Island gardening...

It takes more than a green thumb!

When you live on a barrier island, how do you find a beach?

On March 18, 1980 Sanibel's City Council received a petition from more than 300 Island residents demanding that a method be devised to insure residents parking space at public beach accesses.

That request turned out to be only the tip of the iceberg.

As the City delved further and further into the problem of resident beach access, the issues of traffic congestion, tourist impact, the legality of preferential parking areas, public beach accesses in residential neighborhoods and enforcement of traffic and parking laws all rose to the front.

When the City staff finally released a proposed "public beach access parking strategy" last month hundreds of Island residents were pleased as punch - and just as many were madder than hornets.

The proposed strategy called for stickered parking with residents paying $1 for a sticker and non-residents $30. The strategy also called for the opening of all public beach accesses, and that's where the trouble began.

The Algiers, Causeway, Tarpon Bay, West Gulf Drive, Nerita Street and Beach Road accesses cannot legally have restricted parking strategies applied. Turner Beach, Dixie Beach Park, Bay Drive Park, Buttonwood Lane, Seagrape Lane, Colony Walkway, Donax and Fulger Streets can be restricted providing a total of 150 spaces. Beach access at Bowman's Beach and the Lighthouse would remain unrestricted.

Last week Sanibel's Planning Commission approved, "in its broadest sense," the proposed strategy. Many Island residents, however, had less kindly things to say about it. Lowered property values, neighborhood disruption and destruction, enforcement, and special access for the handicapped were just a few of the concerns voiced at last week's City Council meeting.

And now, on the eve of the Island's tourist season, even City Councilmembers differ in their opinion of what the next step should be.

"I thought we were dealing with basic principles," said Duane White last week.

"I think it's important that we get this in place as soon as we can," responded Zee Butler.

"The critical point is how we define 'resident'," interjected assistant City Manager Gary Price.

Residency, according to Price, could be determined by a tax bill with a Sanibel address, a driver's license with a Sanibel address, a voter's registration card with a Sanibel address or a declaration of domicile with a Sanibel address. A Florida driver's license and any utility bill with a Sanibel address might also be sufficient to qualify as a resident, suggested Price.

It wasn't the 300 petitioners, however, that packed MacKenzie Hall last week. It was the residents who will be affected by the opening up of all Sanibel beach accesses.

Urban Palmer, president of the Committee of Neighborhood Associations (CONA), asked the Council to establish a committee of residents to study the issue and draft possible solutions. "To try and blast this through this season will result in a lot of unhappy people," warned Palmer, adding that it would be almost impossible to do anyway.

"We cannot tolerate many more seasons," responded Duane White, adding, "We all want a sensible program that gives recognition to residents."

With Councilmembers Goss and LeBuff absent, the Council agreed to go ahead and draft an ordinance incorporating all of the strategy's principals. The Council ignored Palmer's idea for an official committee but did agree to hear any suggestions raised by an independent committee.

"Let them frame their ordinance," said Palmer, "and then we'll pick it to pieces."

The future of the 28 public beach accesses on the Island, many of which currently provide no parking space for vehicles, is anyone's guess.

County tax roles rejected; no increased homestead exemption this year

Despite the fact the state Department of Revenue (DOR) has rejected Lee County Property Appraiser Harry Schooley's tax assessment rolls as being too low, the 3.337 millage rate adopted by Sanibel's City Council last month is not likely to change in the near future.

City Manager Bernie Murphy issued a release last Friday explaining that state legislation provides for an interim tax role and, since the one issued by Schooley on July 25 is the one on which the City budget and millage is based, the "provisional tax bills" received by homeowners will reflect that approved millage.

A final adjusted mill rate required by the TRIM Bill, however, cannot be adopted until the City receives an approved tax role. Since there is no approved tax role at this time, taxpayers have lost the increased $10,000 homestead exemption for this year and, according to County reports, may not reap the benefits of this year's exemption for up to two years - the time it may take to receive a court decision.

According to Murphy, the City is presently in a "holding pattern," assessing against the interim tax role which will result in the provisional tax bills expected to be issued the first of next month.

"A court ruling in favor of the Lee County role," said Murphy's release, "will have no impact on our tax rate; a ruling in favor of the DOR will undoubtedly produce more assessed valuation resulting in a reduced millage rate."

Gardening

Sarita Van Vleck picking weeds out of her plant beds.

A generally neat table and trays serve as Sarita Van Vleck's indoor garden.

Vegetable gardening on Sanibel and Captiva Islands could be considered a science in itself.

When one takes into account all of the existing variables of the Islands it's a wonder all of the gardeners haven't given up in discouragement a long time ago.

But it has been this very type of gardening disappointment, with many crop failures for one reason or another, that has kept the Island gardeners experimenting annually for the most successful approach to tropical vegetable gardening.

In an attempt to bring a variety of gardening approaches to the attention of Island residents who would like to grow a successful garden, the Islanders talked with five area gardeners. Sarita Van Vleck from Captiva and Al Lloyd, Hilda Rush, Warner Heinstein and Jim Fox from Sanibel all had some valuable tips for vegetable gardening—tips learned the hard way.

The major obstacles one must overcome in order to harvest a productive garden on the Islands include: the sandy, rocky, infertile soil with high salt content; the continuous northeasterly winds in the winter time (which is the growing season in Florida); and the insects which are here all year round because the Islands seldom have a frost period to kill them off. There are other factors too, which will be discussed as they arise.

The planting season has really just begun. Up until the end of October the temperature was still a bit warm to plant. Plants need cool temperatures as well as warm temperatures to complete their delicate cycles. So, since the weather has cooled down considerably at night, this time of year, even up until February, is ideal for planting.

To overcome the problem soil conditions of the Islands, all of our gardeners (except Jim Fox who has a hydroponic garden) have enriched the dry infertile soil with manures, fertilizers, and organic matter from a compost heap. It is not enough to just use manure and fertilizer because their nutrients are quickly expended, but the introduction of organic compost matter helps the soil to retain nutrients and moisture.

Some of our gardeners have built screen houses around their gardens to keep flying bugs out. Some also use a plastic lining under the garden bed to keep crawling bugs out as well as to separate the nonproductive soil from the good soil. Both approaches have proven successful.

There is another point to remember when planting. It is best to start plants from seeds. Store bought potted seedlings have been known to carry insects, especially butterfly eggs, so it is wise to start with seeds. However, even certain types of seeds have their drawbacks, according to Warner Heinstein.

Packaged seeds are, for the most part, cultivated in the north. They are not accustomed to this area and tend to peter out under normal Island conditions. Therefore, it is wise to purchase seeds which have been cultivated in the south.

These seeds are far more resistant to tropical conditions, insects and fungus. There are a few companies in Florida where one can purchase these seeds, one of which is the Kilgore Seed Company, 14 West 1st Street, Sanford, Florida, 32771.

Another good point Warner raised was the local nuisance animals, namely dogs, raccoons and rabbits. Dogs which romp around through their neighbors' yards can trample all over young seedlings, raccoons not only romp but eat the vegetables as well, and rabbits do the same. Therefore, one might consider building a fence or screened enclosure around the garden.

Every gardener with whom the Islander talked with had devised a system designed specifically to fit their own purposes. Generally, they all follow the guidelines already mentioned, however, each of their own individual systems deserve discussion.

Al Lloyd has devised a system for those who prefer not to have to bend down to dig or pull weeds. He has constructed soil bins which are several feet off the ground. Since he lives right on the Bay, Al has put these bins behind his house so the wind will not blow them away.

