Cities discuss forming dual tax panel

By CINDY CHALMERS

One committee comprised of representatives from Sanibel, Cape Coral and Fort Myers will probably be the cities' next step in the battle with Lee County against dual taxation.

"Timing is most important right now," said Sanibel's Dual Taxation chairman, Councilman Zee Butler. "We need to recognize that, even if we get this committee going right away, our first opportunity to correct any inequities will be fiscal 1981," she said in a meeting Friday morning between officials of the three cities.

"This seems to be a flat-out shift in the county's policy about dual taxation," Butler said. "The commissioners have come right out and said that just because a city supplies 18 percent of the tax base doesn't mean that the city should get 18 percent of the county services. That's directly opposite what they used to say."

"This deal we got the other day (the county's decision to reject the cities' petitions for relief from dual taxation in several service areas) just shows us that the county isn't going to resolve the inequities without further pressure from the cities," Cape Coral Mayor Lyman

Moore said.

In a decision that surprised and disappointed city officials, the commissioners voted Wednesday to reject the petitions filed last October claiming dual taxation is evident in the sheriff's patrol, parks and recreation, road assessment and drainage and water control in Lee County.

Commission Chairman Dick Steele issued a policy statement that the county provides certain services on a county-wide basis, and even though the cities don't always use the services provided by the county, it should not be the county's responsibility to return money to the cities for county services they do not use.

This philosophy, Sanibel Councilman Porter Goss said at the Friday a.m. meeting, is directly opposite the policy previously adopted by the county indicating they should solve tax inequities.

"The combined committee idea is a good way to approach the matter," Goss said. "We need a unified front to deal with the county on dual taxation."

Moore and Goss agreed that one of the first priorities of the new committee should be to bring the sheriff's patrol issue

Planners review commercial study

by gwen stevenson

The Sanibel Planning Commission met in a special workshop session yesterday, Monday, January 7, to review a study of commercial development on Sanibel prepared by City planner Bob Duane.

Commissioners were agreed on some of the issues and sharply divided on others. They did agree that the Planning Department staff should prepare two amendments for the Commission's - and later the City Council's - consideration. The first amendment will, if passed, amend the lawfully existing use formula to limit the expansion of lawfully existing uses and their eventual removal (if destroyed beyond 50 percent) to enhance the integrity of the zoning districts in which they are now located.

The second proposed amendment would place additional requirements on commercial development in resort areas based on a maximum number of square feet per dwelling unit or maximum floor area, with 50 percent of the commercial resort market required to be provided from within the resort complex.

Commissioner Ray Fenton led off yesterday's discussion saying that there was enough material in Duane's commercial study to "support anything we want to do." Fenton outlined initially that he felt the options included reducing the amount of commercial area, establishing a rate of growth for commercial development, which has boomed in recent years, or maintaining the status quo. Fenton identified the problem of replacing the value of commercial land, if it is rezoned. "That's the first thing we have to address," he said, "but I don't know where to begin." Fenton suggested that an economic formula might be derived to replace the commercial use of certain parcels with an equitable residential use.

Establishing a Rate of Growth for commercial development was Fenton's second alternative. Commissioner Don Manchester appeared initially to favor a commercial rate of growth. Manchester said that he felt the Courts might look askance at the City downgrading its own zoning. He cited the case where the court re-established Lee County zoning in John Goode's Periwinkle way parcel. He suggested for consideration that a possible limit of four to four and a half acres of commercial development each year for 10 years might be established. That rate parallels the rate of residential development permitted under the Rate of Growth ordinance to the maximum build-out allowed under the land use plan.

Other changes Manchester suggested included removing restaurants as a permitted use under restricted commercial zoning because of the impact a restaurant can have on adjoining residential areas. (Restricted commercial development is intended to be a "buffer zone" between commercial and residential use.) He also criticized some commercial developments for eliminating more than 50 percent of the vegetation on their lots. "I would like to see the vegetation requirement made more stringent," Manchester stated. He also pointed out that he preferred to see commercial development in pockets.

Newly appointed Commissioner Fred Valtin told the Commissioners that he wanted to play Devil's Advocate. "There appears to be a predisposition to go into regulation and reduction," he said, "but personally, I am not convinced that is the best or legal method. I am personally predisposed to allow the market forces to play a far greater role than would appear to be indicated here." Valtin said that he thought the market would dictate a slower growth rate in future commercial development and he feared serious legal problems if the Commissioners "pick and choose what would and wouldn't remain commercially zoned."

Commissioner Arthur Wyckoff, also newly named, suggested that the Commissioners needed more information about the number of trips Islanders made, where they went, what they bought and why. His idea was endorsed by Commissioners Judy Workman and Ann Winterbotham but disputed by other Commission members. Fenton declared that he felt the questionnaire would produce narrowly defined answers and that it was the Commissioners' job to consider the broader picture. Valtin said that, while he felt a well-designed questionnaire would be helpful, especially to a prospective businessman, he was afraid that it might be "carried too far to include what types of businesses are needed. That," he said, "would end up with a quota system to which I would be unalterably opposed."

Wyckoff clarified his position, saying that the questionnaire would not be to control commercial development but to establish a body of knowledge for prospective investors. Fenton declared that to be the responsibility of private enterprise.

Workman disagreed. "We don't know what percentage of goods are bought by residents vs. tourists and we don't know how much shopping is done off-island. How can we plan if we don't have any information?" she asked.

Wolf is "Wildlife Ambassador"

by gwen stevenson

The walls of the Sanibel Community Association have borne witness to many different sights and sounds, but probably few as strange as the sight — and sound — of almost 300 people (mostly adults, mind you) howling like so many banshees to a three-year old timber wolf. The wolf, who settled down on his haunches and enjoyed the performance, regarded his serenade with a somewhat quizzical expression and one had the feeling he was trying not to laugh.

"Wolves, especially this one, have a terrific sense of humor," asserted Pam Brown, who, along with the wolf's owner John Harris, presented the program for the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society last Thursday. But even though it was a full moon, all the wolf, named Slick, could manage was a "small hum".

Slick visits schools and community groups with Brown and Harris as a "wildlife ambassador". "Through Slick, we hope people will see things like alligators and snakes and allow them to remain in their own habitat," Harris said, adding that he has been on the road with different wolves for 12 years. Harris said that the standing room only crowd attracted to last week's program was not unusual. "That room is full because we all have some kind of kinship with the things that are wild". The problem, according to Harris, is that after man has observed wild animals in their natural habitat, he attempts to tame them. He quotes a remark by Chief Seattle who said, "Man will die of a loneliness of spirit when he has no more wild things around him".

And, indeed, the wolf's habitat is shrinking, due to his worst enemy — man. In America, the only state that still has wild timber wolves is Minnesota. "In Alaska," Pam told her audience, "they rationalize the aerial wolf hunts on the grounds that the wolves are taking caribou away from the Eskimos". She pointed out that wolves maintain a balance of nature in their hunting of caribou and deer, because "they kill the weaker and sickly members of the herd." Wolves are hunted from helicopters that can fly low over the frozen tundra that is the Alaskan timber wolf's home. She urged that audience members write the Governor of Alaska to protest the hunt.

In addition to being a general wildlife ambassador, Slick, a light beige in color, is also a goodwill emissary for his species. Brown and Harris are waging a two-man battle against the image of the "Big Bad Wolf".

"There has never been an authenticated case of a wolf attacking a human being," said Ms. Brown, adding that humans are taught to fear the species "starting with Little Red Riding Hood, when we all learn that wolves eat grandmothers."

