First jewel theft arrest made

By Pat Harmel

Members of the Sanibel Police Department have apprehended a man they believe was involved in a $250,000 jewel heist that occurred early last Thursday evening on Sanibel.

William Bryant Caldwell, 39, of Fort Myers was arrested Sunday evening by Sanibel police officers and charged with concealing stolen property. Several pieces of jewelry, including a 13 carat diamond ring, were recovered.

According to sources, Mrs. Jane Carter, of Isabel Drive on Sanibel, entered her home last Thursday evening shortly before 6 p.m. to find a man, wearing a stocking mask and armed with a gun, waiting for her inside the house.

According to police officials, the man apparently gained entry by prying open a sliding glass door.

The burglar had Mrs. Carter lie down on the kitchen floor and then tied her hands with stockings. After removing the rings from her fingers, he reportedly told her, "I know you've got a big stone. Where is it?" When Mrs. Carter did not immediately reply, the man allegedly began to threaten her and then took her into the bedroom, where she finally told him the ring was.

After taking the 13 carat ring, the intruder then reportedly laid the woman face down on a couch and tied up her feet, warning her not to move for 10 to 15 minutes.

After the burglar had left, the woman was able to free one hand and untie her feet. She then ran to a neighbor's house for help.

According to Sgt. Ray Rhodes, the apprehension of Caldwell was the result of a joint effort between the entire Sanibel Police Department, concerned Island residents and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

Investigation into the incident is continuing and other arrests may be forthcoming.

Council opposes county park tax

By Roxanna Motchan

Sanibel's City Councilmembers indicated last week that they were unhappy with the proposed ad valorem tax millage increase which would fund parks and recreational facilities in Lee County.

The tax increase, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mill yearly for 10 years, would generate approximately \$38,890,000.

The tax is based on property value, not population - the estimated growth predicted for Lee County is 7.5 per cent each year. Each year, the revenues from the tax would be divided into five categories, and the money split according to this formula: 40 per cent of the revenue to be used for acquisition and development of 10 area parks, including Turner Beach on Sanibel; 20 per cent returned to each individual planning district to be used at their discretion with the approval of the County; 15 per cent of the tax money would be used for libraries; 10 per cent of the dollar intake for bike paths and 15 per cent for operation and maintenance.

This plan has been approved by the Lee County Community Services Advisory Committee, which is comprised of 15 representatives from throughout Lee County. (Resident Conrad Lickel is Sanibel's representative.) The proposed tax increase has also been supported by the cities of Cape Coral and Fort Myers.

Bill Hammond, Lee County Community Services Director, indicated to Council that the program was designed with "a main factor of flexibility. Our main intent is to see everyone receives their fair share."

Councilmember Zee Butler said, "I have one basic question: what are you really proposing? Are you trying to Mickey Mouse this thing around and try to give little pieces out in a carrot-and-stick operation?"

Hammond answered, "We're trying to play catch-up. We are realizing we are deficient in many areas. We should have been in this position with regard to County park facilities 10 years ago."

"I have one basic question: what are you really proposing? Are you trying to Mickey Mouse this thing around and try to give little pieces out in a carrot and stick operation?"

Butler told Hammond that the categories to receive the proposed tax money were already being actively pursued on Sanibel with the City's money. She cited libraries and bike paths as examples. "It seems to me that if you really want to acquire regional parks you will concentrate strictly on that," she said.

"I have trouble with getting us locked into a millage increase for 10 years because I don't know if you're asking for 38 million from the voters or a blank check," Butler continued. "You've only figured in a 7.5 per cent increase in population. Nothing in here says what you'll use the money for if there is an increase in population. I'm very wary."

Councilman Duane White also seemed concerned over the proposal. "I'm willing to say to you today that the voters of Lee County will never support this, and I will fight you teeth and toenail unless you provide a definite program and project detailing all the specifics," he said.

"Your big job is to come back with an understandable project that the people will understand," he added.

Mike Roeder, Lee County Planning Director, told the Council, "I think this is a detailed project, and I don't know how much more detailed we could get until we actually get into it."

Hammond assured the Council, "I think with the district representatives, and the five member board which will be established to govern the distribution of monies, I think there will be enough checks and balances to make it come off."

Resident Gordon Kiddoo said, "This thing won't sell because residents of this Island have no confidence in County government. We now have a competent government. I'm not prepared to turn over my money to be administered in a half-baked program. The County should get on with running their own programs."

Planning Commissioner Judy Workman reminded the Council that the Planning Commission had endorsed the program and recommended that the City Council endorse it.

Conrad Lickel, Sanibel's representative to the Community Services Advisory Committee said, "Between now and the time this list becomes a question on a referendum there's tremendous information which will be distributed so the individual voter will be knowledgeable and will be able to vote with confidence."

The tax is not expected to go to public referendum until the spring or fall of 1981. In the meantime, petitions must be circulated and at least 5,200 signatures gathered indicating Lee County residents' interest in having it go to public referendum.

Estuaries ownership won't be determined until '81

By Bill Scheel

The determination of who is the rightful owner of over 5,000 acres of the "Estuaries" development site will probably have to wait until the Florida Supreme Court decides if the city of up to 73,000 people should be allowed, according to the circuit court judge handling the case.

The Honorable Thomas Reese, who is hearing the mortgage foreclosure action against Estuary Properties, Inc., has said that the high court ruling is necessary because of claims by Estuary Properties that the State of Florida and Lee County have taken possession of the property through "inverse condemnation."

On May 18, 1978 trustees for the property in question known as the "Windsor Tract," sued Estuary Properties, alleging that $940,000 in mortgage payments were never made. But last February the company responded by accusing the government of "taking" the land by not allowing the development, and said the State broke a 1970 promise which would have allowed the dredging of canals through environmentally sensitive mangroves.

Reese's statement means it could be 1981 before ownership of the 5,000 acres is determined. The Florida Supreme Court is presently considering whether the State and County must be forced to issue development permits for the Estuaries, and a ruling is not expected for at least six months.

Periwinkle Island

The small traffic island at the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Palm Ridge Road has been transformed from a weed bed to a patch of periwinkles.

The idea for the project originated with Mary Jane Preston who asked Public Works Director Gary Price if she could do some brightening up on the island.

Price agreed to roto-till the island while Mrs. Preston rounded up neighbors and periwinkles that were planted last Thursday morning.

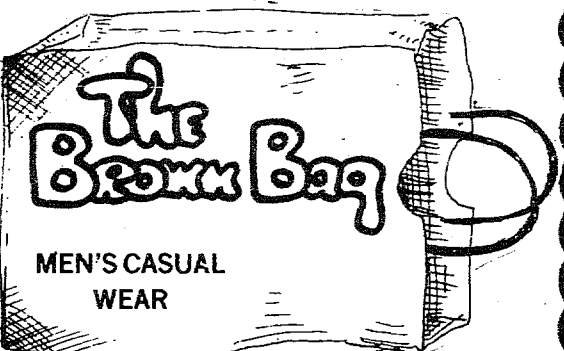

The current Photographers' Gallery exhibit of experimental photographic works by nine graduate students from the Rochester Institute of Technology blurs the line between photography and

Cars, cars, cars

Captiva Island, long known for its collection of unusual personalities, also has a variety of unusual cars.

Dick Butze and two friends bought an old Mercury when they moved to Captiva. "It was a big old car, a Parklane, I think," Butze says. "We called it the 'Squad Car.'"

"Well, finally it expired and we decided to get a bus. So, out of respect for the old 'Squad Car,' we called this one the 'Squid Car.' It seemed appropriate since we're surrounded by water."

"Every little boy wanted to have his own fire truck," says Jamie Farquharson of his reasoning for buying one. "It's a 1926 Seagrave. I purchased it from a dealer on Fort Myers Beach."

Farquharson's bright red fire truck no longer runs or pumps water, but he doesn't care. Standing proudly by it, Jamie and Katie Farquharson describe the next step: paint it with pin-stripes and, of course, "The Bubble Room, Captiva, Florida."

Captiva architect George Tuttle was driving around one day and saw a lot full of antique cars for sale. He bought a 1929 Hupmobile and became hooked on classics. Since that time, he has added a 1940 Lincoln Continental and a 1963 Studebaker Avanti to his corral.

All of Tuttle's cars are completely restored and in remarkable condition.

Tuttle says he gets a real thrill out of his expensive hobby. "I recently went to a Hupmobile show, and to see 20 or 30 Hupmobiles, all restored, was quite a sight."

"Slick" dies

"Slick," the timberwolf that won the hearts of thousands, is dead.

The goodwill ambassador to the wolf world who appeared at the Sanibel Community Association last January was killed by a county dog warden recently in Ontario County, N.Y.

According to a report in the Lake Region Audubon Society Newsletter, Slick was running loose and made his way from owner John Harris' yard to a neighboring farm. The farmer reportedly called the sheriff who summoned the warden.

The report said that Slick had not bared his teeth nor shown signs of viciousness prior to the shooting. The warden tried to cover up the incident, the report claimed, by having Slick's body incinerated at a local veterinarian's office before an attempt was made to notify the owner.

