DNR urges approval of South Seas project

By Pat Harmel

State Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officials will formally recommend that Governor Bob Graham and the Florida Cabinet approve the controversial beach renourishment project for South Seas Plantation when they meet in regular session on August 26.

Agenda documents released Friday in Tallahassee indicate that the Governor and Cabinet, sitting as the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund (TIIF), will be asked by DNR to approve the controversial dredge and fill permits for the project.

The DNR staff report did, however, reject South Seas' request to set the erosion control line at the new mean high water line after the beach was "renourished" by dredge and fill material. DNR staffers instead suggested that the erosion control line be set "at or near the existing mean high water line" before the beach is renourished.

The DNR report also recommends that the Governor and Cabinet make any approval of the permit request from the Captiva Erosion Control District contingent upon approval of environmental permits from the State Department of Environmental Regulation (DER).

DER officials have indicated intent to deny the permits in the past, although Department officials are still negotiating with South Seas' engineers on possible alternatives to the proposed borrow site.

The TIIF were also advised not to charge South Seas for the removal of the fill material, which, because it is submerged land, is a public resource. DNR staffers suggested that since the "public benefit" of the privately funded beach renourishment project would be the slowing of the erosion threat to the resort community, South Seas should not be required to make restitution to the state for the use of that resource.

A new Sanibel song!

This one is by Patrick Joyce, world renowned songwriter

It was bound to happen - Patrick Joyce came to Sanibel Island last week.

Patrick's hobby is writing songs - but not just any old songs. He writes about places he's visited.

"As far as I know, I've never been on vacation for a week or more that I didn't write a song about that particular place," he says.

Seems reasonable. A man enjoying a vacation spot writes down his impressions in rhyme; but Patrick never visits the places he writes about until after the song is finished! How does he do it - mental telepathy?

Planners debate 'bedroom' ordinance

By Roxanna Motchan

Sanibel's Planning Commissioners discussed a draft ordinance yesterday which, if adopted, will set a limit on the maximum number of people allowed to live in the same home who are not related by blood, marriage, or adoption.

The Commissioners ultimately recommended unanimously that the proposed ordinance not be adopted, but the subject will be considered by City Council at a later date.

The problem, which was first argued at last week's regular Planning Commission meeting, was brought up when it was discovered that many unrelated people are living together in a congregate situation. Sanibel resident Paul Howe is one person experiencing such a situation next door to his home.

City Attorney Neal Bowen drafted the proposed ordinance, which was based on a similar ordinance adopted by the city of Belle Terre, New York. The Belle Terre

Tree numbering to aid in hazard management

By Bill Motchan

A tree-numbering system implemented along Periwinkle Way may save the lives of some Casuarinas and prevent blockage of Sanibel's main thoroughfare by fallen trees.

Mike Klein, Dr. William Webb and Dr. Carl Wagner spent many warm mornings indexing over 200 Australian Pines along Periwinkle. They gave each tree a letter and number which corresponds to a precise chart.

By rating the trees, Klein, Webb and Wagner were able to identify which individual trees are hazardous. "Those beautiful Australian Pines along Periwinkle are extremely dangerous," said Dr. Webb.

The danger, he said, is that the trees are very shallow-rooted and very tall. "In a high wind," Webb said, "they sit there like a broomstick in a pan - they tip right over."

"They're so big and cumbersome that, during a hurricane wind, they'll tip over and emergency vehicles will be unable to get from one end of the Island to the other."

Webb said that Australian Pines are very brittle, or "brash" trees, and even a small wind can bring down heavy branches. The solution therefore, is to eliminate the possible dangers of the trees without disturbing their beauty and shade.

"The program that we've been working on is to devise a system for managing the pines and keep their beauty," said Webb.

The trees were given two ratings (1-10), based on their danger potential and vigor. A tree that would make Periwinkle impassable if downed would probably receive a "9." By the same token, a dead or extremely sickly tree would also get a high number. Thus, a tree with a total of "18" or "19" would be the first to be removed, and a "2" or "3" would definitely remain standing.

The numbering method was selected to distinguish one tree from another. "We decided that if we were to tell somebody where each tree was, it would be pretty hard to tell which tree was which," said Mike Klein. "When the time comes to do contracting, the contractor can look at the map and we can make all kinds of notations on it."

The loss of the shade and canyon effect that some people fear from trimming will probably not be too apparent. Because the cost of tree removal and trimming runs fairly high, the Sanibel Public Works Department will only be able to work on the number of trees their budget can handle; that could be a dozen or two trees a year.

Webb said that the natural beauty of the trees and their position would be taken into effect, also. In a spot where four or five trees sit closely together, the interior trees would be trimmed, if necessary, leaving the outer ones to frame the view of Periwinkle Way travelers.

Plans are also underway to replace dead Australian Pines with native trees, such as Strangler Fig, Gumbo-Limbo, Jamaica Dogwood, Seagrape and Live Oak. These trees would not pose the dangerous threat of road blockage that some of the present pines do.

It's the trees in the middle range, however, that provide the problem. But the Webb-Wagner-Klein group has a solution. By coppicing, or trimming the tops of the trees, much of their potential danger can be eliminated.

This coppicing can take the form of a: crew cut - cutting as low as possible; shag cut - cutting some branches low, some high; and selective cut - half of the long branches cut at one time, then the other half after a period of time.

By giving the trees a haircut, according to Webb, they may even improve in appearance and vigor. Some casuarinas that seemed unhealthy have improved after coppicing. The trim also helps the trees to grow back a better looking crown.

Islands I Love." By presenting his song to the Islands, he was treated like a celebrity, received flowers and was invited to appear on network television in Spain to sing his creation.

"I went to Joe Franklin (host of a New York talk show), and he liked it very much," says Patrick, "and since then I've been on his television show about 10 times, singing songs about places."

Singing his songs is as much of a thrill to Pat as writing them. "One of my biggies was about Atlantic City; 'Lady Luck is Smiling on Atlantic City.' I sang it opening night in a casino with Patti Page about two and a half years ago."

The traveling songwriter

By Bill Motchan

"I usually get a description from a pamphlet of a particular place," he says. "I've written songs practically all over the world before we go on vacation."

Patrick then sends a copy of the song to the city it is dedicated to.

He carries an ever-growing stack of newspaper clippings with him lauding his expertise, from Las Vegas ("Las Vegas is a Magic Wonderland") to his hometown newspaper in Lyndhurst, New Jersey ("I Will Always Love New Jersey, the Beautiful Garden State").

"I'm happy when I'm writing a song about a place," confessed Patrick, who has composed around 20 songs in the last seven years.

It all started with a trip to the Canary Islands. Before arriving, he wrote "Come Back to the Canary Islands, Beautiful Patrick has sung his creations at Disney World and Longboat Key, where his song may be performed at that city's anniversary celebration. He sang his ode to a senior citizen group of 30,000 at the New Jersey State Fair and was made an honorary Colonel by the state militia.

"I love show business," he admits. "I go all out, I'll do anything, without being obnoxious, to get a point over. Once at a festival I went up to a television cameraman and I told him I had a song about New York - what New York was to me - and they taped me."

Pat Joyce truly has show biz in his blood. He worked in the accounting department of the Uniroyal company for 38 years but, during much of that time, sang with the Rockefeller Center Chorus.

A few years ago he quit the bookkeeping game to devote his life to the performing arts. He is a member of the major theatrical unions, including the Screen Actors Guild. In addition to singing and songwriting, he recently embarked on a career in motion pictures.

Among his film credits are "Times Square," "The Fan," "One Summer Night," and, most recently, "Fame." You have to look carefully to see him, though. He's usually on screen for just a few seconds and hasn't had a speaking role yet.

"They consider me a character actor because I'm in my late sixties," Pat says. "In 'Fame,' the first one I tried out for, I got the part of a Hasidic Jew. They put the whiskers on me which took two hours. It was quite an experience." After two quick takes, Pat became immortal.

After auditioning, make-up and actual filming, Pat gets $60 to $105 and lunch, but money seems secondary - the show biz bug has bitten him.

"I have a model agent," he says, "and now I'm working with a portfolio." One of his latest and most ambitious filmings was 10 days work on "Untitled Number Four," the upcoming Woody Allen picture.

"In one scene," according to Pat, "he (Woody Allen) directed me himself and told me how to turn my head. He's a generous and a very kind man."

Between casting calls, Patrick doesn't sit still either. Every Sunday, he joins a talented group of performers at the Hartley House Theatre in New York City for "Showstoppers."

Pat sings some old favorites ("I stick one of my own songs in, but I don't overdo it") for 200 senior citizens. The admission is free, and in addition the guests receive sandwiches and coffee on the house.

Many of the "Showstoppers" are young performers, and have included child stars Michael Todd White and Danielle Briesbois. Danielle, who plays Stephanie on "All in the Family," recently introduced Pat to the audience, describing his role in the Woody Allen film. It was a proud moment for the traveling songwriter. ?

Sanibel resident, photographer and artist Fleur Weymouth is spending the summer months working and rediscovering her roots in New Hampshire. The following travelogue describes her thoughts and experiences on the road between Sanibel and New England.

Truckin' North

I started off before noon on a Sunday, wondering what I was doing leaving Sanibel as I crossed the causeway over aqua blue water and headed north on U.S. 27. My first stop was somewhere along the road in north Florida where I finally found a dark brown 10 gallon hat - a size too large, which I determined would fit me if I stuffed enough paper towels under the band. (At age 13, I could lasso anything. Dad brought me up right.)

