SANIBEL AND CAPTIVA, FLORIDA 50 CENTS

Arrest warrant issued for driver

Student charged with DUI manslaughter had blood alcohol content of .17

By Priscilla Friedersdorf
Staff Writer

Tuesday a Florida state Circuit Court judge issued a warrant for the arrest of Mark S. Sterner, the driver of a car that killed three of his college classmates in an accident on Sanibel-Captiva Road March 4.

The charge of DUI manslaughter was filed after the Florida Department of Law Enforcement laboratory in Tampa reported a sample of Sterner's blood indicated an alcohol level of .17. The measure of .17 is more than double the permissible amount of alcohol level in the blood when driving. The Florida State Legislature changed the permissible amount of alcohol in the blood when driving from .1 to .08 on Jan. 1.

Sanibel Police Chief Richard H. Plager commented on some particulars of the warrant Wednesday.

"[Florida State Twentieth Circuit Court Judge, R. Wallace Pack] signed the warrant Tuesday afternoon, at 4 p.m. We expect the attorney to surrender [Sterner] at the Lee County jail [Thursday] after he is released from the hospital. The SPD has been assisted in the case by the Florida Highway Patrol, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and the State Attorney's Office which helped with the warrant," Plager said.

DUI manslaughter is a second-degree felony, and is punishable by a prison term of up to 15 years and a $10,000 fine.

Plager declined to identify the bar or restaurant where the men had been prior to the accident because it is an ongoing investigation. The Florida state Dram Shop Act allows victims of an intoxicated person to file civil damage charges against the owner of the establishment that contributed to the intoxication of the individual.

The worst fear and most haunting nightmare of every parent occurred when the five men, on their final day of spring break, were involved in

The 57th Annual Sanibel Shell Fair & Show drew throngs of shell enthusiasts, including a celebrity or two—at right is former presidential candidate and Governer of Massachussetts Michael Dukakis.

Dukakis said the show was "just fabulous," and thanked volunteers for making it possible.

The Shell Fair & Show ran from March 3-6 at the Sanibel Community Center. It is sponsored by the Sanibel Community Association and the Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club.

City council discusses sewer system expansion

Could cost each home owner between $7,000 and $10,000

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

Approximately 75 people gathered at the Sanibel Community Center the evening of March 8 to discuss with council members and other city officials the possibility of extending sewer lines to eventually include the entire island. In addition to explaining a proposed plan to the audience, city officials listened to input and fielded questions concerning the issue for over three hours.

City Manager Gary Price called the meeting a workshop designed to give the city council direction from the people on how to proceed concerning possible future implementation of a wastewater master plan. He added that no action taken that evening would be final, but would instead give the council ideas about how to instruct the city staff to proceed. Mayor Jerry this terrible accident, early Friday morning.

These five young men from Johnson & Wales University in Providence, R.I., with every hope of fulfilling their dreams for a promising future, in an instant, had that future irrevocably changed. James J. Smith, 23, of Lindenhurst, N.Y., Peter D. Scott, 22, of West Islip, N.Y., and Aaron B. Ebbert, 24, of Amherst, N.H. were killed; and Mark S. Sterner, 22, of Quakerstown, Pa., and Darren Moll, 22, of Farmington, N.Y., were injured, when their '94 Lincoln Town car spun out of control on Sanibel-Captiva Road near the 6-mile marker.

The wreck was discovered at about 12:46 a.m., Friday, March 4 moments after it happened, by James Depp, a driver with Apple Transportation, who was taking passengers from the airport to South Seas Plantation. Debris from the wreck was strewn among the trees and along the roadway.

None of the men was wearing a seatbelt and although two air bags inflated, all five were thrown from the ·ar. Two were found early 60 feet from the ar. Tire marks indiated the car had kidded for about 400 eet. Police say the car, which was headed north, had failed to negotiate a slight curve and crossed the southbound lane into an area of thick trees. The car uprooted a Brazilian pepper tree and then flipped for 60 feet, striking another pepper tree before landing upright. The accident occurred in a 35 mph zone and the car has been estimated to have been traveling at more than 70 mph.

In an article published in the Nassau and Suffolk news section of Newsday, a Long Island paper, March 5, Moll is quoted as saying from his hospital room in Fort Myers Friday night, "We were talking about the trip and how much fun we were having and what a great week it was." They were driving through an S-curve when "we hit a corner and the back of the car rolled." Moll said no one drank alcohol, and he disputed police allegations of a 70 mph speed.

"That's impossible," said Moll.

The group was staying at a Captiva condominium owned by Scott's parents and had lounged by the pool all day before going for a late dinner at Sanibel, Moll said. They were heading back to the condo when the accident occurred. The group began arranging the trip before Christmas, and flew to Florida on Feb. 25.

Sterner, the driver of the car, remains at Lee Memorial Hospital where his condition has been upgraded from serious to fair.

All five passengers were ejected from the 1994 Lincoln Town Car when it crashed early Friday, March 4. The driver was drunk; three were killed; none were wearing seatbelts.

A Reebok tennis shoe lies footless and incongruous in the engine compartment of the wrecked automobile.

Moll, was released from the same hospital on Saturday, March 5, and was reported to be back in Providence, R.I. and expected to resume his classes soon.

Sanibel Police Chief Plager believes it is the worst accident ever to occur on Sanibel. These deaths make a total of seven fatalities in the past two years on Sanibel roads.

The car, rented from the Hertz Rental Car Company at the Southwest Florida Regional Airport, is now impounded at the Sanibel Amoco Service Center on Periwinkle Way.

Tim Bryant, who is employed at the Amoco station and who towed the wreckage away noted the severity of the accident.

"I've seen a lot of accidents, but this is one of the nastiest," Bryant said, adding that the car itself has drawn attention. "My wife saw it and brought our oldest daughter who's 14 in to see what can happen when people drink and drive. I know a lot of people who brought their kids to see it to show them what can happen."

The men were all members of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity. The director of public relations for Johnson & Wales University, Marian Gagnon, said Ebbert and Scott would have graduated in May with B.A. degrees in Hospitality Management, Smith would have graduated in December with the same degree. Sterner is a business major in the field of marketing and accounting. Moll was awarded his associate degree in June and is also expected to earn his B.A. degree in the hospitality field.

Gagnon said fraternities were not officially sanctioned by the university but maintained houses off campus.

Joseph Gigante of Jersey City, N.J., vice president of the TKE fraternity, said that a scholarship fund, which had been initiated, would be named after Ebbert, Scott and Smith. The recipients of the fund would be hospitality and business students. There will be a page of the yearbook dedicated to them and in the center of the campus courtyard, where each greek organization has a rock with its letters on it, a light or flame will be placed in memory of the fraternity brothers.

"The mothers of the men are all being made honorary TKE moms. Jim Smith's dad is being made an honorary member of the fraternity and will be given a plaque. Jim's dad was originally against Jim joining the fraternity but when [his dad] saw how much it meant to Jim, he began to assist the TKEs and built some of their ritual equipment, using his skills in carpentry and woodworking," Gigante said. The fraternity has 50 active members and was founded in 1990.

"We are very, very close. School officials have provided counseling if we needed it. The school is furnishing transportation for all present fraternity members and alumni to the funeral services. We have ordered red carnations, the fraternity flower, in the shape of the greek letters for the memorial service," said TKE President Michael Kaminez.

Members of the fraternity will speak at the service which will be held at 2 p.m., today, at the Beneficent Church, a downtown Providence church, near the campus.

Smith's funeral was held Sunday in Lindenhurst, N.Y., Scott's funeral was on Sanibel at St. Isabel's Catholic Church (see related story, page 4A), Monday morning. Ebbert's funeral was yesterday in Amherst, N. H.

Quoted in the Newsday article was Smith's father, Edward Smith. "Jimmy was graduating, he wanted to do spring break one time. He kind of talked me into it. He said that's part of the college thing. He was happy. The kid enjoyed life. He had hopes of opening up his own catering business," Edward Smith said.

In Scott's funeral notice published Sunday is the sentence, "In Peter's memory, please take one hour out of each week to enjoy your life to the fullest."

Requiem held for crash victim at St. Isabel's Church

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

As the bright sun shone overhead, and the physical world seemed as beautiful as anything one could ever imagine, family and friends of Peter Douglas Scott gathered Monday at St. Isabel's Catholic Church to say goodbye to their beloved son, brother, nephew, grandson and friend.

Scott was one of three college students killed in an automobile accident on Sanibel-Captiva Road early Friday morning, March 4.

Scott's parents own a condominium at South Seas Plantation where the family has vacationed from their home in West Islip, N.Y.

A tragic, heavy, silence hung in the air before the service, as many of Scott's friends waited outside the church beforehand. The presence of so many young faces seemed a striking and tragic incongruency with the somber scene before them Monday. Poised to enter the world as young adults, with so much hope for the future, they came together to remember their friend Peter Scott.

Officiating at the service was Father Carmen Caruso, who spoke to Scott's family and friends about the afterlife, the way in which people live their lives on earth, and the extreme difficulty survivors have in coming to terms with a death such as Scott's.

"In all my years of preparation for the priesthood, I don't think I've ever been prepared for this day," he said. "And we feel the pain of selfishness because our loved one is gone. Only our faith carries us through."

He urged everyone to remember and talk about Scott, to pray to him, and to realize that for the faithful, the requiem is a celebration of the passing from one life to another. The service emphasized carrying the memories of the young man close to one's heart, and to see death not as an ending, but as a glorious beginning for all people.

Scott's mother, father, and brother David then shared their memories with the crowd. They recalled some of the things he enjoyed doing, such as fishing, playing the music and riding wave runners. He loved the island very much, they said, and he was beginning to show a real interest in nature. After receiving a video recorder as a present, he filmed nature scenes such as a glowing sun setting gently over the calm ocean waters. When Scott's mother talked to him last week, she said, he marveled at his sighting of dolphins off the island's coast. Perhaps as frequently happens as one matures, he was beginning to awaken to the wonders of the natural world, and to realize the exquisite nature of life itself, she said.

The Scott family stressed that people should take time to enjoy daily living, and appreciate the many good things in their lives.

"In memory, I suggest just taking one hour a week to relish friends and savor beauty." Scott's mother said. "Take the time to smell life's roses."

"In our family there are never goodbyes, only see-you-laters," said his brother David.

Spring breakers affected by accident

Partying life goes on for students on break, but with more caution, concern, awareness

Ralf Kircher

Four Delta Gamma sorority sisters from Roanoke College in Virginia enjoy an evening out, responsibly.

By Ralf Kircher
Editor

Spring break time is here. College students are out to have a good time. Sunbathing and relaxing. Partying and drinking.

But in the wake of last week's accident that killed three students from Johnson & Wales University, drinking seems to be taking a backseat to, and no longer seems to be a prerequisite for having a good time. And college students are seeing designated drivers as absolute necessities.

Four groups of college and graduate students out drinking at McT's Shrimphouse and Tavern Monday night appeared to be having the raucous time of students on break: work hard, party hard. But when questioned about the March 4 accident, all sobered up momentarily and became quite serious. There was a unanimous consensus that they were not going to be participants in a repeat of the events of early last Friday morning.

All had read with horror the accounts of the accident, and it has lended a degree of sobriety to their otherwise carefree spring breaks.

Heather Barnthouse and Keri Nix, here with six other classmates from Oklahoma State University, had received calls from their parents back in Oklahoma after making the 26-hour drive to Sanibel. Their parents had heard the news of the accident, and wanted to take one last time to tell them to be careful.

But the co-eds did not need any further warnings. Upon hearing the news, Barnthouse said they were adamant about having a designated driver. She vowed the same fate would not overtake her friends. "Plus, we're in a rented vehicle, so we don't want to have a dent or scratch," Barnthouse followed up.

Matt Dyckman, a third-year law student at Duke University in North Carolina, put the importance of a designated driver in terms of his future.

"We're all aware of it because DUI can exclude us from the bar up to three years. But more important, I'm responsible for two of my friends—not to mention myself," said Dyckman, who was designated driver Monday. Dyckman carried the responsibility of transporting his classmates, Brian Daucher and Mike Balfe, back to his parents' house in Bonita, and the responsibility seemed to bear down on him; he sat slightly apart from his friends, who were rapt in conversation with eight co-eds from Roanoke College in Virginia, and even turned down a beer when asked.

Amy Vitale, one of the eight Roanoke Delta Gamma sorority sisters visiting her friend's parents' condominium on West Gulf Drive, was designated driver Monday.

"I don't mind being designated driver at all," Vitale said as she sipped a virgin piña colada. "I'd do it for my friends."

"As far as we're concerned, we'd all rather take one night off to make sure we get home safe," chimed in sorority sister Cathy Kaempffer. "We knew we'd have designated drivers when we came down, and we figured we'd let that person drink until a certain time, but now we decided to not let her drink at all."

Todd Bello, a junior at Notre Dame staying with friends at his parents' condo at South Seas Plantation agreed that a designated driver is very important, and that it does not detract from the fun.

"We're rotating drivers," Bello said. "It works out OK. We're still having a good time just being with the guys. I don't see why you can't do that, because the consequences involved...it's just not worth it."

Last week's accident did little to dampen the spirits of the spring breakers visiting the islands. It did, however, prompt them to rethink their ways, if only temporarily. And perhaps the lessons learned from one tragedy helped avert another.

Erin O'Donnell, a criminal justice major from Roanoke, sees the accident as having a more profound effect than all of her parents' warnings.

"My parents always tell us we think we're invincible, but we're really not—it could have happened to anyone. It makes you realize how careful you have to be," O'Donnell said. "We're having a great time and we're not going to let it happen to us."