Shortly after the incident, John Harris was summoned to court to face charges of failure to protect the public from an attack by a wild animal. Harris countered with a $1 million suit, the results of which are pending.

When Harris brought Slick to Sanibel last year, over 300 people howled to the good-natured wolf in an attempt to get him to howl back. Slick remained silent then, as he now will forever.

Fishing Derby finals

There were 178 fish entered in the 1980 Fishing Derby and records were set in all categories except snook. The 1979 entry of 31½ lbs. still stands in the snook category.

The Grand prize winners for the 1980 Fishing Derby are:

Snook: 28 lbs. - Eric Schmidt, age 13, Fort Myers Beach, Florida; winner of the Junior Angler Category - one week's lodging for two at Casa Ybel Beach and Racquet Club.

- 27 lbs. - Stephen Sercombe, Winter Haven, Florida; winner of the Snook Category - lodging for two at South Seas

Plantation Resort for three days and two nights.

Redfish: 23½ lbs. - Fred McConnell, Sanibel, Florida; one week's lodging for two at the Surf Rider Motel.

Spotted Seatrout: 8 lbs. - William Steve Childs, Pickens, South Carolina; one week's lodging for two at the Song of the Sea Motel.

Cobia: 59 lbs. - Russell J. Maynard, Rock Falls, Illinois; one week's lodging for two at Sundial.

Firewatch

It was June 24 and a peaceful evening on Arcadia's Peace River. Sanibel's Traucht family was spending a vacation at the KOA campground, and seven-year-old Duffy Traucht was outside the tent playing with his trucks. Suddenly, he ran inside.

"Dad, dad, there's a fire!" Duffy exclaimed. Thom Traucht quickly ran outside to see a flatbed truck filled with trash and nine-foot flames.

"It probably started when they dumped the trash into the truck," Traucht said, "and some hot coals got dumped in with it."

Duffy's quick thinking saved more than a truck and possible brush fire, though. There was a barn filled with horses sitting dangerously close to the truck.

Jason LaRose of Lakeland may be one of the youngest shellers ever to find a junonia. The seven year old came across the rare shell in about a foot and a half of water in the Gulf last week near the Shalimar Motel.

Quote

A copy of the following letter was given to the Islander for publication:

Henry Dean, Esq., Hearing Officer
Florida Dept. of Natural Resources
202 Blount St., Tallahassee, Fla. 32301

Dear Sir:

One of our weekly newspapers, on July 3rd, reported in some detail on your recommendations to the Governor and Cabinet on the proposed beach renourishment project on Captiva Island.

The press account seemingly was based upon a copy of your "12 page report" made available to them. I was chagrined that our other newspaper and myself were not made privy to it. You will recall that my brief testimony at the May 28th public hearing was uniquely confined to the advertised topic - establishment of the erosion control line required by Section 161.161 F.S.

The thrust of my presentation was the preservation of the integrity of Florida's splendid sovereignty land policy. That has been the well known goal of extensive correspondence with DNR and the former Coastal Coordinating Council for the past

Accordingly, it was most disappointing that no mention was made of the validity of my suggestion that the application of the equitable ownership vesting of the artificially accreted land in this case was inappropriate. You will recall that I urged that such a provision in Chapter 161.141 F.S. failed to recognize the valid distinction between the two types of artificial accretions made by the Florida Court in the Sidenor v. Pensacola case as discussed in Professor Maloney's 1973 report to DNR.

It is my continuing belief that, in light of that Court ruling, the type of artificial accretion involved in the Captiva case can vest title to it only in the State. I also feel that there is insufficient established "public benefit" involved in this particular instance to warrant the alienation of that sovereign land - in accord with the Florida Constitution.

Because of the imminent July 15th date set for the Cabinet's consideration of your recommendations, a copy of this letter is being furnished directly to the Governor for relay to the Cabinet.

Your courtesy to me at the May 28th

In your opinion hearing is deeply appreciated.

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

Accessibility: major barrier to handicapped

By George Christensen

Last week we addressed accessibility to food establishments by the handicapped for one of their basic needs, food. This week we will discuss the accessibility to restaurants by the handicapped, for food that is served by a waiter or obtained from a buffet table. We do not address the quality of food or the service provided by the many fine restaurants mentioned or not mentioned here. If the restaurant is not mentioned it usually means they have an unpaved parking area that is unsuitable for the handicapped, or there is an elevation change between the parking area and the entrance and the restaurant, or the handicapped person is unable to reach the buffet table to make food selections of personal choice. These obstacles are of little concern to people without physical impairments, but they are a matter of great concern to people in wheelchairs.

The most distressing problem barring handicapped people from areas that provide meals, continues to be small elevation changes at ramps or at doorways. These elevation changes are usually less than four inches between surfaces and would not be noticed by the average person. It seems ironic that the general public, when polled, are seemingly sympathetic and aware of these problems, yet many of these elevation changes could be corrected for a nominal sum, probably for a lot less than an increase in premiums caused by an injury.

The other access problems preventing accessibility to the handicapped are unpaved handicapped parking spaces, entrance doors that do not open automatically, and ramps that have too great a pitch. Realistically, these conditions will not improve until we show the economic feasibility of such improvements, or until the government adopts a uniform building standard, such as: ANSI 117.11. You can hasten the day when architectural barriers to the handicapped are eliminated by urging your Congressional representatives and local Council people to adopt this single uniform standard.

We have visited or eaten at every establishment serving food on Sanibel and Captiva. The restaurant we selected to discuss is Sundial because it happens to have all the necessities that provide good accessibility without assistance to the handicapped.

We found the parking area fully paved and without elevation changes. Because handicapped people have a tremendous mobility problem, we would suggest that the management of Sundial consider designating a handicapped parking area adjacent to the walkway leading to the elevator. This minimal cost provision will enhance the visit of the handicapped to this fine restaurant.

The walkway at ground level, to the right of the automobile ramp, is paved and without elevation changes. You can proceed to the end of this walkway and turn left through the arch to the elevator on the right. The automatic door of the elevator serves as the entrance door to the establishment.

Pressing button number two on the elevator panel will cause the elevator to activate and take you to the restaurant level. Incidentally, the elevator button number is also in braille to aid the blind. Two turns to the right from the elevator brings you to the hostess, who will seat you at a table overlooking the Gulf of Mexico. If a buffet is being served you may select your meal from the buffet table, otherwise you may select food from the menu. The ambience of this fine restaurant is a great morale booster for my Rotary Ann who happens to be handicapped. In good conscience we recommend the Sundial Restaurant, as it meets all the accessibility requirements of the handicapped.

There are other fine restaurants available to the handicapped - but they all have architectural barriers that make other assistance to the handicapped a necessity. They would require assistance to open doors and-or to cross unpaved parking areas to the restaurant doors at the following establishments: Beachview Country Club, Coconut Grove, Cafe Orleans, Scottys' Pub, Tween Waters Inn, The Timbers, The Quarter Deck, and The French Quarter.

There are many good restaurants on Sanibel and Captiva that do not meet the criteria for accessibility by the handicapped. Frankly, we patronize these places and will continue to do so as long as we can enter them safely, enjoy the food and the ambience of the establishment. It is not our purpose to embarrass anyone into supplying access to their establishment for the handicapped. Hopefully, the best examples of accessibility in the areas of food, clothing, shelter and places of worship will first of all inform, and then motivate business people in these areas to correct conditions barring the handicapped where and when it proves to make good economic sense.

If you have questions concerning these articles please call George J. Christensen at 472-2086.

Shelling Tips

By Mike Fuery

There's a shelling joke going around that claims there are two good places to shell in the world: one is Sanibel Island and the other is the Florida-Georgia borderline - that's where the live shells get dumped after eight hours of riding in a can in the trunk of the car.

There is another joke about shelling that says the maids who clean up the Island motel rooms have the best collections imaginable. A shell that looks so beautiful after long hours of searching sometimes just doesn't fit into the suitcase when the "big bird" takes off for Chicago.

Shelling is a strange hobby. It's a lot like rock hunting. You get the casual collectors and off-and-on collectors and then those who live just to walk a beach and find something that doesn't match their hundreds of shells back home.

I think that the funniest people are the husbands who don't understand what it's all about. They'll sit impatiently under the shade of a tree while their wives inspect every inch of shell along a two-mile walk. The husband of a rock hound will know exactly what I'm talking about.

Some of the best shellers I have ever worked with are little girls around 10 or 12 years old. They are serious, studious and close to the beach in stature. In other words, they can see shells that most of us can't pick out of a shell mound. Little boys of that age are happier looking at the water, checking out the bordering beach and so on, but your best shellers every time will be the tiny gals.

While I'm thinking of it, I want to relate a story told to me a couple of weeks ago by a fella who operates a shell shop in Northern Florida.

He said that he had been visiting Sanibel and Captiva Islands for twenty-some years and never failed to marvel at the shells, even though he sold hundreds of shells in his shop each week.

I believe that the two stories he told me will amuse you. The first was that years ago he used to scoop up the most common of shells on the beaches while he vacationed here and then put them in paper cups in his shop. Nothing fancy here, just old worn clam shells and the like, but he could sell all he wanted to for 65 cents a cup.

