SANIBEL-CAPTIVA CONSERVATION FOUNDATION

Thursday night marked the opening of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation conference. A crowd of at least 300 flooded the Sanibel Community House, Griffing Bancroft, director of the Foundation, said, "Nature lovers are lining up to buy land adjoining natural refuges right here on Sanibel." "We need land. But first we need money. We'll take anything." Many people have donated land, stocks, boats, and paintings to be auctioned for funds.

Terry Blunt of the Washington, D. C. Nature Conservancy said that there is a shortage of fresh water and pollution is causing a "massive destruction of our oxygen - producing plants. We're currently pouring herbicides into crop producing regions and sterilizing the soil as a result because enzymes in the soil can't breakdown organic particles due to the herbicides." Blunt's disappointment is that "the only motive for all this pollution is economic. After thirty years it may be too late to pull ourselves out of this mess."

Joel Kuperberg, director of the Collier County Conservatory, said we must preserve the bays and estuaries in this area as well as along the Gulf shores. "Because of the shallow salt water bays where food nutrients are generated to support other life, the Gulf of Mexico is the richest body of water of this size in the world." Kuperberg said that the first to be filled for the development of land would be the bays. Mario Hutton, president of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, showed beautiful slides of the Islands after the talks. The second conference was held at the Captiva Civic Center Friday night. Over 100 persons attended, mostly Islanders. Mr. Hervey Roberts announced the speakers and the first speaker, Dr. Manley L. Boss, head of the Biology Department at Florida Atlantic University told what the University could do for us.

"First, we can bring you an air of academic accomplishment to the Islands. Starting in February, next month, we are sponsoring a series of biology lectures for the winter. Four have been planned. We will bring some of our faculty to talk on subjects including geology, geography, philosophy, history and religion.

"Second, we want to initiate workshops, meetings for discussion on what to do about certain organisms, biological authors, etc.

"Third, we plan to bring classical adult education courses to these Islands, A part of continuing education, these courses will carry university credit.

Fourth, we expect to establish elementary and secondary nature courses for students who live on the islands, like Saturday programs for the youngsters. These could be carried out by graduate students from Florida Atlantic.

"Fifth, our biological staff plans to develop research and teaching centers on the Islands. We are thinking of the 22 acres on Pine Island Sound. If we develop this cooperatively, you and we together could establish a research center for investigation of terrestrial, marine and fresh water areas on the Islands.

"We are starting this research program by cataloging what we have here on the Islands, the various kinds of plants and animals. Our study is "ecology," the relation of the organism to its environment. The first graduate student from Florida Atlantic University is coming to Sanibel next week to begin a marine survey of the fish population.

"Sixth, we plan to promote the development of teaching programs on the Islands for the use of other research centers across the nation.

"And finally, we want you to know that the other departments at Florida Atlantic University, such as business administration and public administration are available to you."

C. Richard Tillis, director of the Pine Jog Conservation Center at West Palm Beach said we need this conservation education in order to preserve the Islands as they are "in their natural state."

Tillis directs over 9,000 children through the Pine Jog Wildlife Sanctuary Nature Center per year. They learn about the millions of insects, animals, plant life, etc. that surrounds them in this world.

SILVER WHISTLE BILL MAC INTOSH

Bill Mac Intosh of Sanibel's well known Mac Intosh Bookshop presented Philip Hunter of the Silver Whistle with a pair of handsome cuff links -- silver theatrical masks for Philip's fine directing of this play.

Bill Mac Intosh recalls playing in the Silver Whistle in what the Hunters say is one of the most beautiful show places they have ever visited, this being the theater at the Country Club in Carracas, Venzuela, South America.

Bill is remembered by Pirate Playhouse audiences for his fine portrayal of the chef in "Mrs. Mc Thing" which played at the Pirate Playhouse in 1966.

"UNCLE ARTHUR" GIBSON RECALLS MEETINGS WITH PRESIDENT THEODORE ROOSEVELT by Vera M. Cantor

"I was very personally acquainted with President Theodore Roosevelt," Uncle Arthur Gibson told us. Uncle Arthur, who came to Sanibel with his family in 1900, when he was twelve years old, is known for his fine memory.

"The president fished from a big barge with a home built on it, built for a crew of fisherman to live on and fish," began Uncle Arthur. "The boat, which was about 18 to 20 feet wide and 60 feet long, was rented from the Punta Gorda Fish Co.