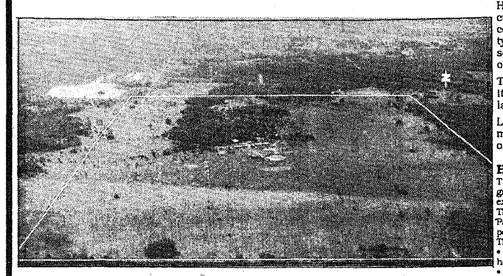
COUNTRY ESTATE

Luxury Estate and Private 250 Acre Horse Ranch in Southwest Florida



Here is country living at its best. A spacious, custom built estate home with all the modern conveniences, surrounded by the natural beauty of an adjacent oak hammock. Privacy and security. Fresh air. Peace and quiet. The rare opportunity to enjoy life at your own discretion.

This remarkable property includes quality facilities for horses, cattle, and dogs...and plenty of land to ride, roam, and call your own.

Located in Alva, Florida, a friendly rural community on the Caloosahatchee River, just east of Fort Myers.

HORSE RANCH

The property adjoins American Agronomic's orange groves and the Babcock Wilderness area, providing exceptional privacy.

The entire 250 acre property is fenced and cross fenced. Pastures are planted in improved bahia and two large ponds provide water for livestock.

The following structures and facilities are included.

- Metal barn (16'x30') at entry gate, for vehicle storage, horse stalls, and shop.
- Pole barn (54'x22') for vehicle storage, plus 12'x22' shop, on a 30'x22 concrete slab, with metal roof.
- Horse barn (65'x50') includes 6 stalls (11'6"x13' each), paneled feed room (13'x11'), and paneled tack room (13'x11'). Metal roof.
- 3 Mortan steel pasture barns (24'x12' each) with 2 horse stalls in each barn.
- Horse barn (92'x11'6"), includes 8 stalls. Metal roof.
- Round horse pen (120').
- Square horse pen (100').
- Octagon horse pen (30').
- Morton steel ranch building (110'x25'6"), includes 13 horse stalls (12'x11'6" each), office (16'x11'6"), tack room (12'x12'), feed room (12'x12'), full bath (7'2"x5') with closet (5'x3'4"), and separate well and a horse squeeze box.
- Cow pen (113'x62'), cross fenced, with steel squeeze box and loading chute.
- Dog kennel (38'x17'), 8 units with chain link fencing, concrete floor, and completely screen enclosed.
- Mobile home site, complete with electric, water and septic tank hook-ups.

ESTATE HOME

The main house is on the edge of a beautiful oak hammock, with many shade and fruit trees. The entry faces northwest and the pool and living areas face to the southeast.

Custom designed and built in 1987, the main house is of frame construction with all redwood siding. The house is characterized by open space and the rich tones of natural wood, stone, and Mexican tile. A wooden tongue and groove cathedral ceiling soars above the great room which features a stone fireplace, polished wood floors, and wet bar. The kitchen features authentic Mexican tile flooring.

Mexican tile also extends to the spacious pool deck, surrounding a 20'x40' heated swimming pool, and to the screen enclosed, built-in barbecue pit.

The main house is comprised of:

2,568 sq. ft. Living Area
1,579 sq. ft. Porches
757 sq. ft. Oversized, 2 Car Garage
4,094 sq. ft. Total

The main house is accompanied by 10'x10' frame pump house with metal roof, housing a 4" well with submersed pump.

You and I and DUI

There is a killer in our midst, he is armed with a lethal weapon, he is indiscriminate in his choice of victims and he is not in his right mind. He has struck in the past two months on Periwinkle Way, Donax Street, Sanibel-Captiva Road and the Sanibel Causeway. He is the person who drives while intoxicated and there is no defense against him once he is behind the wheel of his car.

The increase in the occurrence of this crime during the past two months is alarming. Yet when the names of the perpetrators are published, the paper receives criticism for offending local residents. There is no special cachet to being maimed or dead if you are hit by a citizen of Sanibel or Captiva.

A recent quote of Richard H. Plager, Sanibel police chief lends weight to the argument: "The Chief of Police of Sanibel does not drink and has no sympathy for those who drink and drive. In my judgment every DUI arrest should be identified in the press to help reinforce the deterrent effect."

The organization, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (M.A.D.D.), has focused the public's attention on the light sentences received by these criminals and the number of repeat offenders among them. Their efforts have met with success in reducing the numbers of highway deaths in the past 15 years. Stern measures have been initiated by the judicial system and police departments in dealing with the crime of driving under the influence of alcohol (DUI).

Sadly, many of those who have been arrested in the past few months are young employees of local bars and restaurants. A pattern has emerged indicating that they are either drinking before leaving their places of employment or are visiting another local bar or restaurant before driving home. Almost without exception, the hour is late and they are alone in their cars when they are apprehended.

More could be done by all of us to diminish this problem. Local restaurants should discourage their employees from drinking before driving home. Restaurants and bars could offer small cups of coffee, free of charge, to patrons waiting to pay their checks; a token of appreciation and a reminder of road safety. Police roadblocks, such as those used during the holidays, could be set up near Blind Pass, Tarpon Bay Road and on the causeway on the first island after the toll booth. The purpose would be to conduct random sobriety tests, especially between the hours of 11 p.m. and 1 a.m. As concerned citizens, we should report cars speeding or weaving in the roadway and drivers leaving a restaurant or bar who are inebriated to the Sanibel Police. Monitoring our own alcohol consumption is a basic responsibility.

We will continue to publish all names of those cited for speeding as well as the names of those arrested for DUI. We hope our islands will become safer and we want to be counted with M.A.D.D.

Prevent solicitation

To the editor:

Did you know that you can prevent telephone solicitors' calls to your home?

Florida residents can put their phone numbers on a state "don't call" list that prohibits telephone sales calls if a company calls anyway, it can be fined up to $10.000. This service costs $10 with a $5 annual renewal fee.

To get on the list send your request along with name, address, phone number and a $10 check to:

Attention: Telemarketing
Florida Division of Consumer Cervices
P.O. Box 6700
Tallahassee, Florida 32314-6700

You should know that under the federal telephone consumer protection act, if you ask telephone solicitors not to call you again...and...they do call again, you can see them in small claims court for $500. Also if you can prove the call constituted a willful or wanton disregard of your request, you can sue for triple damages of $1,500.

Allegations exaggerated

To the editor:

It is difficult to compete with the compelling metaphors and picturesque alliterations of Ron Smiley's recent Guest Opinion offering, Creeping Commericialism Gaining a Beachhead on Quiet Captiva Island. (News Press, Feb. 27) It is not difficult, however, to refute his exaggerated allegations on the motivations of business interests which he contends are ruining the island while not paying their fair share for maintaining it.

Smiley would like us to believe that he, and others like him, are the only ones paying for costly projects like beach renourishment. He would like you to think that "they (businesses) get the free ride while we dish out the money."

Here is some public information that indicates just the opposite. The numbers were supplied by Allison Hagerup of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District.

The total cost of the 1986 Beach Renourishment Project was $5.9 million of which Florida and Lee County paid over $3 million. The federal government is also rebating $1.6 million to contributing property owners on a pro rata basis. Federal money was supplied largely because of the importance of tourism to state and local economies.

Did local businesses contribute their fair share? Here are some examples: The Mucky Duck restaurant paid $39,000 toward beach renourishment, 'Tween Waters resort paid $450,000 South Seas Plantation paid over $500,000. And what did Ron Smiley contribute toward the beautification of his native beaches? $239.00 Any questions on why he is getting a (almost) free ride?

Allison Hagerup goes on to say that public comments such as Smiley's will make it more difficult to get renourishment money in the future because one of the premises for use of public money is free and open access to all the beaches.

But the contribution of businesses to large island projects is not the whole story. What of the sales and bed taxes collected by these same business interests? Certainly, some of this wealth, created by business, finds its way back to Captiva to be spent on projects which improve island living for everyone.

Ron Smiley is right about one thing. Captiva businessmen are, indeed, "Now a coherent organization." And I am proud to say that two of those organizations are the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce, and the Business Committee of the Captiva Civic Association, of which the chamber is also an active member.

Not content to merely misstate the facts, Smiley lets us know, in a brazen outburst of bigotry while announcing his new marketing company, Ron Smiley's Visual in Paradise (RSVP) that he is willing to solicit work from such well known environmentalists as the Dupont Company, RCA, and G. Gordon Liddy, off-island. But he will "make himself available" only to island businesses that enhance the quality of life here...presumably his.

While shouting "I've got mine lock the gate," Smiley wants to put a fence across the San-Cap Road to keep out all but "old timers" and others acceptable to him. Is he really prepared to underwrite the immense costs of maintaining and improving Captiva? Let the facts speak for themselves. Don't call us, Ron. We'll call you!

Jim Graham,
Chairman,
Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce

RUFF supports COTI

To the editor:

We would like to compliment COTI on their board's wonderful job on low BMR housing to place a temporary moratorium on it. The RUFF committee supports their efforts completely. In fact, we feel it might be appropriate for the different island organizations to sponsor a workshop so that all residents can know the fact of this issue.

City easy to work with

To the editor:

You might be pleased to note that our city government did not live up to its recent "press notices" in our just-completed project to add a room and remodel our home.

After some of the hard knocks the planning and building departments have been forced to endure in some public meetings we feared the process would be pretty painful.

But from our first helpful meeting with planner Jim Jordan to the final inspection by Doug Roberts, city employees dealt with us in a friendly and efficient manner. Our permits were issued in a matter of a few days because our contractor, Lake Plaza, presented a clear, well prepared plan that conformed to codes with only

Dependency

The many faces of denial

Janice J. Caron is a certified addiction professional with a master's in counseling. Readers with confidential questions about addiction can call Caron at 395-2184. Her column appears monthly in the Island Reporter.

By Janice Caron

In general terms, denial is a psychological mechanism or process by which human beings try to protect themselves from something threatening by blocking their awareness of it. It is an unconscious process which can be seen, for example, when a person is suffering from an obviously terminal illness, but seems to be genuinely unaware of that fact. It is a buffer against unacceptable reality.

The denial of chemically dependent people is shown in their lack of awareness of their excessive alcohol or other drug use and the resulting harmful consequences. This is because, along with the gradual development of the illness, a denial system insidiously develops which protects them from realizing this is happening.

"Denial" is a shorthand term for a wide repertoire of psychological defenses and maneuvers that chemically dependent people unconsciously use to protect themselves from the realization that they are chemically dependent. These defensive maneuvers, all of which distort reality, can appear in many different forms. Some of the most common are:

Simple denial—Maintaining that something is not so which is in fact so. For example, a person may insist chemical dependency is not his/her problem despite obvious evidence that it is a problem and is so perceived by others.

Minimizing—Admitting to an alcohol or other drug problem, but in such a way that it appears to be much less serious than is actually the case.

Blaming—(also called projection) Denying responsibility for certain behavior and maintaining that the responsibility lies with someone or something else. The behavior is not denied, but its cause placed 'out there" not within the person.

Rationalizing—Offering alibis, excuses, justifications, and other explanations for behavior. These serve essentially to provide a reason other than chemical dependency to explain behavior related to alcohol or other drug use. The behavior is not denied, but an inaccurate explanation of its cause is given.

Intellectualizing—Avoiding emotional, personal awareness of the alcohol or other drug problem by dealing with it on a level of generalization, intellectual analysis, or theorizing.

Diversion—Changing the subject to avoid threatening topics, such as one's drinking or other drug use and related behavior.

Hostility—Becoming angry and irritable when reference is made to one's alcohol or other drug use and related behavior. This is a good way to avoid the issue as it makes people back off; if a person is angry with someone when he/she talks about a certain topic, that person is going to change the subject or avoid bringing the topic up again.

Remember that denial is not a river in Egypt.

ABC Sale committee thanks participants

To the editor:

As chairman of the 1994 Captiva ABC Sale and Auction, I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to all of those who made this year's event such a rousing success.

The Captiva ABC sale is a remarkable tradition of 28 years. Each year, islanders of sundry backgrounds join together in a great spirit of volunteerism and celebration. They collect merchandise, sort books, build shelves, tag clothing, sweep floors, set up tables, bake goods, brew coffee, haul chairs and otherwise become involved in this frenzied community initiative.

It is with considerable pride that I report that this year's efforts yielded extraordinary results. We doubled last year's sales totals, and established new all-time records. The auction was terrific and the mini "Taste of Captiva" was excellent, the Symphony Concert was exceptional, the crowd was festive, and the weather was ideal. It was a grand day on Captiva.

My sincere thanks to all the island business people, residents, and visitors, and whose goodwill enabled indeed ensured our success.

Thank you.

SEWER SYSTEM

Muench said the council was concerned with constituents' problems and questions, and that council members hoped to address them at the evening meeting and in the future as plans are being considered.

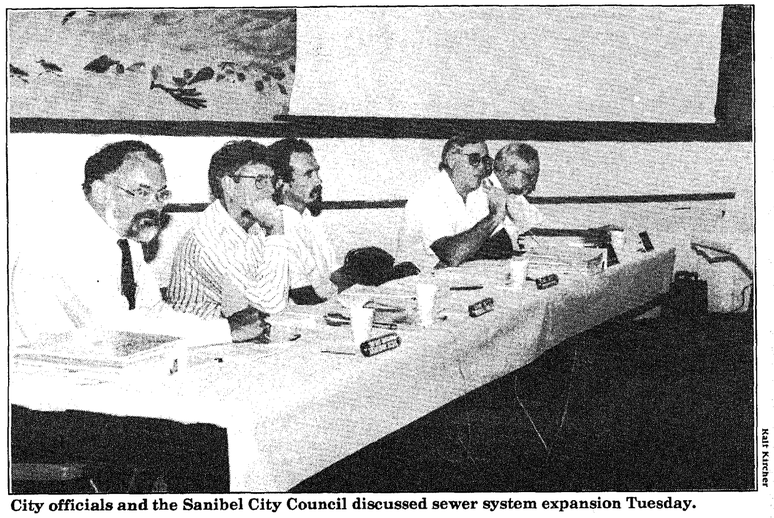
Gerry Hartman, of the engineering firm Hartman and Associates, began the meeting with a presentation on a wastewater master plan that had been laid out for the entire island and had been presented to the city in 1992, and which would be phased in over a period of years, depending upon the degree of environmental urgency in various areas on Sanibel.