Of course I was interested in his collector shells and most of them were imported from the South Seas area of the Pacific. The gaudy, big and bright shells still come from that area of the world, while our local collector shells are smaller, but just as bright. It all depends upon what you consider valuable for your collection.

A couple of weeks ago I mentioned skin diving for shells along the surf line, and it really paid off for a family out with me the other day. It was one of those very calm days when there was nothing coming up on the high beaches. The shells can't get to where most shellers walk without a shove from a few waves. However, you can find a great number of shells in about two feet of water just where the beach dips down a foot or so. Anyway, these people snorkeled along the surf line, picking up various shells like nutmegs, naticas, olives and shark eyes. It really works on calm days and besides, it's great exercise.

If possible, go to the beaches early in the morning, and remember the shelling limit of two live shells per species, per person. Enjoy the beaches!

 For Captiva Island Gulf side, subtract 30 minutes from each high tide, and subtract hour and 16 minutes for each low tide.
 For Captiva Island, Pine Island Sound (Bay) side, add 1 hour and four minutes for each high tide and add 52 minutes for each low tide.
 In between these points, gulf or bay, guesstimate and have good fishing and or shelling.

On the water

by Capt. Mike Fuery

First, you won't even notice the difference between a well made regular fiberglass rod and an UglyStik unless you are "still" fishing. I believe that the UglyStik was developed for fresh water bass fishing more than for saltwater use. Bass fishermen are used to sitting motionless for hours while their shiner wanders around on the bottom waiting to be eaten by a big bass. When still fishing on the bottom like that, the graphite rod is superior. But when fishing and casting for, say, trout on the grass flats, you really don't need that super sensitivity that you can pay so much extra for in a rod.

Another thing I have found with the new material rods is that the tips are just too light for saltwater use where the angler has to set the hook in a snook 70 feet from the boat. There are some models of special rods which are thick enough, of course, but again the marketing seems to be aimed at slim tipped fresh water use and not what you're after for brine water fishing.

The way that fishing rod materials are advancing, baron will be replaced by something even more special for the fishermen, so when it comes to buying that new rod keep in mind the many changes and select something which will give you all around fishing performance.

The day of the quality $10 fishing rod is about over.

It used to be that a fisherman could get a fairly good outfit for $20, but with changes in rod making over the past year or so, you had better get ready to pay more.

Modern fiberglass manufacturing techniques have given fishermen some of the most exciting advances in rod sensitivity and strength that could ever be expected from a couple ounces of petroleum derivative.

A couple of my fishing rods are three years old and out of date compared to what's on the market now. I imagine that you have an old favorite rod around the house, and this isn't meant to make you think that you need to run out and replace it with a "miracle" rod. Keep those special rods, but when it comes time to get into the market here's some of the things to look for.

BARON. You'll hear a lot about this new type of material not only in rod making, but in everything from antenna to skiing equipment. It's basically the next step in the advancement of sophisticated fiberglass materials and, for its weight, is one of the toughest rods you can buy.

I had my first experience with the baron rods several years ago when a man on my charter boat brought one along for snook fishing. Rods are rods, right? That was my feeling until I held one of my rods in one hand and a baron in the other as we drifted over the rough sand bottom of Redfish Pass. No doubt about it, the baron offered much more sensitivity.

Now for the bad part. That particular baron rod was made by Browning, of Utah, and sold somewhere in the vicinity of $125. I had a fella from K-Mart out the other day who said his stores will carry some of the baron models for around $80 or less, depending on who makes the models selected.

There is another material used for fishing rods called graphite and, until a year or so ago, it was considered the ultimate material in making light, strong fishing rods. The Shakespeare Company has marketed thousands of these rods called "UglyStiks" and it seems that they will go right on selling for many years to come.

I have two uglystik rods and like them both very much. But, before you plunk down your $40-$60 for one, let me give you a couple of observations on these black rods with clear glass tips.

Traucht keeps E.S.I. swinging

By Bill Motchan

Thom Traucht cringes, thinking about his first year as coach of the E.S.I. Swingers.

"We were getting beaten 20-5 in a lot of games and we finished the season second to last," he admits.

Lately, however, the Swingers have become the powerhouse of the Women's Division of the Sanibel Softball League. With four players who consistently put the ball over the fence, the Swingers' bats are the hottest around.

They have, in fact, put two championships back to back. Formerly the Sea Fillies, the Swingers grabbed the title in 1979's Noseeum Classic, the championship series that ends the season.

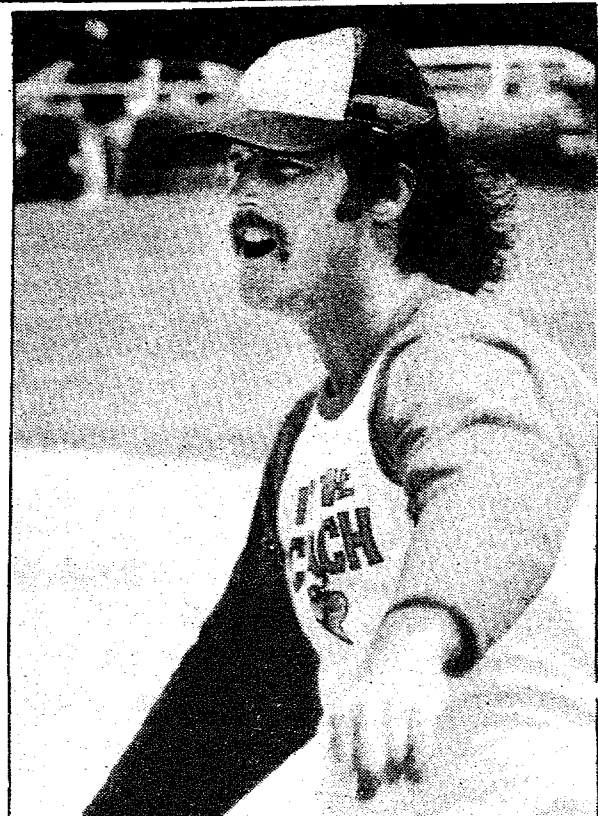

Taking up where they left off, the Swingers started 1980 off with a bang, knocking off the Periwinkle Players to take the Old Sports for Youth Sports Tournament. The Swingers are definitely the team to beat.

"Beginning with the Old Sports Tournament," Traucht said, "We won seven games in a row. Then we lost to the Scotty's and Supremes, but the scores of those two games were very close."

Traucht, a long-time sports enthusiast, has played softball and college football. He began coaching with a Little League team in his hometown of Mount Vernon, Ohio. Who's easier to coach, kids or girls?

Pausing, Traucht answers the women are probably tougher. They are more sensitive to criticism, he said, but it's because they want to do the best they can. "When they make a mistake, I try to tell them why they did," he said. "There are some girls new to the team, and they need a little guidance."

Working together as a team is an important goal, Traucht believes. "Once in a while, we'll meet at our house and just talk. A close-knit team is a championship team."

Thom tries his best to motivate the team to win. "We've always gone with 'play as well as you can and have fun,' but it's more fun when you win," he said.

Most coaches will agree their jobs are time consuming and nerve-racking. Why does Thom do it? "The satisfaction of teaching," he said, "and having someone appreciate being taught."

Cablevision controversy

By Roxanna Motchan

City Manager Bernie Murphy addressed Councilmembers last week regarding Cablevision service on Sanibel, saying, "I'm satisfied that a letter written by William Ryan (Vice President and General Manager of Palmer Cablevision) goes a long way to answering a lot of complaints."

Councilmembers disagreed, however, and expressed unhappiness with the Palmer Cablevision service on the Island and according to Councilmember Zee Butler "people are going to pull out."

Ryan's letter, dated June 11, stated that "each customer complaint has been addressed." He went on to explain each customer's complaint and how the problem had been rectified. Most of the complaints centered around Channel 3's poor reception.

Ryan also indicated in his letter that "by the time you receive this letter, the pick-up facilities atop the 500 ft. Pine Island Tower will have been inspected again to confirm that nothing has deteriorated since its last inspection a few months ago."

A computer prepared study is also being conducted on the reception parameters that can be expected. However, Ryan indicated if the computer report is negative, Palmer Cablevision is prepared to construct additional microwave facilities to bring in WPBT, Channel 2 Public Broadcasting located in Miami, to replace WEDU.

However, Ryan could not be specific as to the time frame of implementation, as the project will require frequency coordination, an application to the FCC, and ordering equipment.

Councilmember Zee Butler expressed concern that no specific time frame had been established.

"I feel the whole thing is a runaround," Councilman Duane White charged. "The people on Sanibel are not getting what they pay for. I'm tired of the complaints, and I feel an investigation should be instigated."

Murphy assured the Council, "I will ask him to be more precise and provide a time schedule," adding, "I think we're on the right track with them."

