,2 and 3.

The latter pair were also the recipients of the Ellwood Geissler Memorial Trophy for the high point winners at third level, and the Major Deszo Szilagyi Perpetual Trophy for the horse and rider with the single highest percentage score of the competition at third or fourth level.

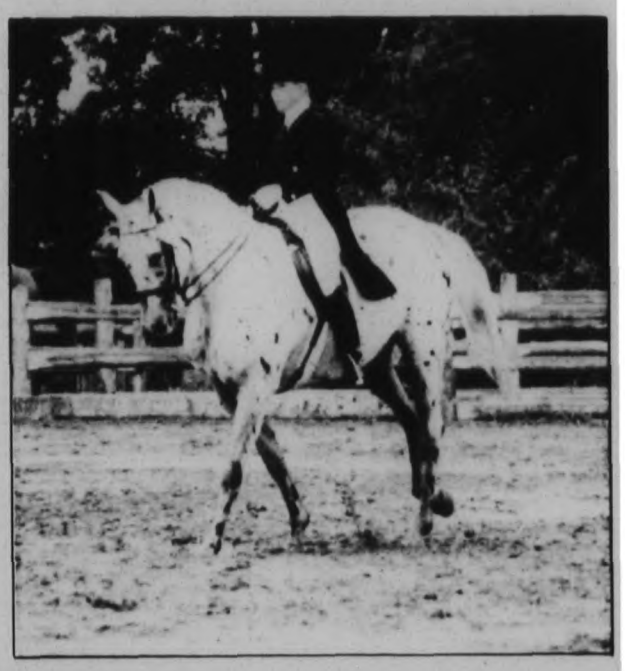

Anne Stanford, Princeton, NJ, rode Deborah Slovata's Athena to win the Louise Strunsky Perpetual Trophy for Training Level high point score. Hans Dressler was awarded, for the second year in a row, the Col. Bengt Lunquist Memorial Trophy for high points scored with his magnificant First Level stallion Graf Grande. Second Level winner of the Elliot Haller Perpetual Memorial Trophy was Annmarie Gatto, Northport, NY and her Solitaire. The Hobby Horse Hill Challenge Trophy went to Fourth Level winners Cathy Morelli and Pagliccio.

Karen Ramsing, Unionville, Pa., and her Securian faced strong competition to win the Prix St. Georges and the Brigdier General John Tupper Cole Trophy, with a high point average of 228 over Hans Dressler and his champion stallion Morgenstern who placed second with an average of 223. Pamela Steinberg, Katonah, NY, who rode her appropriately named Appaloosa, Raindancer, picked up an average score of 216.5 and third place.

The ESDCTA President's Trophy, awarded to the horse and rider with the highest percentage score at the highest FEI level, went to Grand Prix exhibitor Cathy Morelli and St. Maudlens, owned by Louise Tiernan, Bedminster, for their solo ride at this level, earning a score of 54.8 percent.

Vicki Rickabaugh, Jackson, NJ, rode Jody Malik to win the Training Level Test 3, with a percentage score of 66, and pick up the Eastern Arabian Dressage Association Trophy awarded to the Arabian or Half-Arabian with the highest percentage score on any test.

The Winslow Therapeutic Riding Unlimited Perpetual Trophy, awarded to the horse and rider with the single highest percentage score at Intermediare I or II, went to Hans Dressler and Morgenstern, who scored 58.13 to win Intermediare I.

Who will challenge Dolphins for AFC crown?

NEW YORK (AP) — Nothing is ever perfect for Don Shula. Not even perfection.

"Our offense broke all the passing records in the NFL last year and we feel we have those same capabilities to continue that pace. But we also need better balance," says the coach of the Miami Dolphins, who breezed through the AFC last year before a 38-16 drubbing by the San Francisco 49ers in the Super Bowl.

In his quest for that balance, Shula drafted Lorenzo Hampton to upgrade a running game that last year was little more than a diversion from the passing of Dan Marino to the Marks, Duper and Clayton.

But even with that balance, there's no guarantee that the Dolphins will dominate the conference as they did last season. Contract squbbles have kept Marino out of camp, and All-Pro guard Ed Newman is lost for the season with a knee injury.

The Dolphins would be prohibitive favorites to win the weak AFC East even without Marino, who threw a National Football League-record 48 touchdown passes and 5,048 yards.

But there are hazards lurking elsewhere, particularly out west, where the Seattle Seahawks, Denver Broncos and Los Angeles Raiders are bona fide contenders and the Kansas City Chiefs and San Diego Chargers potential troublemakers. Add Pittsburgh and maybe Cincinnati to the contenders.

If anyone challenges Miami in the East, it will be New England (9-7), where Raymond Berry begins his first full year.

Tony Eason, who threw for 3,228 yards and 23 touchdowns as a second-year man, may be even more productive if wide receiver Irving Fryar, the NFL's top draft pick last year, stays healthy. The running is also solid; Berry plans to go to a two-back offense, teaming Craig James and Tony Collins in the backfield.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SCRAMBLES FOR SAFETY — Holdout quarterback Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins scrambles against the San Francisco 49ers in last year's Super Bowl. The Dolphins are hoping Marino will lead them to the title game again this season.

The rest of the division is rebuilding.

Coach Joe Walton of the New York Jets (7-9) has a new three-year contract with which to rebuild a team that just three years ago came within a game of the Super Bowl. He's gone from a 4-3 defense to a 3-4 and is cutting veterans, including linebacker Greg Buttle and safety Darrol Ray.

Ken O'Brien is starting to come around at quarterback, but he'll be without deep threat Lam Jones, out with a torn tendon in his finger. So he'll rely more on Freeman McNeil, one of the NFL's top running backs when he's healthy.

The Jets also need outside linebackers. Ron Faurot, last year's top draft pick, is moving there from defensive end and All-Pro Mark Gastineau may also play there from time to time.

Buffalo (2-14), gave Kay Stephenson another year to redeem himself only because no other coach could be found. Then the Bills unloaded veteran quarterback Joe Ferguson, got Vince Ferragamo from Los Angeles to replace him and took defensive end Bruce Smith and cornerback Derrick Burroughs in the first round of the draft.

But it will take more than that to make the Bills contenders, particularly since the price for Ferragamo included tight end Tony Hunter, a first pick two years ago.

Indianapolis (4-12) has a new coach in Rod Dowhower, the former offensive coordinator in St. Louis, who replaces Frank Kush. That's not enough.