Hartman said that since Sanibel is a barrier island, it has certain environmental problems mainland areas do not encounter, and these must be taken into account when dealing with the sewer issue.

Often, he explained, the sandy soil does not drain properly on Sanibel and because the island has a high water table, many areas with septic systems simply do not function as well as they should to ensure optimum environmental conditions.

Utilities Director John Hefty said that replacing septic tanks with a sewer line improves environmental conditions ten-fold, while leaking tanks or even those which function properly cause unseen environmental damage. Household wastes, as well as grease, fats and materials from restaurants all enter septic tank systems but are not filtered out as well as they should be. Hartman added that the city must always be concerned that Sanibel is meeting environmental standards set forth by the state, including standards concerning sewer and septic treatments.

The city's permanent and seasonal population has grown tremendously in the last 20 years, and during the peak months, sewer systems are strained to the maximum. To accommodate future residents (estimates record approximately 6,000 full time residents currently, with 8,400 ultimately expected on Sanibel) and the seasonal population, sewer facilities need to be expanded, Hartman said. Questions of how to proceed on the issue, at what rate expansion should be done and whether people feel they want or need the system remained to be answered.



Kolf Kircher

City officials and the Sanibel City Council discussed sewer system expansion Tuesday.

Two treatment plants are already in place on Donax and in the Wulfert Point area. Some Sanibel residents are currently hooked up to the plants, while others have sewer lines running in front of their homes, but would need to hook up to them in order to convert from septic tanks to the sewer system.

"We are faced with a little bit of a dilemma," Hartman said. "The Florida legislature told us you must in the future have a mandatory connection when a line is there, whether you have a functioning or non-functioning septic tank."

Under the state law, the city must give residents 365 days notice before they run a sewer line in front of a property, and then residents are given an additional 365 days to hook up to the sewer line. Home owners are given a total of two years from time of notice until they must, by law, be hooked up to the system.

The city's plan includes phasing in areas in the next five years that are currently having the most problems. Casa Ybel, the Highlands, and Oliva Street to Elinor Way would be some of the first areas to be laid for sewer lines, because they are lower lying areas and are most prone to sewage disposal problems. Shell Harbor, Dixie Beach Boulevard, Water Shadows and Woodring, for example, would follow in the next 10 years. Tarpon Bay Road West to the end of West Gulf Drive would be completed within 15 years, and all of these areas would be hooked up to the Donax collection facility.

The Sanctuary Development to the west of the elementary school would fall within the 10-year phase plan, and the Sanctuary Development north to Blind Pass would fall within the 15-year range, with both hooking up to the Wulfert facility. In addition, residents on Captiva would be given the option of hooking up to the sewer at Wulfert eventually if they so desired, provided they pay for the entire cost of their part of the project. The facility at Wulfert, city officials added, can handle the additional waste from the adjacent island, and no additional expansion would be needed.

By phasing in the sewer system gradually, the city can avoid creating construction problems all over the island, Price said. Costs also may not be as great with gradually phasing in the system.

"There are a lot of up-front expenditures. There will also be a lot of roads torn up, and if you are allowed to take out the most serious areas first, it won't be as disruptive," Price said.

Some areas with very low density, such as Wulfert Point, where only a few families make their homes, would be assessed fees which would be far above the current estimated figures if the plan were to be implemented all at once, making sewer hook-up economically unfeasible, said Price.

"It's a financing problem mainly. It's too expensive to do right away with the density issue," Hartman said.

Cost is estimated to be between $7,000 to $10,000 per household, but those with lines already in place in front of their homes would probably incur a fee of approximately half of those figures. These residents would avoid much of the cost of a project. "I think those in Gumbo Limbo are about $3,800," said Hefty.

The cost would include everything associated with the project, from laying the line to hooking up to the house. The cost will be divided by the number of properties capable of ever utilizing the system after an assessment has been given in each area of the island.

One resident was concerned that she would have to pay for the project over the two-year period, from the time the city notified people until they were required to hook up. Price said that although residents would have to hook up one year after the line was laid, they would not have to pay for the project within this period. He said the city would have to look into financing, but that perhaps residents would pay over 15 or 20 years.

"Will a vacant lot need a hook-up?" Sanibel resident Chris Brown wondered. Hartman replied that owners with such lots might have to pay for an assessment fee, but this would be minor.

Some members of the audience questioned the procedures they would need to follow if the city did decide to go ahead with a sewer expansion plan.

"Do you have to remove septic tanks is you hook up to the sewer?" asked Dick Sheets.

"No. You can fill it with sand, and just cut if off," Hartman replied.

Drainage fields, Hefty added, can be left intact, and nothing further needs to be done with them.

Other residents, such as Dee Lucas on Oliva Street, felt that their septic tanks were in fine working order, and that they perhaps did not need a sewer system. "We only live here three months of the year and the septic system works fine."

Price pointed out that often problems can not be detected until they need immediate attention, and although people do not see any visible effects, environmental damage can be occurring unseen. "What's a problem though? You don't know what's happening to the ground water."

Other residents felt that the island did not need a comprehensive plan.

"I'm against it. We need to deal with areas where the population is the highest. Certain areas are not dense at all. The downtown is real dense. Deal with these areas," said Rick Hamilton.

Some residents saw the importance of implementing a plan for the expansion of the sewer system in the next few years. "We realize the finite limits of this island. We probably need to go to an island sewer system," Abe Lerner said. He added that he was concerned with some portions of the population such as the elderly on fixed income. "It's not fair to tax them at the same rate as the people on West Gulf for example."

After listening to public comments and questions, the council gave their opinions. "On the surface it looks good. I agree with the philosophy. Within 10 to 15 years we'll be at the build-out level. I definitely hope that council sees that a system is makes it easiest for people to pay," said Council member Mark Westall.

"The system looks orderly and thoughtful. I think we have to go in this direction. It will have a big impact for people in the path of the expansion," noted Council member Wally Kain.

Construction workers install a sewer in 1991.

Daphne Miller added that she thought the city should adopt the plan, but added that she was particularly concerned with the cost and also thought provisions needed to be taken to make paying for the project as easy as possible.

"I think it's something we really need," said Council member Robert Janes. He said he wanted to see the plan fine tuned however. He also thought planning needed to be done in the event of a catastrophe.

As the council voted unanimously to move in the direction of eventually converting the island to the sewer system, Mayor Jerry Muench agreed, "I think this is something we really need to do."

Price said he would advise the city staff to proceed with further investigation into determining which neighborhoods wanted and could afford it, deciding whether a central system was the best way to proceed, determining if a plan could be conceived to provide cost breaks for lower incomes, making assessments by the lot instead of household, and financing in case of a catastrophe. Price added that the council had made no definite decisions, but that the night's meeting had given the staff a direction in which to proceed. More public hearings will be scheduled for the future in city council meetings.

A. D. Hulings

A. D. Hulings of Bayport, Minn., honorary chairman of the board of directors and former president of the Andersen Corporation, died Sunday, March 6 at his winter home in Captiva at the age of 80 years.

Hulings began his career with Andersen's in 1937 unloading lumber and later worked in most other areas of the plant. His positions included purchasing agent, production manager, vice-president of operations, and executive vice-president. He served as president from 1968 until 1975 and was chairman of the executive committee until 1993. Colleagues describe Hulings as a humble man whose quiet leadership and kind sense of humor were vital to the growth of the Andersen Corporation.

A former Eagle Scout, recipient of the scouting's Silver Beaver Award and the Distinguied Eagle Award, Hulings maintained a lifelong commitment to the Boy Scouts of America, working as a volunteer for 48 years and serving on both the organization's executive committee and as vice-president of its Indianhead Council.

Hulings was a 1936 graduate of Carleton College and maintained a close relationship with the college throughout his lifetime. He was a trustee form 1961 to 1988, serving as a leader in its fund raising, a trusted advisor to six Carleton president, and a friend to dozens of faculty and staff. Together with his wife, Betty, he received the Carleton Distinguished Achievement Award in 1956, honorary Doctor of Humane Letters in 1989, and the William Carleton Medal in 1993, the latter recognizing their exceptional generosity and the example they set for countless others.

Hulings' love of sailing was legenday. He owned the first sailboat on the St. Croix River, was the third member of the Apostle Islands Yacht Club, and he sailed every sea except the Indian Ocean.

Philanthropy and a strong belief in stewardship were guiding principles throughout Hulings' life. He served on the St. Paul Council of Arts and Science, was a member and president of the board of Lakeview Memorial Hospital in Stillwater, the Board of Science Museum of Minnesota, and as an honorary member of the board of the Plymouth Music Series of Minnesota.

Hulings is survived by his wife of 55 years, Mary Andersen Hulings, daughters, Mary Hulings Rice and Martha Hulings Kaemmer, son-in-law Dr. Arther Kaemmer, four grandchildren, Molly Erickson, Kathy Rice, Fred Kaemmer, and Jule Kaemmer, sister, Flora Romeiser of North Platte, Nebraska, and brother Russell R. Hulings of Littleton, Colorado.

Arrangements for memorial services are pending.

Planning commission OKs Old Schoolhouse signs

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

In a 4-3 split decision, the Sanibel Planning Commission voted to allow the Old Schoolhouse Theater to reinstall its old signs Tuesday.

Approximately 60 people showed their support for the theater. Many sported t-shirts and stood to speak in favor of granting a variance which would allow the theater to replace signs they had been required to remove after the city instituted a sign ordinance regulating the number and size of signs businesses and residents are allowed to have on the island.

Supporters of the theater said that the Old Schoolhouse had experienced a dramatic drop in attendance after removing signs that informed the public about shows and playing times. In a chart documenting figures before and after the sign removal, J.T. Smith, a perennial producer of shows at the theater, showed that ticket sales had dropped from weekly totals with a high of 532 to a low of 296 one week in 1993 compared to the same week in 1994.

Smith said that it was essential for the life of the theater that the signs be allowed to be put back up, or they risked being put out of business. The variance would allow for 71.5 square feet of signs to be put into place at the theater.

Attorney Mark Ebelini said he was requesting that the commission allow for signs that would include the name of the theater, two production signs and a flyer holder. Other small incidental signs would include the season's schedule and the matinee performance of the day. In a detailed 12-page report, the planning staff concluded that there was no undue hardship experienced by the theater, and that the requested variances were inconsistent with the objectives of the sign ordinance (reducing clutter, adding to the attractiveness of the island etc.)

One of the key points of the presentation was the vie to keep the marquis, which has been part of the historic building for over 30 years, and which many residents said was an integral part of the aesthetic appearance of the island.

"It is such a part of Sanibel life," said Smith, who said that he has put a lot into restoring the building back to its original condition. Ebelini added that the marquis, which now does not conform to the new sign ordinance, was essential because it informed people of the performance. Without it, people had no idea what, if anything, was playing at the theater.

Charlotte Baker said it was dangerous because people often pulled off to the side and over the bike path because they can not see any sign. "People ask 'Are you open' and 'Do you have a play on,'" she said.

"No other business was forced to comply right away," she added. "Only the Schoolhouse Theater was forced to take such drastic steps. The theater is dead without signs."

"This building has been here for 91 years. The road and bike path have encroached on it. The marquis has been here for 30 years. Please don't drag them out of business," said Kay Strong, Sanibel resident.

"The lack of signage has been very detrimental to attendance," said Frank Wagner, whose group, Theater With A Script, performs at the theater on Sundays.

After many residents came forward to voice their support for the establishment, Dick Patton asked all of the supporters for the variance who were in the room to stand. Over 60 people rose to show their support.

Toward the end of the public discussion, Steve Greenstein, president of McLUDICROUS, seemed to capture the spirit of the discussion, with his short speech directed at the commission. "I look around this room and see talent, spirit, youth, and spunk. I urge you to continue our rich tradition and say this is not what Sanibel is about. Suppress this creativity and spirit and send them packing off this island! If you are brave enough to deny the variance, I'll make all of you honorary members of McLUDICROUS."

Commissioner Jim Levy said that he was indeed in favor of the variance, and that the health and welfare of the community was at stake. Commissioner Ernie Klaudt agreed noting, "Every society has its sacred cows and the Old Schoolhouse Theater is one of them."

Other commissioners disagreed.

"The issue is not the destruction of the schoolhouse itself...and I sympathize with J.T. [The decrease in attendance] may be partially because of the signs. But people are not attending because of increased competition. There is no problem with visibility," Commissioner Louise Johnson said. She added that she had no problem with some of their signs, but wanted to keep one production sign off. "We have to respect what the city is trying to do with the sign ordinance." Businesses should not compete with the use of garish signs, she added.

Planning Commission Chairman Bob Davison thought there was a hardship involved in the case, but wondered if the theater could survive with a lesser request. He said he was concerned with the flyers in the window and wondered if that was necessary.

Commissioner Dick Downes believed the law should be applied with no flexibility in this case. "It is the job of the commission to apply the law, however distasteful." He believed the theater did not need a poster window.