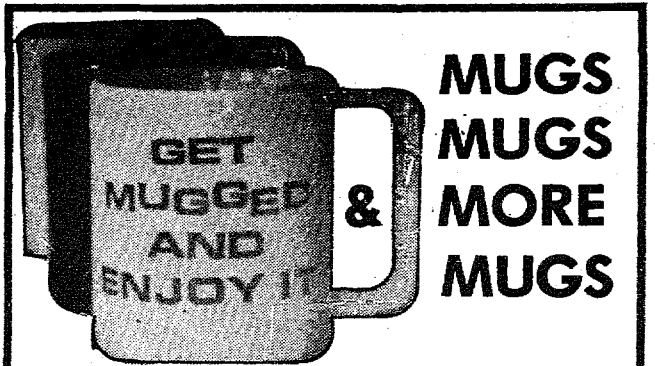

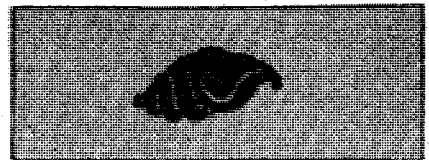

Price appointed to Housing Committee

Sanibel resident Nancy Price was unanimously appointed to the Housing Committee at last week's Council meeting, filling one of two vacancies on the Committee.

Housing Committee Chairman Zee Butler applauded Ms. Price's appointment, saying, "Nancy has extensive experience in this area and I feel she would be a great asset."

The remaining position will be filled at a future Council meeting.

Carol Nix and the I

Eula Nix and her band of cohorts rambled through the streets of Sanibel last Friday to win the the Lions Club Jul Fourth Road Rally. Finishing with 451 out of a possible 500 points, Nix's team won $100.

Mike Bradley shot a two-under par 60 to win the Lions Club Fourth of July Golf Tournament. Coming in behind Bradley for low gross score were Hap Personette (62) and

Ken Zeigler

T. Kendricks (67).

Low net honors went to Bob Bartdal (62), B. Lawrence (63) and Roger Osborn (63). The longest drive of the tournament was delivered by Hap Personette and the closest to the hole award went to Mike Bradley, who put his drive two feet, six inches from the flagstick. The "happy hacker" award (worst score) was accepted by Carl Wagner.

32 tennis players topped off their 4th of July weekend by playing in Sundial's Mixed Doubles Round Robin Tennis Tournament Saturday.

The father and daughter team of Ed and Kara Cassavell took top honors finishing in first place, they were followed, in second, by Sharon Wyckoff and Bud Will. Two teams shared the third position. The teams of June and Jerry Muench, and Kerri and Tom Kendrick tied for third.

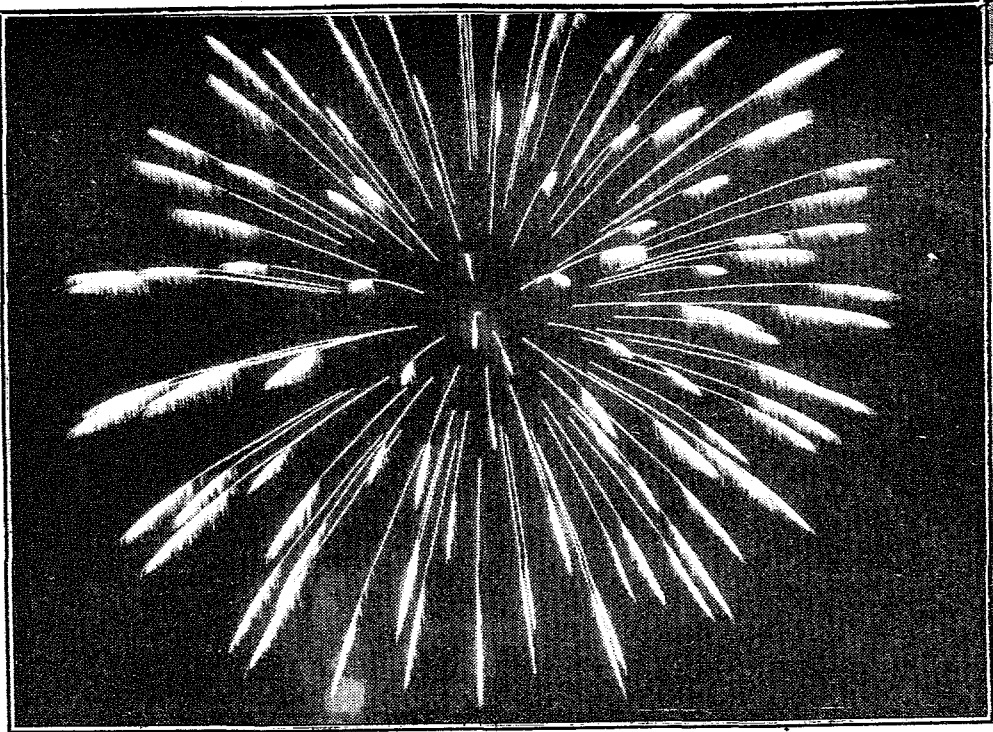

Hap Personette and Roger Osborn hit the greens.

Kaboom! - The sky opened, thunder and lightning shot out and all across Sanibel Island, people ran for shelter, carefully balancing their paper cups and plates.

The Fourth of July began as a beautiful breezy summer day, but by 5 p.m., a lot of barbecued chicken was soggy.

It wasn't a big surprise, though. The clouds had been gathering together in an ominous dark formation for over an hour. The air was thick and muggy.

"What are these things!" asked an exasperated picnicker at the Dunes Lions Club celebration.

"Well, they're not noseums, because I can see them," another voice responded, "so they must be seeums."

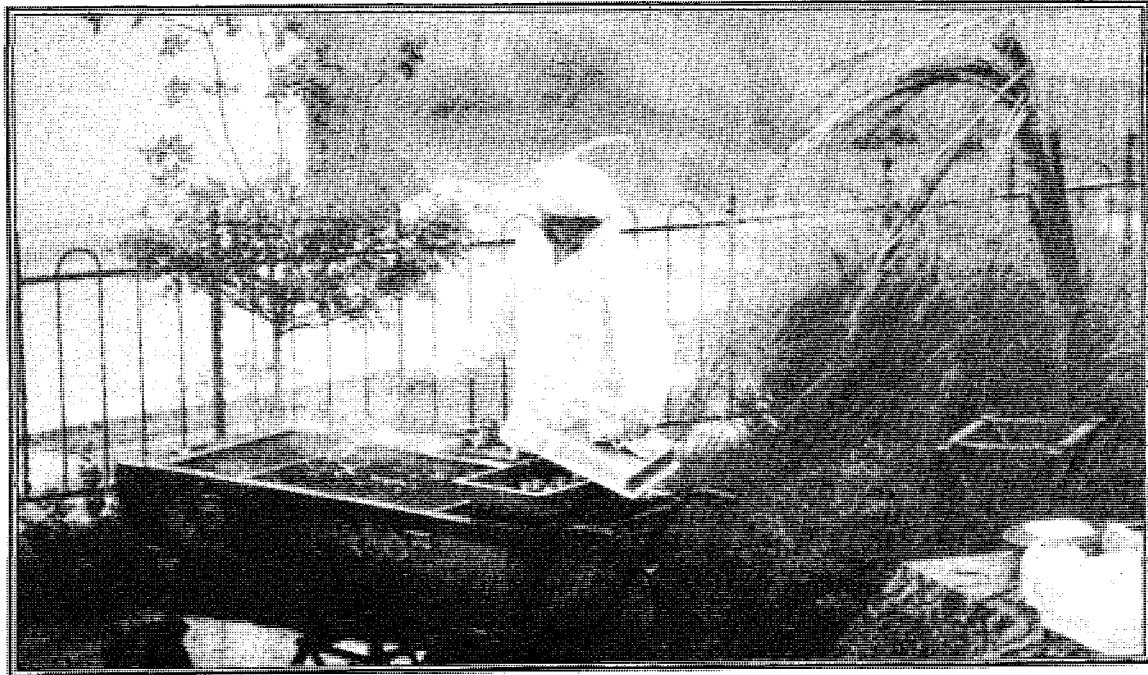

Over at Casa Ybel resort, guests were enjoying 50 cent beers and free bourbon punch. The sky darkened and the rains came.

"Bleep!" muttered Doug Quimby as he transferred a barbecue-pit load of bratwurst into a container.

"Welcome to Florida," sang out Sid (The Kid) Kleiner, the banjo player livening up the wet crowd after it moved into the Thistle Lodge Lounge.