He has also put palm fronds over the bins to create shade for the plants and has filled the bins with soil he has enriched himself. He waters them several times a week and fertilizes every few months. Since the bins are raised away from the ground, it is difficult for bugs to infest his garden.

Hilda Rush dabbles with vegetable gardening but her real claim to fame is her orchid garden and she does seem to have an apparent green thumb. Hilda vows that a compost heap is "the beginning and end" of a successful garden.

Besides growing herbs and other greens, Hilda is presently experimenting with a new method for growing tomatoes. She is using the "string" method and, as her tomato plants grow, she will wrap the stem around these strings as braces for the stems. Hilda has also planted her tomato seedlings horizontally, laying so much of the stem as possible horizontally under the soil, saying that the more stem one can bury, the more roots one will get.

Warner Heinstein's garden is constructed very much along the guidelines already mentioned. He has three mounds of organic soil of which two are presently covered in hay to retain moisture. Warner has just begun to plant, and many of his plants are still in the seedling stages. He also has a compost which provides valuable nutrients to his soil.

Sarita Van Vleck has two gardens, one of which is an inside garden constructed on a grocery store meat rack with trays of greens like buckwheat and comfrey. Sarita rotates these trays as she eats the greens. At the top of her meat rack, she has trays of seed germinating underneath a cover. It takes three days in a covered warm place to germinate the seeds, then she puts them in the sun and they are ready for consumption in a few more days.

Her outdoor garden supplies her with tomatoes, lettuce, peppers, beets and carrots, to name but a few. Sarita has her garden enclosed in a screened in greenhouse. Interestingly, Sarita is a firm believer in planting by the moon when it is in a water sign. She feels that the seeds germinate better during that time.

Now, Jim Fox has been our exception to all of these rules. He has opted for a hydroponic garden so he doesn't have to concern himself with the sandy soil and he has a relatively low insect problem.

His hydroponic garden is quite fascinating and last year produced cucumbers 20 inches long! The system is not as complicated as one would believe. After incurring the initial cost of the equipment, his garden can produce vegetables almost maintenance free.

Seeds in the process of germinating before Al Lloyd plants them.

Bob Emsby working in his hydroponic garden.

Four rows of plants in Jim Fox's hydroponic garden. The bins are held up by a bed of river rock.

- the Island way

In order to get around the insect problem, Jim also has enclosed his garden in a screened-in greenhouse. For those bugs that crawl, he sprays and dusts when necessary. He also utilizes a special roof which screens out the damaging rays of the sun and lets the healthy rays shine through.

His hydroponic garden does not use soil, rather, he has constructed large bins filled with river rock to support the root systems. The rest of the work is done with city water and nutrients.

The feeding system is automatically timed and the nutrient water is fed into the bins. It is also automatically timed to drain the water so that the roots won't suffocate and drown. The water is supplied with nutrients in proportion to the plants' needs. He also checks the acidity of the water to insure that the PH is balanced, adding muriotic acid or baking soda as needed.

To assist the river rock as a support system, Jim has string running from the vegetable bed to the ceiling so that the plants will grow up around the strings. When planting seeds, Jim uses styrofoam cups filled with river rock or vermiculite and spliced at the bottom to allow the nutrients up into the cup.

With this hydroponic system, a garden is relatively self-sustaining, takes little monitoring and is capable of producing wonderful vegetables according to the Foxes.

The photographs accompanying this story depict our mentioned gardeners' gardens. At this point in the year they don't look like much. However, come February, the Islander will return to these gardens for another look and will photograph them in full bloom unless, of course, any one of those variables heretofore mentioned have overcome them. Cross your fingers and wish all of our gardeners a healthy crop.

No more petitions, no more televised attacks, no more newspaper interviews and no more debates; another election year ended.

More Island voters responded to the critical issues facing their world locally and at large than did the general populace, but Island voters, with 77.09 percent of those registered on Sanibel voting and 87.77 percent of registered Captivans hitting the polls, still didn't match the 80-odd percent turnout across the rest of Lee County.

Island voter turnout was probably highest at Sanibel Elementary where all the students in attendance voted for their favorite presidential candidate - or perhaps the one that sounded familiar to them - or the one whose animal representative they liked the best (John Anderson was a rabbit, Ed Clark a bird, and the Republican and Democratic contenders the usual). For whatever reasons, their election results went like this:

About that Cypress ruling...

The Islander received a copy of the following letter from the Sanibel Police Recreation Club to Fred Roszelle, executive secretary of the Florida High School Athletic Association. The letter deals with the Association ruling that Cypress Lake must now forfeit an early season football win for using an ineligible player.

Dear Mr. Roszelle:

Thank you for your time to consider this request concerning your recent ruling on the forfeiture of the Cypress Lake High School vs Charlotte High School football game. Our Department and Police Recreation Club are located within the school district of Cypress Lake and have a devoted interest in youth and sponsor numerous youth-related activities.

We understand the basis for your ruling, but would like to appeal to your sense of fair play. Although we expect no change in the ruling, we would like to take this opportunity to express the following opinions.

1. The error of not listing the ineligible player was a clerical error dealing with school records. Participants on the football team and students at the school are being "punished" for something that is beyond their control.

Our program, and I am sure all programs for youth, try to still belief in the American way, i.e., honesty and justice. The Cypress Lake administration and football coaches spotted the error and immediately reported it. The football team was notified and had every belief that the matter would be considered on its merits. Now they have learned that a ruling has been made against them. If the Cypress Lake administration and coaches had not notified your office, the error would have gone unnoticed. This is not much of a reward for honesty.

2. We feel that there was no intent on the part of the Cypress Lake administration and coaches to play an ineligible player. Our judicial system and most administrative regulations insist that intent be one of the elements of a crime. There was obviously no intent in this case.

3. This could well be the best year Cypress Lake High School has had in its history of football. Coach Boyd Gruhn and his assistants have built a winning tradition during his five years as coach; more importantly, Coach Gruhn has insisted that this tradition be built on fair play and hard work. We are sure that Charlotte High School receives no pride in achieving a win this way. Another solution may be a rematch at the end of the season if both administrations and coaching staffs agree.

We realize that a change in your ruling would put pressure upon your office. We feel that in the interest of justice your office could only achieve the highest degree of respect for your innovative interpretation of this rule.

Again, let me thank you for your time and consideration concerning this matter. We anxiously await your reply.

On revenue sharing...

The following letter was given to the Islander for publication:

Gary R. Catron, Ass't to the Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
Washington, D.C., 20240

Dear Sir:

Senator Chiles kindly furnished me a copy of your October 21st letter which discussed the rationale for the distribution of revenue-sharing funds for the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge on Sanibel.

Apparently, the Department staff is unaware of the significant changes made by the 1968 Florida Constitution revisions in the structure and relationships of the State and its local governments.

Senator Chiles, as a lawyer, should be particularly aware of those profound changes because he served in both chambers of the State Legislature during the cataclysmic period. It is regrettable that the current pressure of more vital matters prevented his response to your second paragraph. The Senator, for many years, has been very helpful in securing the clarifying provisions of P.L. 95-489 regarding the applicability of the "pass-through" device.

The Senator and your legal department, I am sure, will confirm that the County Tax Collector in Florida is an elected Constitutionally-mandated officer within the geographical boundaries of unchartered Lee County. His function is a ministerial one apart from the policy-making one of the Lee County Commission that governs within its limited jurisdiction.

Section 193.116(2) of Florida's Statutes was enacted in 1974 to achieve economies in the collecting of taxes by the State's thousands of local governments of various kinds. To eliminate costly duplications of efforts, that law wisely designated the County Tax Collector the sole local officer to perform that duty within the geographical county. Lee County's three general-purpose municipalities, each levies its own taxes without let or hindrance from the County Commissioners. They are collected by the County Tax Collector and remitted directly to them in conformance with Section 166.211 of the statutes.