What's lacking in the East is there in quantity in the West.

Chuck Knox' Seattle Seahawks went 12-4 last year despite the loss of running back Curt Warner, their chief offensive threat, in the first game. Warner is back and if he's not at full strength yet, he's still an improvement for a running game whose leading rusher, fullback David Hughes, gained 337 yards.

The strength of the Seahawks is a defense that led the league with 38 interceptions, seven returned for touchdowns, and a plus-24 takeaway ratio. Safety Kenny Easley, the NFL's defensive player of the year, picked off 10 by himself and scored two touchdowns.

Still, the Seahawks lost the division title to Denver (13-3), which played the same style, allowing just 15.1 points a game, picking off 31 passes and setting team records with 24 fumble recoveries and 57 sacks.

This year, Dan Reeves is hoping for continued improvement from quarterback John Elway, who threw for 2,598 yards and 18 touchdowns. One setback is the loss of running back Sammy Winder, the team's only Pro Bowl player, who will miss the early season following an appendectomy.

The Los Angeles Raiders had what was for them an off year, finishing 11-5 and losing to Seattle in the AFC wild-card game.

But Al Davis never panics.

Either Jim Plunkett or Marc Wilson, who took turns getting hurt last season, will be back at quarterback; the Raiders made a few overtures toward USFL refugee Bobby Hebert but preferred what they had. They also are satisfied with running back Marcus Allen, tight end Todd Christiansen and a defense that features end Howie Long and a secondary that's still the best in the league.

Kansas City beat Denver, Seattle and San Diego in its final three games to finish 8-8.

The Chiefs feature a couple of the NFL's most obscure but effective stars — quarterback Bill Kenney and free safety Deron Cherry. To that cast add running back Ethan Horton, drafted in the first round in an effort to give the Chiefs an effective running attack they have lacked for the past three seasons.

The more San Diego (7-9) changes, the more it stays the same — a scary offense and a defense that scares only Coach Don Coryell. This year's major additions are USFL all-stars, wide receiver Trumaine Johnson and running back Tim Spencer.

Once again, the top draft choice was on offense — guard Jim Lachey, the better to protect Dan Fouts. Fouts also would be happy if tight end Kellen Winslow can recover from a severe knee injury.

The Central Division has added some big names — Bernie Kosar in Cleveland, Mike Rozier in Houston and Kosar's favorite collegiate target, Eddie Brown, in Cincinnati. But Pittsburgh, which took the title last year with a 9-7 record, is still the class of a group that in the last five years has dropped from the top of the NFL to the bottom.

As the Steelers' name players have retired — Jack Lambert is the latest — Chuck Noll has been rebuilding with no-names such as linebacker Mike Merriweather and wide receiver Louis Lipps. For a little nostalgia, center Mike Webster is still around and John Stallworth came back from an injury-plagued 1982 to catch 80 passes last year.

Cincinnati finished 8-8 last year the gutsy way, winning its last five and remaining in contention for a division title until the final week.

Coach Sam Wyche, in his second season, has a three-way quarterback battle going among veteran Ken Anderson, longtime backup Turk Schonert and second-year Boomer Esiason. Whoever wins will have Brown added to Cris Collinsworth to form a dangerous receiving corps.

Cleveland (5-11) also has a quarterback battle — but Kosar will be the long-term winner over Paul McDonald, last year's starter, and Gary Danielson, picked up from Detroit. It was the offense, 24th last year in a 28-team league, that got Sam Rutigliano fired by midseason in favor of Marty Schottenheimer; the defense was the league's second best, statistically.

Houston (3-13) adds Rozier and Butch Woolfolk, obtained from the New York Giants, to an offense run by Warren Moon, who threw for 3,338 yards in his first year down from Canada. But defense remains a huge problem, particularly with the holdouts of lineman Ray Childress and cornerback Richard Johnson, the team's two top draft picks.

Bradley comes back to win

DENVER (AP) — Pat Bradley, 6 strokes off the lead as the day began, birdied her first three holes yesterday, drew into a tie with Amy Alcott and then sank a birdie putt on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to win the $300,000 LPGA National Pro-Am.

Bradley shot a closing 4-under-par 68 for a total of 4-under 284. Her 6-foot birdie putt at the par-5 15th hole — the second hole of the playoff — gave her the victory as Alcott collapsed, needing 6 strokes just to reach the green.

The triumph was worth $45,000 for Bradley, who is enjoying her most profitable and best-scoring season ever. It was her third victory of the year and gave her $337,653, moving her past Alice Miller into second place on the LPGA money list. Leader Nancy Lopez, who skipped this tournament, has $344,772.

"When I started the round, I thought I might get into the top five or maybe the top three," said Bradley. "Little did I know that 4-under would get me into a playoff. I didn't expect Amy to back up."

Alcott, the third-round leader, triple-bogeyed the first hole Sunday, righted herself with birdies at the second and fourth holes but then faded with bogeys at 13 and 16 before forcing the playoff with a birdie at 18. Alcott had a final-round 74.

Lori Garbacz and Beth Daniel both finished 1 shot back at 3-under 285. Daniel closed with a quiet 69, birdieing her last two holes, while Garbacz overcame a mid-round collapse and had a 73, also getting birdies at 17 and 18.

Val Skinner and Mary Beth Zimmerman were at 287, both closing with 70s, while Kathy Baker and Sherri Turner had 288 totals.

Bradley, 34, a native of Westford, Mass., who plays out of Marco Island, Fla., was 4-under for the day through seven holes. She knocked in birdie putts of 15, 5 and 5 feet on the first three holes. After a three-putt bogey at No. 4, she got two more birdies at Nos. 6 and 7, holing 6- and 10-foot putts.

"I started off like gangbusters," said Bradley. "On the 10th tee, I told myself to just be patient, if I can make five birdies on the front nine I can make some on the back. But they didn't happen."

Repeatedly burning the hole with her putts, she had to settle for par on each of the last nine holes.

"It got a little frustrating," she admitted. "Then when I knocked a birdie putt in the hole at 17 and it did a 360 and came out, I thought, 'It just wasn't meant to be, but you gave it a good try.'"

Her par finish was, however, good enough to tie.

Bradley drew into a deadlock with Alcott and Garbacz after the latter duo three-putted the eighth hole. Bradley finally went ahead after Alcott missed the green on the par-4 16th hole and made bogey, dropping to 3-under.