Levy reminded the commission that the arts need more publicity than a business, and that the public needs to see what shows were available. He questioned whether the commission should be regulating the community to the extent that they were attempting to do. "Think if we are masterminding about a poster window. Should we get down to a point where we way 'This can go and this can stay?'"

Commissioner Jim Krieger wondered if Smith should relocate the box office to the back altogether. He said he was concerned with the exterior appearance of the building, and expressed interest in maintaining the look of the schoolhouse.

"We might as well close the theater if we move the box office. We would have to put extra signs to lead people to the back," said Arthur Peterson, Sanibel resident.

After a long discussion, the commission agreed to the requested variance for the theater. The vote was a narrow 4-3, with Louise Johnson, Jim Krieger, and Dick Downes casting no votes, and Ernie Klaudt, Jim Levy, Bob Davison and Jim Hermes supporting the variance.

Tax tips

(Editor's note: The following tax tips are provided by the local volunteer counselors for the American Association of Retired Persons' (AARP) Tax Aide Program Each week until the income tax deadline of April 15, the counselors will provide tips about how to solve common tax problems.

For answers to specific questions, drop a line to the Island Reporter, or visit the counselors at the Sanibel Public Library Wednesdays between noon and 4 p.m.)

By Bert Lane

Many persons who invest in tax exempt municipal bond funds are surprised to receive at year's end a Form 1099 which contains a taxable capital gains distribution. The explanation is fairly simple.

The fund sold some of its municipal bonds during the year for a net gain. This net gain is distributed to all holders of the fund and is taxable.

If you have other capital gains and losses, you should report the capital gain distribution on line 14 of schedule D. If you do not have to file schedule D, you report the capital gain distribution on line 14, form 1040.

It is only a little more than a month until April 15, the federal income tax deadline. For a variety of reasons, some taxpayers will not be able to file their tax returns by that date. If you cannot file your return by April 15, you can get an extension by filing form 4868, Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return by that date.

Remember that form 4868 does not extend the time to pay your income tax.

By Ed Meyers

Retirees, plan your 1994 taxes now!! The 1994 tax law change, which can tax up to 85 percent of your social security, can hit you with some unpleasant tax surprises.

For example, a retired couple with $42,000 income from pensions and interest plus $16,000 in social security that withdraw $1,000 from an IRA account will add $518 to their tax bill because of that IRA. Yet that couple is only in the 28 percent tax bracket and would only expect to pay $280 on each additional $1,000 of income.

A similar couple with the same social security, but with $29,000 in pensions and interest will add $225 to their tax bill for withdrawing $1,000 from their IRA account.

Contrast these two examples with a couple with the same social security but with $55,000 in pensions and interest. Their additional tax because of adding a $1,000 IRA to their income would only be $280.

A similar pattern exists for single retirees on social security but with lower income levels.

This pattern is caused by a two tier system used to determine how much of your social security is taxable. This system uses what I call "provisional income" to make that determination. Provisional income is your total normally taxable income, wages, pensions, capital gains, etc., less normal adjustments such as alimony, plus tax free income plus one half of your social security. Couples with provisional incomes of up to around $53,000 and singles up to around $43,000 when adding one dollar to their provisional income will actually be adding anywhere from a half dollar to 85 cents to their taxable social security. This results in adding a total of a $1.50 to a $1.85 to taxable income for each added dollar of income from a job, interest, capital gains, IRAs etc. It also has the effect of taxing tax free interest and dividends at from 50 percent to 85 percent of normal tax rates.

Middle income taxpayers should start planning their 1994 taxable income now, because this new law will increase their estimated tax payments for 1994. By planning carefully withdrawals from their IRA accounts, capital gains, from sale of stock or property or even when they should apply for social security taxpayers can maximize their after tax income.

For more information get IRS Publication 553, Highlights of the 1993 Tax Changes. Page 12 and 13 show how to calculate your taxable social security. Call (800) 829-3676 or stop at the IRS office at the corner of Metro Parkway and Winkler Road in Fort Myers.

Elderly persons over 65 and/or persons under 65 who are totally and permanently disabled can claim a special credit on their tax return if their income is not more than certain limits. If you are married, filing a joint return and both spouses qualify, you cannot claim the credit if you income is $25,000 or more or if you received $7,500 or more of social security or some other non-taxable pension.

If you are married, filing a joint return, and only one spouse qualifies, the income limit is $20,000 or more.

If you are married, filing a separate return, and did not live with your spouse all year, the income limit is $12,500. If you are over 65, or head of household, or qualifying widow(er) with dependent child you can file for credit on your tax return if you income is less than $17,500.

The amount of your credit is limited to the amount of your tax liability. The IRS will figure your credit for the elderly or disabled if you attach Schedule 3 to Form 1040A and write "CFE" in the space to the left of Line 24B (Form 1040A.)

Esperanza Woodring legacy continues at elementary school

By Marianne Dila Strickland
Staff Writer

Ralph Woodring, the remaining resident on Sanibel of the early Woodring family, presented a check Tuesday to Sanibel Elementary School Principal Barbara Ward in memory of his mother who loved to tell her stories to the school children. The $1,740 will be used to computerize the school library.

"When I first started here in '79, Pat Kair came in and told me about Esperanza Woodring," Ward said. "I got in touch with her to come in and tell her stories to the children about the way it used to be on Sanibel."

Some of those story times were caught on video and cassette and are part of island historical archives.

Ralph Woodring wants to continue those story-weaving times for Sanibel Elementary School students where his mother left off. He plans to come to the school on a regular basis and keep early life on Sanibel alive in the imaginations of young students.

His mother loved the idea of leaving her memories in the hearts of children, but resisted attempts to go media. "People used to come around who wanted to use her experiences for personal gain," said her son. "She would turn them over to me and I'd get rid of them. She'd say if it wasn't for education or for the kids, she didn't want to do it."

Esperanza, the Spanish word for hope, was so named by her Spanish parents. From an island north of Sanibel, Sam Woodring met and brought Esperanza to the island where she spent a lifetime bringing joy to a lot of people.

After her husband died, Esperanza became a fishing guide, according to Milbrey Rushworth, Sanibel Historical Museum staff, who knew Esperanza.

"She wasn't a sweet, old lady type. She had a lot of character. She was the best fishing guide. After visitors would get their catch, she would pull over to an island, gather some driftwood and cook it up for them. She was always there to help others," Rushworth said.

Ralph Woodring and his brother Preston grew up on Sanibel. Preston left the island when he entered the service and lives in the Cypress Lakes area of Fort Myers.

Woodring said when he first left the island to go in the service he found out things about the world that he never knew existed—life here was so isolated and protected.

He shared his mother's love of the island and came back after the service to live and raise five children.

Shell finds

Katie Walsh (left), of Milwaukee, Wis., spotted this lion's paw at South Seas Plantation March 6. Twenty years of searching finally paid off. "It was very exciting to find this shell, as I've never seen one before," Walsh said.

Ruth Sell (above), of Slatington, Pa., found this junonia March 5 between the Ramada Inn and Loggerhead Condominiums. After 13 years of searching, she said, "I felt like I won the lottery."

Dorothy Bullard (below) of Winston-Salem, N.C. found this junonia at 6:45 a.m. Feb. 15 near the Shalimar Resort. She has been shelling on Sanibel for 12 years.

Commission approves variance for condo, wall, pool

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

The Sanibel Planning Commission approved a plan allowing for the construction of a four-unit condominium with a retaining wall and swimming pool on West Gulf Drive Tuesday. In exchange for altering the natural landscape of the property, the developers must provide for restoration of a 10-acre segment of the Butterknife Subdivision to include cleaning up trash, removing Brazilian peppers, and restoring wetlands.

The applicant was authorized to apply for the mitigation work by the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Erick Lindblad, of the foundation, said that the organization had authorized such projects in the past, but that this was the first time the mitigation proposal was up for approval before the planning commission.

"It's a real plus to have the trash taken away," Lindblad said. He added that it was also beneficial to have the pepper plant removed.

Commissioner Dick Downes was concerned about approving a retaining wall.

"The code is silent on retaining walls," Downes noted.

Ray Fenton, who represented the developer, said that the issue was matter of interpretation, and that if the commission liked the proposal they could find language to approve it. He said he believed that the plan met the code.

Neighbors of the proposed addition were in attendance and said they wanted to welcome the project to the area.

Kay Strong, of High Tide, said however, that she enjoyed the pond which would be moved. "I'm in love with the pond. I'm concerned with what will happen with the pond. I'm appalled with people who think they can destroy habitat."

Commissioners were also concerned with the height of the retaining wall, and Louise Johnson said she did not believe the proposal demonstrated a reasonable use of the land.

Rob Loflin, the city's conservation officer, supported the plan.

"The applicant has worked hard at making the development as safe as possible. Usually I say projects are a bad deal but here I think Ray has designed it as best as he could," Loflin commented.

When the commission proposed postponing a decision on the matter because of doubts about the plan, and questions about the retaining wall, Fenton said he would not accept the decision, but wanted an answer on that day.

"I just want to be treated like everyone else. There have been eight applications for retaining walls and you've approved eight."

The commission decided to approve the variance with various stipulations, including a maximum height of 35 inches on the retaining wall.

NOTICE OF MEETING/HEARING
SANIBEL CODE ENFORCEMENT BOARD

NOTICE IS GIVEN THAT a meeting/hearing will be held in accordance with Sanibel Code of Ordinances Article V., Sections 2-61 through and including 2-68, on MARCH 17, 1994 at 9:00 A.M. This meeting/hearing will take place at Sanibel City Hall in the Council Chambers (MacKenzie Hall) at 800 Dunlop Road, Sanibel, Florida.

IF A PERSON DECIDES TO APPEAL ANY DECISION OF THE BODY WITH RESPECT TO ANY MATTER CONSIDERED AT SUCH MEETING OR HEARING, SHE/HE WILL NEED A RECORD OF THE PROCEEDINGS, AND FOR SUCH PURPOSES MAY NEED TO ENSURE THAT A VERBATIM RECORD OF THE PROCEEDINGS IS MADE, WHICH RECORD INCLUDES THE TESTIMONY AND EVIDENCE UPON WHICH THE APPEAL IS TO BE BASED.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT, PERSONS NEEDING A SPECIAL ACCOMMODATION TO PARTICIPATE IN THIS PROCEEDING SHOULD CONTACT GARY A. Coco Dila applies a hydrating mask during the facial.

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

While an afternoon spent at a beauty salon or spa can be a luxurious way to pamper oneself, these days it can also be a healthy way to relax and refocus the mind in a fast-paced and modern society which frequently does not allow or encourage people to take time for themselves.

Long workdays and heavy schedules often keep people on a treadmill which leaves little time to devote to relaxation, and which makes time spent on oneself even more valuable and essential to a healthy, and balanced lifestyle.

At the Glitter Salon, in Captiva's South Seas Plantation, customers spend hours or even a day allowing themselves to be pampered with services such as facials, waxing, manicures, and any number of hair treatments. Tucked away at the very back of the property, with a beautiful view of the water just outside the door, the salon is small and quiet, and offers people low-key and personal attention for the duration of their visit. Many start their visit off with a facial treatment.

In a darkened room with soft music playing in the background, Coco Dila works as a facialist, having spent many years studying cosmetology, reflexology and working with a dermatologist.

She begins by cleansing and analyzing the skin type to decide which products to use and how to handle the skin during the treatment. Different skin types require different levels of stimulation, and oily skin or those which tend to break out easily must be treated even more gently, and not overstimulated with exfoliation.

Frequent exfoliation with a gentle scrub,even on a daily basis, is fine, she said, as long as the fingers do not put heavy pressure on skin.

"Let the scrub do the work, and never treat the skin roughly." Many people, especially those with problem skin believe that the more and the harder they scrub, the better the results will be. The contrary is true, however, with over-exfoliation and stimulation actually causing more problems than they might solve.

In addition to cleansing the face and applying a light scrub, Dila also recommends steaming the pores to hydrate and increase blood flow to the skin. Especially indoors, skin can become dehydrated from the heating or cooling systems people have in their homes or workplaces. It is important to drink a lot of water, as well, to help replenish the fluids which are so vital in keeping skin healthy.

In addition to cleansing and exfoliating, Dila massages the face and shoulders, as well as the hands and feet during a treatment. From the study of reflexology, which says that all of the areas of the body have pressure points on the feet, she feels that a comprehensive facial should include treatment of the hands and feet. A person will relax much more completely if attention is paid to these areas as well. The overall treatment stimulates the entire system, and gets the circulation flowing throughout the body.

Dila also locates pressure points (known as acupressure points) on the face, shoulders and head, which will stimulate the lymph glands that naturally fight illness. Many people who are in tune with themselves can detect changes in their lymph glands, and determine when they are fighting an infection or illness even when no symptoms are obvious, Dila said.

Pollution, she said, also has an impact on the health and appearance of the skin. People from cities tend to show a dramatic increase in the amount of dirt trapped in the pores, which all comes out with a facial treatment. Exhaust from cars, smoke billowing from factory chimnies, and any other pollution created by mankind gets caught in all layers of the skin and can conribute to facial problems.

Toward the end of the facial treatment, Dila will extract the dirt and any foreign particles trapped in the skin, as the pores are open from the gentle steam applied to the face. Finally she applies a mask to heal any irritated areas of the skin, and then protects the face with the proper moisturizer and oils, which are particularly vital to the eye and mouth area because they do not have any oil glands for the production of natural facial oil.

While treating the skin to a treatment stimulates not only the face but all the systems of the body, a day at the salon offers access to other services which allow a person to relax and enjoy being treated with care. Sandy Blackwell and Beth Weingart, manicurists and hairstylists, as well as Itasca Helwig, a pedicurist and hairstylist, finish a day at the salon with special attention to the nails and hair.