Described as a "very outgoing wolf", Slick himself is about 140 pounds, although Brown told the group that they couldn't be sure since "he wasn't very cooperative about getting on the scales." And even though Harris maintains that Slick is the best wolf he has ever worked with, he still cannot let him loose. "He is not tame and he will not respond when called," he said.

Harris related a recent tale when they took Slick to a Connecticut tennis court to exercise. (Since wolves can jump 8 feet standing still, tennis courts provide the best locale for this activity.) "Someone left a gate open at the far end of the court and he was gone," said Harris. "Wolves can run 40 miles an hour". But Slick returned to Pam after a short romp.

Harris said that even though he had known Slick for most of the wolf's three years, his attachment to the distaff member of the team was not unusual. Wolves are usually more nervous around men than women, according to Harris. To illustrate his point, a docile gentleman approached the wolf and handler as Harris was discussing this prior to the show and Slick backed away. Yet seconds before, he had been nuzzling this (female) reporter's hand. Later in the program, his preference for ladies became evident when he wouldn't take a piece of gum from Harris' mouth, but performed

admirably with Pam Brown.

"A wolf can exert 1000 pounds per square inch of pressure in his bite," Brown said, adding that Slick had never broken her skin even when playing or being given shots.

Although wolves generally, and Slick specifically, groom themselves, the handlers were planning on finding a secluded beach where he could romp in the ocean. When oceans aren't available, then, according to Brown, they tie Slick to a tree and hose him down.

Slick's diet of raw meat precludes the problem of fleas and ticks, they say, because it "provides the proper acidic balance in his blood."

Although some people are attempting to se! dogs that are alleged to have wolf stock in them, both Brown and Harris advise strongly against attempting to make a pet of a wolf.

"Not only can't you house-break them or get them to come when you call," said Pam, "they won't protect you either. If there is any violence, a wolf will run in the other direction because he's smart."

And that brought the program to the point where the audience tried to get Slick to howl by howling plaintively to the wolf themselves. Wolves are very communal, Brown had pointed out, and they do howl together just like we sing in a choir. Slick just watched the proceedings with penetrating, light-colored eyes — eyes, that, according to Harris, bear out the saying that "When you look into a man's eyes, you see his soul; when you look into a wolf's eyes, you see the world's soul."

The Estuaries project — what is it really?

The Estuaries project — a condominium city consisting of five interrelated villages stretching from Punta Rassa to Hendry Creek — a project five years in the planning — a project constantly confronted with rejection from Lee County officials, conservation groups and state officials — a project local news media rate one of the top stories of the decade — a dream for Fort Myers Beach Developer Robert Troutman and a nightmare for conservationists throughout the state.

In addition to the five separate villages which could house 73,600 people at the height of the season, the project also calls for three golf courses, 403 acres of parks, a school, 14 tennis centers, four marinas, 24 lakes and a 400-foot interceptor waterway.

After continuous denials for development permits, the First District Court of Appeals two weeks ago ordered state and local officials to issue the permits. Local reaction to the decision is mixed.

Conservationists adamantly oppose the project because of the sensitivity of the land which is 90 percent wetlands. Only 526 acres within the entire development are uplands.

Troutman's carefully planned development requires the destruction of 3,186 acres of those wetlands including 799 acres of red and black mangroves, 11 acres of bay bottom, 1142 acres of impounded black mangroves and 61 acres of mangrove ponds. The Southwest Regional Planning Council also opposed the "experimental" seven and a half mile interceptor waterway because of the possibility of degradation of water.

In addition to the environmental effects, the project will also require approximately $42 million in road construction and $35 million in school facilities, according to estimates by county officials.

Troutman claims his 25-year project could bring $3.9 million in spendable income to Lee County, provide 3,000 jobs and attract at least 42,000 new permanent residents.

But the Southwest Florida Regional Planning Council disagrees. In a economic report for the area released last year, the council said further growth in Southwest Florida depends on local ability to maintain as much remaining natural resources as possible.

Fort Myers Beach Chamber of Commerce president Joe Raffa, speaking for himself, said that he believes that an individual has a right to develop his property and that, if the government refuses to allow the development, the owner should be reimbursed. "If the state and county were to deny his (Troutman) permits, then he should be compensated for the loss," he said.

The estimated cost of the mangroves in the Estuaries is $5 million, which the county is in no way able to purchase, according to Commission Chairman Dick Steele.

The 25-acre Bay Beach project, located on the Bay side of Estero Blvd, was a pilot project for the Estuaries and has not proven successful. The declining condition of Bay Beach has caused some former Estuaries supporters to revise their position.

Troutman's condominium community is directed at "second home and retiree purchasers" in the middle to upper income bracket, according to the Development of Regional Impact Statement presented in 1976. Phase one of the 25-year project, dubbed Bay Isles is proposed to contain 1,800 units in Hurricane Bay, north of San Carlos Island.

Twin Creeks Village, which will border San Carlos Boulevard, will house approximately 9,000 people. Tropic Trees and Pelican Point are proposed north of Estero Bay with a population of more than 12,000. The fifth village, West Winds, is proposed to be located between San Carlos Island and Punta Rassa.

Troutman purchased the land from the Windsor Trust for $9,400,000 in 1973. At the recommendation of state personnel and scientists employed by Troutman, he bought an additional 3,000 acres for nearly $10,000.

Troutman claims he explained his plan with various governmental officials and environmental agencies before purchasing the Windsor Tract to insure follow-through of the project. Upon receiving favorable indications from each government representative, he began his dream project. Seven years and man hundreds of thousands of dollars later, the project is still being debated.

State and local officials have agreed to appeal the First District Court of Appeals order to issue Troutman his permits to the State Supreme Court.

Almost 800 acres of black mangrove will go if the county and state can't successfully appeal the recent court ruling ordering permits for the massive Estuaries development.

Specific

Amendment granted

The City Council granted a Specific Amendment to the City's land use plan last week to permit construction of a single family residence on Sanibel-Captiva Road in the Blind Pass area.

The approval, which passed unanimously, limited the size of the home to not more than 2000 square feet and provided that pilings and braces be constructed in accordance with the forthcoming codes. The City Building Department is in the process of reviewing and changing the building codes, based on the recommendations that Building Official George Blaine found on Dauphin Island.

Variance granted for pool

The City Council last Wednesday unanimously approved a request for a Specific Amendment to the Plan to permit an increase of two percent in the permitted amount of impermeable coverage to allow a swimming pool for a Shell Harbor home.

First reading on density change heard

The Sanibel City Council last Wednesday heard a first reading of a Specific Amendment request to increase density on a parcel of land owned by Velna Ridge and located west of Beach Road, just north of Loggerhead Cay.

Mrs. Ridge, represented by John Schumacher, is requesting a change from one dwelling unit to eight units for the 4.7

acre parcel. The change has been requested as a result of the revision of the ecological zones map. Originally classified wetlands-uplands, with a permitted density of one unit, the new map shows that about 45 percent of the property falls in the mid-island ridge, which has a higher permitted intensity of use.

Mrs. Ridge reminded the Council that she had applied for an increase in density in 1977 but the Council had asked her to wait until the ecological zone remapping was completed. Mrs. Ridge said that she had placed 2160 yards of fill on the property in 1974.

The eight lots would range from .51 to .58 acres each, Schumacher told the Council, exclusive of roadways. Using a formula proposed by Planning Commissioner Betty Robinson, the Planning Commission had recommended an increase in density to five units, which would mean that each lot would be about .9 acres.

"This is a significant policy issue," Goss said. "I am most concerned about the impact on the plan and equitability on an Island-wide basis. Do you foresee that Beach Road will need to be paved?" he asked Mrs. Ridge.

