When you're caught in a fire -

By Martha Bishop

The Islands had a desert dry season this year and the ability and knowledge of how to cope with a fire is advantageous to everyone.

There are basically three types of housing structures on the Islands: low ground level housing, piling housing 8 feet above sea level or more and condominiums and hotels reaching up to four stories.

Sanibel Assistant Fire Chief Charles Frederick stresses that most importantly, no matter where you are, you should know the physical outlay of the building you are in. This should always be investigated whether you're in a public area such as a restaurant or in your own home.

When in any public area, Frederick advises inquiring as to where the fire exits are nearest your location. He cautions that you should then check to see that the exit is not blocked and is functioning properly.

If the misfortune of fire ever should come into your life, here are some guidelines offered by Frederick to minimize a fire's destructive powers.

1. When you sense a fire, always report it directly to a fire department. The individual should carry this responsibility into effectiveness by doing it themselves, not notifying "in-house" management. For example, at a hotel, an outside line should be sought, not the front desk. Frederick explains that the management of the Beverly Hills Club in Kentucky tried to contain a fire for 15 minutes before contacting the fire department. The management did not desire to alarm its patrons, yet there was such a delay in contacting the proper authorities that fatalities reached upwards of 150.

2. Feel the door's surface temperature before opening. If you suspect a fire to be in your building but it is not yet in your room, you may be able to tell how close the burning is by the temperature of the door. At all times, avoiding smoke inhalation should be your major concern. Inhalation of the deadly smoke must be kept to the least amount as possible. The door should be slowly opened to test the density of the smoke on the other side. With it barely opened a crack, note whether smoke flows in. If it does, shut the door immediately.

3. Always take your room key when venturing out and make sure it will be possible to return to your room if the way

Maybe we get better reviews in Peoria!

By Pat Harmel

They come here every year by the droves, in fact, they come here this time of year. They come to escape the bitter cold of northern winters, to experience an environment they view as terribly primitive - nice, but primitive. They shell our beaches, clog our roads, eat at our restaurants, shop at our stores. And then they go home, without us ever knowing how they got here in the first place.

And then what happens?

Well, if they happen to be the Michael Sterne family of Manhattan they rename our refuge (and the man for whom it was named) the J.L. (Ding) Darling National Wildlife Refuge: they tell all their friends about us and urge them to come and stay at South Seas Plantation, which they view as "comfortable, at ease with the environment, a neatened version of what occurs without man's help elsewhere on the island;" they spread the myth of the islands being "the shell capital of the world" ("The great tourist resource of the islands, the attraction that brings thousands of visitors each winter, is their wealth of shells.") and, just in case there's someone in the East who missed their home movies, they write up the whole story of what they did on their winter vacation and run it in The New York Times.

Michael Sterne, you see, is the travel editor of The Times.

In the December 14, 1980 edition of The Times, Sterne scores a journalistic coup - a full three half-pages of The Times are devoted to his (March 1980) vacation, spent with his wife and two daughters on Captiva.

Sterne tells Times readers that he was so enchanted by our islands he went out and bought a shell guide to aid his quest for the perfect specimen, even though he admits to having collected shells for years during "East Hampton summers" without experiencing the slightest urge to educate himself on the subject.

In his Times article, Sterne describes "the Sanibel Stoop" to hardened Manhattanites, gives road map directions to the entrance of the refuge, bemoans the fact that during his entire stay he never saw a single alligator, gives a blow by blow account of happenings on the wildlife drive and describes a tour through the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Driving her balloons to their destination, Ellen finds herself crowded by the rubbery collection. She must take extra precautions to keep them from floating in front of her face - or out the window!

With kazoo in mouth and balloons in hand, Ellen skates to the door to offer her birthday surprise.

Ellen Asen claims she should have been an actress. But, in lieu of the footlights, she has invented a business where she can be as theatrical as she pleases and have a ball-oon doing so.

Ellen has recently become the Islands' "Balloon Lady."

Elaborating on a novel notion suggested by her mother, Ellen describes her new balloon business as "something right up my alley."

"Part of me loves it so much," Ellen says of her balloon venture, adding, "and part of me loves performing." So, she has managed to couple both loves into one very enterprising endeavor.

Since she loves to perform so much, Ellen enjoys the "whole act" involved in delivering bunches of balloons for birthdays, anniversaries, holidays and just about any other occasion worthy of a special and unique surprise.