I whistled my way through the next three thunderstorms while all the other cars passed me by; my mean speed was 45 mph. Though this rig can climb up and down hills like a tank, its specialty is definitely not long distance highway travel between Sanibel and New Hampshire.

My second stop was MacDonalds. I thought: 'I have to discover what America is all about.' Having avoided MacDonalds after one experience years ago, and out of a longstanding defiance against being counted as one of those to whom a zillion hamburgers had been served, I felt myself lacking in experience. I stepped into my second MacDonald's and inquired what a Big Mac was. The youngster looked at me incredulously. "What's a Big Mac?" Her eyebrows ascended into her forehead. "Well, uh, its got uh—" and then, unable to frame the words either out of ignorance or speechlessness, she reached for the list of ingredients. It sounded good to me, so I ordered one. That was my second and last visit to MacDonalds. I'll take naiveite any day.

I spent the first night at a motel and tried to get Tannhauser on Channel 3; all that was available was an Antarctic penguin, a wrestling match and Mel and Alice (I'd had enough fast food places for one day).

The next morning I hit the road again, up through South Carolina. I bought grapefruits, oranges, watermelons, pecans and peanuts that lasted the rest of the way. Route 95 carried me past vast black swamplands, spanish moss, fields of potatoes and tobacco. A car passed with a bumper sticker: "Staying alive is no accident."

I stopped at a waffle house (I love waffles), exhausted from driving from early morning to 3 p.m. without a break, dropped into the nearest seat, and found two truckers at the next table rarin' to go. That waffle lasted a lot longer than any waffle I've ever eaten, steadying me through a wild conversation (they moved to my table, uninvited) - Was I traveling alone? Where was I going? Wouldn't I like to join them at the next rest stop? The young lad at the next counter said loudly: "Aren't you driving that old green jeep?" I glared at him. Dammit. "Oh oh," he said, "Sorry." The two men left in their two huge trucks, and I ate my waffle. Oh, how it lasted. I pulled my brown Stetson down on my head and hit the road again, avoiding all rest stops and waffle houses for the next 100 miles. The next thing I knew, my sideview mirror had blown off. Hot dawg! Another worry. Cars shot by, to the right, to the left. I swiveled my neck, to right, to left.

One stiff neck later, I pulled over for the night at a Day's Inn. They put me in a room across from the ice machine. That machine made ice all night long, and I swear there was a pet shop nearby; I kept hearing birds. The chain on the door was broken and two fleas leaped from the carpet, sinking their jaws into my ankle as I entered the room.

Traveling with most of my life's work (photographs, negatives and manuscripts), presented a few problems. I wasn't about to leave them in the jeep overnight. I had no duplicates stowed safely away in a bank. Each evening I made three trips from the jeep to my room.

The third day I was up and off at 6 a.m. (enough ice for one night). I stopped for gas at Dunn, North Carolina, and was directed into town to a Western Auto Store where I found a new side-view mirror. The proprietor told me to take it out to the car, try it out and bring him back the packaging if it worked. I hadn't heard anything like that since a car salesman in Peterborough, New Hampshire, had told me to take a car down the road for a spin.

A group of interested folks gathered around the jeep at the service station around the corner from the Western Auto. Its proprietor attached the mirror and it fit so well that I bought one for the other side. The people there broke the spell of bad luck with their kindness.

I headed north again, past wild chicory in bloom, that unearthly blue, so perishable in a vase; past a cardox carbonation compressed gas truck with a notice on its rear end: "The sparkle that spans the nation;" past wheat fields, corn and potato fields, past a large abandoned sign made of nails with no writing on it, just flowing rust marks.

That evening I tried to find a room near Annapolis. There wasn't one anywhere. I found a room thanks to a bird; a gent who managed the Holiday Inn had rescued a baby bird from the driveway. It was squawking in a box on the counter as I made some suggestions on its care, and the gent phoned a motel down the road and got me the last room there, for $31. Thirty-one dollars to lay one's head down! I was determined to get a good night's sleep at that price.

Fat chance. That night they must have hosted a children's camp.

The next morning I was on the Jersey Turnpike. That turnpike has always signified to me the purest hell on this earth because of an image I remember from my childhood when my father was driving us home on it one night - 12 lanes of traffic, six going one direction, six going the other, mostly trucks. I never forgot that sound. I jammed my hat down on my head to make me feel braver (even if it was 90 degrees in the shade).

Less than two hours later I was through it and on the truck-free Garden State Parkway, roaring north past New York City with all the other cars, my hat on the seat beside me. If someone had pinned a big blue ribbon on me I would have taken a bow. I even passed two cars on the road. Something in me distrusts the cars that travel so smoothly, that take you so far from the land. They insulate you from everything alive. Better to be exposed, out in the open.

The traffic eased off on the New York

State Thruway and, after a jog east on the Mass pike, I headed north once more on 91 along Vermont's east edge, and over the Connecticut river at Brattleboro. Up the steep hills bordering Connecticut, over the flat plain of Keene, New Hampshire, to the first view of the mountain that means so much to me - Monadnock, whose slopes I climbed as a child.

Dublin and its lake, the little hilltop town where William James and Mark Twain lived, down the long hills to Peterborough and east of there to the house where I was to be a guest for the summer.

The first thing I read in the local paper was that Peterborough had unanimously voted to recycle garbage; those who don't will be fined. The policewoman directing traffic in Milford had gotten hot during the heatwave - so she set up a large umbrella over herself and waved her arms from underneath it.

I can get Robert J. Lurtsema's classical music program from 7 a.m. till noon every day of the week, and do. Imagine Fort Myers granting us more than a few measly hours every Sunday night! An ovenbird wakes me up in the morning and wood thrush voices echo through the woods at dusk. You can drive miles without seeing a car. You couldn't scalp anyone in business if you tried; word would get around too fast. You can attend free baroque music concerts in local town halls and churches at least one night a week or go square dancing to live music. There are no sounds at night except what moves in the dark - the wind, the night birds and beasts. Stores sell wholegrains in big bins, and farmer's markets have all the fresh berries and greens you could ever wish for. There are no pinball machines, roller skating rinks, interval ownership or superhighways in this part of the state; they don't consider any of that "progress" here. (Wellfleet, Massachusetts, has already outlawed "time-sharing.")

The state has tried to put a highway through Dublin for years - they've never succeeded. "Faster" doesn't mean progress here. "Slower" wins the day. I think the old green jeep has come home.

CONA - not an arm of COTI

To the Editor of the Islander,

On Friday, August 15, 1980, this headline appeared in a copy of another Island newspaper, "A grassroots group that got fed up with council actions." Normally, the best course of action would be to ignore the headline and the article that followed. To deny that headline, however, does little good now. The people have read the headline; the damage has been done. The City Council and those connected with the Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA) know it is not true - but the people of this community should make the final judgement.

On Friday, August 8, a news release was given to both the Island newspapers. That news release was published in the Islander on August 12, under the headline "The CONA Mandate." Please read it and then decide if CONA is "fed up" with Council action.

The article that followed the "grassroots" headline is dotted with inconsistencies. However, the part of the article that inflames is Milena Eskew's statement, apparently quoted out of context, to the effect that she "saw CONA functioning as 'an arm of COTI.'"

I have known Mrs. Eskew for years and I worked with her on issues that have benefited the community. I find it difficult to conceive that she would say, in context, the things reported in that article. They just are not true.

This kind of divisiveness comes at a time when neighbors are selecting their candidates for public office. I would caution the foxes waiting for the chickens to fall off their perch that they will die of hunger. Our community has finally endorsed the mechanism to establish government by the people, of the people and for the people. They will never relinquish it again, nor will CONA.

Dave Davenport, president of COTI (Committee of the Islands), noted that it was unfortunate that the statement attributed to Milena Eskew appeared at a time when all our efforts should be directed at selecting good candidates for public office, and that, while Mrs. Eskew is a member of COTI, she does not have the authority to officially speak for COTI at this time.

CONA embraces all of our neighbors to reaffirm that what CONA does in selecting candidates allows each person to select the candidate of their choice for public office or for committee position. Through the officers and directors of the neighborhood groups, whom they elected, they again screen the candidates, seeking the ones that best meet the neighborhood needs.

Finally, through the presidents of each neighborhood organization, whom they elected, they choose the candidates to represent the entire community. These candidates finally go before the electorate for a final confirmation. In effect, each of us does have an input in the selection of our representatives, and CONA can be our instrument to keep government aware of our needs and desires in a practical and meaningful way.

Again, I request that the community evaluate the article that appeared in the other Island paper on August 15, that was generated by a news release that hopefully appears in this issue of this newspaper.

City overstepping itself

To the Editor:

I am not in the habit of writing to the Editor every time I disagree on something the CITY is doing, but this time I feel they are over-stepping themselves.

As I understood the "limitation cap" on construction, it was for the protection of the property owners of the Island. It would assure that when they are ready to build their dream home the permits would be available.

We read in the paper several weeks ago, that 60 permits had been approved. As of today they have not issued these permits and scuttlebut has it that some new snags are being added by the Planning Commission.

It's about time that the City of Sanibel started acting professional. We've been a city long enough so that it shouldn't take more than a matter of hours between applying for a permit and getting it.

No junonia shortage here

To Capt. Mike Fuery:

As I was reading your article in the "Islander," I noticed that you mentioned that no one has been finding the Junonia shell. Well, I collect shells for the fun and beauty of it, but not seriously. Mostly shells from the Keys, as I am a scuba diver. I have several Tritons and beautiful cowries and many I don't know the names of. I did happen to look in a shell book for a picture of the junonia, and I did find one last weekend while visiting Sanibel. It's in a pretty worn state, but none the less, it is whole. I just thought you might like to know the location, which was on Turner Beach, just about 50 ft. south of the rocks. It was early in the morning. Well, hope someone else can find one there too!