There is no doubt that there is no other local government hearabouts entitled to a "proportionate share" of this funding since the City supplies ALL the required support services to the Refuge. I am, therefore, concerned with the principle involved in this particular use of the pass-through device. It seems an unwarranted frustration of the intent of P.L. 95-489. It also seems contrary to implementing Section 345 of your Regulations published in the Federal Register of 6-8-78. That section provides: "In the event a county cannot make the required distribution for reasons of State or local law, or otherwise, the Service will make the payments directly to local units of governments..."

In view of the above recitals, kindly review this matter with an eye toward avoiding this onerous pass-through.

Sincerely,
(s) Paul A. Howe

Cycling Society plans organized rides for Sunday

The Sanibel-Captiva Cycling Society has planned two organized rides for Sunday, November 15 at 2 p.m. Both rides will start from the west part of Bailey's parking lot at Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road.

Easy Riders will be led by Allen Mainard on approximately eight miles of riding up Tarpon Bay Road, west on West Gulf Drive, through the Rocks and back to Bailey's parking lot.

Strong Riders will be led by Alan Pote on a considerably longer ride. Strong Riders will go from Bailey's parking lot up Tarpon Bay Road to Casa Ybel Road, left on Casa Ybel to Periwinkle, then down the Periwinkle Way bicycle path to Bailey Road to the Dunes, through the Dunes to Dixie Beach, then down Dixie Beach and back to Gumbo Limbo, through Gumbo Limbo then up Dixie Beach, back on Casa Ybel to Tarpon Bay Road to Bailey's parking lot. Distance is approximately 18 miles.

"If the riders wish, we will inspect each bicycle before the ride begins," Allen Mainard said. "There is no time limit on any ride although we expect both to be completed in about an hour."

Mainard said there would also be a "Sag Wagon," a truck with spares and tools which would cover both routes to help riders in trouble.

This is the first organized ride of the Sanibel-Captiva Cycling Society, an organization being started by Allen Mainard, an off-shoot of a similar group helped into existence in Oklahoma seven years ago.

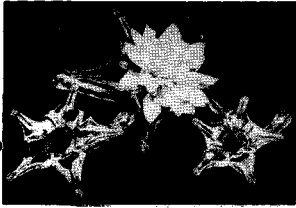

The SCCS is not a bicycle club, according to Mainard. "The SCCS is comprised of bicycle and moped riders, each of whom rides different types of equipment for a different purpose. The SCCS will provide information on how to ride more efficiently, how to maintain a bicycle, and if required, act as a voice with the City government for cyclists."

On the rides Sunday, cyclists are encouraged to bring sandwiches, drink, or whatever they wish. There will be a get-together in Bailey's parking lot following the rides to critique the happening and to get ideas as to what cyclists need on Sanibel.

This is the first of a series of planned rides and information sessions to be set up by the SCCS.

"We don't care what kind of bike you ride, or how you ride it," Mainard said. "Our purpose is to help all cyclists get more pleasure out of riding and to help provide a more safe, enjoyable cycling atmosphere on both Sanibel and Captiva."

This is great! We're playing tennis and golf, taking it easy on the beach, doin' a little sailing, dancing at night and we're not spending a bundle.

You see, there's this exchange program that lets us trade our vacation time at South Seas Plantation and go to other resorts around the world. So, not only can we travel, but we're not tied down to taking our vacation the same time every year.

Our friends Rob and JoAnn are also owners here, and we've planned to spend one week here next spring and then all go to Acapulco together. We really look forward to the vacations we can now afford to take.

We figure we'll get our money's worth in a couple of years — and then no matter what inflation does — we'll still be taking first class vacations every year.

Helene Phillips kicks to a national championship

In a lightning fast move, five-foot tall, 105 pound Helene Phillips twists and unleashes a kick to the head of her instructor and husband, Sanibel police officer Lew Phillips.

In just six short months Helene has turned from a non-competitor into a national karate champion and, sitting in a sparkling new dojo (training gym), one wonders just what prompted this young, athletic mother of two to enter into the demanding martial arts life of disciplined, vigorous training.

"Probably the farthest thing from my mind was getting into karate," explains Helene, "but my husband was already very involved when I met him, and it was available."

What she lacks in experience, Helene makes up for in fierce determination, leaving little doubt that someday she'll be a world champion.

In the Florida State Open Helene took second place in the kata (theoretical forms) competition as a white belt, but scored a first place in both the ju-kumite (free style sparring) and kata competitions in the higher yellow belt division of the recent U.S. Open.

Helene and her husband Lew operate the Ali Kal Martial Arts School located in the Dragon Plaza. Lew himself is a nationally recognized second degree black belt, not only in tae kwon do, but in the style he teaches, shorei-ryu, which emphasizes the use of hands with a low to the ground stance.

A likely contributing factor to Helene's lightning success is her personal preference for men as sparring partners. Men, she reasons, are bigger and hit harder and such training will provide invaluable in competition.

Prior to her involvement in karate Helene was not involved in any organized sports but was always a runner and swimmer and considered herself an "exercise addict." Karate, she claims, has bolstered her self-confidence and greatly heightened her competitive nature. She believes that all women should pursue it as an effective form of self defense.

Lew and Helene are now enthusiastically working toward the mutual goal of turning her into a world champion. "She's going to leave the yellow belt (colored belts are awarded according to increased proficiency) a national champion, the green belt a national champion, the brown belt a national champion, and then she's going to be a nationally recognized black belt and eventually a world champion," exclaims a proud and determined Lew.

On the water

By Captain Mike Fuery

We've just passed through our first cold front weather pattern and, if you did any fishing before and then during this time, you noticed some dramatic changes in the amount of catches made.

From now on until about the middle of April, one cold front after another will come sweeping down from the north, bringing strong winds, changes in tides and many times, a halt to fishing.

It's not that the fish aren't there, I believe, it's just that when the fronts come in and change the weather for perhaps two to three days, the fish also alter their feeding habits.

Pine Island Sound is an elongated, shallow body of water between Captiva and Sanibel Islands, bordered on the eastern side by Pine Island. This is the water where most of the sea trout catches are made. Along with the trout are redfish, ladyfish, sharks, jacks, snook and other fish that are fun to catch.

But something happens to these usually aggressive feeders when major fronts come down the state. One of the most noticeable changes trout fishermen soon find is that as the winds pick up from the north, the water gets cloudy, or filled with suspended sand. The result: trout can't feed.

Whether it is because they can't properly see the bait, or their natural baits, like shrimp and small fish, leave. Either way it spells poor fishing.

I think that the prime indicator of poor fishing to come is when I start to fish a known trout grass flat in the Sound and only catch catfish. Now, you will catch cats anywhere at any time, but when the faster trout are feeding they will beat a cat to the bait. Take away the trout and the cats have the pick of the bait at their leisure. Catch nothing but catfish for a half hour and it's your clue to move on. But where?

The first thing that I look for is calm water which is clearer than in the open Sound. One of the best spots for this is along the sanctuary waters of Sanibel. There are many little coves and a few creeks where you can duck in out of the wind and perhaps come upon some feeding fish.

There are several islands in the Sound where you can get a boat around and out of the wind, but still have water to fish. Chino Island is always a popular spot. On the western end of the northern set of power lines is another good spot to find trout and others when the winds get nasty.

Those of us who fish the northern end of the Sound, like up near Cabbage Key and Useeppa Island, look around there for clear waters. There are so many islands here that the waters nearly always stay good. That doesn't always mean that the fish are going to feed, however. Factors such as very low tides could kill even the most promising looking waters.