"I thought it would be paved when I gave it away," she replied. Mrs. Ridge deeded half of Beach Road to Lee County in 1972. "I don't think five or eight homes will impact Beach Road," said Schumacher. Goss disagreed, pointing out the necessity for construction equipment to use the road.

When asked if she would consider a trade-off in higher density for moderate cost housing, Mrs. Ridge said she would be worried about depreciating land values around her, including her own home, if she built moderately priced units. "You mention it (moderate cost housing) and everyone goes to pieces, falls on the floor," she said. Sanibel Mayor Francis Bailey disagreed vehemently, telling her that the units were not going to depreciate anyone's property.

The Planning staff had recommended against increasing the density on the parcel because "the East Gulf Drive connector doesn't border the property and traffic using the connector will be discouraged from using Beach Road—nothing else has changed that would promote the increased density." Goss also requested City Attorney Neal Bowen to look into the matter. Goss said he was worried that the Council might be setting a precedent or be "getting into trouble in other areas."

The second reading on the request is scheduled for February 5 at 1:50 p.m.

Sanibel Estates canal dredging urged

Sanibel Estates resident Bill Krueger appeared before the City Council last Wednesday to urge that the Council investigate dredging Sanibel Estates canals, which, Krueger said, are in worse shape than the Shell Harbor canals. Krueger told the Council that his canal completely drains out at low tide, causing a bad odor and potential health problems. He accused the Council of favoring Shell Harbor because it was a "larger and better organized" subdivision.

Councilman Goss objected to Krueger's accusation, pointing out that the tape of the December 21 meeting where the canals were discussed "clearly showed that all canal people should be treated equally. Krueger called the poll that the City has ordered to determine how many Shell Harbor residents really want the canals dredged, a "delaying tactic".

City Manager Bernie Murphy told the Council that his staff was drafting up a survey and were also in the process of identifying public and private canals. "We're making the survey to identify the costs involved," Murphy said. "We have to have a range of realistic costs."

Residents seek paving of Bay Drive

A petition signed by 29 property owners in Sanibel Harbors subdivision and Bay Drive was presented to the City Council last week requesting that Bay Drive be paved from Isabel Road to Bailey Road.

Area resident Durward Kirby told the Council that currently the road was being scraped flat by City maintenance crews and, "if it rains, we will have a perfect bathtub eight-tenths of a mile long," he said, adding that roads should be graded to crown in the middle to facilitate drainage.

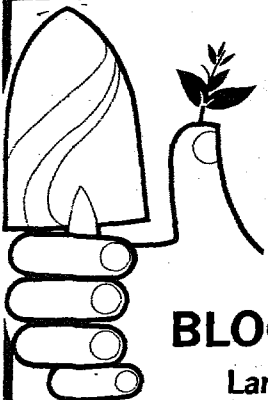

He also argued that, if the road were in that condition during an emergency situation, "we would just have to watch our home go up in flames, because the fire trucks couldn't get through."

Kirby disagreed with a "stopgap" surface treatment measure that the Council is considering. To completely blacktop the road will cost about $560,000 and Bay Drive is not on the City's established list of road priorities. The interim measure would cost the City between $20,000 and $30,000 and last about three years, according to Public Works Director Gary Price.

City Planner Ty Symroski suggested that the City consider linking up Bay Drive with the Dunes, Phase 11 as an alternate route. "It would be useful in an emergency," said Symroski. "Bay Drive is lined with Australian Pines."

"I don't think much of routing traffic through one subdivision to get to another," Councilman Goss said.

Kirby said he would be willing to consider an assessment but warned the Council that he didn't think that idea would gain "100 percent acceptance." Kirby suggested, in view of the cost, that the road could be paved in phases.

The City administration was requested to return to Council with information on the temporary treatment, to approach the developer of the Dunes, Mariner Properties, to see if the alternate road would be acceptable, and to present an assessment formula City staff devised two years ago when they were considering assessing the Rocks and Tradewinds subdivisions for road repairs.

Appreciation shown by City

Retiring Planning Commissioners Betty Robinson and Twink Underhill were awarded Certificates of Appreciation by the City of Sanibel at last Wednesday's City Council meeting. Former Acting City Manager Warren Hyde was also on hand to receive his Certificate and share in the standing ovation awarded the three Sanibel residents by the audience. Ray Fenton, who has resigned his Planning Commission seat but was unable to attend the City Council meeting, was also awarded a similar Certificate.

Moderate Cost Housing Meeting scheduled

The next meeting of the City's Moderate Cost Housing Committee has been scheduled for Wednesday, January 23, at 7:30 p.m. at Mackenzie Hall.

Planning Commission Workshops planned

The Sanibel Planning Commission has scheduled a workshop for Monday, January 21 on contiguous lots and hazard mitigation.

City continues role as intervenor in Estuaries case

City Attorney Neal Bowen reported to the City Council last week that Lee County and the state of Florida have decided to appeal the recent Estuaries decision to the state Supreme Court and that Sanibel would continue its role as intervenor in the case. When asked by Councilman Duane White whether there was anything more the City could do, Bowen replied that he felt Sanibel was getting "maximum representation at nominal taxpayer's cost".

City to continue membership in Florida Shores and Beach Preservation Association

The City Council decided last week to continue the City's membership in the Florida Shores and Beaches Association (FSBPA) after FSBPA member and one-time president Paul Stahlin reassured the Council that Sanibel was not being touted as a model for barrier island development.

Councilman Porter Goss raised the red flag, saying that he had heard that Sanibel was being cited as an example of "you can promote growth on barrier islands if you do any kind of planning". Sanibel, said Goss, was being promoted as an example of growth promotion rather than growth management.

Stahlin told the Council that the FSBPA was not engaged in that kind of activity and urged the City Council members to get involved with the organization with a view to putting one of their number on the Association's Board. Sanibel Mayor Francis Bailey concurred with Stahlin and told the Council they ought to examine that suggestion closely.

Yearly membership in the Association is $200 for the City.

Daniels plan taxi service

Jeanette and Wolfgang Daniel appeared before the City Council last week to request an Occupational license to operate a taxicab, limousine and transfer service on Sanibel.

An apparently conflicting set of ordinances dictated the Daniels' appearance before it was finally determined that the City Manager would work out the details. The occupational license law requires that taxi licenses be approved by the City Council while a taxi license law, adopted after the occupational licensing, mandates that the City Manager implement the ordinance requirements.

Mrs. Daniel told the Council that, in view of the added air service to the Southwest Florida area, she thought more people would be traveling to the Islands by air and there was a greater need to provide public transportation. She emphasized, after being questioned by the Council, that she did not plan to run sightseeing tours.

The Council requested that Assistant City Manager Gary Price report back to the Council with a fee recommendation based on what is charged Sanibel Taxi Service owned by John Bullard. The matter was scheduled to be reviewed at the January 15 Council meeting.

Gallery Motel sign split allowed

The management of the Gallery Motel successfully argued last week that they should be allowed to split their motel sign to preserve existing vegetation. The current sign must be removed because it is located in the City right of way. The motel is permitted to have a two-faced sign so their request was approved, conditioned upon the existence of the vegetation. Councilman Duane White, who moved approval of the variance request, stipulated that the sign must be changed if the vegetation were to be removed or destroyed.

Building Permit extension granted

An extension was granted to developers of a commercial complex on Palm Ridge Road between the Island Apothecary and Wooster's TV after Sanibel resident Elliot Gelberg, one of the developers, told the Council that their financing had been straightened out and the building was again underway. The anticipated completion date is April 30, 1980.

