DOTTI'S SOLD

Dotti's of Sanibel dress shop was sold last Thursday to Jane and George Drake by Dotti McQuade. Dotti has managed or owned dress shops on the islands for many years, and her many friends are both sad and happy --- sad that she had to leave the Islands, but happy that she's able to "retire" and relax now in her North Carolina home. The quotes around refire are there because anyone who knows Dotti, knows that she'll always be doing something, no matter where she S.

The Drakes, who live on Connie Mack Island, do not contemplate major changes in the operation. They also own and operate The Sandy Duck, a shop which specializes in better gifts and limited edition collector's prints. It is located at Miners Plaza at the Beach cutoff road.

We are pleased to welcome them to the Islands and wish them every success.

'ECCCCH" ON BEACHES

No. we're not making editorial comments again. A "echhh" kind of thing invaded the Sanibel beaches sometime during last Thursday night. It was reported to Glenn Bond, Wildlife Manager, as an oil slick Friday morning. It's not an oil slick.

It was reported to the ISLANDER as the dreaded red tide over the weekend. It's not the red tide, even though it's reddish in color.

"Actually," said Charles LeBuff, "it happens almost every year when the water warms up --- just not normally this early, so there aren't as many people to notice it."

It is some sort of plant or algae organism, it's reddish, leaves greenish foam, and DOES NOT cause a fish kill, although a few dead fish have been reported briefly.

"It seems to be pretty clear around here now," said LeBuff on Tuesday.

Flood Hazard Insurance Program

by Vivian Hinternhoff

A flood hazard insurance program was presented to the audience at Exhibition Hall on Wednesday of last week with Richard W. Krimm of the Federal Office of Flood Insurance in Washington as the principal speaker, followed by Nicholas Lally, also from Washington, Bruce Arrow, director of the Flood Insurance Department of the Travelers Insurance Company in Orlando, and Glen Woodard, regional director of HUD from Atlanta.

The program, which outlined the necessity for flood insurance in flood prone areas, particularly is important to Fort Myers Beach and the Sanibel-Captiva area in which the height of any of the buildings should be from 10 to 15 feet above the flood level if they wish to be eligible for the flood insurance program of 1973.

The audience of 800 people were shown films of hurricanes Camille and Agnes. "The total cost of Hurricane Agnes amounted to 3.2 billion dollars," said Arrow. Naples was first on the west coast to be eligible for the flood insurance program and there are now 140 areas eligible for the program.

The bill also makes flood insurance compulsory if the owner has a mortgage or is going to sell. It will also apply to new construction after next December unless the bill is changed. To minimize flood disaster, homeowners are asked to realize that elevation and high ground for building is most important. The structure should be above level, built with wave action in mind in this area, and built on pilings with the

How to locate a good realtor.

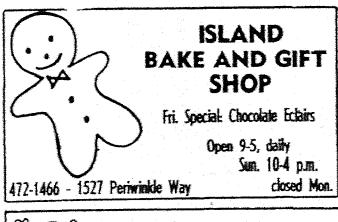

- 1. Ask long-time residents of an area whom they recommend.
- 2. Ask local businessmen with whom they would prefer to deal.
- 3. Ask non-partisan organizations what firm they feel does the most for its community from protecting the ecological environment to dispensing valuable community information.
- 4. Rely on reputation. A realty firm with a good reputation protects it by doing its best on every transaction it writes.
- 5. Look for the Realtor symbol (B) or the word "Realtor," after a firm's name. Firms with this symbol are subject to the scrutiny and actions of their peers, and are continually working to maintain the highest levels of professionalism among Florida Realtors.

Who's Who & Why

met a very nice couple, We RICHARD LEE and KATHY ERICKSON of Anderson, IN, over the weekend at the Jade Butterfly. They were in the middle of a week's vacation on Sanibel, staying at the Higgen's duplex. Lee celebrated his 26th birthday this past Friday, and got thoroughly sunburned at Bowman's Beach in the process. (We all ignored Chet's suggestions as to what his attire on his natal day had to do with the sunburn, too.)

"You want to hear about our honeymoon?" asked Kathy.

"Oh, is this your honeymoon?"

"No," she replied, "that was four years ago, but

And then she launched into a very funny (at least, now it's funny) saga, beginning with them being stuck in Atlanta at 2 a.m. on their wedding night when their plane took off without them, including an episode of fishing which practically ended in disaster (she thought he'd been grabbed and eaten by a big fish, and he thought her car had exploded --- turned out she was looking for him and he thought the mosquito fogging truck was her car exploding) and ended with them going home four days early, plus requiring $45 worth of medication from a combination cold and painful sunburn.