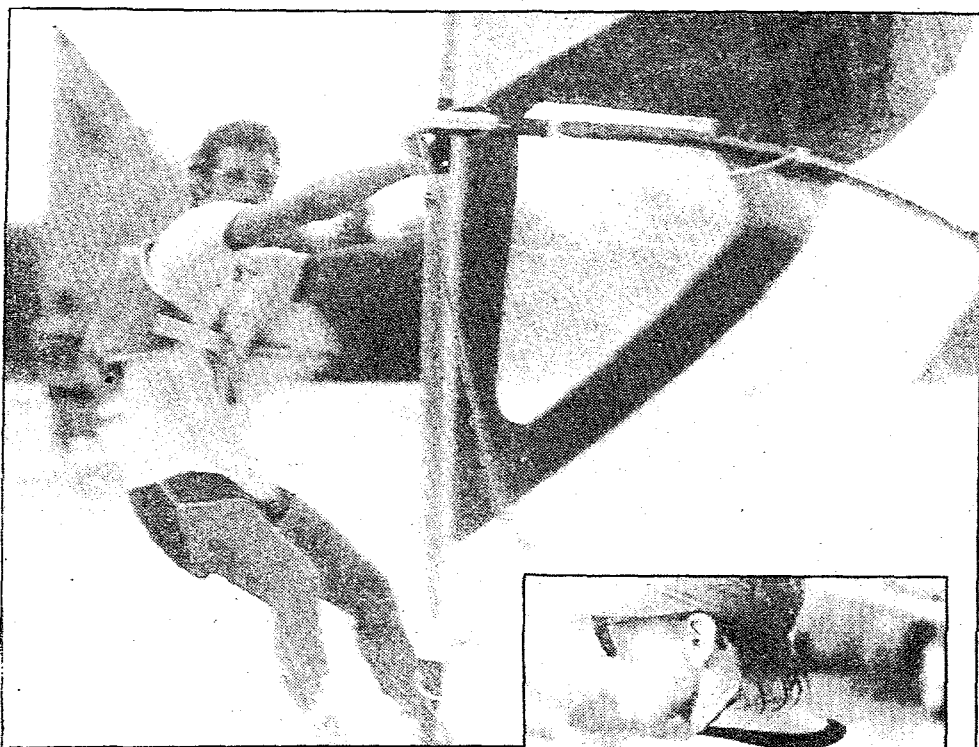

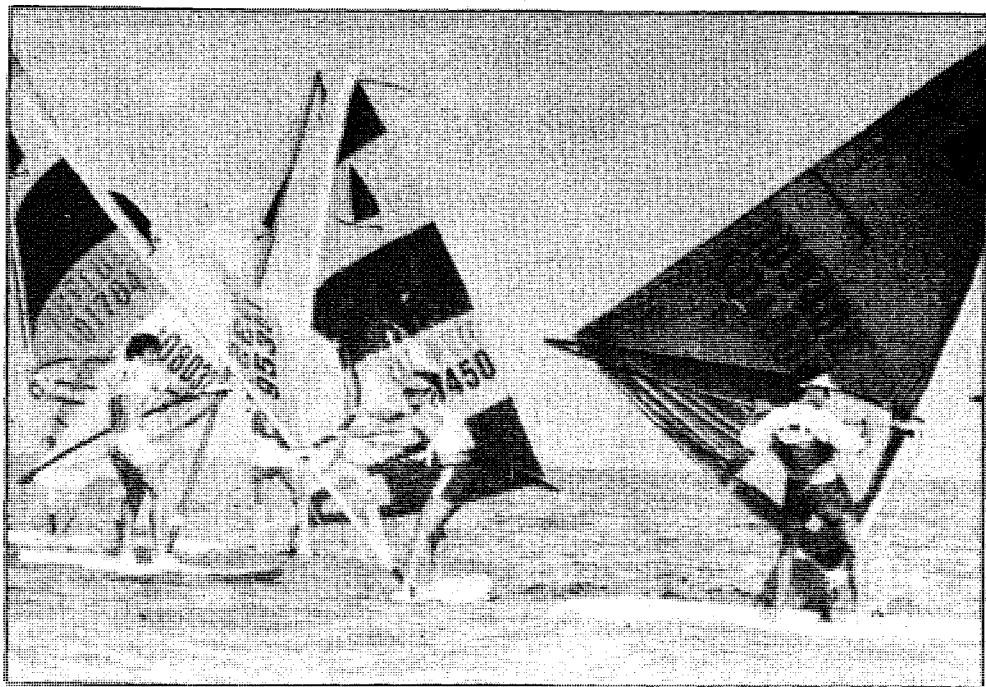

Inside, the rain was quickly forgotten as Kleiner persuaded the guests to sing-along. Amidst the crowd, Islander Editor Pat Harmel grabbed a tray and brought drinks to her table.

"Waitress, oh waitress," a guest summoned her, "could you please get us a couple of drinks?"

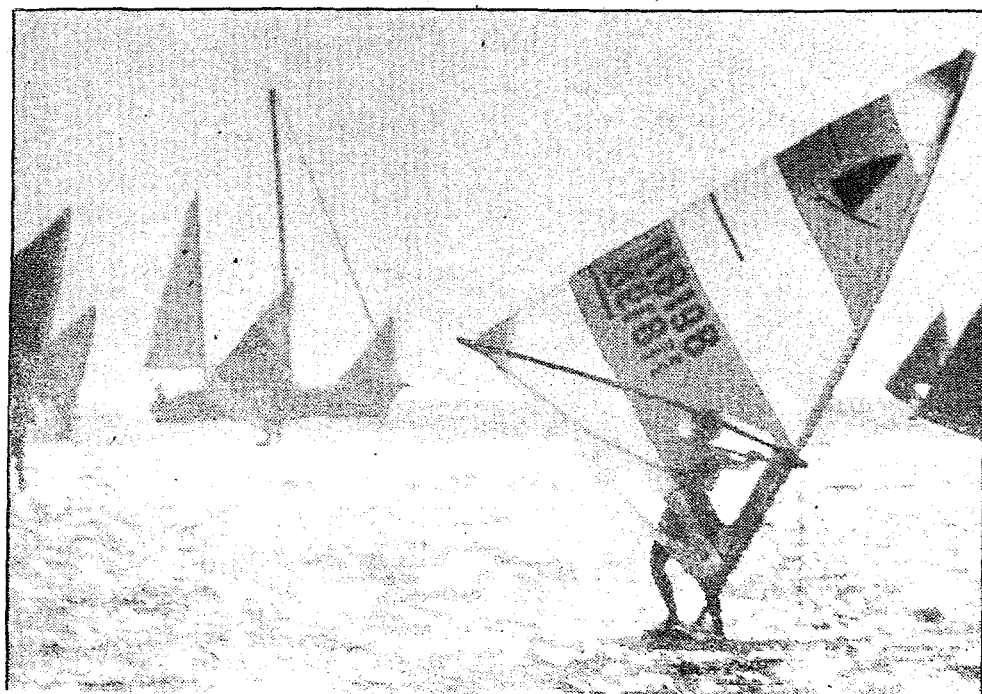

Doug Quimby sizzles through the storm.

Windsurfing championships

By Bill Motchan

"I came here to windsurf," read the bumperstickers on cars and vans lined up in the parking lot of the Reef Motel. And surf they did, coming from as far away as Tennessee.

The occasion was the 1980 District 9 Windsurfer Championships. District 9 encompasses most of the Southeastern United States and the Bahamas, but Floridians won almost every event.

The strength of Florida windsurfers is not surprising, according to Regatta Co-Chairman Jeanne Lester. "Florida used to get whipped by California all the time in the World Championships," she said, "but now, Florida is consistently coming out on top."

Californians will get their chance to better Floridians in the 1980 World match this October in the Bahamas. The first and second place finishers in last weekend's tournament on Sanibel automatically qualify for the October classic.

The importance of winning any windsurfing championship is surely measured by the personal satisfaction of the participants; there is no prize money awarded.

According to Ms. Lester, a Fort Myers area windsurfing instructor, there is a good chance that the sport will be added to the 1984 Olympics. For that reason, windsurfers must maintain their amateur status, and surf for love, not money.

Most windsurfers maintain that they feel a great freedom floating out on the water, with only the breeze to power their flight. All you need to get started, they say, is a board and a fair sense of balance.

The competition at the District 9 match was divided into three categories: Slalom, championship racing and freestyle. "Slalom is a one-on-one competition," Ms. Lester said, "where windsurfers weave through a course of six buoys in three laps."

"Freestyle is probably the most interesting to watch. All the participants have to make up a routine of tricks in a three-minute routine almost like a gymnastics exercise, but on the water."

Some of the tricks freestylers do include: somersaults, head dips and rail rides. "The rail ride is when they turn the board over and ride on its side." The surface to get a footing on is no wider a balance beam.