On public pots and fun facilities

The following memorandum was given to the Islander for publication:

TO: SANIBEL PLANNING COMMISSION,
and CITY COUNCIL
FROM: PAUL A. HOWE
SUBJECT: PUBLIC TOILETS &
RECREATIONAL FACILITIES (D.P. No.
80-1271)

Five Florida statutes (Chapters 316, 381, 386, 513 and 553) deal with the subject of public toilets. They provide for when and where such facilities are required, and detailed regulations for the operation, maintenance and use.

Generally, such facilities are required whenever a private business or governmental agency assumes the function of catering to the various and sundry needs, wants and desires of the general public.

The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitation is basically responsible for enforcing the SANITARY CODE OF FLORIDA that it was empowered to promulgate. (It also enforces the ban on pay-toilets.) It works through the County Health Departments in its inspection and enforcement duties.

Apparently, the City would come within the pale of the CODE's multitudinous and costly requirements when it takes on the voluntary function of providing and maintaining beach and recreational facilities included in the long and comprehensive list in section 381.031 F.S. (The City needs to be cautious of sidling into such responsibilities by "volunteering" its taxes to perform those functions that the County has already assumed responsibility for on a county-wide basis.)

Because of the DUAL TAXATION aspects, I am unalterably opposed to the City taking on the function of providing or maintaining costly beach and other recreational facilities that are now available and usable by Sanibel residents "as is" - but need additional features mainly for use by off-Islanders. It is my expectation that the Chamber of Commerce, on behalf of the many businessmen who cater to off-Island users of such facilities, will persistently urge the County Commission to provide facilities equal to those provided in other coastal communities in Lee County.

It seems reasonable that the least the County should do at this time is to rehabilitate and refurbish the existing toilet and recreational facilities located on the Causeway and at the school grounds. Large road signs (similar in text to that located at Turner Beach on Captiva) should be erected at those locations advising travelers that those toilets, in turn, are the only such public ones before reaching Turner Beach.

For the above reasons, I oppose the proposed public parking and toilets on the Causeway Property included in Development Permit No. 80-1271.

Respectfully,
(s) Paul A. Howe

We got our money's worth —and then some.

This is great! We're playing tennis and golf, taking it easy on the beach, doin' a little sailing, dancing at night and we're not spending a bundle.

Erad and I have our own place here on the beach at South Seas Plantation for two weeks every year. Plantation Beach Club sells interval ownership and we were able to buy just what we could use and afford. We've fixed the cost of our vacations and didn't let ourselves get tied down.

You see, there's this exchange program that lets us trade our vacation time at South Seas Plantation and go to other resorts around the world. So, not only can we travel, but we're not tied down to taking our vacation the same time every year.

Our friends Rob and JoAnn are also owners here, and we've planned to spend one week here next spring and then all go to Acapulco together. We really look forward to the vacations we can now afford to take.

We figure we'll get our money's worth in a couple of years —and then no matter what inflation does—we'll still be taking first class vacations every year.

Commission

document limits the number of unrelated people who may live together in a single family home. In 1974, the ordinance was contested and upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court and former Chief Justice William O. Douglas.

Each Commissioner commented and gave his views on the subject. Commissioner Bill Hagerup said, "I have difficulty in tackling this one. The only thing I feel we could do is limit the number of people allowed to sleep in each bedroom. I don't see that we can rule on morals."

"If the idea is to rule out boarding houses in residential neighborhoods I would have no problem dealing with this," said Commissioner Fred Valtin. "I could see the neighbors objecting to such activities. However, we would have to define boarding house before I'd be comfortable."

"I can foresee situations where the husband or wife dies and the remaining partner cannot afford the mortgage," Valtin continued, "therefore the added income of renting out a bedroom in the house would be necessary so the owner could continue to make payments. Apart from that, the roommate arrangement with people who aren't related getting together to rent an apartment or house so they can afford to live here, seems to be one solution to moderate cost housing on the Island."

Commissioner Judy Workman asked Bowen why the subject of resort housing congregate living wasn't addressed in the ordinance, and he explained that the Belle Terre ordinance did not address that subject. Bowen admitted that to include resort housing might make the ordinance unenforceable in a court of law.

Workman then commented that she felt the situation experienced by Paul Howe should be controlled by the noise or nuisance ordinance. Apparently there is a great deal of noise and other police problems in that area. Bowen said that he was personally not familiar with Howe's problem and could not comment.

"I would be in favor of regulating the number of people in bedrooms," Workman said, "but I don't know how on earth you're going to be able to enforce it."

Planning Commissioner Chairman Ann Winterbotham said that it didn't matter if people were related or not; if they were making noise it was simply a police problem. She said, "I would be dead set against such an ordinance, since people being able to do this type of thing has solved part of the moderate cost housing problem. Having had many people living in my home throughout the years I know it can be handled properly."

Commissioner Don Manchester said that the Commission should decide "whether we're trying to solve the question of what makes a residential community, or the problem of density. While we're trying to help a human need we are contradicting the density question which Ann brought up recently. But, I feel we should limit the number of beds in a house, not bedrooms."

Valtin said, "After listening to all the comments I have become convinced that even if we adopt such an ordinance it will be very difficult to enforce, and we have too many ordinances on the books that are difficult to enforce as it is." He then asked Bowen if neighborhood associations could adopt rules and regulations which would prevent such a thing. Bowen said yes, that it was legally feasible and had been done in the past with deed restrictions and condominium dedications.

"I have received the general feeling that this is an ordinance we would not approve," Chairman Winterbotham said. "Someone should make the motion that we recommend to City Council that this be dropped and another one drafted or simply dropped entirely."

Fred Valtin moved that the proposed ordinance not be approved, "because it does not overcome the problem, is probably unenforceable, and as worded would rule out some living arrangements beneficial to the community."

Commissioner Valtin said that the proposed ordinance was not available at press time.

Bridge up!

A change in drawbridge acknowledging signals has been proposed by the United States Coast Guard. If the new signals become law, they would of course affect the Sanibel Causeway drawbridge and sailboaters who use it.

The proposed signals include: Signal to request opening of the draw - one long blast followed by one short blast. Acknowledging signal by the draw tender - one long blast followed by one short blast.

Visual signals to request opening are a white flag (of sufficient size to be visible for one-half mile) raised and lowered vertically repeated until acknowledged by the draw tender, who answers with the same signal.

Island stuff

It wasn't until the 1970's that masses of people discovered Sanibel Island as a favorite vacation spot, and travel sections of newspapers and magazines have done their share to popularize the Island in recent years. One magazine, however, published an accurate description of Sanibel and Captiva back in 1945.

In September of that year, Motor Boating magazine included a story by Marie Dickey Kalman entitled "Island Stuff." In 1904, Ms. Kalman wrote, her grandfather, on his doctor's orders, beat a path south from Virginia. The end of his journey led to Sanibel.

"Grandpa took to the islands," she wrote, "and there he got his shoes so full of their sand that three generations have failed to shake it out."

Eventually, Grandpa discovered Captiva and decided to make it his home. He moved to Virginia temporarily until his new house was completed. That task, however, was far from easy. The first contractor sent frantic letters back to Virginia from the island.

The contractor couldn't work during the day because of the mosquitos, Ms. Kalman wrote, and he couldn't sleep at night because of the mosquitos. "In fact, he couldn't even breathe without inhaling mosquitos, and when he tried to eat, in they flew." Apparently, Cutters wasn't available in 1904.

Skating open

The successful summer roller skating program sponsored by the Police Recreation Club is currently taking a break until early September.

When the program resumes, buses will be taking skaters to the mainland rink. The meeting place will remain at the parking lot before the causeway.

The 200 skaters already enrolled will be contacted when a starting date is determined. Anyone wishing to enroll may call Pat Kair at 472-1152. Possible skating times are Monday nights, or Saturday noons.

YCC program ends

The J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge's fifth annual Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) camp ended August 8th, after eight weeks of work and environmental education activities.

This year's group, which consisted of five boys and two girls, built 2,500 feet of foot trails on the Bailey Tract, constructed 600 feet of boardwalk on the Gasparilla Trail Indian mounds, picked up thousands of pieces of litter on Point Ybel and other parts of the Refuge, and assisted with other Refuge projects including helping capture an injured manatee. Faust Mariani of Fort Myers was the Camp Director this year.

In addition to work projects, the group spent several hours per week on environmental awareness activities conducted by Mark (Bird) Westall of Sanibel. These activities were mostly on-site learning experiences. The enrollees will receive one-half credit hour on their high school transcript for their participation in this project.

Another YCC Camp is planned for next year if funds are available. Youths who are interested in enrolling should contact the Refuge headquarters for details shortly after the first of the year.

Satellite used in tree study

The University of Central Florida is studying the use of satellite photographs to determine which areas of the state need more trees.

Through a grant from the Florida Division of Forestry, the University is using Landsat satellite pictures which show the well-shaded regions of urban areas.

Indications are that a computer program can be written to turn the Landsat photographs into legible information: color to this program the Division of Forestry used aerial photographs and a grid, a more difficult method.

With the new method, the amount of light reflected by objects is measured to obtain readings. Four bands of light are measured by a radiometer in the satellite. Every object on the ground reflects to the satellite differently. By transferring the readings to a graph, landscape variations can be differentiated.

What does the Captiva Erosion Control District really want?