Alcott got back to 4-under, however, sinking a dramatic 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th green.

"I made a fabulous putt there," said Alcott. "I played pretty well all day, but I wasn't as mentally sharp as I'd like to be. Being in contention two straight weeks takes a lot out of you."

Alcott won last week's World Championship of Women's Golf.

"Even though I tripled the first hole, I hung in there and seemed to play my best golf when the chips were down," she said.

Alcott said she got "one of the worst breaks you could get" on the deciding playoff hole.

Both players scrambled for pars on the first playoff hole, No. 14.

At 15, Alcott's second shot rolled to the edge of a water hazard, giving her an almost impossible approach into the green.

"My six-iron landed in the left-center of the fairway and must have kicked 30 yards dead right to the edge of the hazard," she said. "I couldn't really go at it unless I wanted to break my wrists."

She punched the ball out of the treacherous lie, but it flew the green. Facing a tricky downhill chip shot, she hit long into a sand trap. She blasted out over the green again, then finally chipped to 2 feet. But she already had taken 6 strokes, and Bradley calmly sank her clinching birdie putt.

Korea serves notice in LL World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — It started in 1967, when the West Tokyo Little League won the World Series. For the next 12 years, it was the Taiwanese, who won 10 times.

On Saturday, Korea served notice that it, too, was mastering America's game. For the second straight year, a team from Seoul won the Little League World Series, this time by defeating Mexicali, Mexico, 7-1, in the first title game without an American team.

"I still think the (Nationalist) Chinese teams are the best," said Seong Yeol Kwag, who coached last year's and this year's teams. "We had a hard time with them this year."

Seoul edged Taiwan 2-1 to win the Far East region after averaging more than nine runs in previous rounds. Once in Williamsport, Seoul resumed the onslaught, defeating Maracaibo, Venezuela, 13-2, and Binbrook, Ontario, 16-0.

"Korean baseball ability is very improved," Kwag said. "It is important that their minds are always on baseball. They live baseball."

The Korean team has been together about a year, unlike American teams, which are all-star teams put together in mid-July from the ranks of local leagues. Serious training began in January. It showed.

Pitcher You-Yong Jung threw a one-hitter and walked just one batter — the only one he allowed in 10 innings at the World Series.

"Each practice, I do my best to pitch with control," Jung said. "So that's why I had good control."

In the two innings the Koreans staged threats, they scored. In the first, a squeeze bunt by Jai-Hak Shim knocked in one run.

Phillies bomb Giants, lowly Pirates sweep Astros

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia reliever Dave Rucker entered yesterday's game in the third inning expecting to pitch an inning or two at most. Instead, the left-hander hurled five scoreless innings to help the Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants 14-5.

Rucker, 2-1, got help from the offense with 10 extra-base hits, including home runs by Juan Samuel, Von Hayes, starter Kevin Gross and Glenn Wilson.

"I didn't think I would be pitching that long," said Rucker, who was recalled from the Pacific Coast League May 4. "I thought I would be out of there earlier."

Rucker allowed three hits, struck out five and walked only one. Despite pitching his longest stint of the season, he said he felt fine after the game.

"They kept checking on me and I kept telling them I felt fine. We you're having the kind of year I am, you never want to come out of the game," he said.

Phillies Manager John Felske said he might make the left-hander a starter next year.

"He did an outstanding job," Felske said. "He came in in a tough situation and got them out. We might want him to go to winter ball and work on being a starter," Felske said.

Giants Manager Jim Davenport was less than pleased with his pitchers.

"We just pitched badly, probably the worst outing all year. We got some key hits early, but not enough to hold up the way they were hitting."

Trailing 5-4 in the bottom of the fourth, the Phillies posted their second four-run inning of the game and knocked out loser Jim Gott, 4-10.

Rick Schu and Luis Aguayo hit consecutive doubles, and after Rucker's sacrifice, Aguayo was caught at the plate on Jeff Stone's grounder. Samuel then hit an inside-the-park home run to left center, driving in Stone and knocking out Gott.

Hayes then hit reliever Mark Davis' first pitch for his 13th home run of the year and an 8-5 Phillies lead.

They made it 11-5 in the sixth on Wilson's three-run homer off reliever Frank Williams. They got two more runs on Stone's triple in the seventh and one on Schu's RBI single in the eighth.

The Giants had taken a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Alex Trevino's two-run homer.

The Phillies came back with four in the bottom of the second on Aguayo's two-run triple and the first major-league homer by Gross, the Phillies starter.

The Giants went ahead 5-4 with three runs in the third on Chili Davis' run-scoring single, Dan Driessen's RBI groundout and a run-scoring single by David Green. Rucker relieved Gross after Driessen's grounder and blanked the Giants for the next five innings.

Pirates 9-10, Astros 3-9

PITTSBURGH — Sammy Khalifa singled home Mike Brown with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 10-9 victory and a doubleheader sweep of the Houston Astros.

In the first game, Rick Reuschel drove in three runs with a solo homer and a double and pitched a four-hitter to lead the Pirates to triumph.

In the nightcap, Brown reached third when losing pitcher Jeff Calhoun, 1-3, fielded his routine grounder and threw the ball into right field for Houston's fourth error.

One out later, with the infield and outfield pulled in, Khalifa bounced a single off the left field wall to give Don Robinson, 4-8, the fifth Pirates pitcher, the win.

Pittsburgh scored five runs in the seventh inning of the second game to take a 9-4 lead, but Houston rallied with four runs in the eighth and one in the ninth to tie it. The tying run scored when Jim Pankovits scored from first on Kevin Bass' double as left fielder Sixto Lezcano let the hit get by him for an error.

The score was tied 4-4 in seventh inning when Bill Madlock singled to put the Pirates ahead. Jason Thompson's RBI single and third baseman Denny Walling's throwing error gave the Pirates two more runs before Mike Brown's two-run double made it 9-4.

Houston rallied for their second four-run inning of the game in the eighth, making it 9-8, on RBI singles by Bass and Bill Doran and bases-loaded walks to Jose Cruz and Mark Bailey.

The Astros overcame a 4-0 deficit with a four-run sixth inning. Craig Reynolds hit a two-run homer off starter Jose DeLeon and Jerry Mumphrey and Glenn Davis hit RBI singles off reliever Pat Clements.

The Pirates scored three times in the fifth against starter Jeff Heathcock on Khalifa's leadoff homer and a two-run single by Thompson.