But, the secret is to keep looking. Don't plunk yourself down on one seawall or hide in the lee of one island and expect to have the fish come jumping into the boat.

When the weather gets really windy and you have found a sheltered place, then go more for bottom fishing. I usually like to use a popping cork and shrimp for trout, that is surface fishing. But, I think that they will take the bait better when it's worked slowly over the bottom. You can "free line" the live shrimp, that is, without weight, and let it drift down tide. Or you can buy a couple of different colored "shrimp imitators" or jigs and tip them with live shrimp, casting out to work the bottom.

Either way, it's important to get where the fish can feed. Now, sometimes they just quit all together and wait for the front to pass when milder weather and seas return. Not much you can do about this. The first 24 hours of the arrival of a front are often difficult to fish, no matter who goes out.

Conversion table: The above tides are for the lighthouse point of Sanibel only. To convert for Redfish Pass (North tip of Captiva), add 55 minutes to the time shown for every high tide. Subtract two minutes for every low tide.

For Captiva Island Gulf side, subtract 30 minutes for each high tide, and subtract hour and 16 minutes for each low tide.

For Captiva Island, Pine Island Sound (Bay) side, add 1 hour and four minutes for each high tide and add 52 minutes for each low tide.

In between these points, gulf or bay, guess time and have good fishing or shelling.

Shelling Tips

By Captain Mike Fuery

It has never been well known, but the fact is that there are several ailments known to be associated with shelling. Of course, sheller's back, brought on by doing the Sanibel Stoop, is one of the more infamous back problems. But there are others. This week we want to identify some of these ailments and perhaps pass on some tips to aid in your recovery.

SHELLER'S FOOT: This is a discouraging injury usually associated with novice shellers who try to walk on oyster beds, broken clams and sand spurs. You can usually identify a victim of Sheller's Foot from a distance because you can hear a loud yell having something to do with the damnation of the object underfoot. The unfortunate person also does something of a one-footed dance on the beach that has never caught on in the local night spots, but has been known to offer a great deal of entertainment for other shellers.

Capt. Fuery's famous cure for sheller's foot: Find the nearest beach-side bar. Prop the injured foot on one stool while you stand next to the bar. Order a double tequila sunrise sipped from a half of a newly opened pineapple. Drink this in short order, then turn to your foot and announce in a loud voice that if it doesn't stop hurting you are sending it back to Cleveland on the first plane. Woke every time.

SHELLER'S EYE: Strangely enough, sheller's eye is usually only contracted by husbands. This comes about from a strange chain of events that begins when the wife says something like, "Didn't you see that colorful shell you just stepped on?" or "What's the matter with you, Ed, didn't you see that shell that lady picked up right in front of you?"

There is a cure for sheller's eye: It's called separate vacations. This cure was discovered several hundred years ago. It has been known in men to result in the return of calm nerves, renewed use of hearing, and a general placid outlook on life. However, in men between the ages of 40 and 50, the cure for sheller's eye can result in the purchase of sports cars, hair pieces and the acquisition of social ailments usually cured by a shot.

SHELLER'S ELBOW: This problem is usually associated with tennis players, but has also been found to afflict shellers too. Again, this is generally found in the male species of shellers. Here's how one acquires the ailment: Man and wife are walking along the beach on Sanibel. Man is carrying a large, five-gallon bucket filled with shells, sand, shoes, suntan oil, radio, plastic bags, a hot Coke and a shelling book. His sole purpose in life for the next four hours is to trail along behind his wife, setting down, then lifting the growing weight of the bucket. After two hours he notices a discomfort in his right elbow. He ignores this and switches the bucket to his left arm. Soon the same problem develops, now into a throbbing pain - but here is the strange part - the pain he slowly develops is not in the arms anymore, it now is located in the lower back, just below the belt line. The more he thinks about toting the bucket the more he thinks about playing golf and the more the pain in his lower posterior increases.

Fuery's solution: It takes 10 years, but what you need to do is get busy in the winter and have a couple of kids. One of each is fine. In 10 years they are large enough to carry all sorts of buckets for the mom and when you see them working their way down the beach, you can smile to yourself as you tee up the ball. The wait was well worth it, you will think.

I wouldn't worry about getting too many sheller's ailments, but now when you do come down with something you have a couple of cures to fall back on. Good shelling this week.

Foskett's photographs at Photographers' Gallery

"Color in a Dark Room," an exhibit of photographs by Maggie Foskett, will be featured in The Photographers' Gallery on Sanibel from November 16 through December 14.

The public is invited to a preview party from 5-7 p.m., Sunday, November 16.

The photographer's sensitive eye for color, light and detail is well reflected in prints of both botanical and molluskan subjects, which highlight this show. Subject matter is transformed into abstractions via her macro lens, her primary tool for suggesting both the preciseness and ambiguity of nature.

The all-color show features Cibachrome limited edition prints on 22" X 28" overmats. All are 16" X 20" prints enlarged from 35mm slides.

A Sanibel winter resident, Maggie was born in Brazil and spent much of her life in South America. Though she has always carried a camera, her first interest that evolved into a successful career was stained glass. "In 1976 I wanted to install a glass furnace in the basement of our old Victorian home in Geneva, Illinois, but my husband pointed out that the furnace and frame home were not compatible, so he built me a darkroom."

There a new career began to bloom. "When you process your own negatives, and place that negative under the lens of an enlarger, you have at your fingertips the means to bring out every nuance of light and form that first fired your imagination," says Maggie. "It's exciting, frustrating and endlessly absorbing."

In 1978 she traveled to Carmel, California, to join a photographic seminar with Ansel Adams and The Friends of Photography, and last year spent part of the summer at the prestigious Maine Photographic Workshop in Rockport, taking a master class in color.

This year has been a busy one for Maggie in terms of exhibits. Seven Midwest shows have featured her work, including a one-man exhibit in the Robert R. McCormick Museum in suburban Chicago, which just closed in October. The same week her show opens on Sanibel another opens at the Morton Arboretum Exhibit Hall in Lisle, Illinois. In the spring her show "The Precise and the Ambiguous" will open in the Chicago Cultural Center.

Summers find the Foskett's living aboard an old New England hull with steading sails and a diesel to give them long cruising range. Some of the work in this show was photographed this summer in the far islands of the North Channel in Ontario, Canada.

"I'll hit 61 the day the show opens on Sanibel," says Maggie. "The best thing about photography is that it has brought me new friends, in a new era. Furthermore, I feel that I'm getting better at it. At 61, when glasses need changing, when limbs get stiff and old friends slip away, that's a good feeling."

The Photographers' Gallery, a non-profit, educational organization, is located at 1554 Periwinkle Way on Sanibel. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, with TGIF gatherings beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Barbara Hill has been named Chairman for the First Annual Arts & Crafts Festival which is co-sponsored by Bank of the Islands and the Barrier Island Group for the Arts (BIG Arts).

The Festival is coming on Saturday, November 29, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on the grounds of the Sanibel Community Center.

Mrs. Hill, an accomplished potter and teacher, has been involved in many major crafts events. She is drawing on her extensive experience as plans are made for the BIG Arts Festival.

"We're combining the best features of the best shows," Mrs. Hill says, "and adding some innovations of our own. Our Festival looks really super."

Two tremendous tents will be set up by the Caloosa Canvas Company on the east side of the Community Center. One will house the arts and crafts exhibits, the other will have live music acts and the food and drink area.

Working with Mrs. Hill as vice chairman is Duey Liber, in charge of registering the artists and craftsmen who will display and sell their work. More than 25 top local artisans have already reserved Festival space.