"When we fold our pharmacist we were coming back to Sanibel," said Kathy, "he begged us PLEASE not to get sick."

"I fold you we should have written it up and sent it into Reader's Digest," said husband Lee.

Well, any marriage that started out like that has got to be good," said Ellen, "i certainly couldn't get any worse."

We agree, and wish the Ericksons many HAPPY Island vacations in the ೇರ್ಲೇ ಆ.

PAPO FIGHTS THE FEDERAL FLOOD ACT

P.A.P.O. (Politically Active Property Owners), numbering about 1000, is firmly against the new National Flood Insurance Program, insisting that it is taking away the basic rights of cifizens for their own choice in using their land, and in insisting on compulsory building limits as well as regulating the mortgages on newly erected building in the so-called flood prone areas.

They are appealing to our Washington Senators and Congressmen to do what is possible to repeal the 1973 flood disaster protection act.

TO THE ISLANDER:

PLAUDITS FROM AN AVID READER Over the years, the Beach Bulletin and Sanibel-Captiva Islander have been a constant reminder of the kind of interest and foresight shown by the original owners, publishers and editors, Barrett and Adelaide Brown, followed by their son and his wife, Duff and Virginia Brown. Both papers reflect a vast amount of work and considerable knowhow, as they consistently maintain an even flow of operation, keeping subscribers up-to-day on a wide coverage of the islands' interests, and well-being. For, since the inception of these papers, the islands have become focal spots comprising a myriad of visitors, generously sprinkled with an assortment of the prominent, famous, and accomplished.

I, for one, think it is high time to openly salute, praise, and commend the family, who has been for so long a time, responsible for such excellent communication through the publicity medium.

Eleanor Douglas Clapp

TO THE ISLANDER:

I would like you to print the enclosed article re: The New York Times, Sunday, May 19, 1974.

I thought it very valuable. My husband and I enjoy having a home on Sanibel Island -- during the winter months we spend much time on the island.

THE WETLANDS

The Florida drouth and accompanying fires in the Everglades emphasize the importance of laws controlling the drainage or filling of wetlands elsewhere. Fire in the Everglades is not new, of course, but before so much of the area was "reclaimed" the fires burned themselves out or were avenched by surrounding water.

It has been our way for generations to see swamps and marshes only as mosquito breeders, unsightly areas and mucky barriers to progress. In the past we have drained or filled close to 100 million acres, at least nominally, for agricultural use. Every day plans are made to drain another lake, another swamp, another marsh, to use as sites for factories or houses, or simply to make the area look "neat."

Nature is not neat, but she is efficient. Those wetlands are like sponges that catch and hold water, check floods, feed streams in dry weather, maintain water levels in wells, even help maintain the water level in lakes and ponds. Inland, they are breeding grounds for fish and waterfowl. Along the coast, they are nurseries for all kinds of salf-water life. True, they are nurseries for mosquitoes, too, but if conditions are kept hospitable for fish and birds they will largely control the insect population. Reprint from the New York Times, Sunday, May 19, 1974.)

TO THE ISLANDER:

Goose or Gander? An old saying comes to mind, "What is good for the goose is good for the gander.

When it comes to complying with an ordinance in regard to commercial signs, we don't see why there is any argument or silly letter writing why one shop theirself be known through the use of one sign.

The Sanibel businessmen ought to get together and either demand immediate legal action against any violater or the ordinance is nothing but a lot of writing holding no ground, as apparently is evidenced.

Fr. Gerard Beauregard was given a fond, farewell party on May 23 by Ascension Church members of Fort Myers Beach at a dinner party held in the home of Mrs. Margaret Tippett on Lagoon Road. The occasion was the Bishop's appointment last October naming him Priest-In-Charge of St. Isabel Catholic Church, Sanibel Island.

Carey Hagner made a masterpiece white cake with blue forget-me-nots and pink roses. Pale green frosting matched the ribbons from the prayer book. It had a chalice, cross, prayer book with ribbons laid across the cake, and rosary on the prayer book. Across the face of the cake pink frosting în was 'Congratulations Father B."

Fr. Beauregard was born in Roxton Falls, Canada, on April 14, 1914, attended St. Hyacinthe Seminary and ordained in 1940. In 1946, he moved to Montreal, becoming Pastor of St. Ann Sabrevois and served as secretary of the Bishop's commission for eight years. He was actively engaged in the Social Action and Catholic Christian Workers programs while involved in his other pastoral duties

Ill health prompted him to retire to Fort Myers Beach in 1967 and, after a short recuperative period, became Assistant Pastor at the Church of the Ascension and Pastor of St. Isabel Mission, which is now St. Isabel Catholic Church.