Final results of the District 9 Championships were:

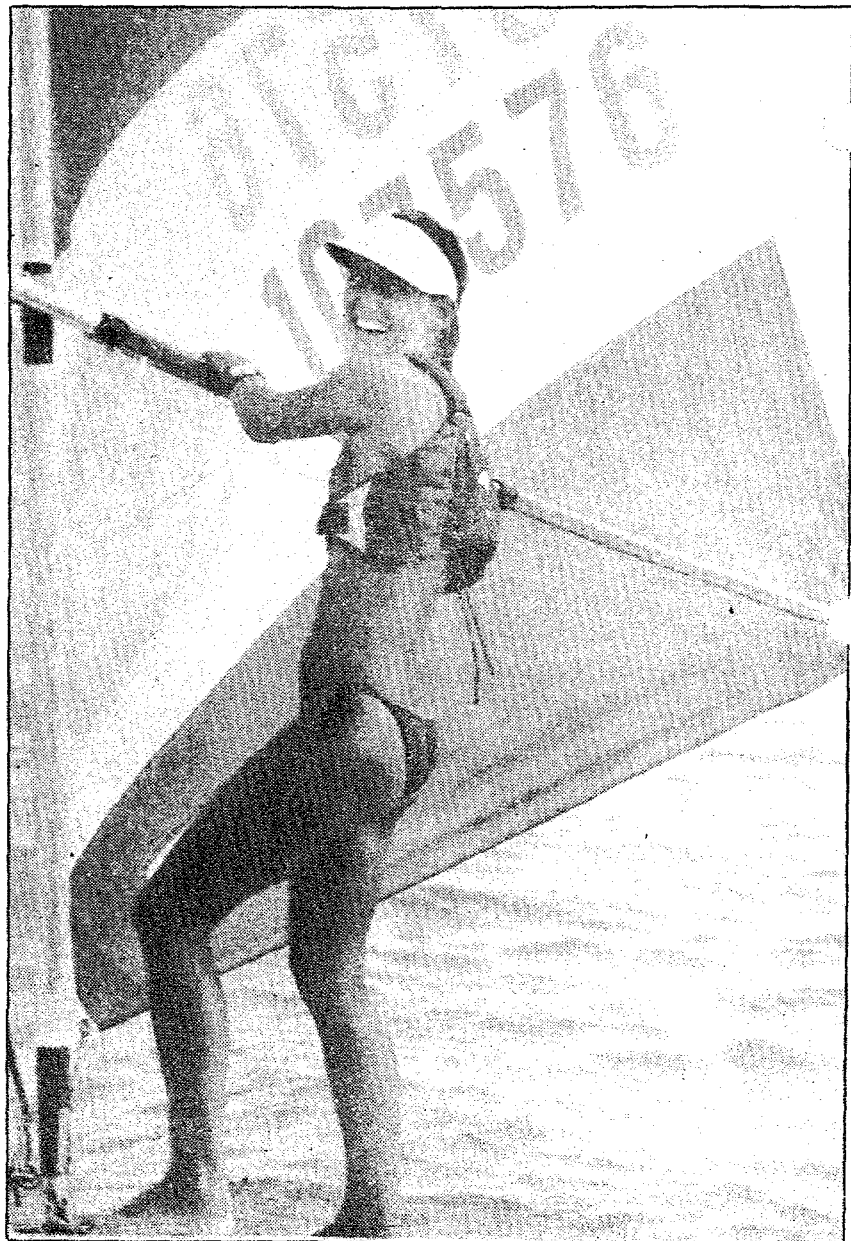

Slalom - 1. Greg Aguera, Tampa; 2. Doug Hunt, West Palm Beach; 3. Paul Polgar, Clearwater.

Championship racing (A fleet) lightweight - 1. Rhonda Smith, Miami; 2. Kent Bleakley, Key Largo; 3. Ann Gardner, Key West. Medium lightweight - 1. Joe Cuffel, Tampa; 2. Doug Hart, Orange Park; 3. Gary Eversole, Miami.

Medium heavyweight - 1. Alex Aguera, Tampa; 2. Carl Polgar, Clearwater; Ray McCurdy, Key West. Heavyweight - 1. Cort Larned, Miami; 2. Mark Robinson, Clearwater; 3. John Weston, Altamont.

Championship racing (B fleet) lightweight - 1. Helen Campbell, Key West; 2. Mike Blaha, Sarasota; 3. Kathy Trudeau, Tampa. Heavyweight - 1. John Paul, Miami; 2. Gernot Reichel, South Carolina; 3. Paul Kelly, Tampa.

Freestyle competition - 1. Greg Aguera, Tampa; 2. Gary Eversole, Miami; 3. Mark Robinson, Clearwater.

No memorials allowed

By Roxanna Motchan

Mike Klein, Chairman of Sanibel's Vegetation Committee, appeared before City Council last week to request that a triangle of land at the intersection of Palm Ridge Road and Periwinkle Way be designated as the "Richard Beebe Memorial Park."

Councilmembers unanimously denied the request, claiming that adequate criterion for setting up memorials had not yet been explored.

Klein said that the project was first discussed two years ago with the former director of Public Works, John Goode. Plans were made at that time to place vegetation, trees, and shrubs in the triangle. Klein proposed placing a large rock bearing a simple bronze tablet explaining Beebe's contribution to the City of Sanibel and his founding of the Vegetation Committee at the site.

Mayor Francis Bailey said that he could not support such an idea. "I have a great deal of trouble with taking someone's name arbitrarily," he said, "just because we have a ground swell of emotion. I will not support this until we get the ground rules."

"It's incumbent upon City Council to draw up these rules," Councilman Duane White pointed out.

Councilmember Zee Butler agreed, saying, "I support the direction to have our City Manager explore the situation and bring back criterion."

Klein then told the Council, "I don't want to make this a competition of who gets memorialized on Sanibel."

Planning Commissioner Fred Valtin, who was in the audience, said, "The simplest ground rule is to simply not have such a program. I recommend that the policy be adopted that the City not memorialize anyone."

City Manager Bernie Murphy was directed by Council to appoint a committee to study how other cities set up memorial programs, however, he is not to act on this direction until after the 1981 budget has been adopted.

"I think there are many more important issues," said Valtin.

Periwinkle addition denied

Sanibel realtor Bert Jenks was denied a specific amendment at City Council last week which would have allowed him to build a second story on the Weeds 'n Things building located on Periwinkle Way.

Sanibel's Planning Commission had earlier recommended denial.

"That building is so close to the road it seems to me we're compounding the problem," said Mayor Francis Bailey.

City Planner Bob Duane told the Council, "The total utilization of the parcel is more development than it can support."

The request was denied unanimously.

Service club graphics denied

By Roxanna Motchan

Representatives from Sanibel's service organizations appeared before City Council last week requesting a variance to the graphics ordinance which, if approved, would allow erection of a 63 square foot sign in the public right of way just off the Sanibel Causeway.

The request was unanimously denied by Council.

The large graphic would be similar to ones appearing in other cities and would contain the logos of such civic groups as the Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions Club. Information regarding meeting date, place, and time would also be on the sign.

Councilmember Zee Butler said, "I understand what you want, but I think there may be a better way. This graphic exceeds the limitations in our graphics ordinance. I would be more sympathetic with a small sign placed at each individual location."

Kurt Reinhardt, representing the Kiwanis Club, said that the sign is required for the group according to its charter. "We have to have our emblem and meeting place indicated at the access to our community," he said.

Reinhardt noted that visitors to the Island might have an easier time finding the meetings if such a sign were erected.

"Most visitors come because of the notices which are run in the local papers," Councilman Duane White claimed. "I understand the importance of the sign but I am reluctant to make an exception unless there's a very good reason."

"We're letting ourselves in for a lot of visual pollution," Councilmember Zee Butler added. "I can see other non-profit organizations, such as churches, wanting to do the same thing."

Island Resident Paul Howe suggested that small medallions be erected underneath the existing Chamber of Commerce sign. Reinhardt told Howe that he had already discussed that possibility with Chamber Director Walter Klie and he seemed "adverse to the idea."

White said that he was in "sympathy with service organizations, and would like to see something worked out, but we might be doing irreparable damage to our sign ordinance."

"The specific proposal is what we're denying, not the idea," Butler said.

Mariner requests Corps permit

The Army Corps of Engineers has received an application from Mariner Properties for a permit to deposit approximately 160 cubic yards of clean, trucked-in fill material into wetlands for the construction and stabilization of a proposed waterway. The fill would take place adjacent to Tarpon Bay, at the Dunes.

Mariner Properties must also receive a permit from the State Department of Environmental Regulation.

Comments regarding the application should be submitted in writing to the District Engineer at Jacksonville District, Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 4970, Jacksonville, Florida, 32201. Comments must be received on or before July 31, 1980 and must be submitted in writing.

We got our money's worth —and then some.

This is great! We're playing tennis and golf, taking it easy on the beach, doin' a little sailing, dancing at night and we're not spending a bundle.

Erad and I have our own place here on the beach at South Seas Plantation for two weeks every year. Plantation Beach Club sells interval ownership and we were able to buy just what we could use and afford. We've fixed the cost of our vacations and didn't let ourselves get tied down.

You see, there's this exchange program that lets us trade our vacation time at South Seas Plantation and go to other resorts around the world. So, not only can we travel, but we're not tied down to taking our vacation the same time every year.

Our friends Rob and JoAnn are also owners here, and we've planned to spend one week here next spring and then all go to Acapulco together. We really look forward to the vacations we can now afford to take.

We figure we'll get our money's worth in a couple of years —and then no matter what inflation does—we'll still be taking first class vacations every year.