BIG Arts Hospitality Chairman Donna Kraeger is seeing to the daylong refreshments, and rounding up goodies for an old-fashioned bake sale. She will also plan the interior layouts for the tents.

Raffle Chairman is Kathy Aune, who is gathering a collection of choice items from individual donors.

Olive Ritter will take care of the BIG Arts membership table, while Stan Ritter serves as Admissions Chairman. Lynne Bogue is responsible for authors.

Carolyn Smith has engaged the Blue Grass Little Bits band, four talented youngsters from Lakeland-Auburndale. Sam Hill will head up the parking arrangements.

BIG Arts and the Bank of the Islands has planned this First Annual Festival for November 29 as a special pre-Christmas event for community enjoyment, making available the best of Island arts and crafts for early gift shopping.

Sanibel Sitters save mothers' sanity

Several months ago Joanna O'Keeffe and her family moved to Sanibel and, seeing a need for a babysitting service, Joanna decided to do something about it.

"I had a sitter service up north," Joanna explains, "and I've always known that people have a problem finding good reliable ones." As a service to the community, Joanna started what she coined "The Sitters of Sanibel" (SOS).

SOS is a referral service for those interested in babysitting during their free time in order to supplement their income. She finds jobs for babysitters and finds babysitters for jobs.

In recruiting sitters for her service, Joanna interviews each prospective applicant to insure that they have good references, a responsible attitude and maturity. "If they say they are available anytime," Joanna says, she is sure that they want the job and it is a good indication in itself of their responsibility.

There is no age limit for Joanna's sitters although she will not hire those younger than 13. It is preferable for the sitters to drive, however, it can be worked around, if they can't.

SOS babysitters receive the minimum wage of $3.10 an hour, but during the season, they can earn up to $5 an hour. A minimum of four hours is the time requirement for each babysitting session, but if the job is less than four hours, a flat rate of $12 is charged. Joanna receives a referral fee of $3 from each sitter for each job she places them in.

Joanna's services are licensed by the City and she is referred to customer's by the Chamber of Commerce and most of the resorts on the Island. For each babysitting inquiry that she receives, Joanna double checks the source to insure that it is legitimate.

For job requests at any resort, Joanna calls the office to make sure that the resort is aware that an SOS sitter will be working there, and in what room and for whom they are sitting. She has all the emergency numbers available for the sitters and requests that "the parents" leave a number where they can be located.

"I try to eliminate any possibilities of anything happening," explains Joanna of her care in checking all the sources of trouble.

Now is a good time to register with the "Sitters of Sanibel" as the season is nearing, and the demand for babysitters is quite high. The hours are extremely flexible and Joanna works around each individual's schedule. To inquire further, call Joanna O'Keeffe at 472-9480. Everyone from teenagers to Grandmas are welcome.

That's alotta bologna!

In honor of Election day, George Kohlbrenner Jr., famous sandwich maker at the B-Hive, designed a sandwich fitting for Election Day. Not surprising, it was called the "Election Special" and consisted of two pieces of bread, Fall of Bologna. With this sandwich, you had No Choice of lettuce, tomato, and mayo. Even if you didn't order this, you may have gotten it. Taken out of the sandwich context and put into the political, does this sound familiar? - E.M.

Alex the Great

Alex, a grand eclectus that Dick Muench won on a $2 chance last year at a Clearwater bird show, has won (along with a violet eared waxbill finch) his weight in prize ribbons.

Competing against 600 other birds at a recent show in St. Petersburg, and against more than 1000 birds in Ft. Lauderdale last weekend, Muench's finch and grand eclectus have been judged to be the best birds of their type in the state. And Alex has even more to be proud of: he was named the sixth best bird in the whole Lauderdale show.

Muench started going to shows to meet other bird people and "to see what kind of job I was doing as opposed to the others."

His strongest competition comes from pet shop owners who show to get their name known. Muench's motivation to show is different, "I don't care about getting my name known, but I love to talk about birds," he says.

But Dick is getting recognition as a bird breeder and that helps support his hobby. "I'm selling my birds as eggs now," he boasts, "the birds have to support themselves."

Muench has all the varieties of birds he wants for now, but is still has something to shoot for, "My goal is to get a talking bird that says 'Here comes the judge!'" - M.H.

Katie cares

"When I was really little, about six or seven," says Katie Krepin, a sixth grader from the Sanibel Resources Center, "I asked if I could work there (at the Sanibel Library). The lady said to wait 'til I could reach the top shelf."

Well, Katie is now 11, although no taller than four-foot-five and still unable to reach the top shelf. She is, however, finally working as a volunteer aid at the Sanibel Library. "I just always wanted to do that," Katie explains of her librarian interests.

On Saturday mornings, Katie can be found amidst the tiers of books, straightening them, replacing worn out call letters and checking the insert cards. "I sometimes look through them to see who read them," Katie confesses. Occasionally, she will even stop to read a book if she comes across a particularly interesting one.

Last Saturday Katie, along with her friend Melanie Stone, embarked upon a very exciting adventure. They have started a children's reading hour for children three to five years old. Together the two girls take turns reading to the children who sit upon the floor hugging their favorite stuffed animals.

This children's reading hour will be a learning experience for the children as well as for Katie and Melanie, and it's hard to say who's having the most fun doing it.

Gordon Kiddoo

Age: 60

Height: "5' 9½". I think I'm getting shorter."

Roots: Winnetka, Illinois

Pleasures: "Rowing and designing, building and flying kites."

Mentor: "I suppose it would be 'Dusty' Rhodes, professor of chemical engineering at Cornell. He taught me the importance of doing a good job and he taught me more about the English language than any other teacher."

Last Book Read: "Zero Sum Society, by Lester C. Thurow. a very thought provoking book."

Wish: "I suppose good health, that's the most important thing. Without good health you don't have much."

Words of Wisdom: "I'm a big advocate of 'the different drummer' in Thoreau's 'Walden.' 'If a man does not keep pace with his companions perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer."

Let him step to the music however measured or far away.' I believe you ought to do your own thing."

The tropical tranquility of "Florida living" is enticingly saturated by the breezy Sanibel home of Gordon Kiddoo. Sitting among the potted greenery on his poolside veranda overlooking a peacefully rippling canal, makes it hard to imagine how Gordon manages to break away from this splendid scenario.

Nonetheless, since taking early retirement two years ago from his prestigious career with the chemical and petroleum industries, Gordon claims today, "I've found plenty to do!"

A typical day for Gordon Kiddoo consists of traveling a loosely slated, easy pace through a series of many interests. Generally, he will start his day by working on "things" for the Shell Harbor community.

"When you live in a community," Gordon explains, "you have to make a contribution to it."

Gordon is presently serving as the president of the Shell Harbor Property Owner's Association, with his latest contribution to the community being the push he made to pass the referendum making Shell Harbor a special taxing district.

Being somewhat of a real estate and investment buff, Gordon says, "My interest in real estate keeps me busy." He also spends time keeping up with the latest investment tips by reading several investment journals, including the Wall Street Journal.

Another undertaking Gordon has involved himself with has been the monitoring of construction of another home he is having built on Useppa Island. The task often takes him to Useppa during the week, a pleasant trip, no doubt. When completed, Gordon plans "to use it for weekends."

On the lighter side of Gordon's day, one may find him down on the beach flying one of his many kites. "My wife made the mistake of teaching me how to use the sewing machine," he jokes.

Gordon is an avid kite fan and experiments with different constructions and designs for his kites, sewing them together with his wife's sewing machine. Last April he served as judge for the annual kite flying contest sponsored by Toys Ahoy.