By Pat Harmel

Governor Bob Graham and the Florida Cabinet will be formally asked to sanction permits for the controversial beach renourishment project at South Seas Plantation in spite of the lingering political, economic and legal questions remaining over the management of public resources and the relationship of Mariner Properties to the Captiva Erosion Control District.

Earlier this year, attorneys for the District, pleading an "emergency situation," asked the Southwest Florida Legislative Delegation to consider changes in the makeup of the District that would have abolished the existing Captiva Erosion Control District and recreated it with some substantive changes in powers and jurisdiction.

On March 10, Frank Pavese, the District's attorney, filed a copy of the District's proposed legislation with State Representatives Frank Mann and Paul Nuckolls. That proposed legislation included an increase in the District's bonding power from $200,000 to $5 million; the ability to request a special tax levied by the County on all taxable property within the District to pay for erosion control projects, and the ability to exercise jurisdiction, control and supervision over all erosion prevention facilities, public or private, within the District.

Local, delegation Chairman, Frank Mann (D-Fort Myers), pointed out to Pavese that the District had failed to appear at the recently completed delegation hearings and there was not enough time to legally advertise the proposal and conduct public hearings before the April 8 cutoff date for filing local bills in Tallahassee.

On March 26th, however, Pavese submitted a revised version of the legislation to the delegation, claiming an "emergency situation" existed because Chapter 158 of the Florida Statutes, under which the Erosion District's powers were granted, had "recently" been abolished "unknownst to the Commissioners of the District," leaving the Erosion District in an "awkward position."

At that time, Pavese asked lawmakers to "bend the rules a little bit" due to "the circumstances of the case."

A review of the proposed legislation by legislative staffers revealed that Chapter 158 had been abolished in 1965, and that the repealing act specifically stated that "county erosion districts created under the provisions of Chapter 158, Florida Statutes, and presently in existence shall not be affected by the repeal of Chapter 158, Florida Statutes."

Chapter 158 was replaced by Chapter 161 which today governs the jurisdictional and legal authority for beach renourishment and erosion control.

On April 7, Mann advised Pavese of the repeal of Chapter 158 fifteen years earlier and noted that, "it would appear that this repeal does not affect the powers of the District as it is currently constituted."

"A review of the proposed bill also reflects that the redraft of this act includes some substantive changes in the powers and authority of the District, notably its bonding capacity, which I believe should be subject to public hearings and careful scrutiny of the public and the legislative delegation prior to enactment," Mann also added.

Mann told District officials that for these reasons, and the fact that the delegation was already past its bill filing deadlines, "this bill cannot be considered until the 1981 session."

"There were some really important changes in these bills and, frankly, we could not determine what 'emergency' existed now that had not existed for 15 years that would compel us to push through this bill without at least taking the opportunity to have the public review and comment on these proposed changes in the District's powers," said Mann's legislative aide, Don Moody.

"We simply wanted to make sure that the people of Captiva had an opportunity to review changes in the District that would affect them," Moody added, "before the Formal recommendations for approval of the project will be reviewed by the aides to the Governor and Cabinet prior to the final decision on August 26th, and lingering questions regarding the management of public resources by the state and the access to the beach by the public may still be addressed by the Governor and Cabinet, according to one aide.

The Captiva Erosion Control District is the sponsoring authority for the renourishment project and they will be seeking approval by the TITF for the privately funded South Seas project.

Legal questions over the District's authority to sponsor the project under current Florida Statute have been raised by attorneys for a group of Captiva property owners opposed to the project.

Attorney Richard Roosa has filed formal objections to the hearing officer's report, issued in June, which listed the Captiva Erosion Control District as the "sponsoring authority" for the renourishment project, and is asking the Governor and Cabinet to reject the permit request.

Roosa's objections are contained as an attachment to the agenda package on the renourishment project, although the staff report itself did not address his legal objections.

The Captiva Erosion Control District, was created under the provision of Chapter 158 of the Florida Statutes.

Chapter 158 was repealed in 1965, although the repealing act left the powers they assumed under that Chapter intact. The repeal of Chapter 158 contained the provision that "Districts created under this act are not affected by this repeal."

Currently, under Chapter 161, of the Florida Statutes, a "sponsoring authority" is defined as any "county, municipality, or beach renourishment authority" created under the provisions of that chapter of state law.

Roosa has contended that since the Erosion District was not granted specific powers under this chapter of state law as a "beach renourishment authority" the Captiva Erosion District is acting "beyond the scope of their authority" in sponsoring this project for South Seas.

An attorney for the Erosion Control District sought changes in the District's authority during the last session of the Legislature which would have clearly established them as a beach renourishment authority under existing state statutes, although Captiva Erosion Control District Chairman Dick Butze has emphatically denied that the attempted change was related to the South Seas renourishment project application and possible legal objections to the relationship of the District to Mariner Properties. Mariner Properties is the corporate owner of South Seas Plantation.

On the water

By Capt. Mike Fuery

Praise the Lord and pass the pinfish, because it appears that the snook are going to run strong into September and, better yet, the redfish have moved into our beach areas.

As many fishermen had predicted, the snook are starting and ending late in their spawning period this year, and that means you have several weeks left to get into the action, both in the passes and on the beaches.

This year, contrary to last, I worked along the Gulf of Mexico shoreline and came upon some very nice sized snook. These fish are very, very silvery, having always lived in the clearer waters of the Gulf. The darker colored fish come from the mangrove islands inside the barrier islands. Make no mistake, they all taste just fine, so don't be worried about the color. When you start being picky about the color of your snook you know you've been in the sun a little too long!

I've got a ton of snook stories I'll save until fall gets here and the fishing has slowed a bit, but remind me to show you the scar on my right leg where I got my first "snook bite."

Here's a re-cap of the snook action and I expect it to go on for a few more weeks - that is if the hurricanes and red tide don't change the feeding habits of the big fish.

First, the Gulfside snook are running well over the average size that you would normally see, in the passes for instance. I would say the average snook taken on the beaches is between six and 20 pounds. You do get some larger and some smaller, but overall that's accurate.

I think that the best news for the average snook fisherman or those wanting to try it for the first time is that the action takes place right on the beach. You don't always need a boat, but, as most snook fishermen will tell you, having a boat anchored say 100 feet off-shore gives a certain advantage.

Work with pinfish or pigfish about three inches long and as fresh as you possibly can get them. Incidentally, some of us who have fished professionally for a couple of years have noticed that bait fish have the ability to change their colors somewhat. You want as silvery a fish as possible. They seem to be seen better by the snook. One of the best ways to keep your baitfish really sharp is to paint your bait container white, on the inside. Sounds silly, I know, but it works. If you have a fishwell on board which has grass or gunk all over it making it dark inside, I bet you bring out darker colored baitfish.

On the redfish scene, it would appear that this year has some really promising fish coming into the area. The best part is that the reds are feeding right alongside the snook, just on the beaches. The other day we pulled in an 11-pounder and I've seen a few others since then in the same weight category.

The reds are taking the same baits as the snook, so no need to change baits. Reds will take large shrimp, but so will catfish, jacks and ladyfish and you will run through your bait supply before you ever get a real bite.

The fish are out there, on the beach side, but you had better go armed with patience. You have to sit and wait. Sometimes it takes three hours to get a bite, sometimes three minutes - and they bite for the next three hours. You never know how the big ones will react, but the secret is patience and if you don't have it, you better take up dog racing or something that's over fast because you won't ever catch a snook or redfish.

On the side of my Mako fishing boat are the letters "BLIND LUCK." It's there for good reason. We all need a little luck when we fish. Go get 'em this week and remember to work those beaches."

Indictments issued in illegal sea turtle case

In the largest case in United States history involving the smuggling of sea turtle products, a Federal grand jury in Miami last week indicted four men and six corporations for illegally importing 45 tons of meat from endangered sea turtles in this country.

A 13-count indictment charges the defendants with conspiracy, transporting sea turtle meat with fraudulent documents, or importing turtle meat in violation of the Endangered Species Act and the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES).

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials estimate that about 7,500 endangered Pacific (olive) Ridley sea turtles from Mexico had to be slaughtered to obtain 89,572 pounds of meat tips, chunks, and filets that were illegally imported into Miami International Airport between January 1978 and June 1979.

The indictments, following an 18-month investigation by government wildlife and customs agents, are part of a larger Federal crackdown by five agencies aimed at curbing the booming illegal trade in endangered species products in the United States.

In addition to the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service, and the other agencies participating in the overall effort include the National Marine Fisheries Service in the Department of Commerce, the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in the Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Customs Service in the Department of the Treasury and the Department of Justice.

Last week's action in Miami follows the return of a 12-count indictment of two seafood companies and their owners by a Federal grand jury in Brownsville, Texas, on July 29. The related case charges the illegal receipt and sale of over eight tons of Pacific Ridley meat and names individuals and companies in Brownsville and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, as defendants. About 1,300 Ridley turtles were slaughtered to obtain the meat in this case, the Fish and Wildlife Service has estimated.

In the Miami indictments, two Mexican nationals, Antonio Suarez Gutierrez and Juan Alsina Ramirez, and three Mexican companies, PIOSA (Pesqueria Industrial De Oaxaca, Sociedad Anonima), Meximpex, and Meximtrade, were named. According to the indictments, Suarez owned and operated PIOSA, located in Oaxaca, Mexico, and obtained large quantities of sea turtle meat from the southwestern beaches of Mexico. He later transported the meat to Mexico City, where Alsina, director and chief operating officer of Meximpex and Meximtrade, obtained fraudulent documents used to import the turtle meat into the United States, the indictment charges.