"When he arrived at Captiva Pass, Mr. Roosevelt would send a notice up to the post office, which said: "President Roosevelt is stationed at Captiva Pass, and he would be pleased to have any resident of Sanibel and Captiva visit any Sunday.

"I went to his boat several times," recalled Uncle Arthur. "About ten of us sailed up in a sailboat alongside the president and stopped and hollered 'hello! And he came out on deck and said, 'Hello, I'm Teddy Roosevelt. Who are you people? Come on board and tell me what your names are!

"He'd shake hands with everyone and give them a seat and ask questions. He'd always remember you after he met you. The president was jolly and friendly and loved to talk about fishing, and was just as common as anyone."

"Why did he only allow visitors on a Sunday?" we asked.
"Why, on all the other days he went fishing," replied Uncle Arthur. On his fishing trips he always wore bibbed blue overalls and a blue chambray shirt. He had on an old straw hat with a big brim. He looked just like he was going out in the field to plow.

"All he fished for were sharks, devil-fish and porpoises-just for the sport of the fishing, not to eat the fish. He was a fightman and loved a good fight!" concluded Uncle Arthur.

Later, we learned that Teddy Roosevelt once hooked a giant devil-fish near Captiva, nearly 30 ft. across and weighing more than two tons. Fifty 30-caliber bullets were fired into it after an all day fight.

Uncle Arthur was right. "He was a fighting man and loved a good fight!"

MARSHALL TABACCHI is returning to character for the Shell Fair. He's retreating behind the beard again.

Mr. & Mrs. ROY GILLESPIE are spending four months at Port Au Call Apt. This is their second vacation on Sanibel. Their home is Pemaquid Point, Maine.

ATTORNEY COMES TO THE ISLANDS PERMANENTLY

William H. Snyder, a retired U. S. Coast Guard Captain, hung out his attorney's shingle on Monday. His office is located in Town Square next to San Carlos Realty.

Captain Snyder was graduated from the United States Coast Guard Academy and retired from that service after 22 1/2 years. Following severance from his sea-going job in 1956, he entered Stetson University and studied law. He obtained a degree as a Doctor of Jurisprudence and passed the Florida State Bar in 1959. The Captain then practiced general law in Fort Lauderdale for the next three years. For three more years, he was employed as a general council for the Honeywell Corporation.

In 1965, Capt. Snyder was hired by the United States Dept. of State in the Agency for International Development. While in the agency, he was assigned to two years of duty in Vietnam. There he served as senior advisor to the National Maritime Police and established, trained, and assisted in the operation of marine police of Vietnam.

Upon completion of his Vietnam stint, Snyder went to Washington, D. C. and became Assistant Council at the U.S.C.G. head-quarters, After being on this assignment for eight months, he took a vacation to Florida and discovered Sanibel. He and Mrs. Snyder fell in love with the Islands and decided to drop the anchor here permanently. They have bought property and hope to commence building their home soon.

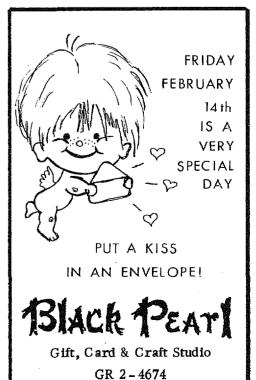

Welcome aboard, Captain!

There are people on our Islands who do not seem to have any regard for the property of others. Many areas are used as dumping grounds for trash and discarded vehicles. The latest and most flagrant inconsideration was the waylaying of an old trailer just off the cemetery road near the Casa Ybel Road.

CAPTIVA CIVIC ASSOCIATION

The Captiva Civic Association is asking residents of the Island to start saving items for an "anything" sale to be held for the benefit of the Association the latter part of February. The sale will be held at the Captiva Community Center some time around February 19, but the exact date hasn't been set as yet.

Mrs. William Dennis is chairman of the committee in charge of the sale, following her chairmanship of two highly successful sales for the benefit of the Captiva Library last year and the year before. Last year's sale netted more than $450 for the Library building fund. With the Library now nearly completed, and some maintenance work needed on the Community Center, it was decided to hold this year's sale for the benefit of the Association itself.