Even when not flying a kite, the beach serves other purposes for Gordon. "I love the beach," he says of the time spent sitting in the sun or just taking a walk with his wife along the shoreline. Sometimes they will bring a sandwich to enjoy a little picnic when their walk is through.

For exercise and enjoyment, each evening sometime before sunset, Gordon will hop into his "rowing shell" and row about the canal for an hour or so. On smooth days he will even row out to the bay in his one man kayak. "I have never found any activity I enjoy as much as that," Gordon says today of his rowing hobby.

Before finding his tropical haven on Sanibel, Gordon, a 1935 graduate of Cornell University with a degree in chemical engineering, spent the majority of his working years in the chemical and petroleum industries.

He has worked for a number of major corporations, including Standard Oil of Ohio and the California branch of Texaco in a variety of positions. His involvement over the years has ranged from technical responsibilities to managerial capacities.

"I had a chance for advancement," Gordon explains of his numerous relations with many different companies, adding, "It was an outgrowth of my ability, more responsibility, a greater freedom of action, job content and job satisfaction."

Gordon spent one year prior to his retirement as an executive professor at the University of Miami in Oxford, Ohio. "I thoroughly enjoyed teaching," Gordon says today of the experience.

His expertise in business led him to take on a full professor's load teaching, among other things, courses in business policy and a graduate level course in management.

Always having been one for doing his own thing, coming to Sanibel hasn't changed Gordon's philosophy of life much at all. He and his wife, now reveling in the beauty of the island, seem to have all the ingredients necessary to continue on with the fulfilling lifestyle they are so accustomed to.

The show identifies major problems and issues associated with islands' use and abuse, explains why barrier islands are an important, valuable resource. It concludes with recommendations and examples for safer living to minimize loss of life, property, public facilities and tax dollars.

Mr. Dinesh Sharma, who produced the presentation with a grant from the National Science Foundation, is Southeastern States Coordinator of the Barrier Islands Coalition. He will be present for discussion and questioning.

The informative program will be presented twice at the Fort Myers-Lee County Library, 2050 Lee Street on Monday, November 17 at 2 p.m. and repeated at 7:30 p.m. Free and open to all. For more information call 334-3992.

Shell Club

The first Shell Club Meeting of the 1980-1981 season will be held at 8 p.m. on Monday, November 17 at the Sanibel Community Association building. The program for the evening will be a sound film in color entitled "Venomous Animals of the Sea." This very interesting movie comes from the International Oceanographic Foundation Film Library and shows various forms of venomous marine life from cone shells to stone fish and their danger to man. Visitors are welcome.

Coconut Co-op

During the months of November and December, the Coconut Co-op will be meeting on the third Tuesday of the month instead of the fourth Tuesday due to forthcoming holidays. The meetings start at 7:30 p.m. but new members are asked to arrive at 7 p.m. at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation. For more information, call Mary Jo Gault at 472-1447.

Boating course

The free public boating course will again be offered by the Sanibel-Captiva Power Squadron, a unit of the United States Power Squadrons, the fraternal boating organization dedicated to boating safety. The 13-week course will cover boat handling under normal and adverse conditions, seamanship and common emergencies, rules of the road, aids to navigation, use of the compass and charts, required lights and safety equipment, trailering of boats, and elementary plotting. Except for a modest charge for the course materials, the course is without cost. It is open to men and women, young and old, and to those interested in sailing as well as motorboating.

Classes will meet on Monday evenings at 7 p.m. at the Community Association building on Periwinkle Way. Registration for the courses will take place from 6:30 to 7 p.m. on Monday, November 17. The course will run for 13 weeks (excepting December 22 and 29) and the final session is scheduled for March 2. Native plant nursery Coast Month discount

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Native Plant Nursery will be open for retail sales this season as follows:

Monday and Friday 9-12

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday 9-4

The nursery specializes in plants native to South Florida, particularly the coastal plants of Sanibel and Captiva. In recognition of COAST MONTH, the nursery is giving a 10 percent discount on all plants purchased during the month of November to encourage the use of native plants on the Islands. These plants are predominantly a salt tolerant, drought tolerant species that are suitable for coastal landscaping and revegetation.

The Native Plant Nursery began in February of 1979 as a research and educational facility, designed to develop propagation and landscape information for native plants of South Florida and to serve as an educational center for distribution of this information. Since that time, the nursery has grown from a small scale operation with a few plants in small pots to the present facility with shade house and just completed additional growing area. This area provides space for the growth of larger trees and shrubs and a greater diversity of native plants.

Through the help of over 30 volunteers last year, the Native Plant Nursery was able to propagate over 65 different species, making these available to the public for landscaping and revegetation. Shade trees, including mastic, jamaica dogwood, pigeon plum, strangler fig and pond apple can be purchased at the nursery. Many of the native shrubs will provide color and interest to the understory in the landscape, including wild coffee, necklace pod, white stopper, and sea oxeeye daisy, all available at the Native Plant Nursery.

Nursery Manager Norma Jeanne Byrd and Sales Manager Dee Slinkard are available to provide landscape planning and advice on the design of an all native landscape. Information on energy conservation landscaping and how to design the home landscape to model the natural systems of the islands can also be provided.

Richard Workman's book, "Growing Native," published by the SCCF this year, is available at the Conservation Center gift shop. The Native Plant Nursery is growing most of the plants identified in this book plus many more. For native trees and shrubs that provide diversity, color, attractive landscapes and ecological benefits visit the Native Plant Nursery.

The location, once the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad station, is being restored as part of a landmark preservation program. No admission fee will be charged.

The Lehigh Acres club will participate with N Scale modular layouts, while members of the Cape Coral club are planning to show HO standard and narrow gauge equipment. A collection of railroad photographs dealing with a wide range of subjects, also will be featured. Many fine models on exhibit will include locomotives, freight and passenger cars, trackage, structures and scenery.

Members of both clubs will counsel visitors in the modeling crafts in continuous free clinics covering assembly, maintenance, operation, scenicking and other aspects of the hobby.

Industry sources estimate that nearly half a million Americans are involved in the model railroading hobby. Activities similar to the local club's are planned throughout the country in observance of National Model Railroad month.

South Seas Traditional Golf Tournament

A field of 12 P.G.A. touring professionals and 36 amateur golfers will compete December 6 and 7 in the second annual South Seas Traditional Golf Tournament at South Seas Plantation. Proceeds from tournament admission sales will benefit the Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Lee County.

Danny Jones, head golf professional and tournament director at South Seas' 330-acre resort, announced that 10 pros had confirmed plans to participate in the Traditional and the names of the two other competitors were expected shortly. Pros returning from last year's tournament include Wally Armstrong, 1979 Traditional winner; Tom Shaw, Mike Sullivan, Mark McCormack, Bobby Nichols and Eddie Pearce.

Dan Pohl, Boh Murphy, Jim Jamieson and Lyn Lotz will be first-time participants in the South Seas Tournament.

Complimentary tournament admission will be provided to guests at South Seas. The general public will be admitted by fee on a limited basis at a cost of $3 for one day and $5 for both days.

The Traditional will be played on South Seas' nine-hole, par-36 golf course, which has hosted a number of professional golf exhibits and tournaments. The 3,061-yard course juts around the Gulf of Mexico, which presents an ominous threat to its challengers.

Ticket information on the South Seas Traditional can be obtained by contacting South Seas' Golf Pro Shop. Those interested in reserving resort accommodations for the tournament weekend are requested to contact the resort's reservations office. Both the Pro Shop and reservations office can be reached by calling (813) 472-5111. Rate information and reservations can also be obtained by writing South Seas Plantation, P.O. Box 194, Captiva Island, Florida 33924.