American citizens and companies indicted were Rogelio Alejandro, of Miami, and the company of which he is president, Flanic Trading Company, of Hialeah; and B & B World Enterprises, Inc., of Miami. Ezpeleta, president and director of Jacmel, is also secretary and director of Flanic, and secretary of B & B World Enterprises.

Except for B & B World Enterprises, all of these individuals and companies were involved in a conspiracy, the indictment charges. According to it, the defendants agreed to use the term "chunked turtle meat - Dermatmys mawil" on the various customs entry documents accompanying the shipments. Dermatmys mawil is a Mexican freshwater species of turtle whose importation into the United States at present is legal.

It is a violation of the Endangered Species Act to import any type of sea turtle products, including meat, into the United States. This country banned all imports of sea turtle products in 1978. The breeding colonies of the Ridley turtle on the Pacific coast of Mexico and the Gulf of California were listed as endangered in 1978. Elsewhere, the species is listed as threatened.

The adult Pacific Ridley weighs an average of 85 pounds and yields about 12 pounds of meat per animal. The meat, oil and eggs of this species are in high demand, the prized meat going into the restaurant market and the eggs used in cooking and eaten as a male aphrodisiac. In addition, the hides of the Ridley can be tanned and fashioned into shoes, handbags, and belts.

Collectively, the four species of sea turtle most heavily exploited for illegal trade (green, hawksbill, Atlantic Ridley and Pacific Ridley) represent the most profitable wild animal on the international market today. Raw tortoise shell, for example, now exceeds the prices paid for elephant ivory. Over 50 percent of a sea turtle - meat, shell, skin and oil - is marketable in some form.

Criminal violations of the Endangered Species Act carry a maximum fine of $20,000 and a jail sentence of up to one year. Criminal violations of customs law carry a maximum fine of $10,000 and a jail sentence of up to five years.

SPD receives LEAA grant

The Sanibel Police Department will be purchasing a new piece of equipment as a result of funds received from the Law Enforcement Administrative Assistance (LEAA) program.

The new equipment is a logging recorder, which is a machine able to record all emergency and telephone messages. It stores calls for a period of time, during which they may be played back if necessary.

LEAA funds only provide for part of the cost of the logging recorder, the rest is made up by State, Federal Government, and City monies.

This piece of equipment is a part of most police departments, but the first of its kind on Sanibel.

Vol Construction wins Ding Darling bid

The VOL Construction Company of Knoxville, Tennessee was the low bidder for construction of the J.N. "Ding" Darling Refuge's Visitor Contact Station, sewage collection and disposal systems and various allied items. They will be officially awarded the bid after furnishing the necessary performance and payment bonds. Their bid of $549,731.85 was the lowest of three bids submitted. One company from Fort Myers and one from Orlando also bid on the project.

As a part of the initial preparation of the construction site, the Refuge, in cooperation with Sanibel's Vegetation Committee, will sponsor a plant give-away session on August 23rd. At that time, a marked portion of the construction site will be open to the public for removal of any unflagged plants 3 inches or under in diameter at ground level. At a later date, another portion of the site will be open to the public for removal of buttonwood.

Location of the plant give-away site is at the entrance to the wildlife drive.

On August 23rd, a Refuge employee or two will be at the site with a copy of the construction plans. Persons interested in the project are encouraged to look over the plans and discuss them with personnel at that time.

Army Corps receives Captiva application

B.A. Lynch, of Manchester Missouri, has applied to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to construct on Captiva a 70 foot long by five foot wide private dock with two 15 by 30 foot boathouses at the watermost end of the dock. The purpose of the project is to provide boating access and dockage for a private single family residence.

Location of the proposed dock is the west shoreline of Roosevelt Channel (Pine Island Sound) on Captiva Island, about one third mile north of Blind Pass.

Comments or objections must be submitted in writing by September 10, 1980. Contact: Jacksonville District, Army Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 4970, Jacksonville, Florida 32201.

In our opinion

When are my civil rights better than yours?

By Pat Harmel

When do the civil rights of the accused outweigh the civil rights of the victim?

That's the question at least one victim, one State Attorney's office lawyer and more than one law enforcement official are asking today.

On March 16, the Sanibel Police Department received a call from a Missouri visitor staying at the Sanibel Arms West. According to the visitor, two rings valued at $4500 had been stolen from a box kept in the dresser drawer of her room. The box, which had contained four rings and a wristwatch, had been opened by the woman the day before - and she had discovered her 2.4 carat diamond ring and diamond studded wedding band gone.

The woman told the police that she remembered a cleaning woman working in the room two days before. At that time, said the visitor, she had been in and out of the room several times. Other than the cleaning woman, there had been no visitors to the room.

Through the manager, the police were able to pinpoint the maid, an employee of Elly's Cleaning Service in North Fort Myers. Rhonda McCaffery, 20, of North Fort Myers, was contacted by the SPD and agreed to submit to a polygraph test on the theft of the rings.

On March 27, however, when Ms. McCaffery showed up to take the lie detector test, administrator John Elbon was unable to conduct it. Ms. McCaffery had reportedly consumed "some pills and alcohol" to "calm her nerves," thus making an accurate polygraph reading impossible.

In the course of conversation, according to Elbon, McCaffery confessed to having taken the rings. Elbon contacted the SPD and police records show that McCaffery again confessed to the theft and said that she was willing to sign a statement to that effect.

She was driven to the Sanibel Police Department where she signed a confession, was read her rights, arrested and transported to the Lee County jail. Later, according to police records, another witness signed a collaborating statement to the effect that McCaffery had indeed stolen the rings.

On March 27, the SPD was able to trace the missing jewelry to Bea's Pawn Shop. McCaffery, however, had not pawned the jewelry but had sold it to the shop for $390. Thus the jewelry could not be returned to its rightful owner. Lee County pawn shop regulations are far more lax than the City of Fort Myers'.

A week ago yesterday the first court hearing on the March arrest was held. It was a mere hearing on a motion filed by the public defender to suppress McCaffery's confession and all evidence subsequently gathered on the case.

Such motions are routine in cases where the accused has confessed.

But this time Lee County Circuit Judge Shafer agreed with the public defender on the motion to suppress. And the state's case flew out the window.

According to Jack Primm, SPD officer in charge of the case, "The state attorney had no choice but to drop the case. All our evidence had been suppressed."

The public, it appears, paid for a public defender and judge who managed to drop what appeared to be an open and shut case. The Missouri woman will not be seeing her rings again, thanks to lax laws governing County pawn shops. And one more case on the books is marked closed

Community Church offers youth programs

A new program for children in grades one to three will begin this fall at the Sanibel Community Church along with the church's regular Youth Club program for boys and girls in grades 4 to 8. Both programs are open to all children in the grades listed who are not members of another church in the area.

The new Pre-Youth Club will follow a shorter program tailored to the age of the participants. The group will meet on Thursday afternoons from 3:30 to 5 p.m., starting on October 2nd. A Carol Choir composed of members of this group will sing at Sunday morning worship services at Community Church occasionally during the year. Youth Club, which meets at 3 p.m. on Wednesday afternoon and goes through dinner, starts on September 24th. A Covenant Choir made up of all Youth Clubbers has responsibility for music leadership regularly at the 9 a.m. Sunday services during the Winter season.

Parents wishing to enroll children in either the Pre-Youth Club or Youth Club groups will be required to attend one of two meetings on September 14th and 17th at 7 p.m. at the church. A fee of $10 per quarter will be charged to cover the cost of Bible study books, craft materials, and in the case of the Youth Club, the weekly dinner.

COTI calls for Council candidates

The press was excluded from last week's COTI meeting when a representative from the newly formed Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA) addressed the group. The following is the press release issued by COTI after their meeting.

Citizens who are interested in preserving the natural and unique environment on Sanibel through serving on City Council should contact COTI (Committee of the Islands) immediately, according to Dave Davenport, Chairman. COTI is presently screening candidates for possible endorsement, and candidates may contact either Davenport (472-4382) or Caroline Beebe (472-2180). COTI is also planning a Town Hall meeting in October to present local candidates to the citizenry.

COTI's concern for appropriate commercial development continues. Last spring, COTI presented a paper on commercial growth to the Planning Commission showing that the recent explosion in commercial growth has brought more tourist related shops and services, rather than those geared for residential needs. A COTI committee is monitoring activities in the commercial growth area.

Members of COTI are presently collating and tallying the traffic survey taken by the city last fall, thus saving the city thousands of dollars. John Shepherd is in charge of the project.

Development of the Causeway Property should be kept in keeping with the intent of Sanibel citizens who voted for its acquisition in 1978, according to a statement presented by COTI to the Planning Commission last week. In the statement, presented by James Irwin of COTI's Board of Directors, it was pointed out that citizens received a brochure shortly before the referendum on the property, saying that the Causeway property would be kept as a natural, unspoiled park. COTI voiced opposition to piecemeal development.

COTI's meeting date and time have been changed. The Board of Directors now meets the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the library, and COTI members are welcome to attend.

"We take each game as it comes," said South Seas Coach Tony Franchi minutes before last Sunday's South Seas - Dunes Squad match. "There isn't a team in this league that can't beat you on any given day."

On the surface, Franchi's words seemed overly cautious. After all, South Seas had lost but two of their 19 games in 1980. In the last three weeks of the season, South Seas' schedule (pitting them against weak competition) made the idea of their dropping a contest laughable.

Franchi's words, however, came back to haunt him as sixth place Dunes Squad (8-12) overpowered the tough South Seas 86er's, 10-9.