After soaking the nails in a moisturizing cream which removes the cuticle, Blackwell says that customers should be aware of the hygiene of any establishment. She says that scissors, for instance, should never be used to remove cuticles, due to the risk of AIDS contamination from any blood on the edges of the blades. Cream and then disposable wooden sticks should be used on the nails instead of scissors at all times.

In addition to the application of several coats of glossy color and clear nail strengthener, a

SCCF advises against chemicals on lawns, plants

By Jennifer S. Thuma
Staff Writer

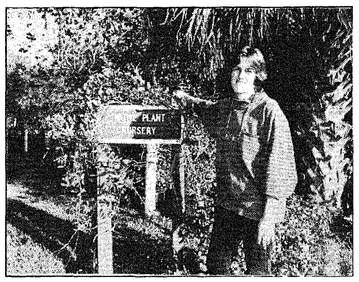
While beautiful homes with well manicured, uniform and lush green lawns completely free of weeds may be aesthetically pleasing, spraying by companies and general use of chemical products frequently utilized by home owners can kill or drive away much of the natural life in an outdoor area.

The treatment of lawns and gardens with chemicals is unwarranted and often dangerous to humans and the environment, according to specialists at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation's Native Plant Nursery.

"Companies often do spraying on a preventative basis, and spray no matter what, whether there is a problem or not," said Dee Serage of the Native Plant Nursery. She added that the chemicals used by companies and individuals themselves are usually not specific, meaning they kill everything, not just a certain pest. They drive away birds—two-thirds of which on Sanibel are insect eating creatures—kill butterflies, bees, and many different kinds of wildlife as well as get into the ground water.

She added that it is difficult for people to know how to care for their lawns and gardens because there are so many products and so much information out there. Companies themselves are operating to make a profit, and it is hard to rely on them for complete information. "It's business. And you rely on those people."

While companies will often alert people to the danger of entering their yard immediately after spraying with signs or small flags, representatives of chemical companies assure the public that their products are safe and that they are taking measures to make certain they do not harm people or the environment.



Saul Tafler

Dee Serage of the Native Plant Nursery.

"We are leaders in the industry in notifying people after treating a lawn. We are dedicated to the health and safety of people and the environment," said Dr. Ad Ali, of ChemLawn. He added that they were in favor of legislation regulating companies and their use of products. He said that research has come a long way and the company remains abreast of the issues.

Dr. John Kubisz, of Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife (CROW), said that even posting flags in sprayed yards should be an immediate warning signal to people that the chemicals are dangerous to pets and other animals, which obviously cannot read signs.

"I've often seen kids with red and irritated eyes from yards. The best thing is to let it go natural." He added that treatment of the island for a few specific health reasons, such as eliminating mosquitoes, which can carry diseases like encephalitis, is necessary.

In addition to spraying the yard, chemicals bought in the store to treat various bug problems can be dangerous.

"There are some heavy duty chemicals on the shelves. People know them by their big names and know they will kill bugs, but they will kill beneficial things as well as pests," said Ginny Gewin, an intern at the plant nursery. She added that labels frequently list numerous warnings which should tell people the product is dangerous. "You know something is wrong when it tells you to wear long sleeves and don't breath while you use it."

While many of the chemicals professional companies and individuals use in their lawns and gardens can be extremely harmful to birds, animals, and other living creatures, there are natural alternatives to almost every single concern homeowners have with their properties, said Serage. She added that they are simple and effective, but that people are not aware of them. Simply mixing soap and water and applying in the early morning or later afternoon will get rid of most pests, for example. The nursery uses many such natural methods, as well as four natural products sold in stores, she said.

Many of the insects and other living things people view as detrimental, are not even dangerous to their plants, and are better left alone. "Not many bugs at all will kill a host plant. It doesn't make any sense. Why would they kill their food source?" Serage questioned.

"Holes in leaves just mean a caterpillar is hosting on it. It won't hurt the plant," said Gewin. "If you see a caterpillar on a plant, it will just eat a bit and won't be there for long and then it will turn into a butterfly. If you spray for caterpillars, you'll hurt the plant and get rid of butterflies too."

People frequently come in with sick plants, much of the damage having been done by the use of harsh products. "More plants have died from chemicals people put on than from any insects," Serage said.

The plant nursery of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation would like to help people convert the care of their lawns to natural means. People can call the center with specific questions, or make an appointment for a free assessment of their situation and a specialist will visit their home. They can inform property owners what they can do to attract any kinds of birds or wildlife, and how they can make their lawn look nice without using chemicals. Interested persons can also stop by and pick up a brochure which will be available soon on natural alternatives to chemical treatments, which Gewin is writing.

Sanibel Public Library moving day draws closer

By Marianne Dila Strickland
Staff Writer

Under a Wedgewood blue spring sky, morning sun halfway to midpoint, construction of the new Sanibel Public Library on Dunlop Road moves along.

A painter with a long-handled roller meticulously applies a muted shade of green latex to the exterior concrete wall. Tractor shovels carry sand, spread and pack it where a driveway will be. A carpenter calls down a measurement to another who is sawing a board. Jim Smith, superintendent of construction leaves his office trailer to check on a detail.

Patricia Allen, director of the library, and Robert Emmett, treasurer, are getting ready for another meeting. They walk into the shade of the structure and the coolness of the parking space on the first level.

Ralf Kiser

The new library on the day of its topping-out ceremony in December.

Also on that level, explained Allen, will be a meeting room, two mechanical storage rooms, two 650 gallon water tanks, and a generator. If necessary, the structure will be a shelter of last resort, able to withstand 155 mph winds, with an electric generator and plenty of water for anyone needing emergency shelter.

Patricia Allen guides one's imagination through to a finished, working library as graciously as she would if it were her home. She feels every step of progress, every inch of delay intensely. Her calm exterior covers a deep excitement about how it will all turn out when the library opens sometime this summer.

Allen gestures to where the vaulted ceiling with exposed false beams will be, the carpeted walls for the Sanibel Captiva Art Association gallery, the long sweep of magazine racks to face toward readers, the circular lounge area for relaxed reading, long windows viewing a restful lake, and individual study carrels.

Electrical outlets in floors as well as walls are in place, promising an automated computer system in the future. Allen looks forward to adding an integrated system which can start out with the basics with additions as budget and need determine. Carpet tiles were chosen as floor covering because of their easy maintenance and long-wear-pedicure and manicure include foot and hand massages as well. Helwig places tired feet in warm, bubbling water to relax the muscles before massaging the foot and leg and then shaping the nails for the finishing touches to. To finish off the day, traditional services including hair styling, cuts, and coloring can also be had, of course, in addition to a facial or manicure and pedicure.

While time and money spent at a salon may seem extravagant to some, the services do afford women and men the chance to enjoy themselves and relax, and escape, at least temporarily, the pressures and demands of their everyday lives. Prices range from $35 for a pedicure and $25 for a manicure. Facials are $60, while hair coloring starts at $45 and cuts are $18. For more information on the Glitter salon call 472-5757.

ing features.

This is the adult wing, where a measure of quiet will surround library users while they work or look for books and information. The reference desk, archives, a conference room, and offices will border the angle of the L-shaped design and the circulation desk will stand right opposite the elevator.

A glass wall with wooden rail will overlook the two-story lobby which features automatic sliding glass doors for the handicapped or people loaded down with books. Glass shelves will display a permanent exhibit of shells donated from the personal collection of Elsie Malone.

The circulation desk will be beautified by an original Ikki Matsumoto design burned into the wood paneling on the front of the counter.

There is a special place for the wonderful wildflower paintings Emma Schofield created and donated to the library.

"It's been a wonderful experience," said Allen. "Since the dedication we've had people offer to help us in so many ways. I happened to mention we would love to have an aquarium in the children's section and someone said, 'I think I can help you with that.' It's wonderful the way people value the library and want a good facility."

Restrooms and an audio-visual room for previewing CDs and videos are located adjacent to the children's section. The circular area in the children's section is raised a few low steps so a storyteller will be more easily visible. It will be a favorite place for infants to practice their toddling, too.

A reference librarian is being hired soon to become familiar with library operations before moving to the new structure. An expanded reference collection will be part of the new facility.

Allen expects a two-week period will be necessary to make the move and the library will be closed to the public for the move.

InfoTrac has been an underutilized resource since its installation. Through a CD-ROM system, 300 magazines can be accessed for readers.

Stressing the importance of users seeking the help of one of the full-time staff members whenever they cannot find specific information or material, Allen suggested this would be even more important until the new layout becomes familiar.

The library's million dollar bank balance is not looking for ways to be spent, it is earmarked for the new building construction.

In her February annual report, the director provided statistics showing the continued growth of both users and items circulated for the past 10 years. Over 100,000 items were checked out last year and almost 60,000 users came through the door.

Also at the annual meeting, new library board members were chosen: Renee Lynch, Marilyn Lorenson, and Phyllis Moershel. Board members re-elected were Betty Lou Barbieri, Robert Emmett, and Harriet Ringel.

Retiring after four years of service because they were ineligible for re-election were Field Wasson and Betty Zajicek.

After the meeting, board members elected their officers: President Betty Lou Barbieri, First Vice-President Ernie Klaudt, Second Vice-President Jody Brown, Recording Secretary Betty Anholt, Corresponding Secretary Erhart Becker, Treasurer Robert Emmett, and Enhancements-CDs Robert Miller.

Totch Brown tells of a life in the Everglades

By Barbara Linstrom
Special to the Island Reporter

The way Everglades native and author Loren "Totch" Brown sees it, his story will soon make it to Hollywood.

"There's a movie from me," said Totch during a recent visit to Captiva. "And I won't settle for anything less than Warner Bros."

Author of Totch: A Life in the Everglades, he spoke to about 60 people last Wednesday at the Captiva Community Center. The day before his appearance Totch learned that his book, which came out last fall, had just entered its fourth printing.

"It's sold about 10,000 copies now," he said matter-of-factly.

Totch, who spent his early years hunting and fishing the Ten Thousand Island region until diminishing wildlife led him into marijuana smuggling, fully realizes that he has a unique story to tell.

Opening his presentation up to questions from the audience, Totch responded to about 20 inquiries in his slow, deliberate style.

Asked about his drug running days, Totch shook his head.

"I should just start my talks on that subject," said Totch, adding that people always ask about it. "But, I've never smoked a joint and I've never even seen coke. And, I am by no means proud that I hauled marijuana, but that's the way the cookie crumbled.

"I'd love to put it behind me, but I can't. It's a part of history," he said, explaining how drug running became the only way to make a living in the Everglades.

"It's not like bein' from a city where you have 100 things to choose from," Totch said. "We only had about four ways."

After the coons were hunted to death in the 1940s for their pelts and alligator hunting became illegal in the 1950s, pompano fishing was the only way to make a living for a while. Then the fish became scarce and times were really tough, he said.

"Everything in the Everglades ran out," Totch said. "And just like it was hard for the few animals left, it was hard for us too."

While he was busy in those days trying to make a living by any means necessary for his wife, Estelle, and three daughters, Totch said he barely even noticed his surroundings.

When he slowed down later after some physical ailments, he really began to realize what was happening to his homeland.

"Back when I was working all the time I didn't care, I didn't want to be bothered," Totch said. "But since I quit it's going to worry me to death...We're about to lose the Everglades."

Knowing that the times he spent in the Everglades will never be the same, Totch fully understands how invaluable his story is. And, he's not a bit shy about it.

However, he wasn't always so aware of his unique worth.

"When I started out writing, I planned to write about my grandfather's time," Totch explained. "Then I saw the light."

Compared to the day-in day-out "grind" that his grandfather lived in the Everglades, Totch realized that his own life was much more exciting.

Explaining that he was always a workaholic and that he took up writing when he could no longer work, Totch said he was moved by his environment.

"I slowed down and watched the birds and the bees and saw how precious they were," he said. "I'd go to the big city and then come back and see a way of life never to be lived again because they took it all away.

"I began to think it should be put down in history," he said. "Money never crossed my mind at the time."

At first, Totch didn't make a big deal about writing a book.

"I started finding these pieces of paper with writing on them laying around," said Estelle after Totch's talk. "You know he wrote the whole thing with a pencil — a No. 3 because of the way it erased."

One of his daughters would then type his work, he said.

Written in his down-to-earth style, Totch's memoirs are as popular as he expected.

Always confident that his story was worth publication, Totch said he was astonished when the first publisher he approached did not go for his manuscript.

Now, he has already turned down several small-budget movie producers who have sought the rights to his story. Rugged and independent, Totch serves as his own agent.

At 73, he moves his lean, sun-tanned body with steady confidence. His leathered skin is etched with stories. And, he could have gone on answering questions all afternoon.

His responses began as direct replies that were woven into related threads of his rich existence.

"He could have gone on forever," said Estelle after the talk. "You know if there's one thing that this book has done it's made him like people. Before he hated to be around people, but now he loves it."

As she talked about his new behavior, Totch was busy shaking hands and smiling while signing books for about 20 people who stood in line.

Asked how she felt when she found out he was going to write a book, Estelle said she was surprised.

"But, he's so full of energy, he can't sit still," she added.

Totch and Estelle have been married for 55 years.

"Fifty five years of the sweetest married life ever," said Totch.

Currently, Totch is trying to find the time to work on another historical memoir

Totch ended up on Captiva after meeting Captiva resident Harold Lowe at a book signing on Sanibel. Lowe and Totch got to talking at Totch's signing and Totch invited him to come down to the Everglades some time.

Lowe went down and Totch took him around the Ten Thousand Islands area for a day.

Lowe is especially impressed by Totch's distinct manner.