A happy Dr. Davis accepts his colorful, rubbery bouquet - something he won't soon forget.

Balloon Lady of Sanibel

Story & photos by Ellen Mulligan

Working with the same philosophy found behind singing telegrams and candy-grams, Ellen instead hand delivers a bouquet of colorful balloons and a poem befitting the occasion. Dressed in black derby and tails, she waltzes or roller-skates to the home of the unsuspecting party and offers her magic balloons.

"People have been very touched," Ellen says of her clients' response, adding, "It's nice to see such good reactions." For Ellen, the best part of her balloon stints is the actual process of "going and doing" the deliveries. And on the drive to her locations, she "psyches" herself up to the point of true theatrical form before knocking on the door.

On one particular Super Bowl Sunday, Ellen was hired to deliver a bouquet of balloons in Cape Coral to Dr. Rick Davis who was celebrating, besides the Super Bowl, his 40th birthday.

On several occasions before the actual delivery day Mrs. Davis spoke with Ellen about her husband so Ellen could form an idea of what Dr. Davis was like and what could be written about him in a birthday poem.

The hour prior to the birthday delivery, Ellen went out to her garage where a large helium dispenser sits to fill up the balloons. Already having prepared the large birthday card and already dressed in her costume, she tied the balloons and poem together and proceeded to her car.

Ellen usually drives a Datsun on her rubbery rendezvous' and says that it is some job trying to pile 13 or more large helium balloons in the car, not to mention the weird looks she gets from other drivers passing by. On this particular day, however, she was driving a pick-up truck and there wasn't too much problem fitting the balloons in.

Upon arrival at the designated spot, Ellen put on her roller skates, emptied the truck of its rainbow contents, skated to the door and rang the bell.

A disbelieving Dr. Davis answered the door and escorted Ellen as she skated into the living room where family members had gathered to get a better look at the bizarre surprise.

With a blow of her kazoo, Ellen announces, "Ladies and Gentlemen..." and, captivating their utmost attention, proceeds on with the poem and presentation of the balloons to the beaming birthday boy.

Ellen's job is a unique business, to say the least! She has finally become her own boss and she loves the excitement that goes along with her helium-filled occupation.

If you're ever in need of balloons, for whatever occasion, just give the "Balloon Lady" a call.

She'll gladly take it from there.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," Ellen says as she begins to read Dr. Davis his birthday poem.

The Company wows 'em again

By Pat Harmel

Islanders Charlotte Heimann, Fran Levy and B.G. Olson (sitting in for the ailing John Anspacher) captivated an audience of nearly 200 Islanders last Sunday evening as they took on not only the words but the personas of American poets James Thurber, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Emily Dickinson and Carl Sandburg.

Performing as "The Company," a five-month-old poetry performing group, and sponsored by the Barrier Island Group for the Arts (BIG Arts) the trio offered biographical sketches of their featured authors as well as readings from letters, diaries, novels, poetry and prose selections.

Heimann, performing as the Pulitzer Prize winning Millay, tickled the audience's fancy and brought tears to their eyes while Levy, spotlighted as the sheltered Ms. Dickinson, brought the New England poet to life as never before. B.G. Olson, executive director of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, did an outstanding job on Thurber's Walter Mitty and was appropriately cast for readings of works by the nature loving Sandburg.

Investigation into drowning death of Sanibel secretary closed

A crowd of over 200 gathered at a memorial service on the Causeway last week for Linda Ryan and Barry Graves.

By Pat Harmel

At sunset they traveled by car to a spot on the Causeway, single and in groups, some 200 strong, to say good-bye to special friends.

Linda Ryan, a 26 year old City secretary, and Barry Graves, her 28 year old fiance, had been found.

One week from the day the couple had vanished, setting off a nation-wide search, Lee County lawmen pulled their bodies from a submerged car in a Cape Coral canal about five miles from their Matlacha apartment.

"Death by drowning" was the ruling of the Lee County medical examiner. "There were no signs of foul play" said the Lee County Sheriff's report.

But the facts - or lack thereof - surrounding the case have many Island friends of Linda Ryan's and more than one law enforcement official troubled, despite the fact that investigation into the case has been closed.

The pieces of the puzzle begin the evening of Friday, January 16, when the couple apparently visited the home of a Fort Myers friend, Bob Clarke.

Clarke told investigators that the couple talked of their plans for a March 1 wedding, drank one or two beers and left his home around 2:30 a.m.