While the 86er's were losing their game, West Wind was celebrating their win over the Timbers. In a one-sided contest held earlier Sunday, West Wind beat the heat by disposing of the Timbers in five innings. The score was 20-1. It was the second time this season that West Wind beat the third place Timbers (15-5) with the 15-run rule.

The win was especially important for West Wind, who now shares first place with South Seas. Even if West Wind wins the rest of their games, though, they may have to settle for second place.

Now that the season is winding down, West Wind and South Seas have almost identical schedules. If neither team loses another game, South Seas will win the pennant. The reason: South Seas has won two out of their three contests with West Wind this season.

Truman Wilson, playing like he owned the greens, shot the high individual score in Tuesday's regular tournament of the Beachview Men's Association.

Taking the team honors at plus five Tuesday was the threesome of Bob Robertson, Bud Ristow, and Ray Logan.

A plus five score was also good enough to win Saturday's team contest. The winning team consisted of Jeff Dean, Ken Preston, Ed Barone, and Larry Simon. Ed Reed shot the high individual score.

Winning last week's Sunday mixed scramble at three under par was the team of Clay Marsh, Betty Puff, and Helen and Elmer Dailey. Finishing second at even par were Roger Osborn, Kathryn Ransavage, and the Forsters.

Solar pool cover warning

Floridians who have installed solar pool covers are being warned to remove the covers completely before swimming, according to Jane W. Robinson, Director of the Division of Consumer Services of the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The warning came after three California family members drowned and several other deaths were reported in conjunction with pools outfitted with the solar pool cover.

According to Robinson, the danger occurs when the cover is only partially removed to allow use of the pool.

"People who swam in pools where the cover was still partially in place apparently became disoriented when trying to reach the surface to breathe. They were trapped under the clear cover," she explained.

"Pool owners should never partially remove a cover and swimmers should avoid pools where a solar cover is partially in place," warned Robinson.

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), which is investigating the drowning deaths, a solar pool cover is a buoyant, translucent, plastic cover designed to be cut to fit the shape of a pool. The cover is placed flat on the surface of the water and, through passive solar energy, heats the water. The covers sell for about $200 and some have been sold as original pool equipment.

Floridians who have experienced safety problems with solar pool covers should immediately contact the CPSC in Washington. The agency's toll-free telephone number is 1-800-638-8326.

Portrait

Bob Williams

Age: 60

Height: "I'm shrinking now! Probably about 5' 10", I guess."

Roots: Oberlin, Ohio

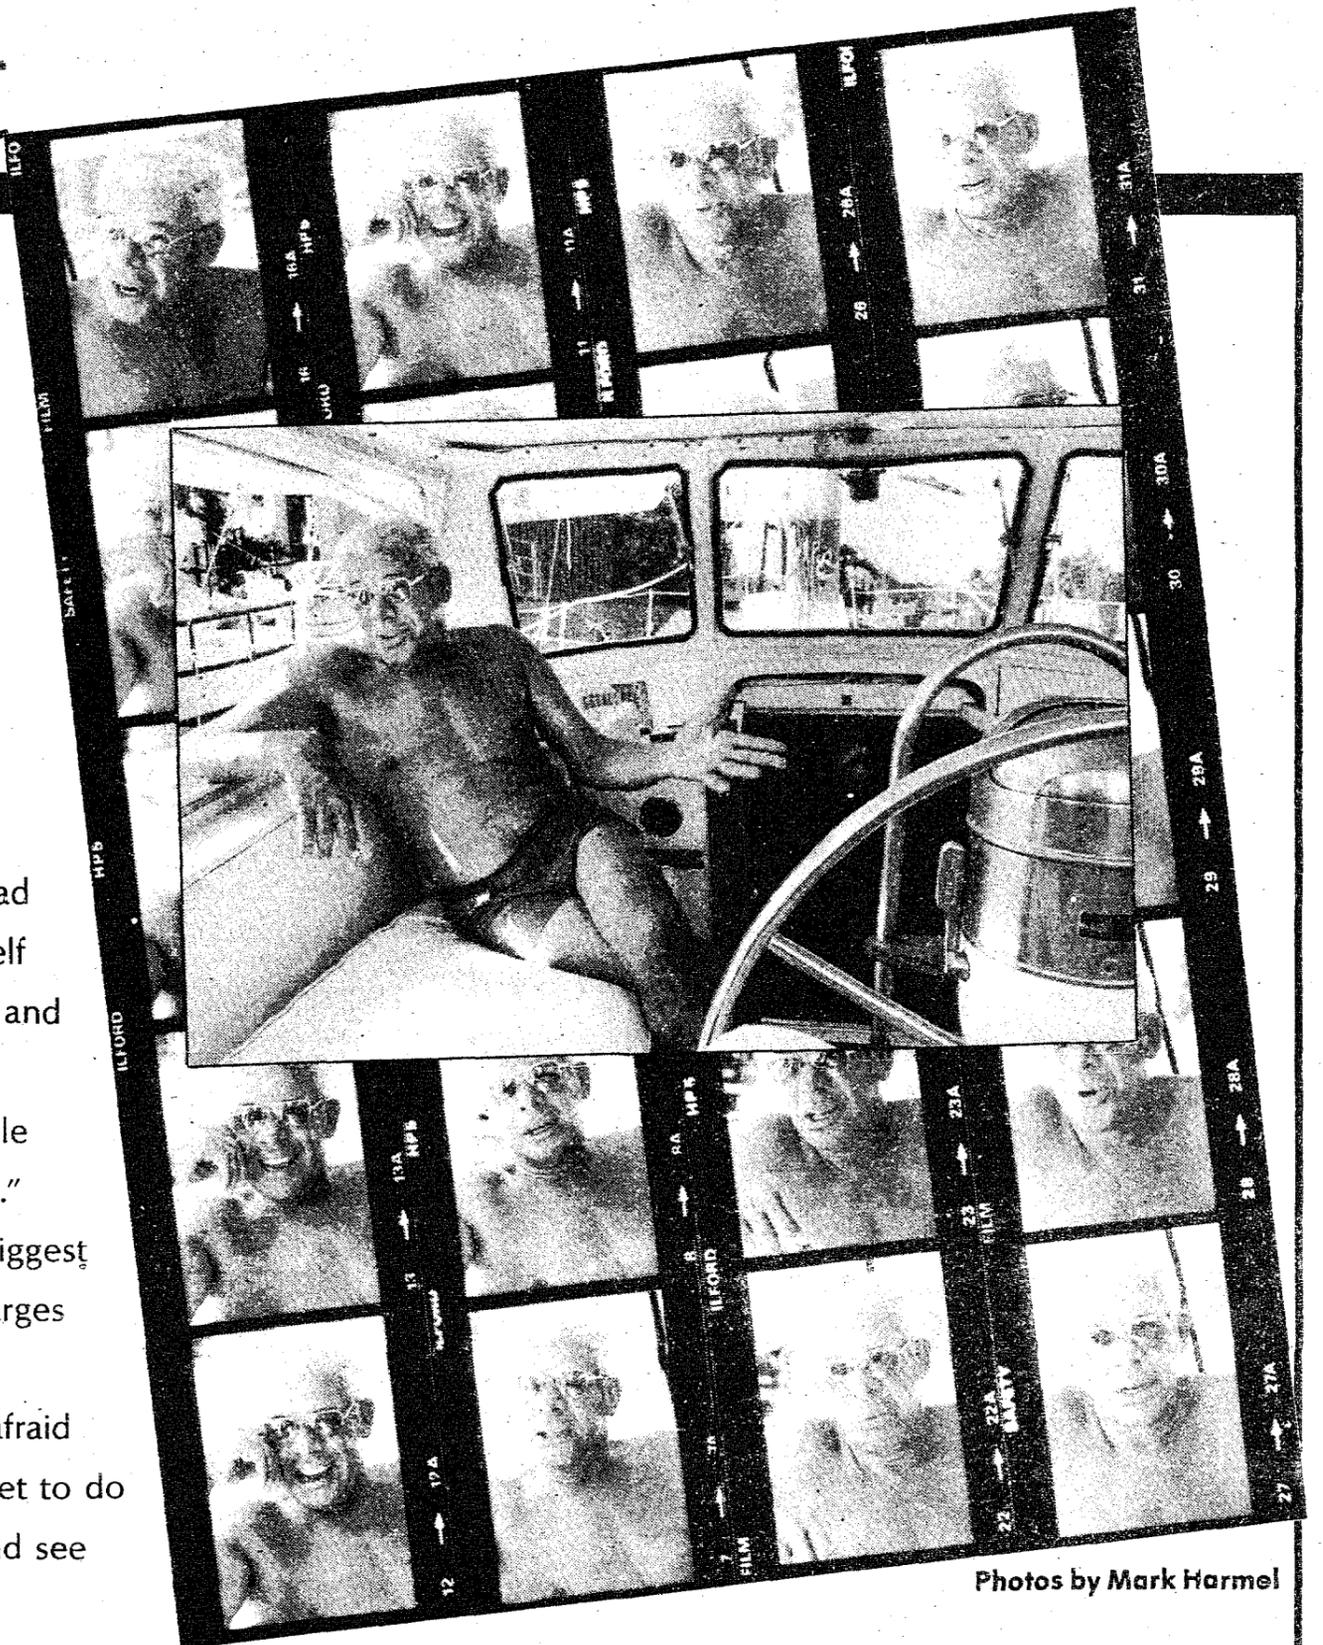

Last Book Read: "I've been reading a book every 24 hours. I read everything about the water I can. I read Killer Ship and scared myself to death and I read Jaws II and that scared me! I've read everything about the people who sail around the world."