By Pat Harmel

Mark Arnold Brillhart, 19, of 1377 Sandcastle Rd. and Michael Craig Mendres, 20, of Fort Myers Beach were arrested Nov. 6, at the corner of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Rd. by the Lee County Sheriff's Dept. Both men were charged with felony possession of hashish and possession of hashish with intent to sell, also a felony. According to Lt. Steve Adams of the Lee County Criminal Investigation Division, one-quarter pound of hashish was found to be in their possession. Each felony count allows for a maximum of five years imprisonment upon conviction.

Frank Salerno, 43, an employee of South Seas Plantation, was arrested last week by FBI agents and charged with embezzlement of funds from a Buffalo, New York credit union. Salerno, known to Islanders as Tony Franchi, was released by Circuit Judge Jack Schoonover on his own recognizance last week. Sources say Salerno, who has no previous record, will be charged with embezzling $16,000 from the credit union he worked for over four years ago.

Burglaries again top the list of calls responded to by the Sanibel Police Department this week.

A lock was discovered broken on the door of the closed Fountain Restaurant this week, although there was no evidence of theft inside the building.

A Sanddollar resident reported a breaking and entering at that address and $2850 worth of sterling ware and jewelry stolen. Entry was apparently gained through a jalousie door leading from the garage into the home.

A screened in porch was cut up last week on W. Gulf Drive when a burglar gained entry to make off with two homemade works of art.

A $200 bicycle was reported stolen from a Casa Ybel Rd. residence and another bike reported stolen from the Ramada Inn.

A TV was reported stolen from a Pointe Santo residence.

A Shell Harbor Inn guest reported $44 stolen from a suitcase in their room.

An employee's car was reported vandalized at Bailey's store and a Moonshadows resident reported receiving an obscene phone call.

There were also three noise complaints received and six traffic violations issued this week.

No to hotdog stands

Sanibel's City Council gave a resounding "No" to the idea of a hot dog concession stand at the Lighthouse Beach.

Councilman Porter Goss told the applicants, "We're totally opposed to anything like that. We want to encourage the natural amenities such as swimming and fishing."

Palm Ridge variance

Last week Sanibel's City Council unanimously approved an after-the-fact variance for a setback encroachment by the Palm Ridge Plaza in exchange for certain stringent guarantees.

Dr. Edward Cook, owner of the plaza, will not be allowed further construction on the land and must move four parking spaces to the rear of the existing building, while providing employee parking space behind the building. A vegetation buffer was also demanded by the Council.

Moratorium exception denied

Realtor Bob Buntrock appeared before the City Council last week hoping to win hardship relief from the City's recently adopted commercial moratorium - and was unanimously denied.

On Sept. 26 Buntrock, president of Executive Services Inc., submitted an application for a development permit to build 10 restricted commercial office buildings on Periwinkle Way - and found himself caught between the first reading of Porter Goss' commercial moratorium on Sept. 16 and the second reading on Oct. 8. At the Oct. 8 reading the Council not only approved the moratorium, but also made it retroactive to the first reading date. The original call for a moratorium by Goss had not been an agendaed item, but City Attorney Neal Bowen had told the Council that since the first reading took place at a public hearing it was entirely legal, despite the fact it had not received prior notice.

When Buntrock appealed to the Planning Commission for relief from the moratorium he was turned down on the grounds that his hardship was not unique to the property involved.

Buntrock charged that he had been "artificially singled out" and that neither he or his architect, Ray Fenton, had received notification from the Planning Dept. of the moratorium deadline. The Council countered by saying the moratorium date had been published in the newspapers and was a matter of public knowledge.

Despite the moratorium's provision for hardship appeals, Buntrock contended that no one would be able to prove "untenable hardship" under the moratorium definition. He also questioned whether or not the Council's action to make the moratorium retroactive was legal under public noticing requirements.

The issue of "fair play" brought a suggestion from Goss that the Council might consider an amendment to the ordinance once all the facts were in. Councilman Duane White suggested changing the moratorium's effective date but Zee Butler thought that changing the rules might lead to even more problems. So, the first official application for relief from the City's commercial moratorium went down to defeat.

Commercial study progress

City planner Bob Duane last week presented the City Council with an outline of work tasks necessary to implement the City's commercial study.

The City planning staff, Planning Commission, Council and consultants will all be involved in the complex review and recommendation procedure necessary to redefine commercial use and development on Sanibel.

The following goals are slated for the month of November: approval of a request for proposal (RFP) to be released mid-month; determining the feasibility of hiring for $5,000 each a landscape architect and a transfer of development rights specialist; public hearings to determine what residents and officials perceive to be the major commercial problems and some possible incentives and controls that would provide alternatives to commercial development; and a review of the existing land use plan permitted uses map for Periwinkle Way.

During December the commercial schedule calls for a final revision of parking standards and development of work tasks to be completed by the planning staff.

Besides developing a work schedule for City officials, Duane's report also offered specific recommendations, including: a consultant team consisting of a land use economist, landscape architect, architect, specialist in area of transfer development rights and legal counsel from Ross, Hardies, et.al. and the City attorney, be employed to review existing and proposed commercial limitations; an economist be hired to develop a market profile, an economic analysis of viable alternatives to commercial development and a strategy that implements findings from the market and economic analysis into new development restrictions, performance standards and permitted uses map.

Establishment of guidelines for architectural review of proposed developments, establishment of a landscaping ordinance and the feasibility of transfer of development rights as an optional form of development are also recommended in the commercial study outline.

Scouts denied $300 request

Sanibel's City Council last week declined to reimburse the Sanibel-Captiva Boy Scouts for $300, claiming instead that contributions should be solicited from the general public.

The $300 requested was to help pay for

Tuesdays at the Center

The decline of coastal fishing

By Ellen Mulligan

Last Tuesday the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation (SCCF) began their third season of Tuesdays at the Center, a series of environmental education programs for the benefit of Islanders.

To open up the season, and in keeping with the November Month of the Coast theme, the SCCF invited Fritz and Norma Stoppelbein to speak on the topic of coastal fishing.

The Stoppelbeins are actively involved with the issues concerning coastal fishing and author the weekly fishing column "Casting Around" which appears in the Island Reporter. They also serve as editors of the news publication of the League of Florida Anglers and Fritz is a member of the Lee County and Sanibel Marine Advisory Committees.

Fritz opened up the session with a frank account of the causes and effects that, in his opinion, have contributed to the decline in coastal fishing around Florida - and also offered some solutions for these problems.

"Netters are the biggest problem," said Fritz, attributing much marine damage to the use of drag nets. Shrimpers and other fishermen who use nets to catch bait for pole fishing cast their nets and, often times, inadvertently trap many other species of fish, many still immature.

The problem with that is, as Fritz explained, "They throw away hundreds of pounds of trash fish when they (the other fish) could be eating it." The fishermen dispose of "trash fish" in garbage cans, not returning them to the water. This fish waste is robbing many other species of their invaluable food source, according to Fritz.

Fritz also believes that fishermen should be "conservative," although he admits that many are not. "One person caught 70 trout," Fritz recalled, adding, "If everyone would limit themselves, there would be more stock."

He also mentioned a disturbing activity practiced along the east coast. Fishing in that area is rationed as to the amounts of certain types of fish one is allowed to catch.

What is happening, however, according to Fritz, is that these fishermen are going out and when they have reached their limit, they simply sail back in to their car, fill up a cooler with their catch, and then go back out for more. They can make several trips in a day.

At sunset, along the highway from central Florida all the way up to Georgia, these same fishermen are selling their catch out of the back of their trunk. It is this of conservation that Fritz feels is so detrimental to our coastal fishing.