Reuschel, 10-6, allowed only one earned run as he pitched his third straight complete game in the opener.

Loser Mike Scott, 13-7, gave up six runs, including a solo home run to Denny Gonzalez, his third, and Reuschel's bases-loaded double in a five-run fourth inning.

Reuschel's home run, his first of the season and the third of his career, came off reliever Mike Madden in the eighth.

Expos 6, Dodgers 1

MONTREAL — Hubie Brooks reached a new summit, but the Montreal Expos' shortstop said he planned to push on to higher goals.

"It feels good to know that I've done better than last year," Brooks said after going 3-for-3 and driving in three runs with a sacrifice fly, a single and a triple in Montreal's victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. "But you can never be satisfied with the present.

"It's what you do now and in the future that's important," added Brooks, whose team-leading 74 RBI tops by one the personal best he set for a single season while with the New York Mets in 1984.

"I've been fortunate enough to play with guys who are good situation hitters that are able to drive in 80 runs a year."

Brooks's offense was more than enough for Bill Gullickson, who tossed a five-hitter to hand Los Angeles starter Bob Welch his first loss after an eight-game winning string.

"When I woke up this morning, I didn't even think we were going to play," said Gullickson, referring to the rain which fell most of the night, up until game time. "That's what Astroturf will do for you."

Gullickson, 12-9, lost his shutout bid in the ninth on Greg Brock's bases-loaded sacrifice fly. He issued three walks and struck out three in completing his third game.

Welch, 9-2, whose only other loss of the season came June 18 against the San Diego Padres, yielded a first-inning run when Brooks' sacrifice fly scored Tim Raines.

Brooks also knocked in Raines from third with an infield single in the third.

Gullickson helped his own cause in the fourth inning with an RBI double and Montreal added three runs in the seventh against Carlos Diaz.

Law doubled and scored on Dawson's single. Brooks then tripled home Dawson and scored on Terry Francona's single.

Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda was ejected from the game by third base umpire Dana DeMuth in the sixth inning. Lasorda was protesting an out call made by DeMuth on R.J. Reynolds, who slid into third base attempting to beat a throw by Dawson from right field.

Cardinals 5, Braves 2

ATLANTA — "It's not going to be nice and easy all the time," Andy Van Slyke said after the St. Louis Cardinals withstood a ninth-inning threat to down the Atlanta Braves and retain their one-game lead in the National League East race.

"There's been a lot of confidence on this team because I don't think we've lost a game we led in the eighth or ninth inning," said Van Slyke, who put the Redbirds ahead to stay with his 11th home run in the second inning.

"That's gonna happen," he said of the ninth inning when the Braves got the tying runs on base with two outs, thanks to an intentional walk to pinch-hitter Bob Horner.

"I wasn't going to pitch to Horner, no way," Manager Whitey Herzog said of the strategy that went against the book — you never put the tying run on base on purpose in that situation.

But Bill Campbell got a game-ending grounder out of pinch-hitter Rick Cerone and the Cards had their fifth straight victory.

"Any time you win on the road it's a plus," Van Slyke said. "Any time you win five in a row, you have momentum, and that's what we need now."

Kurt Kepshire, 10-7, blanked the Braves for six innings before yielding a leadoff homer in the seventh to Terry Harper, who later started the ninth with his second of the game and 16th of the year.

Kepshire, who is 5-1 in his last 10 starts, gave up five hits, two walks and fanned three before leaving with two down in the eighth.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Braves, who have lost 12 of their last 13 games.

Kepshire walked two and struck out three before Jeff Lahti relieved him with one out in the eighth and struck out Dale Murphy to end an Atlanta threat.

In the ninth, Lahti gave up another homer to Harper and the Braves loaded the bases before Bill Campbell got the last out for his fourth save.

Rick Mahler, 16-12, gave up 10 hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Van Slyke gave the Cardinals a 1-0 lead when he hit the first pitch of the second inning into the right field seats, his 11th homer of the year and his second of the three-game series.

St. Louis added another run in the third, loading the bases on consecutive singles by Vince Coleman, Willie McGee and Tom Herr before Coleman scored on Darrell Porter's groundout.

Porter doubled into the right field corner in the sixth and scored on Mike Jorgensen's single.

Herr hit a two-run triple in the seventh following an infield hit by Coleman and a walk to McGee.

Reds 5, Cubs 3

CINCINNATI — Buddy Bell and Bo Diaz are tired of failing to live up to their reputations since coming to the Cincinnati Reds.

They hope their hitting heroics in a victory over the Chicago Cubs are a sign that the good times are back.

Bell, hitting just .197 as a Red, doubled home a tying run in the fifth inning and Diaz, hitting .109 with Cincinnati, doubled home the winning run to help the Reds take two of three from the Cubs.

The Reds traded for third baseman Bell and catcher Diaz in hopes of strengthening their bid as a contender in the National League West, but the moves haven't started paying off yet.

Diaz, acquired from Philadelphia on Aug. 7, and Bell, brought to his hometown last month from Texas, were talking about their struggles before the victory.

"We just talked about how tough it is," Diaz said. "In his case, he's got to get to know everybody in a new league. To me, it's coming over so late in the season and having to get to know a new pitching staff. It's kind of tough."

Bell also had an infield single to raise his National League average above .200.

"Nobody likes to go through this," Bell said. "I'm just hoping it's over. There's nothing else I can do; I've been taking batting practice all the time and taking a lot of ground balls."

Nick Esasky, who moved to left field when Bell arrived, also knocked in a pair of runs with a single and an impressive home run on a nasty breaking ball.

HOT-CORNER BOBBLE — Third baseman Denny Walling of the Houston Astros bobbles the ball as Joe Orsulak of the Pittsburgh Pirates arrives safely in the third inning of the first game of yesterday's twinbill in Pittsburgh.

Waddell tosses Tribe past Brewers in twinbill sweep

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tom Waddell admits he's a bit surprised at his success thus far as a starter, but he thinks he went into the role with an understanding of the job.

"I always figure a starter was somebody who threw strikes and moved the ball around. Then if he gives up an occasional homer usualy there shouldn't be many on base," said Waddell, after pitching the Indians to a 6-2 victory in the first game of their doubleheader sweep against the Milwaukee Brewers yesterday.