Pleasures: "Sailing. I get the biggest bang out of it; it really charges my battery."

Wish: "To live to be 90. I'm afraid I'm going to die before I get to do everything I want to do and see everything I want to see."

Mentor: "My father. He was a free spirit too."

Words of Wisdom: "You'd think somebody had the key, wouldn't you? It sure isn't me! I take one day at a time and enjoy every single day."

Bob Williams began his sailing career with a small piece of wood in a large mudpuddle.

From there he progressed to a bed-sheet sail on his four-wheel wagon, a "couple" year stint on a Great Lakes iron ore boat, and then, at the age of 55, became the year round, live-aboard master of a 41 ft. sailboat.

You've probably seen "Captain Bob" without even realizing it. He is included in a film clip used in the TV 20 "This Is My Home" promotional campaign. You'll recognize him next time; he's the one holding the fish.

It was seven years ago that Bob's wife tired of listening to his mooning for a retirement life on a boat; either do it or quit talking about it, was her ultimatum. It took two years to sell the house, get the boat together and "get rid of the kids - they thought they were coming too!" But it's been smooth sailing ever since.

It took Marjorie and Bob Williams six months to sail from Oberlin, Ohio to Sanibel Island, making leisurely side tours here and there and spending six weeks in Chesapeake Bay. Marjorie, with her degree in Early American architecture, served as tour guide along the way.

"Actually," claims Bob, "I thought I was on my way to the Caribbean. But my wife, who is a big sheller, was coming to Sanibel. I didn't even know I was coming here and now I've been here five years!"

"The boat," he adds, "has been sinking with her shells ever since we got here."

But the Williams are in no way tied down to the Island. They "bump" their way through the sea whenever the urge strikes, from the Bahamas to Venezuela.

It's a far cry from the life Bob led for so many years as a maintenance man for an electrical company in Ohio. He has, however, been able to adapt his maintenance skills to the high seas life. "I'm always piddling around," he admits. "I fix everything and am always giving advice!"

"A boat," he says, "is like a small city; it has its own electrical system and everything. I try to do nice things for it."

Despite his claim to being "the poorest man on the Island," the friends Bob has made at Sanibel Marina, where he docks the boat and works a couple days a week, have made him rich in emotional ways.

"I loooovvvvee the tourists!" he says, and then adds with a wink, "And I love to see them go!" It's obvious that the tourists love Bob too, and remember him from season to season. He claims to never remember anybody's name - even the family that insists on taking his picture every year on their annual sojourn to the Islands.

If it sounds as though Bob has sailing in his veins it's because he does. His father worked the iron ore boats on the Great Lakes, and told his son wondrous tales of adventure on the water - stories that Bob still is not sure were true.

Later, following in his father's footsteps, Bob learned the truth: that it was wonderful and horrible both. He suffered through "worse storms on the Great Lakes than you ever find in the ocean," and learned that when you got scared in the middle of Lake Erie, "You couldn't say 'My momma's calling' and leave." Nevertheless, he never shook the sailing bug.

He loves everything that has to do with boats or the water, although he does call the tiny Hobie Cat sailboat "suicide - it'll take your breath away!" He enjoys scaring himself to death and does it frequently. "I read Jaws II and that scared me!" he says. But in reality, he's not too afraid of sharks. "In the Bahama's," he says, "you sail all day and come in at night. The sharks will eat you there. Barracudas can scare you too, but I eat a lot of them!"

The most scared he has ever been was not on the water, but docked at Marsh Harbor this summer. The 50 ft. boat docked next to him was struck by lightning and, when his neighbors failed to answer his calls, convinced him they were dead. Several hours later, however, they surfaced, skunk-drunk, and the ordeal was over. In lightning, says Bob, "you sit quiet and peek out the window and you don't touch any metal! But more people get struck under trees than in boats."

Having just returned from his annual summertime trip to the Bahamas, Bob is taking life easy at the marina. He's taken up the slingshot in order to keep the blackbirds "from pooping all over the boat" and manages to read a book a day. His favorites? The sail around the world thrillers, of course. "When you're young enough to sail around the world you're too busy working and building a family to do it," he notes. "I'm an arm-chair world cruiser, now!"

And the only thing he worries about is not having the time to leisurely pursue all the things most of us only dream about.

CONA elects officers

By Pat Harmel

The newly formed Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA) held another meeting last week to elect officers, establish committees and further define what they view as their role in the community.

Newly elected CONA president, Urban Palmer, addressed the Board of Directors of the Committee of the Islands (COTI) last week to articulate CONA's goals and purpose. "I was very well received," said Palmer about the meeting. "They were in the dark as to what we are all about. I just explained to them what we're trying to do and now we'll let them use their own judgement on whether or not their ideas correspond with ours."

According to Palmer, CONA sees itself as one of three "arms" in the community; the Committee of the Islands and the condominium associations being the other two.

"What we're trying to do," he explained, "is to solidify the people of the Island with City Hall and work out our problems. We don't want to beat these people (public officials) over the head, we want to work with them."

On the possibility of a CONA-COTI collaboration, Palmer stressed that CONA would not be "an arm" of COTI, as had been previously speculated, but would instead work with them on issues that are mutually beneficial to the community.

"We'd like to get together with them on the selection of City Council candidates," Palmer said, "so that we're both supporting the same three candidates. We want peace and unionization; we want to be together on the issues."

CONA is currently in the process of establishing by-laws and taking the necessary steps for incorporation. According to secretary Alice Kylo, 17 subdivisions and two condominium associations have already joined CONA. Fifteen more subdivisions and numerous condominium associations have also been invited to join.

Besides endorsing political candidates, CONA intends to "form a group to go to City Council meetings to protest or acclaim things that come up," according to Kylo. "It's no use complaining when the decisions are over," she said.

Palmer pointed out also that CONA would be a supportive group for the various neighborhood organizations (organization presidents will be the representatives to CONA). "We don't intend to tell the associations how to run their business," Palmer stressed, "but if one of them gets into trouble we'll be there to help out."

CONA Communique'

The following news release was issued this week by the officers of the Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA).

Beyond the family, the neighborhood is the most universal base of social life to be found in any society. CONA's demand for local control and the idea of returning power to the neighborhood is certainly not a unique one. But as the chorus of support grows and the debate continues, the community becomes more certain of its ability to cope responsibly.

Traditionally, neighbors tend to communicate more readily with their neighbors, and with neighborhood leaders. These leaders, in turn, quickly respond to their inquiries and complaints. When the neighbors assemble to share community and committee functions, the cost of agencies and consultants diminish. However, when their counsel is rejected, as it sometimes is, and as it sometimes should be, and when the recommendations of professionals are also rejected the entire community becomes confused, demoralized and dissatisfied. Active neighborhoods banded together tend to deny or support City Council actions on these issues as their voices become stronger and their presence more visible.

On Wednesday, August 13, 1980, the Committee of Neighborhood Associations formally elected: Urban Palmer, President; George Christensen, Vice President; William Arnold, Treasurer; Alice Kylo, Secretary.

The president appointed James Fox chairman of the committee to incorporate and draw up by-laws. Solomon Goodman will lend his personal expertise to this effort. Paul Howe was appointed chairman of the fact finding committee so that we may respond responsibly to various issues.

With the blessings of God, and the support of our neighbors we will not fail in this effort to control our destinies.

law is changed."

Pavese then reconstructed the proposal, with a cover letter to Mann calling for amendments "due to the fact that Chapter 158 was repealed," and insisted that the District was still in an "emergency situation."

The new proposal admitted that the District was still "a valid and existing public body" unaffected by the repeal of Chapter 158.

Although the new proposal did not specify the increased bonding power included in the earlier drafts, it still represented a broad expansion of powers.

The latest proposal gave the District control of all erosion control projects, including, "seawalls, groins, pumping stations, dredges, artificial beach feeding mechanisms, breakwaters, dams, bulkheads, fills, floodways" or any other works, structures, equipment or other facilities of any type whatsoever and any beach renourishment necessary to protect District lands."

The new proposal would have also allowed the District to acquire, construct, reconstruct or improve erosion prevention projects in and for the District - regardless of whether constructed by individual person, firm or corporation. The ability to exercise jurisdiction over any such project - including the ability to prohibit it - was also delegated to the District.

Representative Mann's response to the revised legislation remained the same: it was too late to introduce new legislation and the "substantive changes" proposed should be subject to public hearing.

Mann also requested further clarification of the "emergency situation" repeatedly referred to by Pavese.

"What does the District propose to do that they do not have the authority to undertake now, and how is this related to the repeal of Chapter 158?" Mann queried in a letter to Pavese.

The legislature adjourned on June 6 without the proposed changes in the District ever being considered.

"We were trying to get a handle on exactly what the problem was here before we made any last minute legislative changes in the District's powers," Moody said, "and we still have not received a response to those questions."

Dick Butze, District chairman, labeled the proposed legislation a matter of "housekeeping," necessary for later District projects. "The nightmare we all share," he said, "is that we'll get down the road on a project and meet up with a technicality."

"We're not trying to expand our powers," claimed Butze, "we just want to be legally safe. I don't believe that this (proposed legislation) goes any further than what we had before."

In a phone conversation with the Islander, Pavese's only explanation was, "I think it's a little bit of an emergency myself...When you find something out (like the repeal of Chapter 158) I don't think you should just sit."

"That certainly appears to be a legal and jurisdictional question that may have to be addressed by the Governor and Cabinet in light of Roosa's formal objections to the hearing officer's report," said Mann's aide.

Cape Coral attorney Richard Roosa has challenged the legality of the District sponsoring the South Seas project.