"He does things his way — he's very independent," said Lowe.

After spending the day in the Everglades, Lowe thought it would be nice to see if the library would like to have him do a book signing and presentation on Captiva.

"He had never even been here before," said Lowe. "He didn't even know how to get here."

Totch said he liked Captiva alright, but that it didn't begin to compare to his hometown of Chokoloskee.

Lowe approached Captiva Civic Association member B.J. Schaeffer about having Totch come to Captiva. As a member of the Captiva Memorial Library Board, Schaeffer talked to librarian Daria Parry, who in turn got the go ahead from the Lee County Library System.

In introducing Totch, Parry gave special thanks to the Captiva Civic Association for the use of its facility.

The library board provided homebaked cookies and iced tea at the presentation.

And, Totch provided his presentation for no charge.

Despite the success of his book, Totch and Estelle say little has changed in their lifestyle.

"We don't like to leave home too much," said Totch.

Island Seniors fashion show and lunch

Always looking for a fun way to lunch? The highly active, full-spirited Island Senior women have planned a mid-day treat guaranteed to entertain.

At the Sanibel Community Center, Monday, March 21, 12:30 p.m., lunch will be served and models who have gotten in shape with senior aerobics three times a week, will show fashions assembled by Sheila Thompson from her shop Designer Consigner.

Come see what attractive ensembles can be put together with imagination and consignment shop apparel—not for the budget conscious only.

This event is a fund-raiser for the not-for-profit senior group which tries to provide supplemental support for the program sponsored by the Recreation Department of the City of Sanibel and Lee County.

For more information call 472-5743.

CASI condominium seminar to be held

The Condominium Associations of Sanibel invites all condominium owners and other interested individuals to attend a free workshop to be held on Thursday, March 17, at the Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort.

A variety of common condominium concerns will be addressed by Mark Benson, weekly columnist of "Condo Life" in the Fort Myers News Press. Benson is also a member of the Florida State Advisory Council on condominiums.

Jay Halcrow, a local independent consultant on marketing and tourism will discuss the current and future development of Southwest Florida.

Registration & refreshments 8:30 a.m. Program: 9 a.m.

Lions Club Arts and Crafts Fair March 25

For the past nine years, Alice Kyllo has operated one of the most popular booths at the fair.

On Friday, March 25, she will be there as usual with her jams and jellies, all home-made from island fruits—kumquat, sea grape, calmondine, carissa, guava, prickly pear cactus and sometimes mango, rose apple, loquat or surinam cherry.

She will sell out her entire stock as always and donate the entire proceeds to the Lions Club. "The Lions do great work for the blind and I'm pleased to help," Kyllo said.

Arbor Walk: A tour of island gardens

The Sanibel Historic Village and Museum is sponsoring a tour of five local yards and gardens to take place Saturday, March 19.

The locations can be reached by bicycle or by Sanibel Trolley leaving from the historic village at 9:45 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Trolley tickets are $3.

Climax of the Arbor Walk is a sneak preview of Miss Charlotta's tea room on the historic village grounds where tea, lemonade and cookies will be served.

Tickets are $6 available at the village, 472-4648.

Chamber auction set for March 26

Well-known island personalities will wield a gavel at the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce's sixth annual Auction Gala Saturday, March 26, at South Seas Plantation Conference Center.

Matt Asen of Timbers Restaurant, John Biddle of Loco's Island Grill & Cantina, Carlene Brennen of the Island Shoppers Guide, Francis Esquerre, security broker with NationsBank, Paul Gaeta of Tarwinkles, Jacaranda and Manatee's, Mia Holler of NationsBank, Rodney Jobe of Sanibel Accommodations, Victor Mayeron of the Mucky Duck and Paul McCarthy of Captiva Cruises will be auctioneers.

Dress is cracker casual and a prize will be given for the best cracker outfit.

The evening will be fast-paced with a wide assortment of items ranging from artwork to fuzzy animals, family vacations, fashion wardrobes, sporting goods, dinner parties, golf and tennis weekends, and a large assortment of jewelry.

The event to benefit the chamber's building fund is open to the general public. Tickets are $50 each. Call 472-3232 for more information.

SCCF sponsors Island Pick Up

Partnerships are growing for the 13th annual Great Island Pick Up. Joining the SCCF are the City of Sanibel, Buttonwood BBQ, the original Lazy Flamingo, Keep Lee County Beautiful, Pepsico, Visitors Television and the J. N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

Other groups wishing to assist in the effort can contact SCCF's education director Kristie Anders for details.

Date for the big pick up is April 9 and coordinators are gearing up to treat the islands to another successful beauty treatment.

Call Kristie Anders for more information: 472-2329.

Partnership theme of Wildlife Celebration

In every facet of life, people, plants and animals work together. A coral polyp provides a place for an algae that produces excess oxygen utilized by the animal; Captiva Cruises co-sponsors educational boat trips with the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation; a zebra butterfly finds a safe refuge on a passion flower vine; Department of Environmental Protection requests the assistance of sea turtle research volunteers; an indigo snake shares a gopher tortoise's burrow; the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge assists SCCF and CROW with solutions in habitat management. Partnerships allow individuals to unite for common goals and produce extraordinary results.

Partnership is the theme of the annual Wildlife Celebration to be held Saturday, March 19 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Barrier Island Lab on Tarpon Bay. The event is co-sponsored by the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge and the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. School children have been encouraged to enter a contest where posters are to illustrate nature's partners. Winners will be announced in the morning along with winners of the Eighth Annual Wild Florida Photo Contest.

City receives 'successful community' recognition

The city of Sanibel received the 1993 Growth Management Award in the "Florida Successful Community" category from the 1000 Friends of Florida.

The "Florida Successful Community" award is presented to a community which has shown an extraordinary effort to create a special place to live.

The 1000 Friends of Florida is a state-wide non-profit organization of environmentally concerned citizens and professionals who are interested in and supportive of growth management, planning, and environmental issues.

Sanibel will be the second award recipient in the "Florida Successful Community" category.

The nomination was made by Kristie Anders, Education Director for the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, in recognition of the upcoming 20th anniversary of the City of Sanibel. The award presentation will be held in Tallahassee on March 24.

I Spy celebrates hands

"I Spy: A Celebration of Hands" is the theme of a special show Saturday, March 19 at the I Spy Shop in the Village of Sanibel.

A collection of jewelry and clothing, either produced by hand or representational of hands, will be on display from 1 to 5 p.m. To add another dimension, Captiva resident Katie Gardenia, a palmist better known as the Gypsy Mermaid, has been invited to explain palm reading and share her ability with visitors.

The I Spy special show materialized because owner Pat St. Cyr, an artist and former art educator, feels the human hand should be recognized for its

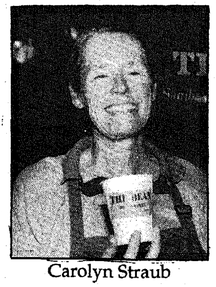
Dear Patty:

I thought you and the staff of the Island Reporter needed to know what a great job you did for us during our first few weeks in business on the Island.

When we opened in early January, we knew we needed to get the word out to island residents, as well as visitors. We started with ads in the Reporter. Thanks for your attention to detail to make sure the ads were just as we wanted them to appear.

In our first week of business, I was really amazed at how many people came in the shop with the comment "I saw your ad in the Reporter yesterday (or last week)." Many of them called on the telephone to ask where we were, because, as you know, Periwinkle Gardens is not really a household word on Sanibel. A significant number of the callers said they had seen our ad in the Reporter and were trying very hard to find us. Most did, and thanks to the Reporter, they are still our customers.

We appreciate your hard work, and we appreciate the coverage of the Reporter as we continue to serve Sanibel's it's very best coffee



Carolyn Straub

Sincerely,

Carolyn Straub

Bareboat rentals at Adventure charters

Adventure Sailing Charters, operating from South Seas Plantation since 1976 has exanded its operation with the addition of a bareboat.

A 19-foot Starwind sailboat with keel centerboard and auxiliary power will be available for half day and full day rentals to qualified sailors.

This is the first time that South Seas Plantation or any island resort has offered a sailboat rental of this type.

"We've been getting requests from many experienced sailors for a mono-hull day rental, and felt it was time to accomodate their need," says Capt. Mike McMillan, owner of Adventure Sailing Charters. "There's no better way to get a true perspective on our barrier islands than by relaxing on a sailboat."

The sailboat, named Hereafter, is moored at South Seas Plantation's main marina, just adjacent to the sloop Adventure. Adventure and McMillan's 21 pro-sail racing catamaran, Starship, are available for captained charters daily.

Graduates of On and Offshore Sailing School or ASA , and those skippers with either a European sailing license, captain's license, or bareboat certification from major charter companies will automatically qualify for rental.

For more information, rate and availability, call 472-7532 days (South Seas guests dial EXT. 7532) or 472-4386 evenings.

Power Squadron sponsers free inspections

The Sanibel-Captiva Power Squadron will sponsor a courtesy marine inspection Saturday, March 19 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. The examination will be held at David Brillhart's dock at 619 North Yachtsman Drive, adjacent to the Sanibel Marina. Herb Ferguson, representing the U.S. Coast Guard Auxilliary, and a member of the power squadron will head up the exam.

Owners of small or large recreational craft are encouraged and welcomed to participate, and upon completion of a safe inspection, will be issued a new 1994 Seal of Safety decal to be affixed to their boat.

Call 472-1422 for more information.

SCCF begins planning process

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation is about to begin its fourth decade of leadership and environmental education on the islands, and is beginning to plan its direction for future service.

The first phase of the planning process will be a telephone survey of residents of the islands, using a random sampling process. This survey will be conducted by Gertrude and Sam Ford, island residents and active foundation volunteers. Three questions will be used to elicit information needed by the foundation's leadership.

"The survey shouldn't take more than five minutes and will help immeasurably in setting the future goals and priorities of the organization," Gertrude Ford stated. The calls should be completed in early March.

The SCCF board of directors will be working through mid-April to complete the plan, which will be reported to residents later in the spring.

The organization was chartered in 1967 as a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of natural resources and wildlife habitat on and around Sanibel and Captiva. In addition to holding

Temple Bat Yam announces UAHC affiliation

Bat Yam, Temple of the Islands, announces its affiliation with the UAHC, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The UAHC has a tradition of leadership in the enrichment of American Jewish Life by promoting interfaith understanding, religious education and community service for the young and old.

Founded less than three years ago, Bat Yam has grown from a handful of dedicated islanders to an extended family of over 150 members. Its admission into the UAHC is a tribute to those congregants who have worked so hard to establish Bat Yam's presence on Sanibel and Captiva.

Rabbi Norman Kahan, Director of the Small Congregations Committee of the UAHC was on hand last month to formally welcome Bat Yam into the UAHC and to outline the programs, services and resources available to assist members of the Reform Judaism movement in furthering their creative endeavors.

Shabbat observance as a day of rest, joy and holiness is celebrated each Friday at 8 p.m. on Sanibel. Contact 472-8809 for more information.

Shrimp dinner at St. Michael

The women of St. Michael and All Angel Episcopal Church served their fifth shrimp dinner on Jan. 20 to a full house of people. It was an enjoyable evening for all, including the committee headed by Peg Briscoe. The project was to benefit the church's building fund.

Because of the large turnout, it was decided to serve another dinner Thursday, March 24 with the same format. Tickets must be purchased in advance because of limited space. They may be obtained at the church office at the rear of the building, 2304 Periwinkle Way for $8.50 each. All residents and visitors are invited.

Homemade salads, vegetables and desserts will be prepared in the kitchen by the church women, and diners may see and hear the men including the Rector, Father William Dodd, as "shrimp steamers" and bus-boys. For information call the church office at 472-2173.

CCA business committee reviews Captiva scene

By Barbara Linstrom
Special to the Island Reporter

About a dozen members of the Captiva Civic Association business committee talked about a potential sewer system, delivery trucks and their problems with a recent opinion piece in the Fort Myers News-Press at last Wednesday's meeting.

Dominating the discussion at the beginning of the meeting, Lloyd Wright, representing 'Tween Waters, spoke emphatically about the need for a sewer system on Captiva.

"A sewer system would not just serve business interests," he said. "It would be good for the environment, good for business, good for individuals — it would be good for Captiva Island."

Admitting that heavy rains cause current septic systems to overflow at island restaurants causing grease to flow into island waters, Wright vehemently called for the issue to be taken seriously.

"It is a serious problem," he said. "Sanibel recognizes it...and our problem is a lot bigger because Captiva is a heck of a lot narrower."

Paul McCarthy, chairman of the business committee, suggested that the biggest problem concerning a sewer system is that of public relations.

"People don't see it as affecting everyone," said McCarthy. He suggested that Wright bring it up at the next CCA general membership meeting.

"I hate to see people wading in polluted waters," said Wright.

Given the fact that island businesses probably contribute to the problem more than residents, Wright suggested that the commercial property owners finance the installation of a sewer system.

"The island is 75 percent zoned commercial," he said. "It was probably a mistake, but it's already done."

Wright also expressed his disgust with the septic tank mound system from a resident's perspective.

"I paid $10,000 for that ugly mound and I cannot wait to flush it out," he said.

After Wright finished speaking his piece and said he would consider speaking at the CCA general membership meeting March 22, McCarthy drew members' attention to an opinion piece that appeared in the Feb. 27 issue of the News-Press.

Written by a Captiva resident, the headline, "Creeping commercialism gaining a beachhead on quiet Captiva Island," as well as the essence of the piece upset the business committee members.

Victor Mayeron, owner of the Mucky Duck, said the committee should recognize the erroneous nature of the piece, which claimed that "...these businesses don't pay a penny for beach renourishment. We property owners on Captiva have paid to put the sand on the beach with very little help from any other government. They get the free ride while we dish out the money. Welfare in its highest form!"