They were never seen alive again.

Linda Ryan's 1980 Datsun was found upside down in a deep canal west of SW 17th Avenue off from Chiquita Parkway in southwest Cape Coral. Her completely clothed body was discovered in the car's back seat. She had change from a $10 bill - the correct amount of change received after buying a six-pack of beer. Three full beers were found in the car. Barry Graves' partially clad body was wedged between the two front seats.

The couple's watches, billfolds and the clothes Clarke claimed they were wearing the night before, were found in their locked Matlacha apartment.

But there appears to be no logical reason why the couple was driving through a deserted area of Cape Coral far from the main road in the middle of the night.

Friends suspect foul play.

"I can't really say whether or not they were conscious or unconscious when they went into the water," said a spokesman for the medical examiner's office. "They each had a bump on the top of their head - a slight bruise, no fracture. It could have occurred when the car went into the water. There is no physical proof one way or the other whether it was an accident." Lt. Tom Wallace of the Lee County Sheriff's Department is, however, convinced that it was an accident - despite the unlikely scenario.

"I think they were young lovers and they had an inspiration," said Wallace. "I doubt they were drunk. I think they wanted to be headed right where they were headed but they didn't realize the canal was there or they knew it was there but they didn't know it was so close."

The car had traveled over 780 feet from the main road into the canal.

"We have no indication that they tried to stop," said Wallace. "The car tracks go directly from the road toward the canal. There is an obvious diversion at the area of a culvert and another around a clump of palmetto. There is no indication they were out of control."

As of last Wednesday, Wallace termed the investigation "officially closed" - unless toxicology reports due back from Miami this week reveal signs of foul play.

When questioned about another set of tire tracks reported at the scene where the car was found, Wallace responded, "There were numerous sets of car tracks but nothing to tie them in together. There were no footprints other than those of the people who found the car."

But another mainland investigator, who asked not to be identified, questioned the wisdom of closing a case where so little evidence supporting the accident theory exists.

"It's still an unattended death and nobody knows what happened," he said. "I would never close a case like this. I would just leave the case open and say we were not actively investigating it. A year from now or two years from now in another case new evidence about this one might surface."

Another police investigator also questioned Wallace's theory. "There's no way I can believe they went home in the middle of the night and then left again to go out in the freezing cold driving around to be romantic," he said. "There's also no reason to pull 800 feet off a road to park."

Whether or not Linda and Barry ever made it home Friday night, why they were out driving in a deserted area of Cape Coral in the wee hours of the morning, whether they were being chased, were alone or not are questions that will not likely be answered now.

Road discussion slated

Discussion of plans for county road 869 between San Carlos and McGregor Blvd. and widening of McGregor Blvd. to the Sanibel Causeway has been scheduled for discussion at the Feb. 4 County Commission meeting. The proposed policy for land use on CR-869 and McGregor is also expected to be discussed at that time.

A very special offer for Islanders only

Beginning this week the Sanibel-Captiva Islander is making an unprecedented offer. For only $5 the Islander is offering Island residents a full one year's subscription. This represents a $2 savings off the normal resident subscription rate.

This offer is our way of showing the people of the Islands that we are interested in getting the news of Sanibel and Captiva to the people who live here. The reduced rate offer is limited to Island residents and expires March 1.

If you have always wanted to subscribe to the paper but, for one reason or another, kept putting it off, do it now! You'll be keeping yourself informed and saving money at the same time.

100 years old - and holding!

By Ellen Mulligan

Born January 31, 1881, Dr. Gus H. Zimmerman celebrated his 100th birthday on the Islands last Saturday with his twin sons, his three grandchildren and his four great grandchildren.

Explaining that he has no secrets to longevity, Dr. Zimmerman believes it is a matter of having "good ancestors. The rest of it is up to the Man upstairs. He's the one who takes care of all of those things and nobody knows that better than I do."

A New Yorker himself, Dr. Zimmerman has been coming to Sanibel during the winter months for five years now. "The first time I came down, I found I could walk a lot longer than up north," he explains. For Dr. Zimmerman a daily walk is a must.

"I walk my usual stint in a bathing suit," Dr. Zimmerman says, adding with a joke, "I'm trying to get a little more sunburn." Most afternoons, Dr. Zimmerman also takes a jaunt to the Dunes to hang golf-balls "for exercise."

