HEARING DELAY ASKED

All residents and friends of Sanibel and Captiva Islands are urged to write AGAIN to each County Commissioner asking that, in all fairness, their consideration of the proposed re-zoning for a trailer park adjoining Sanibel Isles be delayed at least to late November. Hearing before the Commissioners is now scheduled for October 4. The Executive Committee of the Interested Citizens Committee at its meeting August 29 urged the writing of additional letters to delay this hearing until late November to give tax-paying winter residents an opportunity to appear and be heard.

The Interested Citizens Committee also asks for additional contributions to assure the widest possible representation for their attorneys. Contributions may also be made to the Sanibel Community Association for their legal fund. Contact Mrs. C.M. Cardeza, Chairman Pro-Tem of the Interested Citizens Committee or Mr. G.T. Martin, President of the Sanibel Community Association.

Mrs. Cardeza advises that any contributors wishing an additional refund must request it, since many contributors desire to have their monies held until it is determined whether or not further litigation will be necessary.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

Checking on their new Rutenberg home being built on the Gulf near the end of Gulf Drive, Mr. and Mrs. E.M. DURSTINE of Columbus, Ohio, spent a few days at Sanibel Cottages last week. They also were taken on a boat trip by ROY BAZIRE to view gulf frontage purchased last winter through PRISCILLA MURPHY Realtor on La Costa Island. But more exciting than the land was the finding of large welks, including an albino and a purple one, and giant-sized sunray clams.

RUTH and ROY AXLING of Walled Lake, Michigan, are spending their vacation at Beachview Resort. The Axlings are future residents of Sanibel. The Axlings will also spend their Christmas vacation at Beachview.

St. Michael's Choir Practice will be resumed today, Thursday, September 7, at 4:30 in the afternoon. Everyone, adults and children, interested are asked to attend this organizational meeting.

ARTHUR ORLOFF of the B-Hive has returned from a ten day trip to New York where he attended the Fancy Food Show. He reports ordering the most fantastic accumulation of gourmet foods to be found anywhere in the state of Florida. In addition to the domestic sources of fine gourmet items, Mr. Orloff made contacts with a number of foreign importers who will ship rare goodies directly to him.