He is a shell buff, former tennis champion and enjoys a "challenging" bridge game.

Plans are now underway for breaking ground for the new rectory in the early fall of this year. He extends a hearty welcome to his Beach friends to visit him at any time at his temporary residence, Sunset South, 1-D, Tulipa way, Sanibel Island.

WASPS ATT.

Agriculture Co Conner released 2,06 wasps which scientis destroy the damaging beetle.

Conner opened for cannisters in a bean fi Florida's experiment static few wasps immediately attacked ...me beetle larvae on bean plants. Indications from sites monitored at the University of Maryland last year indicated the wasp can disperse in excess of 40 miles.

Commissioner Conner commented "there has been a hue and cry against various chemical controls. And this is the first release of a parasite developed at our new biological control laboratory in Gainesville -- less than a year after we dedicated."

The commissioner hastened to add that biological control was not the total answer. "It is not 100 percent effective, but it is the best available. These wasps are not being used as opposed to chemical spray, or being used instead of spray, but rather, in conjunction with. This is a control which must be managed properly along with chemical controls. This experiment station will serve as a base which can sweep the nation. And bean crops, especially soybean crops, are growing in value each year," he said.

The Mexican bean beetle is the No. 1 pest as far as crops are concerned. The adult and the larvae both do damage by eating the foliage away from the plant and destroying the photosynthesis process.

To date, agriculturalists have found very few parasites to attack the Mexican bean beetle and the major source of control has been insecticides. But chemical control has been more expensive and more damaging to the environment.

"This could be the breakthrough. This could be man's big step to bringing more food and fiber not only to our nation but to the world," Conner said.

"If he does what he is supposed to do, this little wasp will do more for this country than some taxpayers. It may be more valuable than the Commissioner of Agriculture," he joked.

Secretary of State Richard (Dick) Stone, by law Florida's chief elections official, said he hopes that citizens who are not registered to vote "plan to change their status soon and in great numbers so we can turn the tide against voter apathy."

"This is a critical election year. They all are important, but 1974 needs a show of citizen turnout and participation that will turn this state and country around," Secretary Stone said.

'The time to register to vote is now. This should not be put off. We still have thousands of people eligible to participate in our electoral process who are not registered," the Secretary of State said.

In 1972, Secretary Stone conducted a study on voting in Florida and concluded that voter apathy was increasingly prevalent, and that one big reason was that the average citizen "feels what's the use?"

"There is plenty the citizen can do. And this is done with participation and showing up at the ballot box. I hope our voter registration offices are very busy these coming months," he said.

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY TO SPONSOR PLAY

"Cheaper by the Dozen," a family play sponsored by the American Cancer Society, will be presented June 1 and 2 (Saturday and Sunday), 8 p.m., at Seven Lakes Auditorium, 1965-7 Lakes Blvd.

This theatre-in-the-round (arena style) play will be enjoyed by the whole family, and family participation is urged. The price is on a donation basis so there should be no reason for anyone who wants to see it to miss it.

The local cast and Mrs. George Goldtrap, who is directing the play, have worked hard to make this an enjoyable evening's entertainment for both young and old.

Aerial photograph of the Cape Coral Bridge. Inset shows United construction methods and materials supervisor measuring rail through which 3500 feet of cable will pass.

Bridge with 1,502 lanes

You can only see the two lanes for cars and trucks, but a large telephone cable will soon be installed inside one railing of the Cape Coral Bridge. And ultimately that cable will carry up to 1500 simultaneous conversations traveling to and from the Cape and places throughout Lee County and the world.

Normally, we cross the Caloosahatchee River and other wide bodies of water with heavy submarine-type cable, or occasionally, by a cable attached to a bridge. But our engineers proved the feasibility of using the bridge rail for this project, and Lee County officials gave their approval.

It's a novel idea, using a bridge rail for a cable conduit. But our engineers routinely develop new ideas that go to work for you... ideas that will translate this year's $55 million construction budget into telephone service for a rapidly-growing area.

This new way to handle a cable crossing may not make history, but it symbolizes the efforts of nearly 2,100 United Telephone people to bring you the best possible telephone service.

ALUMINIUM RECYCLING UNIT IN FT. MYERS

Citizens of the Fort Myers area received $1,057.90 from Reynolds Metals Company's aluminum recycling program last month.

Reynolds mobile recycling unit collected 10,579 pounds of aluminum, the equivalent of 243,317 all-aluminum cans from the area.