The Association is holding a potluck supper at the Community Center Friday, Jan. 31, starting at 6 o'clock. The supper will be followed by the Association's annual meeting and election of five members to the Board of Governors. Josephine Reddy is chairman of the committee in charge of the supper. Everyone on Captiva is invited to attend, and bring some dish.

Jules Verne, the French novelist of a hundred years ago, was correct on many things he predicted - such as rocket and submarine travel. But in 1890, when the average life expectancy of man was 37 years, he said that in a thousand years, by 2890, the average life span would be 58 Years! How wrong he was. By 1930, the average life span of Floridians exceeded 58 years and it is conceivable that by 1975, the expectancy of life at birth will be 80 years.

This longer life span is contributing to the population explosion. Florida, which had a population of nearly 800,000 is expected to have over 11 million people by 1985 and over 13 million by the turn of the century.

Developed out of the knowledge of man, public health is a recent concept of man's life. At one time he was barely able to care for himself and his family. Now the idea of community-wide health services is prevalent. More people are becoming concerned with good health, physical well-being and freedom from disease.

The population explosion presents economic, social and political revolutions and public health problems. The standard of living is continuing to climb about one per cent a year and has reached a level far beyond what economists predicted. Where at one time politicians were promising two chickens in every pot, now one hears about two cars in every garage.

Instead of producing in-creased labor, as the expanding standard of living would indicate the annual days of work required are becoming fewer and fewer due to electronics and automation. The shorter work week has produced more time for cultural and recreational pursuits.

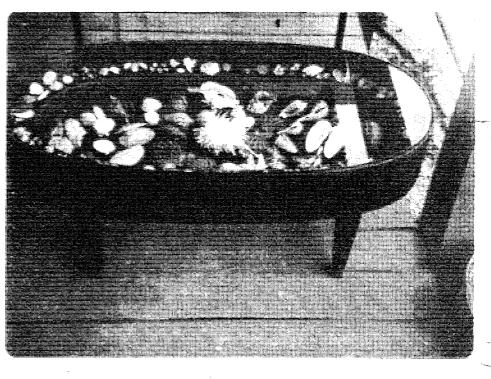

The individual towns, which grew around a single decentralized industrial plant, have been merged by expressways, suburbanization and expansion into the 'strip city" which consists of a number of cities and their suburbs. This type of situation exists in Florida between West Palm Beach and Homestead on the East Coast and from Tarpon Springs to Venice on the Gulf Coast. These metropolitan areas bring new health problems of air pollution, sewage and industrial wastes, slums and the "central rot" of older cities. But the growing sophistication of health techniques and increased training of health professionals daily leads toward solutions of these problems.

In addition, there are scien-tific and technological revolutions with new medical techniques, instruments, drugs and antibodies discovered almost every day. Of all scientists who ever lived on earth, 90 per cent of them are alive and working today, and progress for the future is limited only by the imagination.

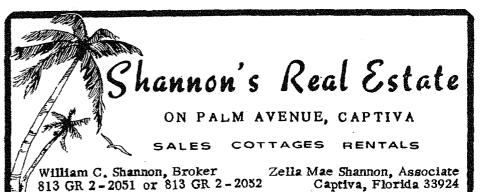

Public health still needs to complete some unfinished business of the past. That is eradicating communicable diseases. such as measles, whooping cough and other previously important diseases, and suppressing such diseases as diabetes, pneumonia, and influenza to a fraction of their present level. There is also the old business of environmental health which needs to be completed. In addition, there are many areas, such as diseases of the heart, cancer and mental disorders which need to be attacked. Our rapid medical advances now hold out promises for the future control of these problems.

The health achievements of the past 78 years have been great in Florida, but they will be dwarfed by things to come. Therefore, the past is just the beginning of the future. Man has used only a fraction of his potential. The best is yet to come.

Center at Vero Beach, spoke on "Man, Mosquitoes, and Birds." Dr. Provost is responsible for having started the mosquito control on Sanibel. This is done by water control. "First we had to connect the swales (water passages) to Sanibel Slough to permit better drainage. Roads like State Road 867 destroy drainage passages, so culverts had to be enlarged under the roads here. The beaches had to be built up so that fresh water wouldn't escape into the Gulf from inland."