Waddell, 7-5, yielded two runs on six hits in seven innings. Meanwhile, Ramon Romero and Bryan Clark continued Cleveland's stellar pitching performances with a six-hit, 2-0 shutout in the nightcap.

Waddell had made 98 relief appearances in the majors before his first start on July 31. The right hander is 3-0 in four starts with a 2.79 earned run average as a starter. He has won five straight decisions overall.

"Today, I didn't have a fastball or a good breaker but I threw strikes," said Waddell, who walked only one. "If I keep the ball down, change speeds and throw strikes, maybe I can keep hitters off-balance."

Romero, 2-2, blanked Milwaukee on four hits over the first five innings. He was lifted when the first two Milwaukee batters reached base in the sixth.

Clark struck out Earnest Riles and got Carlos Ponce to ground into a double play. Clark pitched two-hit relief in gaining his first save.

Mike Hargrove led off the Cleveland fifth by striking out, but reached first base on a wild pitch on strike three by Danny Darwin, 7-15. One out later, George Vukovich hit his fifth home run into the right-field seats.

Darwin, who pitched a one-hit, 4-1 victory over Minnesota in his last start, gave up only five hits as he pitched his 11th complete game. The loss was Darwin's 11th in his last 12 decisions.

In the first game, Jerry Willard and Hargrove each hit two-run singles to support Waddell.

Waddell, 7-5, is 3-0 in four starts since joining the starting rotation on July 31 and has won five consecutive decisions overall. The right-hander struck out one and walked one in his seven innings before Jerry Reed came on to get the last six outs.

Moose Haas, 7-6, making his first start since July 30 because of tendinitis, yielded five runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Jim Gantner hit his fourth home run of the season to give the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the second inning before Cleveland went ahead 2-1 in the third.

Vukovich opened with a single and Joe Carter before Willard lined a two-run single.

Willard singled with one out in the fifth but was thrown out at third on Otis Nixon's single. Walks to Julio Franco and Tony Bernazard loaded the bases. Nixon, who had three hits, scored on Brook Jacoby's single and Hargrove followed with his two-run single for a 5-1 lead.

Milwaukee scored in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Ted Simmons and the Indians closed the scoring in the seventh on an RBI groundout by Franco.

A's 10, Orioles 4

OAKLAND — Tim Birtsas made a pitching breakthrough, at least for a day, and the Oakland A's broke out for 14 hits to bury the Baltimore Orioles.

"I don't compare one game to another, but I think this was by best for control," said Birtsas, 10-4, the rookie left-hander who had walked an average of six batters per nine innings before yesterday, when he issued only two walks in a five-hit performance.

Three of the hits were home runs, including two by Lee Lacy and another two-run shot by Floyd Rayford with two outs in the ninth. The home runs all came after the A's built a 5-0 lead.

Oakland's hitting attack featured two-run homers by Steve Henderson and Dave Kingman, who connected off old A's nemesis Mike Flanagan.

The only walks by Birtsas came in the first and second innings.

"The name of this game is to throw strikes, and he threw strikes. We didn't get him into any situations where we could do any damage," Lacy said.

"That's the best he's pitched, even though he didn't have his usual fastball," Oakland shortstop Alfredo Griffin said.

"Because I didn't have good velocity, I didn't overthrow, and that helped my control. They know I'm basically a fastball pitcher, so they were digging in," Birtsas said. "But the control comes and goes. So they can't dig in too hard."

Henderson and Kingman both homered in the fifth inning off Flanagan, 2-3. Flanagan had a career record of 15-4 against the A's and was a perfect 10-0 at the Oakland Coliseum before absorbing the defeat. He missed the first half of this season because of an injury.

Birtsas struck out five and walked two in his second complete game as a major leaguer. The A's broke a three-game losing streak.

Rangers 7, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY — Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien knew the Rangers weren't helping their cause by giving Kansas City pitcher Bud Black chance after chance.

So O'Brien hit a Black fastball into center field for a tiebreaking single that sent the Rangers to a victory over the Royals.

"You don't want to let Black off in a pressure situation," said O'Brien. "You have to get him. He is that good a pitcher that when he gets his confidence he can shut you down."

One inning later, O'Brien rapped a bases-loaded triple to give the Rangers a comfortable five-run lead and offset the team stranding 10 runners through the first five innings.

"It didn't look real good when we had 10 hits on the scoreboard and only two runs and they had two hits and two runs," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine. "But it turned out well."

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 3

CHICAGO — Two-and-a-half months after his last victory, Floyd Bannister of the Chicago White Sox threw five strong innings and one-third of a poor one to lift his team to a victory over Toronto.

"It's a relief," said Bannister, who had not won since June 10 at Seattle.

The streak reached seven losses and six no-decisions until Bannister pitched five innings of one-hit ball, before Toronto knocked him out with three runs in the sixth.

"It's part of baseball," he said of the streak. "It's something you can't control. "I told myself to go out and throw as hard as I can as long as I can."

"It was a character-building time," he said after racking up eight strikeouts.

"It was a big win for Bannister and a bigger win for the White Sox," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, after his team snapped a five-game losing streak. Harold Baines' three-run homer in the first was the big blow.

"He's given us that kind of chance to win a lot of times," said LaRussa of Bannister.

Toronto's George Bell hit a three-run homer onto the left field roof in the sixth. It was the second consecutive game in which he hit a rare roof shot at Comiskey Park.

The feat has only been accomplished 38 times in the park's 75-year history, and Bell and Hall of Famer Jimmy Foxx are the only visiting players to do it twice.

"We got beat, I don't know what else to tell you," said Toronto Mananger Bobby Cox.

Bannister, 6-11, gave up only Jesse Barfield's second-inning double, keeping alive a nine-game hitting streak, through the first five innings. Bannister struck out eight before leaving with one out in the sixth.