Happy New Year - Dutch Style

by mark harmel

The Dutch New Year tradition of Apple Frappen was celebrated in Periwinkle Trailer Park Thursday night, as George and Cora Kerkstra shared the custom on Sanibel for the fifth year. The first year twenty people celebrated the event with the Kerkstra's. This year they went through a bushel of apples and five cans of Crisco as they fried up 400 Frappen slices.

Neighbor Phil Verhage and George Kerkstra fry up the apple fritters. Apples are cored and sliced before being placed in batter and fried in oil. The cooked fritter is then coated with powdered sugar.

The best part of Apple Frappen is eating the fritters. Queen Day is among the trailer full of people that devoured the fritters.

Honesty still the best policy

Young Sanibel resident Greg Hermes found a wallet in front of the Chamber of Commerce last week containing credit cards and $130 in cash. He was unable to turn it into the Chamber because it was closed so he gave it to Canterbury school teacher Phyllis Hatcher. Mrs. Hatcher called the Sanibel Police Department, returned it there and it was claimed by Lucetta Clifford, a guest at the Hurricane House.

Mrs. Clifford left a note for Greg that said, in part, he had "restored my faith in people. You are a credit to your family and to the State of Florida."

Along with the glowing thank you note was a $20 reward for Greg Hermes.

CORRECTION

In last week's issue of the ISLANDER, noted naturalist Georgen Campbell discussed the changing seasons on the Islands. He pointed out to us, however, that in his article, it said the Cherokee bean was "delicious". Indeed not, said Campbell. "They may be delicious, but they are also poisonous".

"Children should be taught to avoid red seeds and berries of all kinds here, for several are deadly," he emphasized.

obituary

Mrs. Morris D. Behrend

A memorial service is scheduled for today, Tuesday, January 8, at 4 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Church for Mrs. Morris D. (Molly) Behrend. Mrs. Behrend, who was 77, died December 30 at Fort Myers Community Hospital.

Mrs. Behrend, who had lived on Sanibel for seven years, came here from New York City, where she had been an author, journalist, lecturer and food authority for over 25 years.

For 11 years, she was the food editor for nine national magazines that included House Beautiful, Harper's Bazaar, Parents and Better Homes and Gardens. She also authored several cookbooks and served as executive editor of Fine Foods and Beverages International for several years.

She received a Bachelor of Arts degree in French, English and Journalism from Vassar and studied in Florence and Paris.

She is survived by a son, John Ellsworth of Lahaska, Penn.; a daughter, Mrs. Carl (Nancy) Brandauer of Boulder, Col.; and five grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

PROPERTY SPEAKING

By Bert Jenks

President, Sanibel Realty

Your home has been for sale, shown, and the latest enthusiastic prospect has signed an offer to buy, which has been presented to you by your realtor. Review this offer with care. It is an extremely important part of the sale.

Some questions you should ask yourself while examining the document include:
Are all the names correct?
Is the property accurately described?
Is the mortgage information correct?
Can you move by the possession date?
Is the purchase price satisfactory?

Double check your calculations to be sure you know how much cash you will receive. If you have any doubts about items contained in the offer, do not sign it until all those doubts have been removed from your mind.

The offer to purchase is binding on the purchaser for the amount of time stated in the offer. You can except it without change. You can let it expire, or you can consider changes. If you change anything in the offer you are reversing the process and making an "offer to sell" to the purchasers, who then have the same options.

If you are reasonably satisfied with the offer, it is usually best to sign the contract as written because countering over minor items can "blow" the transaction. Additionally, countering can cool the buyer's motivation because extra time is involved.

Nevertheless, before you sign, be certain that the contract clearly states all the necessary items as a contract. When properly executed, this is legally binding and all points of the agreement will be accomplished according to the letter of the script.

Gulf Points Liquors to open Thursday

Gulf Points Liquors, located in Miners Corner next to Duff's, will open its doors this Thursday. Touted by one of its owners, Bob Potts, as "the largest in Southwest Florida" will carry, in addition to spirits, a small delicatessen which will prepare party trays, meats and cheeses, as well as products from an in-house bakery.

Adjacent to the 8000 square foot store, is a cocktail lounge, known as the Half-Time Lounge, scheduled for a mid-February opening. The 78-seat lounge will have a five-foot television screen and a small dance floor. Music will be piped in and there will also be live organ music.

Potts says that liquor and beer prices will be competitive with other Fort Myers liquor stores and the store will be managed by another owner, John Williams.

Package store hours will be 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. daily. The lounge will be open from 10 a.m. until midnight.

Weinzettle reappointed to National Committee

John Weinzettle, Coordinator, Police Standards Training at Edison Community College, and a Sanibel resident, has been reappointed to the SEARCH National Project Committee for the design and implementation of a Standardized Crime Reporting System.

SEARCH is a criminal justice research and development agency, headquartered in Sacramento, California. Weinzettle, a retired Army General, is one of 12 criminal justice professionals, representing 11 states and the FBI, who have been working for the past three years on the design and test of the SCRS program.

Now being implemented in four states, SCRS is designed to provide an accurate and effective means for collecting, storing, using and disseminating criminal justice information.

SCRS combines the three basic functions of an operational crime reporting system: data capture, data management and control and data utilization. The system is adaptable to large police agencies with data processing facilities, as well as those police agencies without.

on the water

by capt. mike fuery

When that northeast wind is howling down Pine Island Sound and you're headed out for a few hours of fishing, there are two things you need to have with you.

The first is a set of long winter underwear and the second is a picture of some sort of fish, because, when it gets bad, a picture of a lunker is about as close as you are going to get.

We are officially into the winter fishing season and all guides have to rely upon much more skill and knowledge of fishing spot locations to bring in a catch at the end of the day. But, you don't have to be a fishing guide to locate fish in cold, blustery weather, if you keep a few things in mind when you go out.

One of the most important elements of fishing in cold weather is to keep that bait on or near the bottom. The deeper waters are more stable in temperature and any fish worth his scales is going to get to the bottom where he can survive.

The next thing to remember when looking for fish in cold weather is that fish are cold-blooded and, as such, greatly curtail their activity as the temperature drops. Even at the lower depths of the big passes, things slow down.

This is why fast retrieved lures hardly ever get results. There isn't a fish around wanting to chase something moving rapidly away from him.

This time of year, many winter snook fishermen start working the canals in the waterway network on Sanibel Island. You mostly see them casting jigs, usually yellow or white, and working it slowly over the bottom. You can't be worrying about getting a snag and losing that lure. That's going to happen, but if you constantly work that lure fast to keep from getting snagged, then forget getting any fish.

The redfish is also a frequent visitor to deeper waters, such as canals, when the temperature dips into the 60's to 40's. Redfish work along the bottom, looking for crabs, bits of shrimp and a couple of other natural baits. They also will chase a lure if it is brought slowly right by their nose. Throw that lure 30 feet from them and you will never know there is a fish in the waters.

Strangely enough, when the waters get cooler, as they will in January and February, the little sheepshead get into the limelight. These "jailbird" black and white striped fish love to hover around pilings, rock groins and almost anywhere barnacles grow. You can't use barnacles for bait of course, but these fish will take about anything else, from clams to oysters to their favorite, the shrimp. I've seen many a fishing day saved by these scrappy sheepshead, when the more popular gamefish like the trout, snook and redfish have gone south for the winter.

If you've got kids along on the fishing trip, they might get into the sugar trout. These are silvery fish about eight inches long. Most people consider them a bait stealer, but when you can't get a bite, except out of that bottle of Jack Daniels, then set the kids on the sugar trout. There's not much meat in a fillet of course, but for catching and releasing fish, the sugar trout is just right for the kids. You sit back, bait hooks and take care of Mr.