Dr. Provost explained that the salt marsh mosquitoes lay their eggs on land and the sloughs must be preserved for the larva-eating fish. An interesting thing Provost mentioned was that some Sanibel salt marsh mosquitoes had been marked in order to follow their flight. They had been traced as far as thirty miles from the island. The mosquitoes had

The question was brought up concerning sand flies. The Doctor said they are working on that too, but still haven't found a way to control them. Sand flies breed in mud and their larva is microscopic, These annoying "creatures" live from three to four weeks.

One third of the fools in the country think that they can beat the lawver in exponding the law. one half think they can beat the doctor in healing the sick, two thirds of them think they can beat the minister in preaching the gospel, and all of them know that they can beat the editor in running the newspaper. Reprinted from the Jan. 16, 1969 issue of The Chatsworth Plaindealer.

An extensive and long-range program of research and education in cooperation with Florida Atlantic University, Boca Raton, has been announced by the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Through its Department of Biological Sciences, headed by Dr. Manley Boss, the university has already set up plans for the first phase of its cooperative research project. Facilities for the housing of two graduate students, a research laboratory, boats, and equipment necessary for launching the program are aiready available.

The initial project announced by the university will be the systematic sampling of fishes and invertebrates of the Islands. Samplings will be coupled with analyses of the surrounding waters. Samples of algae and plankton will be gathered from collecting sites.

It is anticipated that this first phase of the project will require about one year. A continuing program of both research and education will follow, and, if the ambitious projection of both the university and the Foundation is followed, the Islands of Sanibel and Captiva may well become a focal point for marine and fresh-water studies in Florida.

It is proposed that the initial survey be followed by an ecological study of Sanibel Island, Captiva Island, and Buck Key. This would necessitate the participation of four graduate students under the supervision of their major professors. State and federal agencies might be involved in this work also.

Looking further ahead, there were recommendations to the Foundation that studies be conducted on the limnology of the fresh-water slough which runs through the center of Sanibel Island. Much of this survey has been conducted by the Mosquito Control Commission. There is another recommendation that improvement of the slough might be accomplished by formation of one or more lakes and by application of other survey results.

An academic center on the Islands for the cultural benefits of the public is envisioned. The Department of Biological Sciences at the university could provide a lecture series on biological topics; workshops for biologically oriented organizations such as garden clubs and conservation groups; short courses (adult education) in biology; guest lectures; identification keys of flora and fauna; development of preserved plant and animal collections for a Nature Center; identification and labeling of trees, plants, and ecological zones in interesting areas of the Islands; professional planning and advice for the Foundation; etc.

The extent to which the program can be accomplished will depend largely upon the support that is given the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation by its citizens and the public at large. To bring this program to the point it has now reached has required weeks and months of planning on the part of the officers, directors, and committees of the Foundation as well as the staff of the university's Biological Sciences Department.

The ultimate goal is to bring to this tropically unique area of Florida an educational and research facility that will become a focal point for biological research in this nation.

EDISON JUNIOR COLLEGE

A commercial pilot rating with instruments and an Associate in Arts or Associate in Science degree in two calendar years is the goal of a new program being initiated in January at Edison Junior College in cooperation with Florida Aeronautical Institute.

Edison will offer an AA degree in aviation and an AS degree in professional pilot academic training. Flight and ground school instruction will be provided by Florida Aeronautical Institute of Clewiston, Fla. The FAI program offers the training required by the Federal Aviation Agency to qualify an individual to seek employment as a professional pilot.

The training programs offered by Florida Aeronautical Institute are approved by the FAA and the Veterans Administration, and the two academic programs offered by Edison Junior College are approved by the State of Florida and the VA. Students wishing to pursue a four-year degree in aviation would enroll in the Associate of Arts program. The Associate in Science degree is designed to give the best possible academic program in two years, with emphasis in engineering and science.

The academic programs being presented by Edison and the flight and ground training offered by FAI are unique in that the two courses of study are taken at separate times. There is no sequence requirement but both programs may not be taken concurrently. With the separation of the flight and ground school from the college academic program, it is felt the student will benefit in both categories.

The college approach in conjunction with the Florida Aeronautical Institute is the result of two years of study to determine the type of combined flight and academic training which would best meet the needs of the person interested in flying as a career. The study revealed that the two-year academic program should place strong emphasis on engineering and science.

Enrollment information on the airline pilot and professional pilot programs may be obtained from the Admissions Office, Edison Junior College, Fort Myers, and the Florida Aeronautical Institute, Airglades Airport, Clewiston, Florida.