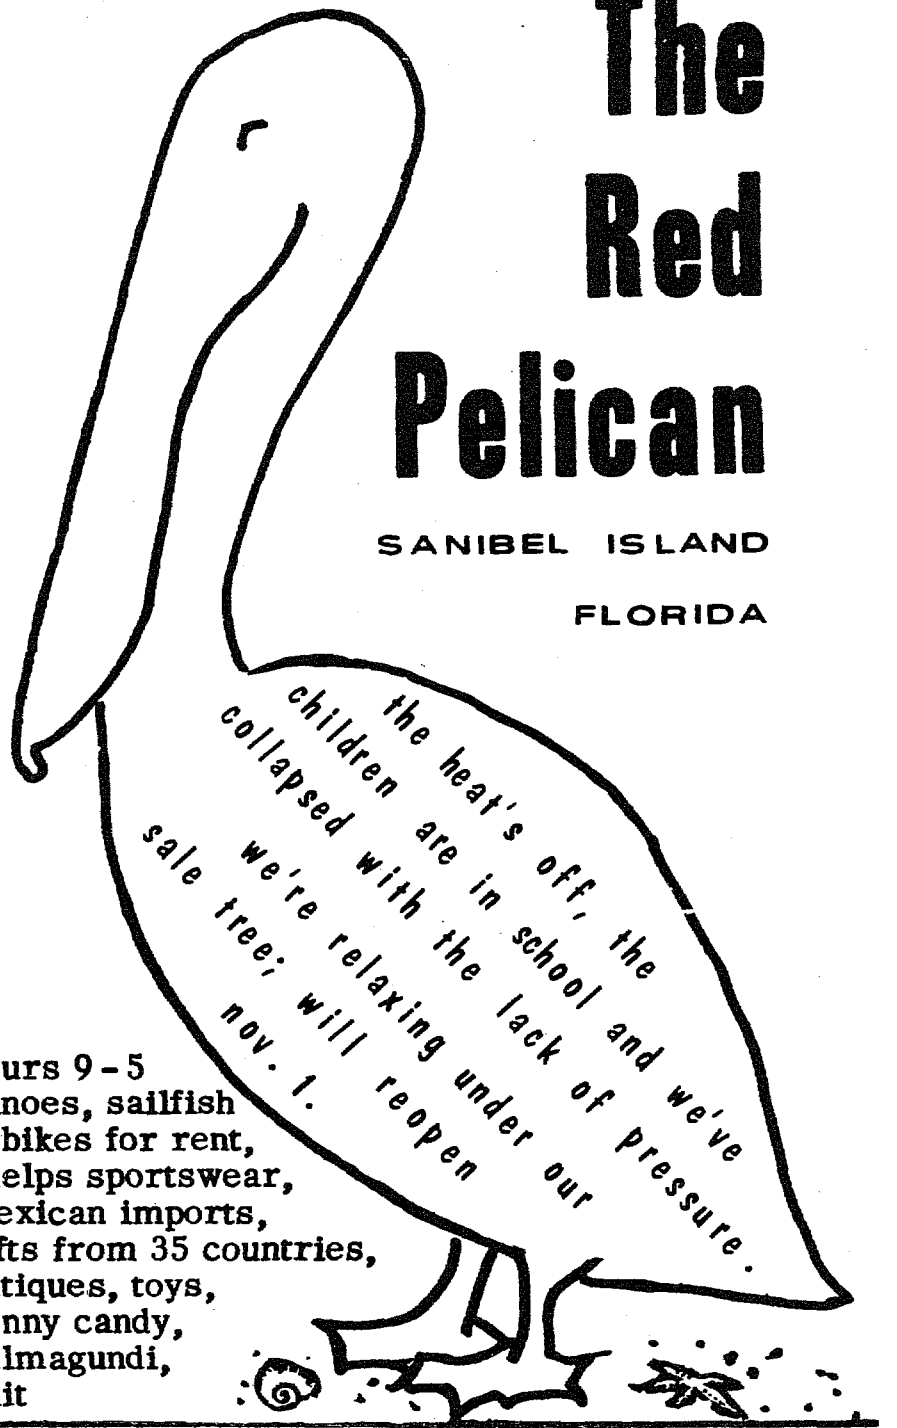

He promises you'll hear more about these items later -- or stop in the store; he's not a bit reluctant to talk about them.

Mrs. GEORGE B. CHRISTENSEN of Glencoe, Illinois, frequent visitor to Sanibel for more than 20 years is back at The Colony for a brief stay.

Dr. and Mrs. FRANK CARRERA and their two adorable children, also Dr. Carrera's parents, have just returned to Gainesville, after spending eight days at Beachview. They have written to say that they are really missing the relaxing days they spent on Sanibel.

PATROL SAYS
'GIVE THE KIDS THE BRAKES'

"Give The Kids The Brakes" is the advice given to motorists by the Florida Highway Patrol, calling attention to the opening of schools throughout the State this month and the need for drivers to keep a sharp lookout for youngsters around busy school zones.

Colonel H.N. Kirkman, Director of the Department of Public Safety, speaking of the State's thousands of school children returning to classes said, "Drivers are reminded to be alert for the increase of pedestrian, bicycle, and vehicular traffic before and after school hours, especially in school neighborhoods. Watch for school zone signs and obey the speed limits strictly."

While emphasizing the need for careful and watchful driving on the part of the motorists, the Patrol Commander stressed the need for parents to instruct their children in safe walking and riding habits. Good attitudes and habits about traffic safety may be the most important lesson a parent can give to a child, according to Kirkman. "Don't take safety for granted in your children," Colonel Kirkman concluded, "their safety depends upon your example and your instructions."

FORT MYERS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Fort Myers Symphony Orchestra for the 1967-68 season was held at the Symphony Office, 2215 Cleveland. Reports were given by the President, Mrs. Carol Watkins, the Business Manager, Mr. Willard Boyce, the Public Relations Chairman, Dr. E.L. Risley and by the Conductor, Mr. Arlo Deibler.

Mr. Deibler announced that the membership drive for this coming season will run from September 16 through 25, and that a special concert will be held with orchestra, chorus and a guest performer during the week of the drive.

Special invitations to over 200 friends of the Fort Myers Symphony throughout the south-west Florida area have been sent out, reports Willard Boyce, Membership Chairman.

Mr. Deibler reported also that Mr. Paul Affalder, nationally known music writer and critic for WCBS - TV, New York, is coming to Fort Myers and will speak on behalf of the Symphony at a breakfast to be given at the Holiday Inn, Saturday, September 16, at 8:30 a.m. The public is invited. The breakfast will feature Mr. Affalder who will return from Europe September 12 where he has been attending various music festivals.

In announcing the invitation, Mr. Boyce reported that a 1966 deficit of $7600.00 has been reduced to only $2500.00 due to the widespread response of the community.

The entire Symphony Board has been appointed to the Special Lights Committee and will report at the breakfast also.

SEA CHEST

By RAY SOREL

Matt Eckel will be an outstanding marine biologist some day. He will, that is, if I can convince him that he should go on to college after he finishes high school.

Matt's a Junior now in Seacrest High School in Boynton Beach. His hobby is collecting tropical fish. I said COLLECTING tropical fish, not raising them. He's gotten so good at it that it was becoming quite profitable collecting them for others. . . until he ruptured an ear drum.