Daniels.

And on the worst, windiest, rainiest day, there is always one fish that thinks it's summer and things couldn't be better. That's the saltwater catfish. When you are the only person on the water and even you are beginning to doubt your sanity, along comes a whiskered catfish who gives you a pretty fair fight, has a look at you then hustles back into the water to get your hook again. We had a catfish on one of my charters make so many round trips, we had to offer him a discount fare.

Even on the coldest days, with all the little fish around, it's still difficult to get some eating fish back to the boat. But work the deep waters, close to the bottom and move to shallow waters when the winds drop and the sun comes out. That warms up the fish and usually brings a couple to your bait.

Good fishing out there and keep plenty of warm jackets around.

islander angling...

With the prevailing situation of cold weather and choppy waters it is hard to tell the difference between the shortage of fishermen and the lack of fish.

Before the cold front moved in trout fishing was excellent. Reports from local marinas suggest that trout fishing isn't as good this week, but it should pick up with better weather. Look for trout on the grassflats at the Causeway, in Tarpon Bay and at Buck Key.

With snook looking for warmer waters they're being caught in the canals and other sheltered places. Sanibel Marina reports good catches of snook in the canals, at Wulfert Point, and in Tarpon Bay.

Sheepshead are still around the pier and the canal docks. The Bait Box suggests using tubeworms, or fiddler crabs as bait as the weather gets colder.

Catches of whiting in the surf and flounder at the pier and Causeway were also reported earlier last week.

David Anderson hired as Tween Waters Pro

Tony Lapi, General Manager of Tween Waters resort, announced last week that David Anderson has been hired as the resort's resident tennis pro.

Anderson's responsibilities will include coordinating the tennis program and teaching all private and group lessons. He was formerly associated with Casa Ybel and South Seas Plantation as a tennis pro.

Beachview Men's Golf

Shivering to the bone, 52 golfers from the Beachview Men's Golf Association braved the cold last Saturday to play their weekly tournament.

The first foursome on the course started before the sun warmed the air, but they were the hottest players on the course, winning with a plus three. The frozen winners were Jeff Dean, Bill Estep, Bill Beynon, and Tim Esson.

The runner up with a plus two was the foursome of Roy Hull, Ed Barone, Elmer Dailey, and Bruce Henderson. Finishing third were Bob Dormer, Don Lawrence, Rudy Mikulic, and Tram Sessions. They shot a minus two.

Elmer Dailey's plus three was the best individual score.

Dunes Women's Golf

The Dunes Women's Golf Association played low net tournament January 4. Von Fight won first place. Phyllis Harvey won second and Billie Tyler won third. Low putts of 15 was won by Dot Ohlmann.

Beachview Women's

The Beachview Women's Golf Association will sponsor a couples Scramble Golf Tournament at the Beachview Golf Club on Sunday January 13. A $25 entry fee will include dinner following the tournament. ## INTERVAL OWNERSHIP — it's the most vacation for our money.

True — we work hard to earn our vacations and we want the most for our money. Inflation is making resort rentals just too expensive for a family — and we simply can't afford the year-round ownership and maintenance of a vacation home.

So we're here at Plantation Beach Club where interval ownership gives our family the assurance that we can enjoy leisurely vacations each year, in comfort and luxury, — all at a one-time cost that's easy to afford.

We love the islands — it's a great place for June and me to relax and there's so much for the kids to do. Our vacation villa is right on the beach, fully furnished, complete with linens, all the kitchen utensils, magazines, — you name it. We've got two private bedrooms, two bathrooms and a screened porch, so there's plenty of room for the kids.

With barbecues and a full kitchen, we fix breakfast, lunch, snacks and dinners — and save enough money to treat the whole family to nice restaurants once in a while.

There's also an exchange program — so we can change our vacation times and visit other resorts, all without paying rent. We believe Interval Ownership provides the most vacation for our money.

RUSSIA: person-to-person encounters

By Gitta Perl

I very recently returned from a two-week sojourn in the Soviet Union and, as I was the first amongst my small circle of friends to go there, I was inundated with questions. Foremost: "The People! How did you find The People?"

Let me say right off: there was a total language barrier! I don't speak a word of Russian, or any other slavic language for that matter, and I didn't find English exactly the Soviet's second language as far as the man or woman in the street was concerned.

Our Intourist guides spoke English to perfection and in the "Dollar-Stores" prices were quoted in English, but that's where it more or less stopped. In most situations pantomime had to take over. This was successful at times but often attempts at communication ended in an either smiling or shoulder-shrugging defeat.

Still—I shall long remember some one-to-one encounters very fondly and with amusement.

There was that afternoon we—I was part of a 15-member group—were scheduled to visit the Pushkin Museum in Moscow. Our Intourist bus unloaded us at a little distance from the gate from which a curved ramp led up to the entrance.

I happened to be one of the first ones off the bus and at that gate. As I walked through or, rather was about to, the guard in military uniform barred my very step with his rifle, some rough sounding words and the appropriately grim face! I was quite bewildered, tried to explain: "... Just going to Museum. ... with group. ... Amerikansky. ... tourist ...!" —but—no way! "Nyet" was all I got for my efforts. By this time the rest of the group and especially our Intourist guide Irene had arrived and the latter took over.

The problem was that unexpectedly the museum was closed to visitors because of a ceremony by a foreign dignitary opening a special exhibition that afternoon.

Well, Irene didn't take NO for an answer. She parlayed her way through and into the building while we waited, kept at bay now by two unfriendly guards. Moments later Irene returned, victorious, having made certain concessions as to which rooms we would go and in what sequence, etc.

So—through the gate and into the museum lobby we trooped, happy to warm up a bit, when the second hurdle to our visit arose.

Due to the temporary closing of the museum, the coat-check attendant had apparently either left or anyway was not available, and in Russia you simply do not, repeat: Do Not—keep your coat on when you enter a museum, a restaurant, a theater! Not for security reasons, simply that it's considered bad manners!

So here we stood, all bundled up, faced with another absolute "Nyet"!

That it wasn't our fault had no bearing on the case. Coats off or no museum! Solution? Dear, patient Irene and our American Tour Director George offered to collect our fifteen coats, carry them back to our parked bus IF we would be willing later on to walk back to the coach without covers so to speak. It was about 33 degrees! Of course we were game.

That second hurdle cleared too, we finally ascended the staircase, entered the various rooms and halls (glorious riches on the walls!) always feeling some rather disgruntled eyes on us and stern admonitions by the robust females (museum guards are almost always women) to keep together, not linger, not to turn back for a second look, the general idea being: get on and get out!

It was annoying because when would we ever have a second chance? But also amusing, the grimness seemed so out of proportion!

Another "Nyet" incident was mine alone.

It was a mild, sunny afternoon in Odessa. While the group visited the Archeological Museum I had begged off to enjoy the peaceful, parklike surroundings. Noticing a small area looking like a courtyard between the Museum and the nearest building to it, with a lovely old tree in one corner, a stone bench in another, I walked down the few steps and came across at least seven or eight cats! Of all ages and colors! As I am a cat-enthusiast and cat owner I enjoyed this scene no end.

At this very moment all cats suddenly gathered from wherever they had been sunning, sleeping, grooming, in my direction. I wasn't the object of their attention though, a basement door was, which opened just then and through which an aging buxom, lady holding in each uplifted hand a platter loaded with food! For the cats!

Delighted smiles all over my face, I readied my camera to record this lovely spectacle, when the woman spotted me! Not disarmed by my smile and obvious pleasure, nor willing to allow me to snap away as a typical tourist will, she conveyed to me somehow, mainly again through her angry expression and stream of words, that I was absolutely not to be there, I was trespassing on (apparently) private property, I was to go back up those steps and stay there! That was where I belonged!