Portrait

By Pat Harmel

Jack Ronan

Age: 34

Height: 6'

Roots: Lyons, New York

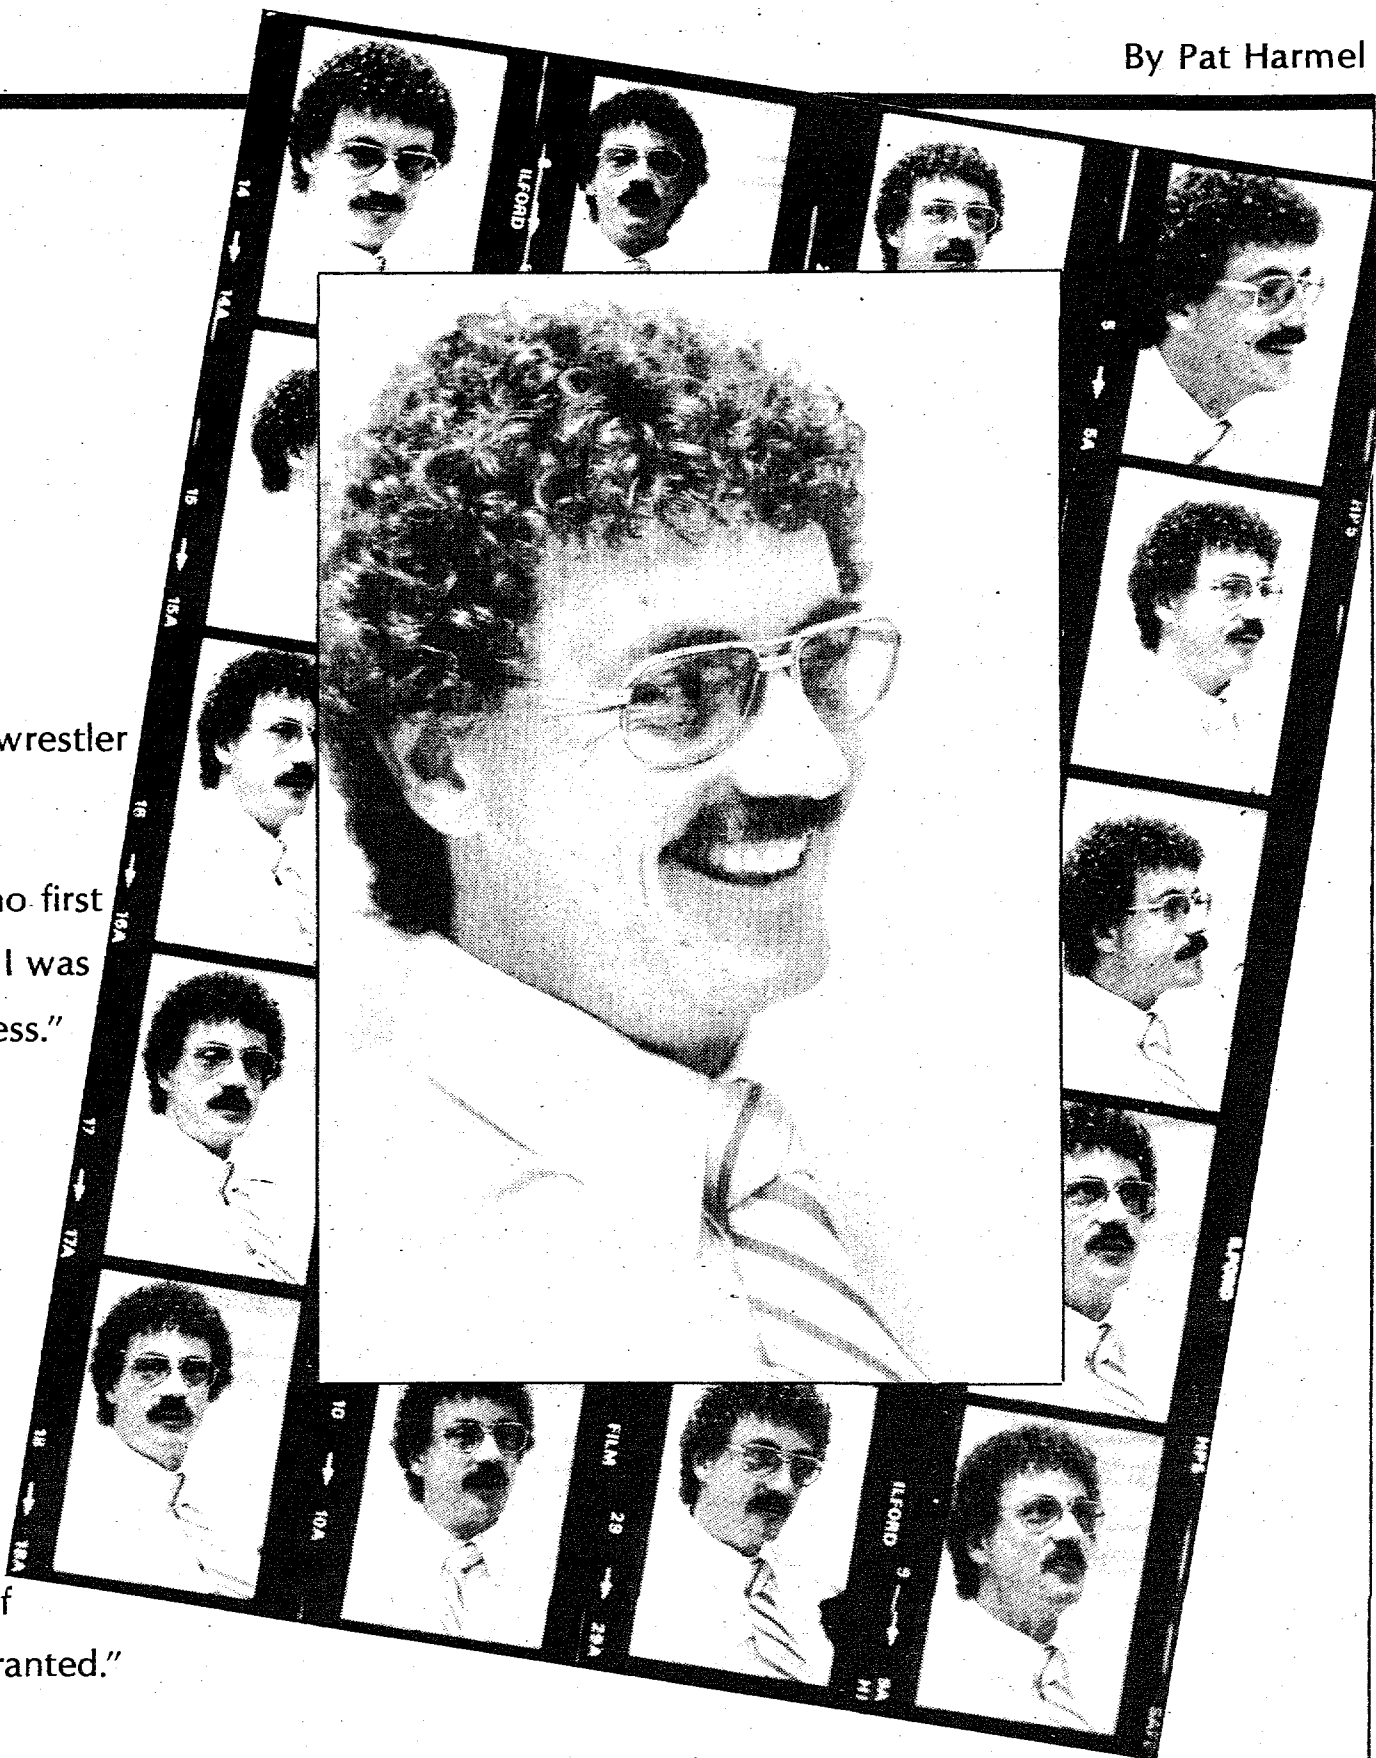

Pleasures: "Everything having to do with sports."

Wish: "I'd like to be a professional wrestler for two weeks."

Mentor: "Bill Spencer - the man who first introduced me to reality when I was coming out of the radio business."

Last Book Read: "A media sports guide."

Words of Wisdom: "People should take an inventory of what they have and stop taking things for granted. I think things aren't as bad as we run around saying they are. I'm ashamed of myself for taking so many things for granted."

Jack Ronan, the advertising and public relations director for Sundial, has a very busy mind. So busy, in fact, that it appears to have erupted in a curly mass on top of his head.

Jack Ronan a.k.a. 'Happy Jack' of the Eastern airwaves, came to Florida four years ago to see if oranges really grew on trees.

"Ever since I was a kid," he swears, "I wanted to see an orange grow on a tree. I couldn't die without seeing that first."

In fact, he planned his first drive to Florida in such a way that dawn would just be breaking as he entered the Sunshine State.

"I stopped in Orlando," he admits unabashedly, "and asked a guy in a gas station where oranges grew on trees." But after finding the grove the service station attendant directed him to, Jack only looked "for about two seconds." The childhood wish had been fulfilled.

Jack defines his entire life as "crazy," but then philosophically adds, "We live in a crazy world. It takes a crazy person to live in a crazy world."

Part of Jack's personal craziness undoubtedly stems in part from his early career choices - namely broadcasting.

He began his media career sweeping floors in a New York radio station. "I would have done anything after high school to get into radio," he recalls. The job eventually turned into a weekend air-time show and he was on his way.

"Radio phoniness" was a professional pitfall, however, that Jack did not manage to escape. "It was unreality," he says. "I was close to living beyond my means and I didn't want to leave the unreal disc jockey world. It was low pay but all the ego you wanted."