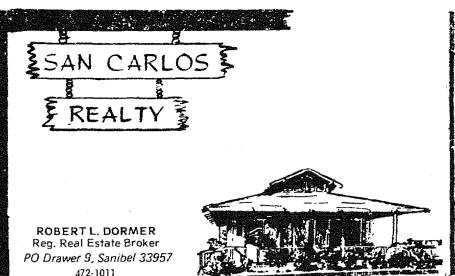

During June, the public will be receiving 15 cents per pound for allaluminum cans on a revised schedule, Tuesdays, June 4, 11, 18 and 25 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at Edison Mail, U.S. 41.

"The warm summer weather is just beginning, and with it comes an increase in the comsumption of cool beverages in aluminum cans," according to Paul Hayden, Reynolds Regional Recycling Manager.

"All those soft drink cans mean extra spending money for youngsters during the summer, when they bring the aluminum cans to the mobile unit location and receive 15 cents per pound," added Hayden.

It's easy to recognize an allaluminum can because there are no side or bottom seams, and a magnet will not adhere to it. Also, aluminum can be recycled over and over again, and it's a great evergy savings. Last year the public was paid $4.5 million dollars for 1.1 billion cans --- about 25 percent of Reynolds manufactured cans.

THIS WEEK AT THE SANIBEL LIBRARY by Hal H. Harrison

Since I happen to be a card-carrying member of the Club, I think I can speak with authority when I say that many of our library patrons are particularly interested in the subject of Geriatrics, which, for the benefit of you kids, is the study of the physical process and problems of aged persons. With us "retired" folks in mind, the book selection committee of the library is influenced quite often in selecting books that might be passed up in another community where aging is not a matter of great moment.

Since one out of every 10 Americans today is 65 or older, and by the year 2000 there will be 28 million Americans 65 or older, more and more books of interest to elderly people are appearing. One is "Aging in America" by Bert Kruger Smith. This is an evocation and useful guide to the problem of aging, addressed to older persons, their families, and those who counsel and serve the elderly.

"Young Till We Die" by Dr. Davis G. and Dr. David J. Jonas is an important and timely book on a subject that affects everyone now or eventually --- retirement and aging. This is a creative answer to the complex problem of growing older in a youthoriented society. The authors are social scientists.

Until quite recently, one of the most taboo subjects in our day by day discourse has been death. David Hendrin's "Death As a Fact of Life" presents new thinking out the legal, medical and psychological aspects of this most repressed reality --a subject that, sooner or later, touches us all.

In writing "Nobody Ever Dies of Old Age," Sharon R. Curtin, a young author, has written a book in praise of old people and in outrage of their loneliness. Indeed, Sharon has written in love and anger. To gather background material for her book, the author travelled all over America, living with and meeting old people. She tells of typical situations she encountered. Specifically, she tells of the "sentimental nonsense and deliberate ignorance" which pervade our ideas about age; and she demands that we regard old people as "human beings with a future as well as a past."

Lawrence Rust Hill has written a second volume to his proposed trilogy of tonguein-cheek books that I think will delight a great many ofyou. Thisone is "How to Refire at 41, or Dropping Out of the Rat Race Without Going Down the Drain." Hill wants to know why you don't quite the race race NOW. Why not go "live simply somewhere?" Then he answers his question: "Because nothing is harder than being successfully unemployed." Hill should know. He retired at 41. He tells you about his witty methodical ways in the frontiers of The New Leisure.

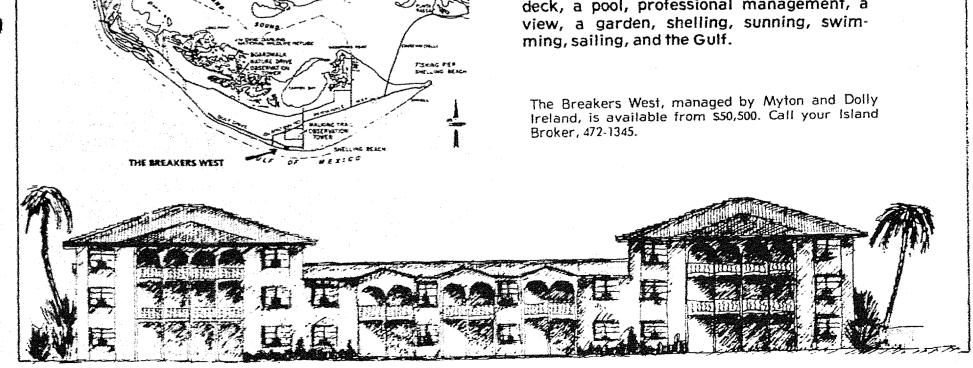

Incidentally, I think you will enjoy Hill's first book too: "How to Do Things Right, the Revelations of a Fussy Man." Hill claims our lives are a mess because we never do anything right. His third book, yet to be published, will be "How to be Good." I KNOW you just can't wait for that one.

