THE ISLANDER'S ISLANDERS
by e.c. bailey
Mr. and Mrs. Lew Funk of Gulf Breeze Cottages, accompanied by Mr. Funk's sister, are on a month's vacation. They expect to return to the Island about the first part of June. They have covered a lot of territory in their travel trailer and should be able to tell of some delightful experiences. In their absence Mrs. Funk's niece, Jane Sallee, has been keeping the home fires burning, and recently had as guests at the motel the Australian Ambassador, W.T. Lang, his wife and daughter.

Two weeks ago Jane was fantastically lucky! On Thursday she found a Junonia, on Saturday she found another Junonia, and on Sunday found a golden olive. Makes one almost envious doesn't it? How many of us have looked for years and have not found a good rare shell.

On Saturday night, May 18, The Holtz's (Marty and Mary) gave a delightful party at the Snack Shack, a combination Thank You and at the same time introduced the new owner, Al Bailey. Marty has moved next door and will be selling real estate as an associate of Bob Dormer. Mary is taking a rest period and at some future date intends to return to her professional field of nursing. In case any of you readers are wondering, the Snack Shack is now open for business, and of course your patronage will be appreciated. Since this is the other half of my family, have to give it a plug, don't I?

The baseball team is to be congratulated, they won their home game against Cape Coral with a nice score. Keep up the good work fellows!

Our beloved "Uncle Clarence" Rutland really must carry a lucky rabbit's foot in his pocket or know just how to talk to the fish, because he won the jackpot on the Blue Heron II again last Wednesday, with a twelve pound Grouper.

W.W. Cashion has returned to his home in Virginia after spending two weeks on the Island visiting his sister, E.C. Bailey. The second week they were joined by the other brother, the Rev. L.L. Cashion, also of Virginia, so three fourths of the Cashion Clan finally got together on Sanibel.

If you want to get an argument going some time, tell an experienced sailor that it's possible to sail faster than the wind. It's surprising the number of small craft sailors who don't really understand how the wind propels a sailboat.

We don't get much ice and snow here in Florida but the approaching winter got me to thinking about the ice boating that's done in the frozen north at this time of year and the fact that back in the late 1800's and early 1900's, the fastest vehicle on earth was an ice boat. The speed record for an ice-boat in those days was about 120 miles an hour. There was a train that traveled over a special line of track that almost reached this speed and was the fastest powered vehicle on earth. What I mean is, that the train was the fastest vehicle powered with fuel that it carried. The sailboat needs power like anything else, but its power comes from the wind.

If a sailboat couldn't travel any faster than the wind, these ice-boat records would have had to be set during a hurricane. Even if anybody was foolhardy enough to try sailing a boat during a hurricane, there just aren't many hurricanes in the north in the middle of winter. The fact of the matter is that these records were set in winds that blew little more than 50 or 60 miles an hour.

Just to give you some idea of relatively common speeds these ice yachts could attain, here are some typical distance/time figures I got from "Sailing Craft" by Edwin J. Schoettle (The Macmillan Company, 1945). "In 1879 the Zephyr of the New Hamburg I.B.C. ran from Poughkeepsie to New Hamburg, a distance of nine and three-quarter miles, in ten minutes. On February 12, 1879, the Lucille, owned by Captain Winslow, sailed this distance of nine miles in seven minutes ten seconds; the Snow Flake, 44 feet, 10 inches long, ran the distance in seven minutes; and in 1882 the Haze made the same speed, at one point in the flight sailing two miles in one minute (120 miles an hour!). In 1879, the Comet, Phantom, Zephyr, and Magic sailed, in company, ten miles in ten minutes, and for most of the time... they carried their windward runners at an angle of forty-five degrees."

There's a story about a business man who lived up the Hudson River and commuted to his office in New York City by train. He was an ice boating enthusiast and had often raced the trains that ran along the river in his ice boat. One day he missed his train and he was afraid that he would miss an important appointment. Although the train was several miles down the track, he got out his ice boat and set out to catch the train. The train traveled at 60 miles an hour or more but it had to stop at various stations and the businessman was able to catch up to it and ride the rest of the way in to the city on the train. He got off at the same station where he had caught the train on his way home and sailed the ice boat back to its moorings.

The ice boat reaches such high speeds because of the low friction of the runners and the wind blowing at right angles to the direction of travel. It's like squirting a slippery watermelon seed at high speed from between your lips... or maybe like stepping on a bar of wet soap. If you're careful, you can make the bar of soap skid across the floor at high speed (without falling down) even though your foot traveled downward at no special high velocity.