Once again quite taken aback I tried by raising my camera to show the woman my peaceful intentions and love for her proteges, but once more without success. No sense of humor THAT one!

By this time we had been in the Soviet Union for a week and I was not so easily shaken off any more. I kept smiling, stood my ground, snapped my picture, just one, and then retreated, giving up the territory to the enemy!

In all fairness—it may well be that slavic faces, in general square and small eyed—do easily seem grim and so can language one doesn't understand. In both these little episodes I might have misinterpreted the degree of disapproval, but I must say that "Nyet" is "Nyet" over there, no two ways about it! No mitigating circumstances for the culprit!

If I have so far reported on some Russian "NOs", let me now hasten to tell as well about some DAs, some YES'.

For instance: I found the food very good and ample at all times. Only fruit was in short supply because just apples and pears were in season (October) and not often served to us at that. One evening my group had just finished dinner in the huge hotel dining room—on my way out I spotted on a little side table a lovely oversized—Cantaloupe? Oblong like a Watermelon but a net-like skin a la Cantaloupe!

I went up to the table to inspect this strange mixture more closely and expressed, by exclamation and facial expression, admiration for its perfect shape to a young woman, sort of hostess for a group apparently set for a party at another long table. Imagine my surprise when she promptly reached for a large carving knife, cut at least a two-inch thick slice right out of the middle of the melon and offered it to me as if it were her greatest pleasure to do so! No "Nyet", this one on my part, could deter her. I had to accept it, unable to convey my gratitude and appreciation other than with repeated and fervent SPASEEBAS (Thank you!). The fruit was simply delicious, the inside a pale green, the taste a mixture of Watermelon and Honeydew. She had given me enough so everyone in my little group could enjoy a sample. A real treat.

Or: one evening at the theater.

As I mentioned earlier, it is an absolute must to check your coat at the theater. Arriving fairly early for that night's performance, I found the women who take the coats not too busy as yet. While I handed mine to the one the other apparently looked on and noticed something, but I couldn't tell what. I tried to grasp what she could possibly want me so urgently to know but it took a few moments. I only saw from her face that she was very concerned about something! Finally I caught on! A little bit of my white slip was showing! I nodded, pulled down my dress, said "Spaseeba"—but that didn't satisfy my Russian Emily Post. She strenuously pointed in one direction and repeatedly said something which, after a few seconds, came to sound like "toilet"! Aha! She wanted me to go to the ladies' room and really and properly take care of this calamity. I of course obliged but chuckled, greatly amused, for I can assure you: the depth of the woman's concern, her distress over the prospect of the grave embarrassment to myself as she seemed to fear, was worth a catastrophe of major moment, like—losing my panties right then and there! Or something similarly shocking.

Later on I thought about the woman's reaction more seriously and wondered: was a slip an object of such privacy that, to have any of it inadvertently revealed, should be avoided at all cost? Was there some prudery in this outsized reaction and insistence that I remedy the defect promptly and securely? Hard to believe! Even in the USSR one writes the year 1979!

Before mentioning another little episode, I must inject here that during the day we moved as a group; traveling by bus for sightseeing, had our meals together etc. Individual experiences, therefore, were more or less limited to the early morning hours and the evening when the group broke up a bit.

So then — again at the theatre: we were attending a performance of Russian folk-dance in Moscow's Palace of Congresses, a modern structure that seats about 6000! One of its most popular features is a cafeteria-like refreshment foyer on the uppermost level to which everyone scrambles during intermission.

Our seats were scattered throughout the orchestra section and I found myself separated from my buddies, next to a neatly-dressed, raven-haired lady in her thirties. Also by herself.

As I returned to my seat at the end of the intermission, I found her as if she hadn't moved at all. She turned to me and asked me something in Russian, of which I only grasped the one word that sounded like "cafeteria".

I looked at her and repeated "cafeteria"?; pointing upward and we both nodded. I had guessed correctly. She had asked me whether I had been up to see it. She also, somehow, got her next question across: Had I had anything to eat there? I shook my head. Whereupon, she instantly opened her bag, took out a package of cookies and offered me some. Again I seved up my "Spaseeba" with a big smile, but let her know "not hungry". I then ventured forth the information "Touristy—Amerikansky"! She understood. Gathering her thoughts for a second, she began to recite the names of eight or nine of our states. At random, and not badly pronounced.

I applauded her performance enthusiastically and, pointing to myself, said, "New York". Now she made an undulating gesture with her hand over her head and one near the floor. Another guess. Yes, she did want to know if I had come by plane or train or boat. After all, walking was out. I nodded happily, saying "Aeroflot". Now silence. We had run out of ideas for our charade game. Also, the lights dimmed and the second half of the program began.

The last note of the last number had not yet died down, the house was still dark, when my friendly neighbour turned to me, kissed me on the cheek, said "Dosvedanya" (Good-bye) and disappeared up the aisle!

If that doesn't make one feel warmly towards a people!

In the course of those two weeks, we all made many observations, formed many impressions and ideas about The People in the streets, hotels, restaurants, auditoriums, airports and train stations. Though with the throngs of tourists from within the Soviet Union, as well as neighbouring Socialist countries, it was hard to determine who was who.

But those were observations and speculations from a distance and, necessarily, one-sided. I found the direct person-to-person encounters, brief and few as they were, just as important and telling. I only wish there had been more of them. "Nyet" or "Da" — I enjoyed them all.

Pauline Tuttle doesn't look like the kind of woman you would expect to find driving around town in a day-glo-orange van with a bumpersticker on the rear end espousing the improbable dictum "Boogie till you puke."

But she does.

Nor does she look like the mother of a 15 year old teen age daughter.

But she is.

Besides filling the shoes of mother, wife, and rock 'n roller, Pauline also manages an equal business partner relationship with her husband in the running of their Seahorse Shell Shop on Sanibel. Then too, she is a sometimes craftsman of fine shell jewelry.

And, she is also Pauline The Night Queen of Super Q - 96 on your FM dial and one of the hottest rock radio stations in all of South Florida.

"Being a disc jockey was always sort of a secret wish - like wanting to be a millionaire," she laughs. But it was a secret wish that came true.

"We had a lot of friends that worked at Super Q and one day Bob (her husband) was talking to one of the jocks there about the lack of women on the air. The guy said they were trying to get more women and Bob said, 'Hey, that's something Pauline would like to do,' and the guy said, 'Well send her in.' And that's how it all started!"

But it took awhile for the Johnny Fever Syndrome to take hold.

"I'd been there for awhile and one night I asked the manager whether he thought I was ready to go on the air or not. His response was, 'There's only one way to find out; you're on the air Monday!' So I printed 'Sink Or Swim' on a little 3 x 5 card and sat it in front of me that night and just kept looking at it. When I got home that night Bob was in the yard blowing soap bubbles and we celebrated and it was wonderful. He had written down all the songs I played on a sheet for me to put in our scrapbook. It was great."

After six months with the station Pauline is now incurably hooked - but claims no aspirations towards rock 'n roll airwave stardom.

"I don't want to be a big personality. I just want to play good music," she maintains. "I'd rather go unnoticed - then I know I'm not grating on people!"

She does have fans however. The all night stock crews at Big John's grocery, 7-11's and Winn Dixie stores are some of her more ardent followers. A recent big thrill came when she introduced herself to a 7-11 night clerk whose immediate response was, "Oh, Pauline! You play good music!"

It's all a far cry from the future she might have predicted for herself six years ago.