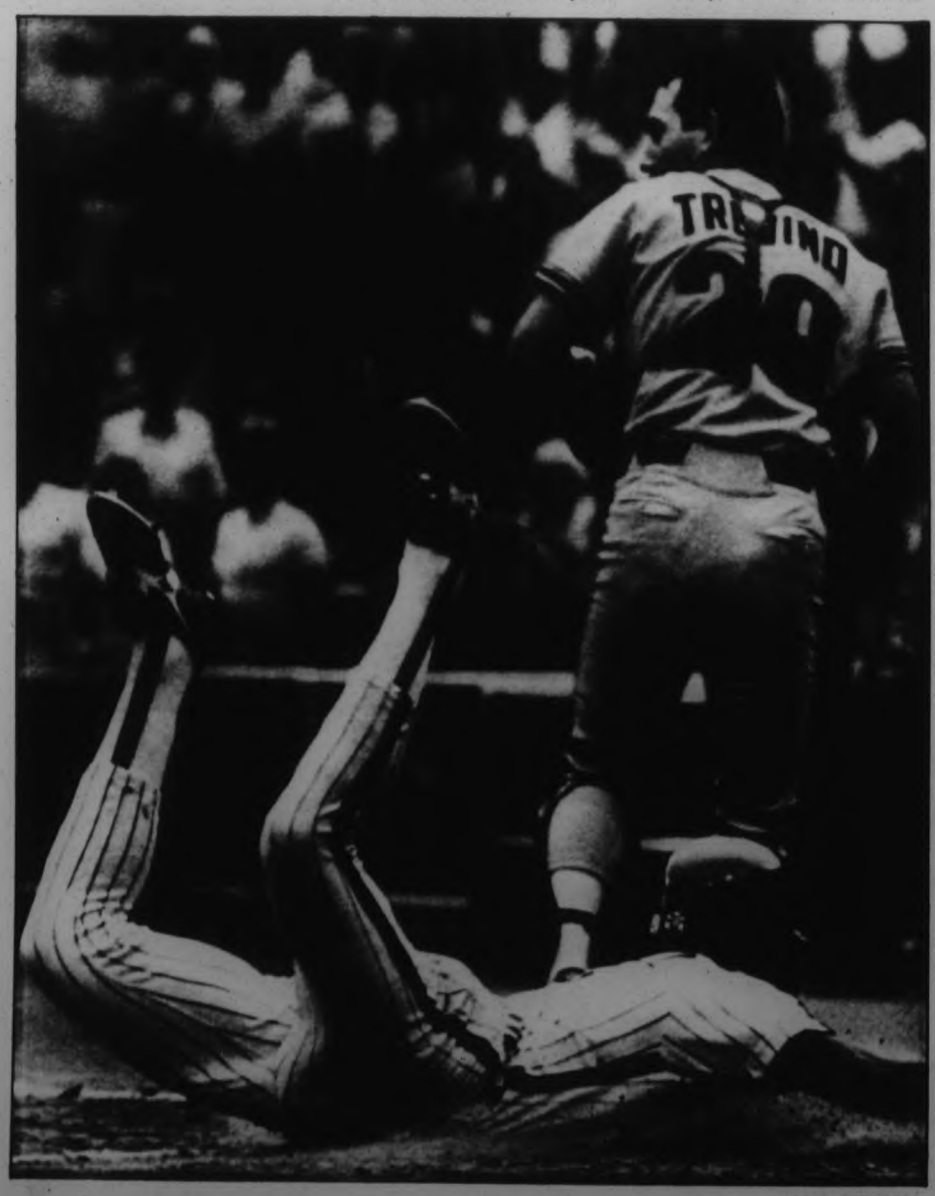

Angels 7, Tigers 1

ANAHEIM — Rod Carew and Bob Boone delivered run-scoring singles during a three-run sixth inning that helped the California Angels to a victory over the error-plagued Detroit Tigers.

Detroit center fielder Chet Lemon committed three of the Tigers' five errors in the game, played in 100-degree heat. Lemon made one of three Detroit miscues during the sixth-inning rally, and then made another error during a four-run eighth.

The Angels trailed 1-0 when Gary Pettis drew a leadoff walk in the sixth from Walt Terrell, 12-7. Rob Wilfong then sacrificed and reached base when first baseman Darrell Evans misplayed the ball for an error. Boone singled home Pettis and Wilfong scored on the play when Lemon overran the ball.

Boone, who had gone to second on Lemon's miscue, was thrown out trying to go to third on Dick Schofield's infield grounder, but Schofield went on to steal second and continued to third on catcher Marty Castillo's throwing error.

WHAT IS AN ITCH?
It may start off as just a little "tingly" sensation that a quick rub seems to take care of. But, it may end up as an almost uncontrollable urge to scrape off part of your skin. It could come about as the result of a bite — fly, mosquito, gnat, etc., a food that doesn't agree with your body chemistry — chocolate, nuts, a poor choice of leaves — poison oak or ivy. It may also result from some organic illness, simple or serious.
Just as there are numerous causes of the itch so there are medicines that can help to relieve it. Which one? Your physician will be able to pinpoint the cause of your itching problem and recommend one of the many preparations we stock. Don't scratch needlessly.
YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service and charge accounts.

Fast mortgage gains appeal as an investment

By BILL McCLOSKEY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Unless you can find a safe way to earn 11.5 percent or higher return on your money, you're better off spending the money to make a speeded-up payoff of your home loan, a top mortgage executive says.

Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said that for a consumer who can afford the larger payments, 15-year loans now available at 11.66 percent interest are good investments.

To be better off, he said, "You've got to be able to put your money to work, with some safety and confidence, and make at least 11.66 percent on it. You just can't do that in today's market."

The 15-year mortgage is catching on.

A year ago, mortgage bankers were writing very few of them. Now, a survey released Friday by the association shows, one in seven new loans made by the nation's largest mortgage bankers is for a 15-year period.

The U.S. League of Savings Institutions said their members also are offering the short-term, fixed-rate home loans.

Robert J. Spiller, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said, "Those homebuyers who see retirement down the road, or face substantial outlays for children's college education often choose early pay-off loans, we've found."

The 15-year loan is offered at a slightly cheaper rate — about three-eigths of a percentage point — than the more traditional 30-year loan. But since the 15-year loan is paid off in half the time, it can save a home buyer half the interest expense.

The association provided the following figures comparing a $75,000 loan for 15 and 30 years, respectively, at 12 percent:

—Monthly payment of would be $876 on the 15, as opposed to $771 for the 30.

—Interest costs over the life of the loan would be $82,680 for the 15-year period and $202,560 for a 30-year mortgage — a savings of $119,880.

Spiller emphasized that a borrower must meet the normal requirement of being able to meet house payments with roughly 25 percent of their gross income.

Although lenders allow a person to pay off a loan early by making voluntary additional payments whenever they can afford them, Spiller said, he's found "a lot of people want the discipline" of being required to make the higher payment.

He said many of those who decide on the 15-year loan are two-income couples moving up from a smaller house .