Pollution, via water and air, also plays a very large part in the decline of coastal fishing. According to the Stoppelbeins, the increased incidents of raw sewage being dumped into our waterways is having a hazardous effect on the fish.

"Down through the Caloosahatchee there are diseased mullet covered with fungus, sores and missing scales," claimed Norma. This of course being a direct result of the raw sewage being dumped, although, according to Norma, attempts have been made to control chemical wastes being dumped into the water.

Phosphorus plants and subsequent "phosphorus pits" around the Sarasota area are "the number one polluters," Norma said. Phosphorus by-products create toxic radioactive materials. Phosphorus pits (the remaining hole after the phosphorus has been mined out) fill with rain and create small lakes.

Ultimately, birds transport fish eggs which have attached themselves to the feet and legs of the bird while feeding in other waters. The bird carries these eggs to the new phosphorus lake where they grow and breed in this toxic water. People actually fish out of these lakes, according to Norma.

Air pollution created in South Florida by auto exhaust, generating power plants and other smoke sources once reaching the sky, alter into acidic chemicals. According to Norma, these chemicals are being blown northerly and are causing "acid rain" to fall in central and northern Florida, further deteriorating water quality.

Also, the drying up of swamp and marsh lands in Central Florida and the Everglades to produce more land for development is effecting the delicate water balance system and endangering much wildlife and fish breeding in fresh waters, Norma said.

The destruction of mangrove forests along the coastal areas is another reason for the fishing decline as the Stoppelbeins see it.

These mangroves served as sanctuaries for many species of fish and, once removed, altered the migration pattern of the fish - away from our coasts.

"South Florida is a mess," Norma said, but it is not, however, a lost cause. "We must keep on trying to help bring it back," Fritz added, somewhat optimistically.

Two reasons why the Stoppelbeins are "optimistic" are, firstly, because the idea of mangrove restoration is becoming more common. One Florida college is growing thousands of mangroves to replant in coastal areas for the purpose of reviving the fishing and private individuals are beginning to do the same.

The other reason for this optimism is the increase in "artificial reefs" along our coasts. Sunken barges once located in the mouth of the St. John River have now been removed and placed along the coast to create reefs for the fish and to provide sanctuaries and feeding grounds for many species.

Artificial reefs which were renourished with high rocks have also been placed in Lee County by Carl's Pass, the south shore of Sanibel, Red Fish Pass, Boca Grand and three more are still to come, the Stop pelbeins said.

"It will take help from the people who fish to enforce the laws," Fritz said. The Stop-pelbeins, being authorities on the subject, leave the future of coastal fishing in the hands of the fishermen and in the communities where fishing plays an important role.

It is the fishermen's obligation to see that conservation and proper legislation be initiated and enforced, they said. It is not too late to save the estuaries and the fishing grounds which once drew so many fish and so many fishermen to Florida's coastal waterways. "Don't give up," Fritz concluded.

Today's Center presentation on barrier islands

Today "Barrier Islands" are the featured topic for discussion. Tuesday at the Center, will begin at 2 p.m. at the Conservation Foundation located on Sanibel-Captiva Road.

Dinesh Sharma, Southeastern States' Coordinator of the Barrier Island Coalition, will be presenting a program on barrier islands, their resources, values, functions, problems and hazards. Mr. Sharma will also offer a special presentation on Lover's Key.

Everyone is invited to attend these interesting environmental education programs which will feature a specific theme for each month through April. For further information call: 472-2329.

merit patches awarded to the Scouts who participated in the May 3rd Project SOAR (Save Our American Resources) Island clean-up. At that time, 130 off-island Scouts and leaders joined with the Island troop to pick up 13,000 pounds of litter from some 67 miles of Island roads and beaches.

Despite numerous contributions to the clean-up project, Sanibel-Captiva Troop 88 still owes $300. Scoutmaster Ron Sebald, in a letter to the City Manager, explained that the troop had earned money for equipment and he felt that that money should not have to be spent by the troop to pay for the clean-up.

Councilmember Zee Butler explained her vote to deny the request, saying, "I basically have a problem with spending the taxpayers money for activity not initiated by the City."

Councilman Duane White agreed, adding, "If they had come to the City first" it would be a different issue.

Mayor Francis Bailey told his colleagues, "You're all very convincing...but when Scouts earn money for equipment it seems unfair they should have to spend it on this type of project."

Both Councilmembers White and Butler said they would personally contribute a donation to the Scouts and urged others to do the same.

Shopping

SHOPPING
Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual Island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.
At the Lighthouse (Eastern end of the island), Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell collector's fancy. You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many Island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Fast Australian prices shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and belts for health produce fanatics. Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of Island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several new shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlor, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and movie house. A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery. At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quiet shops overlooking the back bay...Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drink.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others have their gifts for grandma to take home to little ones as a pleasant holiday nod of remembrance from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, Island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir collector and of course, for all shells, shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells, the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shell beaches in the world.

AN OPEN LETTER TO RESIDENTS AND FRIENDS OF SANIBEL AND CAPTIVA ISLANDS

PLEASE JOIN OUR EFFORT TO IMPROVE OUR ISLAND COMMUNITY

WHO

A group of island residents has been working to provide a more complete recreational facility for the islands, available for the use of our island youth as well as residents of all ages on Sanibel and Captiva.

WHAT

Plans include a swimming pool and gymnasium, as well as equipment for both, to provide a wide range of healthful, wholesome and invigorating recreational activities for all. We plan to have a permanent recreation director to co-ordinate all activities and supervise the proper use of the facilities.

WHERE

The City of Sanibel, in co-operation with the Lee County School Board and Lee County Government will join together to make this all possible at the site of the Sanibel Elementary School property.

HOW MUCH

Our goal is to raise, through voluntary contributions, the sum of $150,000.00. The City of Sanibel has pledged to match the amount of funds we collect, up to $150,000.

WHEN

With the combined contribution of $300,000 we shall be able to provide the facilities we propose. If we can meet our contribution goal of $150,000 by the end of 1980 as we hope to do, we will be able to provide the swimming pool by April, 1981 and be able to enjoy the gym as a reality by the end of 1981.

HOW YOU CAN HELP

We have established a fund at BANK OF THE ISLANDS to receive your donations. You may mail or deliver your contribution to:

SANIBEL RECREATION COMPLEX
C/O BANK OF THE ISLANDS
1699 PERIWINKLE WAY
SANIBEL, FLORIDA, 33957

Please make your TAX DEDUCTIBLE checks out to SANIBEL RECREATION COMPLEX. Remember, our goal is to have the sum needed by December 31, 1980. Of course, we will be happy to receive your contribution in the early part of 1981 if this will help you with your income tax planning.

We have established four donar clubs to accommodate everyone's budget.

OSPREY DONOR CLUB-

For donations in the amount of $1,000.00 or more
All donors in this club will be honored by having their names inscribed on a permanent plaque by poolside.

HERON DONOR CLUB -

For donations of $200.00 or more
All donors in this club will be recognized by having their names inscribed on a "signature tile" which will become a permanent part of our pool.

PELICAN DONOR CLUB -

For donations of $100.00 or more
All donors in this club will be acknowledged on an honor roll of contributors permanently displayed in the gymnasium.

SANDPIPER DONOR CLUB -

For donations of $25.00 or more
All donors in this club will have their names on an honor roll of contributors permanently displayed in the gymnasium.

THANKS

I hope you will be as proud as I am to contribute to this most worthy cause. I look forward to our mutual efforts in achieving our goal.

Samuel T. Bissell