The Tuttle's were living in Detroit where Pauline worked as a secretary in a life insurance office. For six years they spent every vacation on Sanibel and, just to keep in touch, had a northern subscription to the Fort Myers News Press.

"One day we were sitting in Detroit reading the Sunday News Press and freezing and we saw an ad for a shell-gift shop that was for sale. We called down and found out it was on Sanibel and that was even better, so we flew down, bought it, went back up north, gave notice at our jobs and put the house up for sale. And then we said, 'What have we done?' But it was too late. We didn't even have anywhere to live but we were optimistic!"

For five years Pauline and Bob ran the Seahorse Shell Shop together, and during that time she became something of an expert on shell jewelry.

"One day a lady brought in a pair of shell earrings she had bought at the store before we took over. They were broken and she wondered if anyone could fix them. I didn't know anything about jewelry but after I started looking at them I thought, 'Jeez, any dummy could fix this.' I told Bob I was going to try and make some stuff and I did - for eight hours a day for five years!"

Her jewelry has since won numerous awards at the annual shell fair and a showcase of her work has been displayed by the Conservation Foundation. But now there's little time for the painstaking work.

"I'm awfully busy now and I really love what I'm doing," she purrs in the voice that soothes area insomniacs' jangled nerves. "If we can stay here in Southwest Florida I'd be quite happy. This really feels like home."

Vandalism reported at Gulf-front resorts

In the latest of a series of incidents, acts of vandalism were reported last week at Song of the Sea, Sanibel Moorings and Sanibel Arms West. The damage at the three resorts was limited to ground lights broken along Gulf Drive.

One of the resort managers told the Sanibel Police Department, that he believed the damage had occurred after an illegal beach bonfire the previous evening. The Sanibel Police Department reports that the investigation is continuing.

Beach Access

Sanibel has miles of public Gulf-front beaches, any one of which is only minutes from your lodging. Lighthouse Point is a stretch of Federal land on the Eastern tip of Sanibel Island, and from there, the gulf beach is accessible again at the end of Donax Street, at Tarpon Bay Road, at Bowman's Beach Road (off Sanibel-Captiva Road) and at Turner's Beach, which is located at Blind Pass, between Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

The Right Side of the Law

CAMPING

Camping on the beach is prohibited and while everyone enjoys a beach fire, you'll have to get a permit to have one on a Sanibel public beach. The Fire Department on Palm Ridge Road will supply you with a fire permit for $1.00. In addition, you'll be required to make a $25.00 deposit, returnable the day after your beach party when the beach has been inspected for litter or debris. Make sure you clean the area thoroughly or you'll be out $25.00! Condo owners or managers may submit a letter to the Fire Department, acknowledging that they will assume responsibility for clean up after a fire in front of their buildings. The $25 deposit will be waived in those circumstances.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal (violators of the law are subject to a fine of up to $500, or up to 60 days in jail, or both.), but can be extremely dangerous. Alligators can run 45 m.p.h., so if you're close enough to feed an alligator, he's close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

FISHING

While no license is required for salt water fishing, fishing in fresh water ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license, available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $3.75.

Minimum legal lengths

Blue Fish	10 in.
Flounder	11 in.
Grouper	12 in.
Mackerel	12 in.
Mullet	12 in.
Pompano	10 in.
Red Fish	12 in.
Snook	18 in.
Trout	12 in.

SHELLING

The City of Sanibel Resolution limiting the taking of shells to 2 live shells per person per species is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take ANY live shells whatsoever.

SPEED LIMITS

The varying speed limits as one comes across the causeway may seem almost schizophrenic, but there is a very good reason for them. The stress and strain of traffic over the years has weakened the bridge supports (not to the point where there is any danger, fortunately) so in an effort to preserve the existing structure, the speed limits have been imposed.

They are to be taken seriously, for they are rigidly enforced by radar on a 24-hour a day basis by the Lee County Sheriff's Department. Observe them, please.

DOGGY DO'S...& DONT'S

If you're visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets. REMEMBER - wherever you are - CLEAN UP AFTER YOUR PET! The friendly reminder - "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" - applies to dogs, too. There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

BICYCLE RULES

If you're not used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out for it on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the island is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and a city ordinance combine to PROHIBIT PARKING OR DRIVING ON THE BIKE PATH. MOPEDS ARE NOT PERMITTED ON THE BIKE PATHS.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding. Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers. DRIVE SAFELY.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the island, Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30. This holds true for many island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Tall Australian pines shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Garden offer a variety of island delights.

At the intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island water colors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while other feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety - from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to post cards for the simple souvenir hunter and of course, for all, shells. Shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells .... the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

THIS WEEK

S.C.A. meets tonight

The January meeting will be held tonight (January 8) at 6:30 p.m.

All members and guests are cordially invited to attend. Bring a dish and join the fun.

The Kookie Band of Bayside Estates, Fort Myers Beach, directed by Elaine Buyck, will provide entertainment. Music and a variety show that will delight one and all.

Note for February: The dinner meeting usually scheduled for the first Tuesday will be changed to Tuesday, February 12-A Valentine Dance. Please reserve the date and watch for details.

Pirate

Playhouse

M'Liss (My Western Miss) gives another performance this Saturday night, January 12, at the Pirate Playhouse on Periwinkle Way. Jeannie McLoughlin plays the title role in this delightful story of California by Bret Harte, which was successfully dramatized by Virginia Mitchell.

Along with Jeannie, actors Allen Mainard, Judith Kennedy, Alan Pote, Jean Culpepper, Jack Roemer, Robin Pickens, John Wilcox, Ruth Hunter and Philip Hunter (who also directs) portray the colorful characters of the Sierras.

There is only one performance of M'Liss this weekend. Others are scheduled for February 2 and February 3.

Don't miss M'Liss this Saturday. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. The box office number is 472-2121.

Lions Club

The regular meeting of the Sanibel Captiva Lions Club was held at the Beachview Country Club last Wednesday with good attendance, including nine guests.

Bill Hite of the Sanibel Fire Department gave a short review of a recent occurrence where a guest at a local resort collapsed while on the tennis court. He was revived by the proper knowledge and use of Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR). Mr. Hite emphasized the need for a training mannikin to be used by the department in teaching firemen, police officers and citizens who wish to learn this lifesaving technique. He said that classes for all could be started as soon as the mannikin and materials were received. The course consists of eight hours of instruction. Many present indicated a deep interest in taking the instruction. The club pledged to help with the purchase of the mannikin.

The next regional Lions meeting will be held at Bartow on February 10 with 12 members signifying their intention to attend.

The next regular meeting will be held January 16 at the Beachview Country Club at 6:30 p.m.

Conservation

Landscaping Workshop

Energy conservation landscaping will be discussed at a consumer information workshop, tomorrow, Wednesday, January 9 at the Conservation Center on Sanibel-Captiva Road. Conservation Foundation executive director Dick Workman will lead the program which will investigate methods whereby proper landscaping can reduce home cooling costs.

It begins at 7 p.m. For registration and other information, call 472-2329.

Tuesdays at the Center

Sanibel Councilman Porter Goss will discuss "Hazard Mitigation" today, Tuesday, January 8 at the Conservation Center. Goss will discuss the effects of Hurricane Frederick on Dauphin Island and discuss the implications for Sanibel.

The program begins at 2 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults and $.50 for children. The programs are free to members of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Audubon

Society

A film narrated by Robert Redford, entitled "The Predators" will be presented at this week's meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, Thursday, January 10. The program will start at 8 p.m. in the Community Association Building.

The film, which is nationally known, explores the relationship between predator and prey. Scenes of bobcat, grizzly bears, coyote, otters, cougars, birds of prey and other wildlife are included in the film.