Alison Hagerup, administrator of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District, verified the business community's upset after the meeting.

"Captiva businesses bore the brunt of the renourishment," she said. "Captiva residents paid storm protection benefits. The businesses paid that plus an additional cost for recreational benefits."

After deciding that the commentary was replete with error, the committee members deemed it unworthy of any more attention.

Moving along, the committee members talked about the recurring delivery truck problem.

"The problem was better, but now with the incredible traffic it's bad," said Earl Raven, of South Seas Plantation.

Members agreed that the problem is especially bad in front of Plantation View where huge delivery trucks illegally block traffic by the post office.

Trucks parking there will begin to be ticketed next week, said Paul Garvey, CCA president.

With regards to solid waste, Raven informed committee members that South Seas has contracted a V.F.W. post in Fort Myers Beach to pick up co-mingled recyclables.

They take mixed glass, tin, aluminum, corrugated items and plastic, he said.

Mayeron, who said the Mucky Duck recycles through B.F.I., expressed interest in the V.F.W. post since B.F.I. does not take cardboard, which creates the bulk of restaurant waste.

Raven offered to provide interested parties with the phone number.

Sports Shorts

Too fit to quit

Why is it that some athletes just seem to last like the "energizer bunny" and others wilt as the competition goes on and on? While efficiency of style, a relaxed physical body, and a calm mind all contribute to staying power in sports, the most compelling attribute which leads to success over the long haul of an event or activity is overall fitness.

What, you may ask, comprises overall fitness? There are four primary components: cardiovascular conditioning, and endurance, muscular strength, power, and flexibility and low body fat. Each of these areas requires training to develop your capabilities and address your specific needs.

Some folks have great range of motion and may need only moderate flexibility training. Others have a very low percentage of body fat and my not need to emphasize longer, fat burning aerobic routines. Whatever your needs, a balanced program is the key to developing overall fitness.

Not only will you reap the benefits of looking and feeling better, you'll have more energy to expend in other activities. Moreover, when it comes to recreational opportunities such as tennis, etc., it's much less likely that you'll be fading in the third set. It is important that you train specifically for the activities that you enjoy. Cross-training , or involvement in a variety of training methods (swimming one day, cycling or power-walking another), is a great way to balance your program, but make sure that you spend time doing sport-specific work.

For example, if you play tennis, a valuable cross-training workout would be doing 10 to 20-second interval sprints on the bike or in the pool, followed by slow, steady-state motions. This simulates the rhythm of playing points. Tennis, or, for that matter, virtually all other sports, won't supply by themselves all of the elements of an overall fitness program. Try to make some time for each part, even if it's only a little time.

A thorough program can be accomplished weekly with three 20 to 30-minute aerobic sessions, two 30 to 40-minute resistance training sessions, and three 20-minute flexibility sessions. That's a total of less than four hours a week; out of 112 normal waking hours, that's a small price to pay for a fit body.

If you don't seem to be able to work in this amount of time, prioritize with aerobics first, then combine resistance and flexibility workouts. You may find it helpful to get a fitness assessment and have a program designed for your particular needs.

For those who just can't seem to get into getting fit, do whatever healthful activity you enjoy most—golf, tennis, even a casual beach stroll. but get out and do it. Life's too short to be a couch potato, watching and wishing while others do life and you only witness it. You'll find that as your fitness levels grow, so will your desire to experience more of what life has to offer. Go for it!

THE DUNES

GOLF AND TENNIS CLUB

"Terrific golf and challenging tennis, with an abundance of lake views and island wildlife"

JNA REAL ESTATE

The Dunes Golf and Tennis Club offers its residents terrific golf and challenging tennis in a neighborhood with an abundance of lake views and island wildlife. Located on the east end of Sanibel Island, it is convenient to the causeway and within minutes of Periwinkle Way shopping, banks, grocery stores and other popular Sanibel destinations.

The Dunes has a wonderful mix of well maintained ground level and piling homes, different in shape, size and architectural design. They are all situated on peaceful wooded homesites with views of mangrove forests, or terrific views of the golf course fairways, greens & lakes. Two and three bedroom duplex villas on the 18th fairway and Horseshoe Lake make great winter cottages. Among the 370 properties in The Dunes there are about 50 vacant homesites remaining.

Developed by The Mariner Group with PGA touring pro Mark McCumber, the 18 hole golf course was designed around many lakes to ensure its players a challenging game of golf. This diverse community serves as an Island gathering place year round and hosts such special events as The Taste of the Islands and The Sanibel Jazz Festival. The Clubhouse facility features seven clay tennis courts, Mulligan's restaurant &lounge, tennis & golf pro shops and teaching pros.

Residents of The Dunes are an equal mix of both retiree's and young families who contribute to their island neighborhood a rare mix of interests and experiences from around the country and around the world.

The Sanibel Festival: A passionate beginning

By Marianne Dila Strickland
Staff Writer

The 1994 Sanibel Festival—A Celebration of Music, opened Saturday, March 5, at the Sanibel Congregational Church, with the Amernet String Quartet. The brilliant opening concert was sponsored by Christine S. Johnson, professional musician and tireless supporter of music on Sanibel.

It is difficult to find words to describe the performance of the Amernet String Quartet. There is so much good music on Sanibel, but when this group starts to play, the music catches you by the shoulders, shakes you, and says, "Listen, listen to this!"

These musicians play with such passion. One remembers, "Yes, ah yes, youth." When are emotions more expressive? But there is so much more—there is technical brilliance that only comes with talent and intense commitment.

The musicians together form an organism that has a life of its own. One perceives the quartet as a vital, breathing, sweeping force—gathering itself in, releasing a torrent of sound or one sweet note, lyric above all the rest—holding an ocean of meaning. You dare not close your eyes listening to Amernet, as you might miss something.

Individually, they are as expressive verbally as musically. Their knowledge of music, love of their instruments, instinctual selection of program music—these subjects will keep them talking.

Besides making music, they find time and appetite for other adventures in life. At a rehearsal, they talked animatedly about likes, loves, and the concert of March 17.

Kyoko Kashiwagi, violin, plays on a small violin made in the early 1600s. She loves to cook and likes to concoct Japanese and Indian dishes, especially the spicy ones.

Marcia Littley de Arias, violin, loves the travel involved with their performances. She likes to try new restaurants and is adventuresome with food.

Javier Arias, cellist, is an amateur photographer but laments the loss of his camera which he lent to a friend. He likes Thai and Mexican cuisine.

Malcolm Johnston, viola, loves to watch and play soccer. He is looking forward to viewing the world cup. The others confide he is a Frisbee fanatic. And guess what else he enjoys? As he says, "Musicians love to eat and drink. They are known for it."

The group has been together since 1989 at the Julliard School where one of their teachers was strongly supportive of their efforts and encouraged them to continue together. What does their name Amernet mean? The group will not even give a hint. It is a secret not to be divulged until "...20 years after the group has ceased to exist," said the Ariases.

It has nothing to do with American or Network, the four emphasized.

Amernet String Quartet will return on Thursday, March 17, to perform the music of

Art highlights Old Schoolhouse Theater

By Marianne Dila Strickland
Staff Writer

It is a good idea—whoever came up with the notion of showing paintings of the old schoolhouse at The Old Schoolhouse Theater.

Fun to see what the eye and hand of each artist creates of the same subject. On view now, Sanibel-Captiva Art League members have hung works in a variety of media, of the schoolhouse past and present.

Performers Joan Smith and Peter Marino are also portrayed through the talents of several artists, as the actors volunteered to model for one of the art league work sessions several weeks ago.

Several of the works are exceptionally interesting. Roger Haas' "Before the Playhouse" is a watercolor you could walk into. A sunny schoolyard, nostalgic with overalled, bonneted schoolchildren on their way into the school.

"Performer Joan Smith," a pastel by Jean Gibson, is a compelling three-quarter portrait, wonderful composition and striking likeness.

Betty Cook's pastel on charcoal gray paper of actor Peter Marino is beautiful. The fresh, quick strokes of chalk give the portrait a vivid but casual look.

Carol Rosenberg created a stunning work with mixed media called "To Have and To Hold." Portraits in charcoal pencil with a few sweeps of muted color show J. T. Smith, Joan Smith, and Peter Marino with the Old Schoolhouse Theater building in the background.

Rosenberg has generously volunteered to donate the sale price of the painting to the Old Schoolhouse Theater Foundation.

C. Talbot Hoagland has done "Joan" in oils, and the profile catches the character of the actor.

of the theater, Jean Gibson has done a watercolor "Prop Room" with light washes of color filtering a backroom scene.

Actor Peter Marino must have been a very inspirational model. He surfaces again in Dorothy Mueller's watercolor in an interesting seated pose of relaxed body angles.

Other wonderful paintings are included in the exhibit. The theater in all its moods is shown by Joan Bitzer in watercolor, Sara Hurst in watercolor, Jean Wood in watercolor, Sheila Tardosky in watercolor, and Baller in watercolor.

Charlotte Heimann loaned her unique artwork by Lucas Century—an etched glass panel of the Old Schoolhouse Theater from a sketch by Jaye Boswell.

The model-actors were also subjects of Hanna Hilger's pencil sketch of Marino and her pastel of Smith in vibrant primary colors, as well as Joel Sabra's watercolor of Smith and Conte crayon of Marino.

The Old Schoolhouse Theater is a cornucopia of the arts this month. Watch for Mark Agnew's new sets.

Arnold Schoenberg and Antonin Dvorak. The musicians speak excitedly about the Schoenberg piece in which they will be joined by soprano Kimberly Tobola.

It was Malcolm Johnston who urged the inclusion of this piece in the program. All four agreed that Schoenberg's Quartet No. 2, Opus 10, is so full of emotion it is, as Javier Arias says, "...beyond words. It runs the gamut of emotions, and none are superficial.

"Schoenberg believed music is organic, so he liked to give it a plot," explained Arias. "He used the work of poets to give texture to his music. It is one of his early works, it is of the highest level."

The musicians feared the audience might be hesitant about a program of Schoenberg, the Austrian composer who was pioneer of the atonal style and inventor of the 12-note scale that grew out of it.

Quartet No. 2 is not in the atonal style. It uses two poems of Stefan George, Litany and Transcendence, sung by Ms. Tobola.

"I am emotionally drained after playing this piece," said Johnston. Three heads nodded in agreement.

Guest pianist Jeremy Denk joins Amernet in Dvorak's most masterful work in the field of chamber music, Quartet No. 2 in A Major on the same program.

WSFP FM 90.1 Concert Radio is a co-sponsor of the Sanibel Festival and will be playing music from Festival performances throughout the month of March.

Phillips Gallery jumped with Butch Thompson Trio

By Marianne Dila Strickland
Staff Writer

Thursday evening, March 3, in the Phillips Gallery at BIG Arts about 200 people found it impossible to sit still. With Butch Thompson on piano, Robbie Schlosser on bass, and Hal Smith on drums, the capacity audience swayed, marked the beat with their heads, shoulders, hands, heels, toes, feet—body.

The program was traditional jazz, a collection of old favorites. Thompson kept quipping to Schlosser and Smith, "Well, I guess they know that one, too," as assenting murmurs rose with the announcement of each familiar piece.

There was no printed program, Thompson just ambled on through the evening's repertoire with a little erudition on each piece. The trio started right out with Charleston, and the audience took about 30 seconds to warm up to chair-dancing. Fats Waller's, "How Can You Face Me," and "Ain't Misbehavin'," then some Jelly Roll Morton, and some long, slow, very blue blues.

The trio did an Earl Hines number, Rosetta, in which they stopped playing after the Rose part, had an intermission, and started right up on the -etta part with Hal Smith's drum solo.

Smith, a very creative jazz drummer, demonstrated his perfect pitch and played his drum solo with several interesting tonal changes.

Adding variety to the percussion, Smith said he uses a wooden block and a cow bell besides the drums. "I'm thinking on three different levels as I play," he said. "I keep the basic 1-2 beat with the bass drum, then I overlay one or two other beats in on the other drums."

More wonderful jazz filled the second half of the program with several solo segments by Robbie Schlosser on Bass fiddle. Schlosser has the most expressive eyebrows of any musician, but his real talent lies with the instrument he learned straight from New Orleans jazz greats. Schlosser seemed to revel in what his music and that always adds a dimension of enjoyment for the audience as well.

The performance ended with a nostalgic performance of "Stardust" and with that, the audience seemed to accept that the evening's entertainment was over.

Having sung "Happy Birthday" earlier to Bill Phillips, a principal benefactor and namesake of Phillips Gallery, the party moved on to The Hungry Heron. Restaurateur Rob DeGennaro had held open the facility for the musical entourage.

Not all the audience accepted the invitation to birthday cake, but those who did make it, hardly noticed the askew frosting that resulted from a short floorward drop the cake took after Phillips blew out his candles.

Musicians are always ravenous after a performance—they eat little before. Between mouthfuls, the trio answered questions of local jazz lovers who had the opportunity to become better acquainted with the jazz greats.

Asked if any of their parents had been musicians, all three replied that their parents had played the piano as hobbies, but the jazz artists had found and nurtured their special music on their own, seeking out other greats to learn from.

The Butch Thompson Trio has certainly got under the skin of island jazz buffs and they look forward to a return evening of pure joy when the trio returns.

Movie music at the Old Schoolhouse

A transformation of the Old Schoolhouse into it another life will take place as it becomes Baumann's Chinese Theater for J. T. Smith's third all-new musical revue this season, Going Hollywood.