"If that jurisdictional authority was questionable," continued Moody, "that could certainly be an 'emergency situation' for the proponents of this project and may be the basis for a court challenge by the opponents if the project permits are approved."

Rep. Mann has said that he is "neutral" on the merits of the South Seas project, and has suggested that these questions should be "directed to the permitting and administrative process and the Governor and Cabinet."

Some officials in the Division of State Lands have privately questioned the merits of utilizing a public resource - the "borrowed" sand - to enhance private property without the state being compensated for the resource.

If the Governor and Cabinet agreed to the original request by South Seas, that the erosion control line (separating public from private beach) be moved to the new mean high water line after the sand had been pumped upon the beach, the action would in effect give South Seas deed and title to the newly created land that was once a public resource.

The practice of "giving away" public land through erosion control projects is commonplace throughout the state, ac-ording to legislative staffers, and a refusal to move the erosion control line in the South Seas case may set a new precedent for state resource management.

Critics of the project point out though, that the bulk of the "public" sand to be deposited at South Seas is far from the nearest public beach access, and people other than South Seas guests and residents will have little opportunity to enjoy "their" resource - a proposed one-third of the renourished beach.

By funding the project through private corporate monies, South Seas has skirted requirements of state law mandating public beach access when "public" funds are used in a renourishment project.

"Without commenting on this project in particular, I can say that there certainly are a number of resource management issues raised by state law in Chapter 177 and Chapter 177 (which concern establishment of the boundaries between public and private property in wetland areas) which are just now coming into focus," said Moody.

"During the last session of the legislature, we were dealing with the location of the mean high water line, which defines the limits of the state sovereignty lands, and the state's procedures for setting that line," he added, "and we have witnessed the literal give-away of thousands of acres of publically owned lands because of faulty or fraudulent procedures for determining that line."

Refuge Report

by Donna M. Stanek, Outdoor Recreation Planner, J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge

The Eastern indigo snake or Drymarchon corais couperi is currently listed as a threatened species throughout its range which includes Southeast Georgia, Florida and the lower Keys.

This shiny bluish-black snake is one of the largest colubrids, or nonpoisonous snakes, found in the world. The average adult length is usually five to six feet, with the largest recorded length being 103.5 inches or over eight and one-half feet long.

Indigos are generally found in areas having high and dry well-drained sandy soils such as those preferred by the gopher tortoise. The snakes will often utilize gopher tortoise burrows as dens and to lay their eggs. During the warmer months they can also be found in streams, swamps and occasionally woodland areas.

Indigos mature sexually in three to four years. Eggs are laid in burrows, such as that of the gopher tortoise, in clutches of five to twelve beginning in late November and continuing through March. Incubation lasts approximately 16 weeks with most hatching occurring in August and September. Hatchlings are from 18 to 24 inches in length. These snakes feed on frogs, salamanders, rodents, small mammals and birds by using powerful jaws to capture and swallow their prey sometimes while it's still alive.

Throughout their lives they remain generally inactive during the winter, emerging from their dens when air temperatures exceed 50 degrees F.

The decline of the indigo snake population can be attributed to two factors: loss of habitat and collection by people for pets.

On Sanibel, indigo snakes can be found in the same dry upland areas associated with the gopher tortoise. On the Refuge they are usually along the ridge area paralleling Sanibel-Captiva Road. Indigo snakes are protected under both Federal and State law, both of which prohibit the capture, selling or possession of indigo snakes without a special permit.

Plant dig planned

Once again Sanibel residents will get a chance to dig some fine native trees and shrubs for transplanting to their own homes. This is an excellent time to transplant, since the dependable rains make for a high degree of success. The area for the dig is the site of the new "Ding" Darling Visitors Center and Administration Building, which is covered with fine native species such as sea grape, wild lime, white indigo berry, wild olive, buckthorn, leather fern, wax myrtle and small gumbo limbo. No trees or shrubs over three or four inches in diameter may be removed since the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will transplant and utilize the larger trees. The dig will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, August 23. Members of the Sanibel Vegetation Committee and representatives of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will be available to identify plants and give advice on transplanting and care.

Bring a shovel and pots, baskets, canvas or plastic to transport the plants. Stout footwear, long trousers and bug spray are recommended. Cars should be parked at the entrance to the Wildlife Sanctuary on Sanibel-Captiva Road. The site is about 100 feet from the entrance on the right side of the Wildlife Drive.

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.
 At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Tall Australian pines shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and baits for health produce fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several new shopping centers featuring everything from a gift shop for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, to a sandwich shop, ice cream parlour, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.
 At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the Island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and moviehouse.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooming the back bay...Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma, take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety - from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter and of course, for all shells, shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells...the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

For Your Information

BEACH ACCESS

Sanibel has miles of public Gulf-front beaches, any one of which is only minutes from your lodging. Lighthouse Point is a stretch of Federal land on the Eastern tip of Sanibel Island, and from there, the Gulf beach is accessible again at the end of Donax Street, at Tarpon Bay Road, at Bowman's Beach Road (off Sanibel-Captiva Road) and Turner's Beach, which is located at Blind Pass, between Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

On Captiva Island, public beach access can be found at Turner Beach (which has public facilities) or further north, just past the entrance to South Seas Plantation.

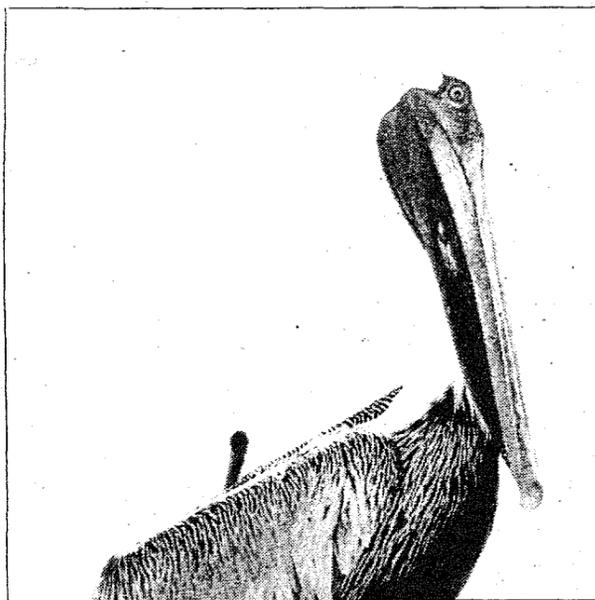

NOTE: STATE LAW PROHIBITS NUDE SUN-BATHING ON ALL FLORIDA BEACHES. VIOLATORS WILL BE PROSECUTED.

CAMPING

Camping on the beach is prohibited and while everyone enjoys a beach fire, the Sanibel Fire Board has signed into law an ordinance prohibiting open beach fires. Prior to the ordinance, a permit was necessary for a beach bonfire, but as of July 19, 1980, it is now illegal. An exemption to the ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" X 24" X 12" deep with an extruded metal grill) for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit. After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for the cleanup of any debris or litter in your area.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel City limits is not only illegal (violators of the law are subject to a fine of up to $500, or up to 60 days in jail, or both), but can be extremely dangerous. Alligators can run 45 m.p.h., so if you're close enough to feed an alligator, he's close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license - available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $3.75.

MINIMUM LEGAL LENGTHS:

Blue Fish	10 inches
Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	12 inches
Mullet	12 inches
Pompano	10 inches
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	12 inches

SHELLING

The City of Sanibel Resolution limiting the taking of live shells to 2 live shells per person per species is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

SPEED LIMITS

There are varying speed limits (20-30 m.p.h.) as one comes across the causeway, and there is a very good reason for them...to preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress. This speed limit is strictly enforced with the use of radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.
Driving or parking a motor vehicle or moped on the bike path is strictly prohibited. Violators will be ticketed.

BICYCLE RULES

If you're not used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out for it on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A State law and City Ordinance combine to PROHIBIT PARKING OR DRIVING ON THE BIKE PATH. MOPEDS ARE NOT PERMITTED ON THE BIKE PATHS.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding. Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.
Drive Safely!

DOGGY DO'S & DON'TS

If you're visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets. Remember: wherever you are, clean up after your pet! The friendly reminder... "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints"...applies to dogs, too. There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

Police Beat

Lost children, lost suitcases, lost dogs, and reports of nude dancers at the American Legion were all calls received by the Sanibel police Department this week.

Vandalism was reported to the Standard station, a woman hit a tree on Donax Street and several speeding tickets were issued on San-Cap Rd. A quick change artist took advantage of salespeople at the Unpressured Cooker in Periwinkle Place and Miki's House in Tahitian Gardens. An accident with injuries occurred on Periwinkle Way on Aug. 13.

On August 14 the SPD responded to a call that a car had hit a tree near Turner Beach. Officer Don Case attended the scene of the accident until the Lee County Sheriff's Dept. arrived.

The driver of the car, Chet Sargeant of Fort Myers and two passengers, Tony Powell and Anita Brett, also of Fort Myers, were transported to Fort Myers Community Hospital.

I NEED YOUR HELP, to make the Island Bake Shop dough so I can fill it with European breads and pastries to delight your taste. I am looking for an investor or two - not big multinational concerns - just good island folks that would like a high but fair return on a modest investment for a year or so. It won't take much help to help me give you the type of good old fashioned home bakery that Sanibel needs. If I've tickled your curiosity, please give me a call in Naples after 4 p.m. any day at 597-2695 or drop by the Island Bakery and talk with Ray, the guy who's making all the good things now. Thanks for reading my ad. TFN