Audubon Chapter president Mark Westall will discuss local predators.

A beginning class on local birds will be held January 28 and February 4, with field trips slated for February 10, 18 and 25.

An advanced class will meet March 3 with a field trip scheduled for March 9.

Next Friday evening at Temple Beth-El, following Sabbath services, the documentary film, "The Hasidim" will be presented. The film depicts the Hasidic spirit and vitality that have been described in song and story by Bernard Malamud and Chaim Potok.

Following the film, there will be an Oneg Shabbat hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Barney Klein in honor of their fortieth wedding anniversary.

Sabbath services begin at 8 p.m. and all are welcome.

Temple Beth-El is located on Del Prado Blvd. in Cape Coral.

BIG

Arts

Presents

Symphony

Trio

Sanibel, Florida, December 31, 1979-The Symphony String Trio, a chamber ensemble comprised of members of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra will appear in concert at the Sanibel Community Association on Periwinkle Way, Sunday, January 20, beginning at 8 p.m.

The group will perform a varied program, including trios by Haydn, Beethoven and Dittersdorf, and two contemporary chamber works, the Trio, op. 201, by Alan Hovhaness, and Six Shakespearean Sketches by Gordon Jacob.

The members of the Symphony String Trio are experienced young professionals. Larrie Howard, the Trio's violinist, is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory where she received that institution's coveted Robertson Award. Currently a first violinist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, she has also served as a member of the Washington National Symphony and with the Oberlin Faculty String Quartet.

Violist Ronald Arron graduated from Northwestern University. A veteran orchestral musician, he has performed with the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra, the Florida Symphony Orchestra, the Richmond Symphony Orchestra, and the Chicago Chamber Orchestra. He has also distinguished himself as an instructor for the American Federation of Musicians Congress of Strings in Seattle, Washington.

Charles Snavely, a member of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra's cello section, is a graduate of Indiana University where he studied with Fritz Magg. He has been the recipient of several performance awards, including the Coleman Chamber Music Competition's prestigious Don G. Berry Award. A soloist as well as an orchestral and chamber musician, he has appeared in concert with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and the Indiana University Orchestra.

The Symphony String Trio's first appearance on Sanibel is sponsored by the Barrier Island Group for the Arts. Tickets for this, the third event in BIG Arts' premiere concert season, are priced at $4 and will go on sale January 10 at MacIntosh Bookstore, Schoolhouse Gallery and Art-Fac Gallery on Sanibel, and at the Treehouse Gift Shop on Captiva.

Other events to be sponsored in coming months by the Barrier Island Group for the Arts include "An Evening with John Cohen," filmmaker, musician and photographer on January 26; a recital by pianist Nicholas Constantinidis on March 10; and a lecture by animated filmmaker Eric Durst on March 31.

Four Sanibel residents under consideration for Planning Commission

by gwen stevenson

Four Sanibel residents have submitted their names for consideration for the vacancy left by the resignation of Commissioner Ray Fenton.

Christine Gault, who grew up on Sanibel, has submitted her resume for review. She holds a Master's degree from the University of Vermont and has worked on Sanibel as Assistant Manager of Tuesday's child. She is currently self-employed as a gardener-landscaper.

She has been a teacher and administrator in early childhood education and, for three years, was an Educational Specialist and Research Assistant for the Vermont Child Development Project.

She was the co-founder and chairperson of Community Housing Resources, Inc., a non-profit group dedicated to finding methods of providing moderate cost and energy efficient housing on Sanibel and Captiva.

William E. Hagerup retired as Corporate vice-president and president of North American Foods, after being with the company for 29 years. During the war, he spent three years in the Air Force, seeing action in the European Theatre.

He is a member of the Sanibel Vegetation Committee, the Lions Club, a Conservation Foundation volunteer and president of the Gulf Pines Property Owners Association. Hagerup says in his resume that he is "interested in the orderly development of Sanibel under the land use plan and dedicated to the preservation of wildlife and natural vegetation within the limits of the comprehensive land use plan".

Tim Stone, Associate at Fenton, White and Associates, has also submitted his name for consideration. Stone, who has been practicing architecture for 18 years, has lived on Sanibel for a year. He holds a Master's degree in Institutional Planning and a Bachelor of Architecture degree and a Bachelor's degree in English.

Stone is a member of the Sanibel Community Church, the Kiwanis Club and has worked closely with Community Housing and Resources, Inc.

Donna Kreager, who has also requested consideration, has lived on Sanibel for two years, working as a consultant with rainbow Paint and Wallpaper. Frequent trips to Michigan have precluded heavy involvement in community affairs but, she says, "Now that I am a full-time resident, I am looking forward to participating more fully in civic affairs".

She holds a bachelor of arts degree from Michigan state University in Human Environment and Design and worked for several years as a design consultant to several large construction firms. She is interested in being on the Commission because she feels that "a fresh outlook combined with some expertise could be helpful."

The City Council is expected to make its decision at the regular Council meeting January 15.

DUAL TAXATION

back out in the public light.

"I think the committee should confront Wanicka (Sheriff Frank Wanicka) one more time and give him another chance to compromise," Moore said.

"I think we should try one more time to deal with Wanicka at this level," Goss said. "If nothing comes of it this time, then I think we should go to the State Legislature and try to get the law changed, or at least get it clarified."

Goss referred to state law that says a county sheriff is a constitutional officer who has a right to patrol every area of the county he serves.

"This is a good time to bring up the issue again," Goss said. "Tax time is rolling around, and the people are going to want answers to their questions of where their tax dollars are going."

Goss said he could see ahead to a time with the county government will be no more than a shell that houses individual

cities with their own governments to meet their own needs.

"The county government is becoming anachronistic," he said. "I think they are beginning to realize this and are resisting the cities' efforts to reduce the county's importance in getting things done."

"As the cities grow, we are becoming more efficient and capable of handling our own problems without running to the county every time we need something. The county simply doesn't want to reduce its scope and control," he said.

Moore agreed, saying the county's resistance is exactly why the cities must be more vocal than ever before in their effort to eliminate dual taxation.

Pending approval of each city's councilmembers, the new, combined dual taxation committee will be made of nine members with the qualifications to monitor the county and get in on the county budget process at the ground level to prevent further cases of dual taxation.

PLANNERS from page one

Fenton said that he felt the discussion really boiled down to two items for him: traffic and aesthetics. Traffic, he suggested, could be controlled by controlling parking areas. Fenton suggested that areas could be broken into three categories: essential items, like food and drugs which would be assigned the most parking; non-essential items, like books, banks and businesses, which would have fewer parking spots allocated, and specialized or resort needs, which would have almost no parking area. Awarding the essential service areas with the most number of parking spots would force the non-essential and gift areas to cluster around the essential services. "It might also force the commercial people to do something about mass transit," he said.

Fenton's second point was aesthetics. "I feel bad about commercial development because it looks bad," he said. Fenton's idea to alleviate the problem was to implement development standards that would improve the appearance of commercial development. He suggested that certain criteria might be developed so that a parcel with a 100 foot width had a depth limit. "If you require a 20 foot vegetation buffer between the road and the parking lot," he said, "you could give the developer some credit in his square footage allowance because in 10 years, you won't be able to see the buildings anyway."

Sanibel resident Paul Howe suggested that the Commissioners might consider an old Lee County zoning category "general use", in which land was held until a specific plan was presented and approval granted based on community needs at the time. Howe also suggested that a joint workshop with the City Council was in order.

Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham appointed Manchester and Workman to work with Bob Duane in summarizing yesterday's discussion for presentation at next Monday's meeting.