Reagan may rule out shoe import barriers

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan is expected to decide against increasing the tariff on imported shoes or imposing a quota to aid the beleaguered domestic footwear industry, an administration source said yesterday.

"I don't think he wants to do it," said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity. "I don't think anybody would be surprised to see him reject it pretty strongly."

The source said alternative methods to protect the domestic shoe industry against injurious imports were being considered, but no decision had been made. He said the president, who faces a Sept. 1 deadline for action, will probably announce his decision late this week.

The president, in a telephone interview from his mountaintop ranch on Saturday, declined to be nailed down as to what he would do. But he told a reporter from Washington Broadcast News, "I am opposed to protectionism. Protectionism is a two-way street and you may help some industry with protectionism, or some group of employes, and you find that you have done it at the expense of other industries and other employes."

"I don't think that protectionism is the way to go," the president said. "We are trying to talk to our trading allies about a meeting to get trade more open, more fair among all countries."

Presidential action is required because of a unanimous finding by the U.S. International Trade Commission that the domestic footwear industry has suffered serious injury from imports, which last year captured 71 percent of the U.S. market.

The commission recommended June 12 that quotas be imposed over a five-year period.

Administration sources have said in the past that quotas had little support within the administration, which is generally supportive of free trade.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and others in the Cabinet, however, have reportedly urged the president to boost the current 8.8 percent tariff on imported shoes as a compromise move that would provide relief to the domestic indusvry without directly limiting how many shoes could be imported.

Officials who spoke on condition they not be identified said earlier this month that Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, among others, had argued againsv such action. Opponents of stiffer tariffs argue they cound lead to retaliation, triggering a worldwide trade war.

The Reagan administration has been under mounting pressure to restrict imports of a number of goods, including shoes. On Capitol Hill, dozens of bills have been introduced to protect various U.S. industries from foreign competition.

Jojoba looks like the next big thing in new products

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jojoba, an oilseed plant native to Southwest desert areas, shows promise as a commercial crop because of its "unusual chemical properties," the National Academy of Sciences says.

"It is not the miracle plant some have claimed, but neither is it a mirage," an academy report said.

Although present world production of jojoba oil is only a few hundred tons a year, scientists said it could quadruple in the next few years as new commercial plantations begin to mature in Arizona, California, Israel, Mexico, Latin America, Africa and Australia.

The report, issued this week, was based on a study by a committee of the academy's National Research Council. The work was financed by the William H. Donner Foundation and the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Jojoba oil is widely used in hand creams, facial treatments, shampoos, conditioners and other cosmetic products. And the committee said new uses could develop soon, including pharmaceuticals, lubricants, foam-control agents, heating oils, plasticizers, waxes and fire retardants.

One of the oil's distinguishing features is its molecular structure, which is fundamentally different from all other commonly used vegetable oils and animal fats. That makes it much more resistant to spoilage and gives it other unusual properties.

"For example, recent experiments have shown that jojoba oil may penetrate the outer skin and accumulate in the keratin layer underneath," the committee said. "Verification of these experiments ... would mean that jojoba is superior for keeping skin supple and smooth compared with other more commonly used oils and lanolin, which temporarily soften only the skin surfaces."

The experiments also suggest that jojoba could be used to carry medications beneath the skin for treatment of acne, psoriasis or other disorders.

But the committee cautioned that potential new markets for jojoba will depend on steady reductions in its price. Current prices of about $5.50 per pound of oil or about $40 per gallon would have to be cut by more than 50 percent for jojoba to compete in the larger mass market as a lubricant in machinery or as a wax for floor polishes, lipsticks, candles and other products.

Such cost reductions are possible, but the committee warned that "speculation in jojoba's future is not for the casual investor." In other words, don't hock family jewels just yet.

Although investments should be made with caution, the committee concluded that investments should be made.

"Many challenges are ahead, but none seem insurmountable, and success will provide the world with a new renewable resource that can fill many industry needs," the report said.

Product safety a complex mix of public and private

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Who's in charge of the safety and quality of the products Americans buy?

Some free market advocates claim that the heavy hand of government regulation sets every standard, stifling innovation, raising prices and limiting choices.

But at the same time pro-regulation activists assert that the Reagan administration is turning the reins over to industry and abdicating government's responsibilities to consumers.

In reality, American products are regulated by a complex and interlocking web of government rules and regulations and standards set by literally hundreds of private groups and laboratories — some well-known, others laboring in relative obscurity.

If some product is shown to be so dangerous it is an imminent hazard, government agencies can usually order it off the market.

But otherwise, quality and safety rules are more likely to have been set by the industries themselves, often voluntarily and with government cooperation.

To Americans, that little "UL" mark of Underwriters Laboratories is a common assurance that a product meets safety standards. But Underwriters Laboratories is just one of more than 700 associations, organizations, institutes and bureaus both in and out of government set standards for thousands of products.

They range from the private Abrasive Engineering Society to the Zinc Institute, the U.S. Agriculture Department to the Veterans Administration. A vast array of state and local governments also sets standards of one type or another.

One federal agency, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, is seeking ways to increase its support for privately developed standards.

The commission decided in the spring not to officially endorse privately established standards, but has scheduled hearings this fall in Washington and Los Angeles to look at other ways of backing those voluntary standards efforts.

Business and industry were relatively unregulated during the heyday of the industrial revolution, allowing innovators freedom to grow but also spurring problems with safety and quality of products.

Americans flocked to the great Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893 to see the fruits of American inventiveness on display, but the show was marred by fires that plagued the electrical devices.

The result was the birth of perhaps the best known private regulatory agency, when insurance investigators looking into the fires esablished Underwriters Laboratories, now headquartered in Northbrook, Ill.

Its symbol is widely known on electrical appliances and other goods, and it has become the world's largest non-profit independent safety testing organization. Besides electrical appliances, UL sets standards for fire and casualty hazards, burglary resistance devices and other products.

The development of voluntary product standards is coordinated by ANSI, the American National Standards Institute of New York, which was founded in 1918 by a group of professional societies and government officials.

ANSI helps the hundreds of specialized standards groups work together to avoid duplication, and coordinates U.S. and foreign induistrial and technical standards through the government's National Bureau of Standards and the International Standards Organization.

Nearly as old as the UL, is the ASTM, the American Society for Testing and Materials, founded in 1898 and headquartered in Philadelphia.