But eventually, he met a man while doing a story who saw through it all. "I was coming out of radio and being a TV reporter," he recalls, "and I did a story on this credit manager named Bill Spencer. He spotted the phoniness in me right away and eventually managed to break me down."

Phoniness or no, Jack's future plans still include radio-owning his own radio station, to be exact.

"I'd like to show people here what real good Top 40 is really like," he says, and then goes into the old time fast talk patter: "Love is love, gold is gold, look what happened when the goldfish died!"

He admits to conducting a "running commentary" while conducting Sundial business and has a tendency to chatter his own introductions to songs on the radio. "And," he says, "I love to critique the news."

The only other love that even comes close to radio in Jack's heart is sports. His pastime is memorizing media guides, the little books published by sports promoters containing every kind of information about various sports, professional players, schedules and prizes.

"I just like sports so much," he says, "I want to know more and more." But he isn't crazy about the thought of being a play-by-play announcer: "I get too involved when I do play-by-play. I might swear or something!"

Jack was, in fact, covering a sailboat race when he met Pierre Lenders - the man instrumental in bringing him to Sundial. And Jack has apparently taken to the world of advertising as easily as he slipped into radio.

"Here," he maintains, "you don't have to take a Madison Avenue approach; you use strictly common sense. You need to throw out everything you've ever known and not try to go by the book. Mr. Lenders stresses credibility and the personnel here are allowed to be themselves, as long as they will be themselves."

Even though Jack swears he doesn't miss the limelight and claims to love his job, he admits that plans for one day owning his own radio station are never far from his thoughts. But now, you have the feeling that common sense has the upper hand in Jack Ronan's life, despite his claim to craziness.

"You know," he says, "people up North seem to have a lot of common sense and then when they come to Florida a lot of them seem to lose it."

Not so for 'Happy Jack' Ronan.

Erosion District hires boring device

By Bill Motchan

A special floating boring device was hired by the Captiva Erosion Prevention District (CEPD) last week to take core samples at possible future borrow sites.

The work was conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 1 and 2, after the project was approved at an emergency CEPD meeting held Tuesday morning.

"The purpose of this meeting is to consider the modification of Tetra Tech contractors with the District to accommodate additional coring and engineering deemed necessary to evaluate the borrow sites," said CEPD Chairman Dick Butze.

"The reason for the immediate action," Butze continued, "is that we can save a lot of money by availing ourselves of the floating equipment that is in the Sarasota area coming south (at this time)."

Erik Olsen, Senior Engineer for Tetra Tech, explained the importance of using the floating device.

"We were down in March and April taking core borings in all of the borrow sights," Olsen said. "We found enough sand, but not the quality of sand needed for the South Seas (renourishment) project. It is important to have quality sand, as high a quality as the beach sand.

"At our two potential (dredging) sites, all our borings bottomed out at a limestone layer," Olsen continued. "The equipment we had couldn't go below that layer. The floating equipment is equipped with a jet pump, and can probably go below the limestone.

"Also, there are a series of shell mounds lying off-shore. We'd like to identify the quantity and quality of this material," Olsen said. "We could assess the possibility of using a hopper dredge versus a cutter-head dredge, but we need to know the quantity of materials to viably assess dredging techniques."

Olsen said the cost of using the floating boring equipment would be much less if it was used now, while the unit is in this area. Since the equipment is based in New Jersey, mobilization costs run in the neighborhood of $6,000.

The total cost of a two-day boring would come to about $10,000, Olsen said. The savings if done now, he concluded, would be about 50-60 per cent. "We will also keep the momentum going on the project," he added.

CEPD members present unanimously voted to proceed with the boring. "I think it's very important to exhaust all possibilities," said project chairman Dick Stevens. "In my opinion, it would be advisable to avail ourselves of the equipment."

I think we need it," said Commissioner Charlie Miller. "It's going to give us a lot of back-up information."

City Attorney won't be fighting Maxwell case

By Roxanna Motchan

Councilmember Zee Butler noted at City Council last week the possibility that City Attorney Neal Bowen will not be able to represent the City in the Steve Maxwell case.

The Maxwell charges against the City and Police Chief, filed recently by Naples attorney William Blackwell, may be defended instead by attorneys representing the Drake Insurance Company of New York, the City's insurance company.

At the Council meeting, Councilmember Duane White said that he thought "The City will not play a significant role except for liability."

Bowen, however, said, "I would anticipate the City to have a significant role."

"The insurance company feels that they have a duty to defend," Bowen explained. "They are not overly enthusiastic."

"I am not all that enthusiastic about having the insurance company represent the City of Sanibel," Butler said. "I'm ready to make a motion or whatever it takes to have Neal represent us."

Councilman White commented that there might be political ramifications the City wasn't aware of, and recommended that Bowen "contact the insurance company lawyers and see what plan of action they intend to follow."

Finally, Bowen said, "Nothing in this conversation should be intended as a waiver of our insurance."

Council approves power line study

By Roxanna Motchan

Sanibel's City Council approved a $4,775 independent study last week which will attempt to answer some questions raised by Council during sessions with representatives from Lee County Electric Co-Op regarding power lines on the Island. The consulting firm of Smith and Gillespie, located in Jacksonville, is responsible for the study.

Hopefully, questions regarding overhead versus underground lines, whether or not the work is actually necessary, and which is the correct way to go if it is necessary will be answered.

Councilmembers instructed City Manager Bernie Murphy to inform the consultant that they would like to know the Island wide impact of implementing the proposed overhead modification.

Murphy indicated that the firm could start the work within the next two weeks and the study could feasibly be completed within the next six weeks.

Special City workshop

Sanibel's City Council will participate in a special joint workshop with the Lee County Commission at 10 a.m. on Monday, July 14.

The meeting will be held in the County Commission meeting room located in the Ft. Myers courthouse. Topics of discussion at the meeting are expected to include the development of the Turner Beach park area, a discussion of evacuation routes, and the transfer of the Sanibel-Captiva corridor.

Police Beat

By Pat Harmel

The Beachview Golf Club fell victim to Island robbers June 29, when $1,723 worth of golf clubs and equipment were stolen by thieves who apparently gained entrance through a window.

Responding to a burglar alarm, Officer Mike Blackmore discovered an open window at the Beachview site and called for a back-up. Several officers and the K-9 unit responded. Fingerprints, a watch and a pack of cigarettes were retrieved but two suspects stopped later were questioned and released. The matter is still under investigation.

A robbery at St. Isabel's Catholic Church occurred last Wednesday sometime between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. A silver and gold chalice belonging to Father Reczek, and valued at $750, was removed from a locked cabinet. A small metal box containing coins deposited for candles was also emptied out by the thief. Two large sea shell rings and a large single shell were also reported stolen from the church. The matter is still under investigation.

Aaron Kroner, 18, of Miami was arrested last Sunday for stealing a bicycle from a Sandcastle Road residence.

$229 worth of wallpaper and wallpaper paste were reported stolen from the Gulfside Place construction site.

A purse containing $300 was reported stolen from the beach along Middle Gulf Drive.

Several obscene and silent harassment calls were reported last week by Island residents.

A 1974 Ford van caught fire and burned to its death on Periwinkle Way last Saturday morning. The Knoxville, Tenn. resident driving the car was uninjured.

A 19 year old man has been the subject of several injury hoax reports to the SPD. The man reportedly rides a bicycle along Captiva Drive near Tween Waters Inn and when cars drive past him he kicks them to make a loud noise and then fakes injuries. The con man then generously offers to "settle out of court" for a cash sum when the driver pulls over.

Hornung

Vera (Granny) Hornung, 87, of Sanibel, died Saturday, June 28. Originally from Buffalo, she had been a resident of Sanibel for the past four years. Funeral arrangements were handled by the Ulrich Funeral Home, Buffalo, New York. Local arrangements were handled by Phil Kiser Fort Myers Funeral Home, Cypress Lake Drive.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Violet Scrase of Sanibel; a sister, Mrs. Zella Peacock of Waverly, New York; four grandchildren: Vera Hunter and Herb Williams of Sanibel, Marvin C. Williams, Jr., and Robert E. Williams, and 11 great-grandchildren.

A cool deal and a sound investment!

Install a selected Whirlpool central air conditioner before summer and we'll add a Magnavox stereo system for just $20* more.

Air conditioning costs can account for a large portion of your electric bill during the summer season, so it makes good sense to replace your old, inefficient air conditioner with a new Whirlpool central air conditioner or heat pump before the summer heat's on. And to emphasize what a sound investment a Whirlpool central air conditioner is for your home this summer we'll throw in a Magnavox Component Stereo System* for just $20* more, if you install your new Whirlpool air conditioner before July 31, 1980. That's a cool deal if there ever was one!

Call your Whirlpool heating and cooling products dealer today.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Tall Australian pines shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health produce fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several new shopping centers featuring everything from a gift shop for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, to a sandwich shop, ice cream parlour, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay...Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands - pleasant hodge-podge remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety - from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter and of course, for all, shells, shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells...the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.