You might like an attempt to be funny by Albert Vorspan who wrote"Mazel Tov! You're Middle-Aged." I enjoy Yiddish humor, especially the Harry Golden type, but I don't like forced humor, and in this book, Vorspan pushes hard for a laugh. You may disagree. It is a small book and won't take long to read it.

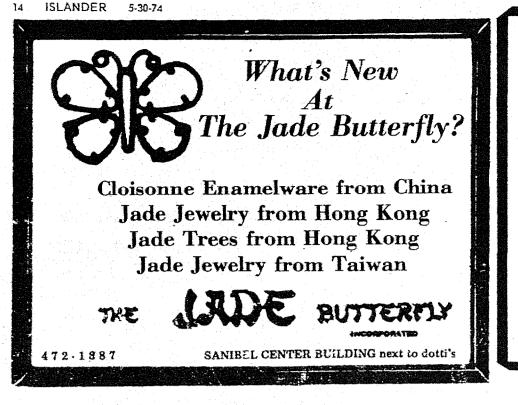

Isaac Asimov's "Today and Tommorow and ..." is not geriatrics, but it does explore the mysteries of the biological clock. The practical uses of space exploration, sports of the future, importance and impact of science fiction --- these are a few of the subjects covered in this wide-ranging collection of 32 science essays.

A Grain Of Sea Salt by betzi abram

When things go wrong around this house, there are no half-way measures. First, our chartering friend has problems with his boat so no trip to the Bahamas. OK. So instead we plan on a leisurely loaf through the Keys on our own boat, but as we drove gaily around buying goodie things like extra anchor chains, mosquito netting, etc., a LARGE GM truck wipes out the trunk of our car. No one was hurt, fortunately.

Sector 1

However, no trip to the Keys. Instead of having No Sweat hauled and painted, we have to buy a new car. Meanwhile, vacation days are ticking by. I run into an old friend of whom I'm very fond of who always says to me, "I LOVE your column. It's the very first thing I turn to in every issue."

She greets me as usual and I look at her sadly and say, "Here it is, my first week away from the office and they forget to print the columit."

"What column?" she asks.

"Did you get your paper this week?" lask

"Oh, yes," said she, "and I always read your column first."

We did not pursue the subject. Sic transit gloria mundi!

Humble reflections on the excellent characteristics of old newspaper columns for wrapping garbage or disposing of old fish, reminded me that it's been three weeks since 1 announced the First Annual Grain of Sea Salt contest - asking you to send in your lists of provisions for a three-week cruise in the Bahamas; the best one to win a unique and original prize - and not one single entry has come in.

I thought about making up several interesting lists (home-canned pigs' knuckles and the like) and submitting them under fictitious names just in order to "save face." But logic won out. Since no one reads my column anyway, why bother?

The only comforting thought is that since the editor doesn't read it either, he'll never know about this and as long as I keep bringing it in, I can collect my 85 cents a week.

Furthermore, have you ever seen a gorgeous French poodle trimmed just the way you'd like yours to look but never does? Or a child with charming manners like you've never been able to teach yours? Well, I met a Venture the other day, named Waialae, who positively puts poor old No Sweat to shame. Even her name, which means Floating on the Wind, makes ours sound positively crass.

Of course, she is a few years younger which shows is her crisp white paint, bright blue deck paint and jazzy pop top. But she also has a motorized keel winch, an automatic starter on the engine and an alternator. She has a spreader light, shiny chrome stanchions with life lines. a topping lift from the end of the boom to the top of the mast and down to a cleat; also little plastic slugs sewed onto her mainsail so that it can be raised and lowered in a jiffy instead of painstakingly rolled up.

She also has a custom top for shady traveling and other pleasant extras which are nice but do not interest me as much as the ones above. They fire my imagination because they enable Ruth Burks to sail Waialae, ALL BY HER-SELF, out of her canal at Waterway Estates, into the Caloosahatchie and wherever she wants to go. It always tickles me to find more and more intrepid women sailors and to see proof that you do not have to be brawny or tough or teenaged or dependent upon the aid of some fellow (no matter how willing or helpful) to enjoy this magnificent sport. However, I'll have a lot to do to No Sweat before she is manageable for one.

In the light of all these depressing events, I decided to toss my cares to the wind and circumnavigate the island in my jolly little tub the Miss Patty-Green-Molly-Brown. Like Magellan, I set out to sail round my little world, but --- well, that's really another story. And besides, 1 wouldn't want to break your heart.