The ASTM develops quality standards for such things as stainless steel, copper alloys, cement, paint, robots, textiles, security systems, sports equipment and medical devices, as well as developing test methods and ways of analyzing products.

ASTM currently has more than 7,218 standards in force and operates 139 technical committees to update them and develop new ones. Its Annual Book of ASTM Standards comprises 66 volumes.

Even older than the venerable UL is the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, which traces its history to attempts in 1884 to standardize the operations of electrical equipment.

While the IEEE also deals in safety standards, it concentrates on measuring and testing the performance of devices or systems, and works to apply up to date engineering to technology within its scope.

Auto mechanics, and homeowners who change their own oil in automobiles or lawnmowers, are likely familier with the letters SAE on cans of motor oil.

The Society of Automotive Engineers, based on Warrendale, Pa., has been operating since 1902 and currently has standards covering motor vehicles, aircraft, space vehicles, farm tractors, earthmoving and roadbuilding machines and aerospace prducts. Some 600 SAE standards have been adopted by the Defense Department.

In between, the list also includes such groups as the American Hot Dip Galvanizers Association, Caster and Floor Truck Manufacturers Association, Gummed Industries Association, Jewelers Vigilance Committee, Plumbing and Drainage Institute, Sponge and Chamois Institute and the United States Hide, Skin and Leather Association.

Calls gasoline cost drop 'delayed final response'

By LILA LITTLEJOHN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retail gasoline prices dropped slightly in August, a delayed reaction to recent cuts in the cost of crude oil, an industry analyst said yesterday.

"(Retail) gasoline prices have dropped nationally by seven-tenths of a percent over the past two weeks, while wholesale prices have dropped by over 1.3 cents a gallon," said Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter.

Based on Friday's survey of more than 17,000 service stations nationwide, Lundberg's report showed California led the nation in low-priced gasoline.

A number of self-service California stations were selling regular leaded fuel at less than a dollar a gallon, Lundberg said.

But prices under a dollar a gallon also were common in Alaska, Phoenix, Ariz., Portland, Ore., Memphis, Tenn., Kansas City, Kan., and St. Louis, Lundberg said. Regular leaded gasoline at self-service stations is usually the lowest-priced fuel, he added.

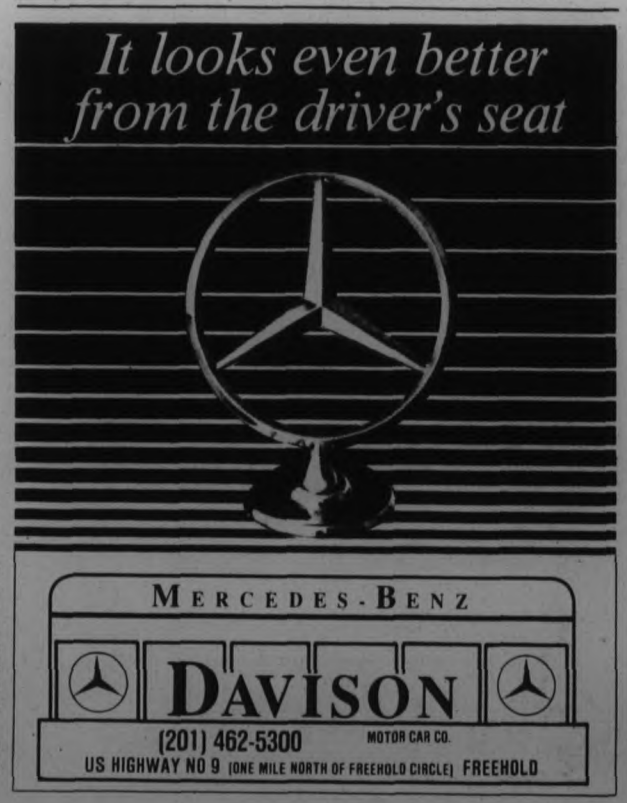

"These lower prices are definitely led by Arco, with hundreds of its stations below a dollar (a gallon), including some in the ranges of 98.9 all the way down to 95.9," Lundberg said.

Arco's prices were followed by independent private dealers, with Exxon and Shell Oil within competitive range, he said.

Overall, gasoline prices dropped to $1.226 per gallon nationwide, compared with $1.233 a gallon two weeks ago. At self-serve pumps, regular leaded fuel averaged $1.11 per gallon, regular unleaded cost $1.18 and premium unleaded was $1.31, Lundberg said.

Lundberg called the lower prices a "delayed final response to those crude oil prices that were dropping." Pricing by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has dropped more than $2 a barrel this year, and Mexico has also cut the cost of its crude exported to the United States.

However, he declined to predict a continued trend toward lower pump prices.

Boxing ban urged again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Psychological Association yesterday called for the eventual elimination of professional and amateur boxing to prevent brain and nervous system injury, but stopped short of urging an immediate ban.

The group's policy-making council adopted a resolution saying psychologists should "work to educate the American public, especially children and young adults, about the dangerous effects of boxing on the health of participants."

The resolution, approved during the APA's annual meeting here, called for eventual "elimination of both amateur and professional boxing, a sport in which the objective is to inflict injury."

Association spokesman Donald Kent said the council didn't recommend an immediate ban because "they felt it was too utopian, that it couldn't happen overnight and that they had to educate people first."

BRIDGE ADVICE

You know how to play today's spades. The old rhyme ("With eight, ever; with nine, never") tells you not to finesse for the queen with nine cards in the suit. Moreover, you see the whole hand and know that a spade finesse would lose.

When the hand was played last May during the playoff that picked the U.S. team for the 1985 world championship, each player saw only his own hand and the dummy; and national champions pay no attention to nursery rhymes. Nevertheless, at both tables of the match, declarer resisted the temptation to finesse.

THE COUNT

West pretty surely had six clubs for his overcall and three hearts for his heart raise. If West had a singleton spade, East had a singleton diamond; and East-West would have bid on instead of letting South play the hand at four spades.

Since East and West had gone fairly quietly, South could rely on them not to have singletons. Sometimes you read the distribution not only by what the players bid but also by what they don't bid.

DAILY QUESTION

You hold: ♠K 7 6 2 ♡5 3 ◇K 10 9 6 4 ♣J 7. Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player bids two clubs. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. If the opponent had passed you would have bid one spade since it usually pays to bid your own suit rather than raise partner's minor; but you shouldn't bid a four-card suit at the level of two, especially with a weak hand. All you can do is raise partner's suit and await developments.