To open March 17, 8 p.m., the revue will feature four newcomers hailing from New York City: Michael Bartoli, Joey Conz, Jennifer Guindon, and Rhonda Merritt.

Smith has devoted most of the show to songs from movie musicals and songs about movie musicals. The non-musical movie theme songs would take another whole show.

During the '30s and '40s, great popular composers of the period were lured to California to write original songs for movies and movie musicals.

Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, Jerome Kern and Cole Porter, to name just a few who will be featured.

For more information call 472-6862

Great Decisions to be made at BIG Arts

The session which meets at BIG Arts on Mondays from 2 to 4 p.m. will on, March 14 be considering the "New World Disorder—The U.S. in Search of a Role."

An expert panel will lead the focus group. Max Ehrlich, Duke Frederick, J. T. Johnson, and Peter Pappas.

•A benefit show for Lee County AIDS Task Force on Sunday, March 20, 7 p.m., will present Marilyn Mays and James L. Walker, in "Love Letters," a two-act stage reading chronicling the lifelong relationship between a man and woman.

Mays and Walker previously performed "Love Letters" in February at the Pirate Playhouse and also in the Detroit area last year. They are both currently performing in the Playhouse production "Bus Stop."

Tickets are $15. Box Office 472-0006.

•A traveling exhibit of visual art works created by fine art students at Edison Community College, "Celebration of the Performing Arts," comes to Pirate Playhouse on March 14.

The Fort Myers law firm of Henderson, Franklin, Starnes and Holt, sponsored a competition in which 25 students vied for $1,000 in tuition fee waivers. Entries were required to reflect the theme "Celebration of the Performing Arts."

The three winners works will be featured: Shirley Petry's "Changes in Motion," first place; "Opusbit" by Donna Harrington, second place; and "Keys Mahoney" by Timothy J. Gunderman, third place.

•The first week's attendance at Pirate Playhouse's "Bus Stop" broke all box office records for the 3-year-old playhouse, bringing in more revenue and highest attendance record to date.

Tickets are $14 to $19.

Quilt demonstration and illustration

Adrien Rothchild will deliver a slide-lecture on Wednesday, March 16, 7:30 p.m. at BIG Arts about the history of quilts and her recent visit to the White House to present one of her quilts for display there.

She personally presented the quilt to President and Mrs. Clinton.

Call BIG Arts, 395-0900 for more information.

Jazz club convenes

Wednesday evening, March 16, 7:30 p.m. the Jazz Club will meet at BIG Arts in the Founders Gallery. Jazz enthusiast Bob Kitchin will bring his own live recordings from various jazz festivals and clubs. Discussion will follow.

Call 395-0900 for more information.

The Elderhostel course focuses on the oral tradition of storytelling as well as outdoor activities and socializing.

The storytellers contribute their skills and knowledge to a local group, the Tamiami Tale Tellers, who will meet on Thursday, March 17, 7 to 9 p.m. in the Community Room at Waterford Place in Fort Myers.

The St. Patrick's Day meeting will feature stories from Ireland where Noel MacCarry has often visited and garnered wild and funny Irish tales from Donegal and Dublin.

Call the MacCarrys at 472-1781 for more information.

Southwest artists come to Matsumoto Gallery

Carol Pelson Wagner and her husband Jim Wagner of Taos, New Mexico will do their first Florida show at Matsumoto Gallery.

An opening reception on Sunday, March 13 from 4 to 7 p.m. will show the couple's work. Jim Wagner's work includes several media—hand fabricated jewelry, ceramic sculpture and vases, handbuilt and handpainted furniture for which he is famous. Functional but whimsical, his furniture is in the collections of famous Hollywood actors and directors.

Carol Pelton Wagner paints in acrylic in the style of Matisse. Jim Wagner fabricated the frames which surround some of the paintings.

A coffee table book was recently published about Jim Wagner.

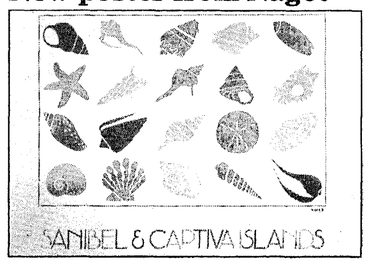
SW Florida Craft Guild

The Sanibel Community Association will play host to the Southwest Florida Craft Guild annual island sale. Saturday, March 12, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Artists and craftspeople from over Southwest Florida will sell pottery, batik, rag rugs, jewelry, woodwork, sculpture and more. All had to pass show standards in order to sell their work.

For more information call 472-6707.

New poster from Nagot



"Gifts From The Sea" is the name of Chris Nagot's second poster. A member of the Sanibel-Captiva Art League and Barrier Island Group for the Arts, the artist is a native of New England and moved to Florida in 1983.

Her subject matter, always shells, birds, fish, flower are the sun-washed pastels of ice cream sherbet.

This poster is a graphic design, consisting of foil stamped in pastel pearlescent colors.

It is available at Matsumoto Gallery and Kennedy Studios.

Ninth BIG Arts show

The ninth show of the season, running through March 27, in the Phillips Gallery features Jean Dean displaying abstract works in acrylics. She has received over 100 awards for her paintings and many of her works can be found in private and corporate collections.

Chris Tavrides, who does figurative work and has shown throughout Florida and in Illinois shares the Phillips Gallery. Her work is in oils and mixed media.

In the Founders Gallery are Connie Maas and Bruce Gregory. Maas has exhibited in New York, New Jersey and Florida and works both in acrylics and oils.

Gregory trained in New York and France. He paints with nature and then reduces his subject to shapes, patterns and planes.

Hours are 1 to 4 p.m. daily. The public is invited to a reception on Sunday, March 13, 4 to 6 p.m. at BIG Arts.

Sci-Fi book signing

A new author from Florida, Linda Evans, recently made her national debut as a science fiction and fantasy novelist. Sleipnir, her first novel is a modern military fantasy.

Evans said, "This book was a lot of fun to write. Where else would you find American GIs guarding nuclear missiles, Middle-Eastern terrorists, and ancient Viking gods all wrapped up in one explosive package?"

Evans achieved national attention as a firearms safety instructor, civil rights spokeswoman, and was named America's Gun Rights Defender of the Month by the Second Amendment Foundation.

She will sign her newly published book Sleipnir and chat with islanders at MacIntosh Book Shop, Friday, March 18, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Gospel music rings out

BIG Arts concert series brings back Praise Ensemble, a nationally televised gospel group who found a receptive audience last year.

The group's return engagement brings both traditional and modern gospel music to the island for a spiritually uplifting evening.

PERSONAE NON GRATAE—Early Monday morning, March 7, a resident of Sand Castle Road complained of a disturbance near his home. A Bay Drive resident who had hosted a party decided it was time for the party to end and offered his guests a ride home. During the ride the party-giver began to argue with one of the riders who was removed from the car. They continued to argue loudly. There was no physical altercation. The two riders were transported home by the SPD and the party-giver was advised not to invite the two guests back again. All parties agreed.

HURRY UP PLEASE, IT'S TIME—A Tarpon Bay restaurant called Sunday evening, March 6, to advise that a patron was drunk and would not leave the premises. A Blanchester, Ohio, man agreed to have his wife take him back to their hotel.

CLEAN SWEEP-NO SLEEP—Early Sunday morning, March 6, an Aleck's Alley resident called to complain of a blower being used in the parking lot of Bailey's General Store. An employee agreed to stop work and take the matter up with his boss.

NO PIÑA COLADAS—A Wilton Lane resident advised that a Cape Coral resident was picking coconuts on the Causeway Road, Saturday afternoon, March 5. He was told that he needed permission from the City of Sanibel to cut down coconuts on city property.

LIFE SAVERS—A restaurant on Periwinkle Way called to request assistance for a person needing a ride home. Sanibel Taxi advised that they were too busy to furnish transportation so the SPD took the man to his home in Fort Myers.

SOMETHING VERY FISHY—Friday evening, March 4, a resident of the Lake Murex area reported a foul odor. Another property owner said that small fish had been dying in the lake and washing ashore. The officer saw a large number of small fish along the edge; probably the source of the foul odor. The resident feels the fish are dying due to lack of oxygen caused by blooming algae in the water which is emitting a gas.

SHOW AND TELL?—A West Gulf Drive resident came to the SPD, Friday afternoon, March 4, and said that every day about 8 a.m. a burgundy Toyota, with Florida plates, driven by a female, travels west on West Gulf Drive and turns onto Rabbit Road. He thinks she is dropping her children off at the children's center on Rabbit Road. On one occasion when he motioned for her to slow down, she gave him an obscene hand gesture.

A TAXING TIME—A Sandpiper Road resident came to the SPD, Friday afternoon, March 4, regarding a dispute he was having with a local tax preparer. His taxes had been prepared this year and he was not satisfied with the preparer's work. He requested that his paperwork be returned but the preparer refused until he received payment for his work. The man was advised that this was a civil matter and he EVICTION WITHOUT A HITCH—Early Friday morning, March 4, a complainant asked that an officer be present while he evicted a tenant from a Periwinkle Way trailer park. The officer stood by while a woman from Cincinnati, Ohio, was evicted without incident.

JUNGLE GYMS—An employee of a West Gulf Drive condominium said that she was receiving complaints from guests that juveniles from one of the units were climbing on the balconies of other units and throwing rocks. Upon arrival there was no one at the unit but the day shift will follow up and advise the tenants of possible trespass violations.

YOURS, MINE, BUT NOT OURS—Thursday afternoon, March 3, officers stood by on Jewel Box Drive, a the request of a man removing his belongings from a residence. The parties agreed to exchange more property at the front door on Saturday.

DOWNRIGHT DUMPING—A Captiva resident stated that a Coconut Drive man had dumped a small amount of gas and oil mixture on his driveway. Upon arrival, he driveway was watered down but ie man was advised to use the roper recycling center in the ture.

BABY'S BLUE—Thursday morning, March 3, a Periwinkle Way resident phoned to advise that her purse, a light blue denim bag with "Baby" on it, containing a passport to Saudi Arabia, had been lost ome where on Sanibel.

THESE TOLL BOOTHS ALL LOOK ALIKE—A Riverside, Conn. man, staying with friends on Mockingbird Lane, went out for dinner Wednesday evening and could not find his way back to their home. He was escorted from the toll booth to his friend's home.

A SUBTLE HINT—Late Tuesday night, March 1, a Palm Ridge woman said she returned home and found a phone call on her answering machine that sounded like a threat. The phone caller stated, "This is Mrs. S., I found your pager number in my husband's wallet and if you don't stay away from him, I will find you and kick your &?!_+ !&?" The resident does not know any Mr. S. She shares her pager with five other people. She was advised to check the personal files to see if the name came up and to advise the SPD if the woman called again.

Old Friends treats difficult subject with insight

By Priscilla Friedersdorf
Staff Writer

Tracy Kidder has written a sensitive and heart-rending book about the lives of residents in a nursing home near Northampton, Mass. The book is called simply Old Friends. Kidder spent a year interviewing and observing the staff and residents of Linda Manor. His particular focus is two men who are roommates, Lou Freed, 91, and Joe Torchio, 72. Even though Lou is almost completely blind and Joe suffered a debilitating stroke nearly 20 years ago; they were chosen because they are among the most physically healthy of the residents. As Lou says, "God help the others if we're the best."

Linda Manor, which is a fairly new facility, Kidder tells us, is unusual in nursing homes. Some look fancy and well kept but are all veneer. The staff of Linda Manor is larger than the state requires, residents are allowed to bring their own furnishings and there is a policy of no restraints which is a rare policy in nursing homes. A few of the patients are wealthy, some 30 percent pay the high private rate and Medicaid and Medicare pay for the others.

Joe, a tough talking former chief probation officer, is Italian and Lou, a quiet mannered man who had been the manager of a fountain pen factory, is Jewish. They become roommates after Lou's wife of 70 years dies and he is moved in with Joe, a man he has never met.

Kidder describes the progression of their friendship and contacts with the staff and other patients in a way that makes you savor every phrase. Lou, who has only an eighth grade education, is wise and involves himself in all the activities his blindness allows. He encourages Joe to join him in gentle exercise therapy called Music and Motion (or M&Ms) and coaxes him into a play directed by a woman patient who has a theatrical background and flair. They are also included in a group of five men nicknamed the Nudniks who watch from a row of chairs and kibitz while dietary aides set the tables before the meals. The group occasionally breaks into an old-fashioned song about the aides names such as: Mary or Louise, for Lou's benefit because he cannot see the people clearly.

Lou has always lived a life of moderation; marrying the only girl he ever dated, never smoking and remembering the only time he ever drank to excess was when he had three beers in Philadelphia. Joe says, "moderation I was never for."

Joe cannot believe this man who tells every caller "I love you" before he hangs up the phone or they leave after a visit. Lou visits the residents who are sick and confined to bed, following the white line in the hall carpet which is faintly visible to him. There is only one exception to his love of his fellow man and that is the director of food service. He asks the man what he does with the flavor he takes out of the chicken.

Joe remembers his five-month stay at a local VA hospital with horror. His treatment there and Kidder's description of the conditions makes a taxpayer deplore the level of care and lack of consideration being given to veterans.

The growing friendship between the two men enhances their lives and traits that had irritated them in each other; such as Lou's repetition of stories and Joe's Red Sox baseball games and gangster videos become if not endearing at least pleasantly tolerated by the other. Lou even convinces Joe to tell his wife that he loves her when she calls each evening.

Tracy Kidder has taken a difficult subject and with kindness, insight and sensitivity given us a book to treasure and share with our old friends.

Among Kidder's other books are House, Among Schoolchildren and The Soul of a New Machine, which won the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize for nonfiction in 1982.