The doctor says the ear-drum will heal and he'll probably be able to dive after fish again. But it was something he told me about decompressing fish that made me realize that he'd make a good marine biologist.

Except for the shark family, most fishes have a gas filled bag inside of them called a swim bladder. This swim bladder helps them to maintain neutral buoyancy so they won't sink when they stop swimming. If you try to bring such a fish to the surface from depths greater than about 30 feet, the gas in the swim bladder expands and forces the fish to the surface where it usually dies.

Decompressing the fish the way a diver does is a long tedious process. You have to stop for five minutes or so every few feet. But Matt has found a shrewd way to decompress the fish quickly . . . and from much greater depths than 30 feet.

He brings a hypodermic syringe down with him. When he starts for the surface with a collection of fishes, he watches them carefully for signs of the inflated swim bladder. The swelling is easily visible and when he finds a fish in distress, he inserts the needle of the hypodermic syringe into the bladder through the side of the fish and draws off the excess gas with the plunger. Matt says the fish survival rate is nearly 100 per cent with this method.

Matt would make a good marine biologist because of this kind of approach to biological problems. Matt has learned a few other tricks.

When he's collecting deep (70 feet or deeper) and the fish are quick he uses a drop net. This is a circular net something like a cast net. It is about four feet in diameter and has a cork float in the middle. The rim of the net has a light chain sewn into it for a weight.

After he has chased a fish into a hole in the reef, Matt drops the net over the place where the fish is hiding and then using a long rod, he pokes into the other holes and tries to urge the fish out of its refuge. When it comes out, it runs into the net and Matt can wrap the net around the fish until he can get it into his collecting can.

His collecting can is a bait can which has been weighted so that it no longer floats. It keeps the fish in good condition until it is time to surface.

Matt says some reef fishes can be tricked into being captured. Many of these fishes hang around a small area in the reef and if you watch them closely, you find that they swim along certain well defined "paths." You can place an open wide mouth jar with a capacity of about one quart in one of these paths and then chase the fish until it runs into the jar. It takes the fish a few seconds to find the way out and you must use this opportunity to put the cover on the jar.

Matt's had a few scares. Once while swimming in murky water in the Keys, a barracuda that must have been close to six feet long brushed past him. Another time a small barracuda (fortunately) struck at the chrome plated brass valve on his air tank and tried to wrench it off. Matt thought one of his buddies was horsing around until he felt behind him and encountered the fish's head . . . and then watched it swim off.

HUNTERS RETURN

Ruth and Philip Hunter have returned to Sanibel Island from a 5000 mile trip to the nicest happening of all, some new actors waiting to assigned roles in productions at the Pirate Playhouse.

Their "month - in - the - country" proved to be a month - around - the - country and Canada for the Hunters traveled to the stonehouse which was the boyhood home of Ruth's father, Neil McMullen, at Amherst Island, Ontario, an island about the size of Sanibel which is reached by a Canadian Government ferryboat.

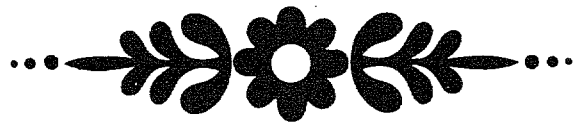

At Carl Sandburg Terrace in Chicago and Park Ridge, Illinois, there was a family get - together of both the McMullens and the Hunters, and in Kentucky they were the guests of John Ramsay on his 1000 acre farm at Hopkinsville.

In Oxford, Ohio, the Hunters were charmed with Miami University founded in 1807 where their daughter, Robin, will study this year on a fellowship for her Master's Degree in Speech Therapy.

Ruth and Philip spent some time at Anderson, S.C., with their friends of thirty years, Mary and Lowell Henry (the grandnephew of Patrick Henry) where Ruth made a vow that this year she would bone up on the Civil War. Would anyone having the American Heritage "War Between The States" book, be willing to loan it to Ruth?

The highlight of their vacation, say the Hunters, was seeing daughter Robin at the Strawhat Theater in Morristown, Tenn., in "Once Upon A Mattress." She received seven rave newspaper notices for her role as Princess Winifred and did the Pirate Playhouse proud.

To The County Commissioners:
Gentlemen:

I would urge that no final action be taken on the rezoning request on Sanibel Island for a trailer park which is scheduled to come up for final consideration on October 4. It is grossly unfair for you not to have a hearing on this matter in late November or early December when the hundreds of winter resident property owners can appear before you and voice their objections. I happen to be one of those property owners.
I am very disturbed about the effect of this zoning change on the value of my property.

It would appear that the timing of the hearings on this matter have been scheduled in such a way that the voice of the winter residents will not be heard. Needless to say, you are well aware that we are a substantial tax paying group.