"Golf and swimming are two sports you can do all of your life," Dr. Zimmerman explains, adding that as a younger man, up until he was 47, he used to play tennis, handball and even did some boxing.

However, a visit to his doctor led him to the conclusion that "I'm not 22 anymore," so at that point he took up golf and left the more strenuous activities for the 22 year olds. But he still believes, "You can do all of those things if you don't do it all-out."

Dr. Zimmerman, who practiced dentistry from 1902 until 1966, has seen a gradual process of both "progress and regression" during his lifetime. "You can talk about the good 'ole days," he says, when you could take your girl to the theatre and to the best restaurant in New York for $10 - not to mention what a night out on the town would cost today.

Celebrating this very special occasion at Chadwick's Restaurant on Captiva, Dr. Zimmerman started the tradition of personal celebrations on the Islands a few years ago. This year, however, children to great grandchildren will celebrate this auspicious day with him.

A Very Happy Birthday Dr. Zimmerman!

Today's bridge hand demonstrates a case of self-shafting shrewdness.

Expert players, paired against novices, often take advantage of their opponents' naivete. Of course, this would never have happened in our friendly Sanibel duplicate games because both our experts and novices alike are known as "honest bidders."

On this deal, East-West psyched the inexperienced North-South pair out of a cold game contract, but wound up with nothing but a good story for their efforts.

South opened two clubs, a strong, artificial opening bid showing either a lot of high cards or any strong suit or suits.

West decided this was the moment to jam up the opponents' auction. He overcalled two hearts on his singleton, intending to rescue himself to three clubs if he was doubled.

North did not know what to do so he passed. Because East had so many hearts and only one spade he decided to make a psyche of his own: two spades.

South passed. He was flabbergasted. West passed and North came to life with a three-spade cue bid. Unbelievably, everyone passed.

The ace of hearts was led, dummy was exposed and both of the experts had to laugh at the expense of the novices. After a heart continuation at trick two, West ruffed and declarer made 11 tricks.

Since this was a duplicate tournament, it was not known until an hour after the session was over what each side had received in match points. Every other pair had bid six spades with the North-South cards and were set because of the heart lead and ruff. North-South received a top score and experts East-West received a zero.

Condo associations release questionnaire results

With 25 condominium associations as members, the Condominium Associations of Sanibel, Inc. (CASI), now represents 1,633 living units, Franklin G. Butler CASI president has announced.

The summary of a questionnaire completed by 15 of the member associations indicates a desire for CASI to explore the feasibility of joint purchasing of supplies, to circulate information of governmental regulations, to explore the equity of property tax appraisals and to circulate periodic bulletins.

Information was secured on a wide variety of subjects, including maintenance fees, management format, rentals, and number of permanent residents. Seven condominiums have from zero to three permanent residents, while three have from four to nine. Only two have 10 or more.

The Board of Directors selected Mrs. Jean Reed of Sunset South to fill the vacancy caused by the death of David Gere. Ray King of Nutmeg Village was named treasurer.

The annual meeting has been set tentatively for Wednesday, March 25, 1981, at 2 p.m. at the Recreation Room of Sanibel Surfside, 610 Donax.

CASI was organized early in 1980, but unforeseen delays in becoming incorporated were encountered. Consequently, relatively little activity was undertaken. In view of this, present members will not be billed for 1981 dues unless additional financial obligations are authorized.

Condominium associations which have not yet joined are cordially invited. Membership involves an initial payment of $25 and annual dues of 25 cents per unit. Application blanks can be had on request to Warren C. Hyde, Secretary, 610 Donax, 472-4753.

Fire! from page one

make sure it will be possible to return to your room if the way becomes blocked by fire or smoke.

4. Never use elevators in a fire. This is extremely dangerous as the fire might cause an electrical short-out. Use of an exterior stairwell, which most Island storied buildings have, will generally cut down on the possibility of smoke inhalation.

4. Travel as close to the floor as possible. When there is dense hot smoke, any breathable air is pushed to the bottom by the smoke and heat which rises to the top of the interior. If possible, obtain something wet, such as a shirt or a towel to breathe through. Frederick explains that firemen must often breathe into their coats to avoid smoke inhalation.

5. Prevent smoke from entering the room. A bedspread, towel or clothing should be drenched with water and used to block any cracks or openings that smoke may filtrate through.

6. Wait to open windows. There is always the risk of smoke entering the room from outside the building. If the danger of this seems slight, then a natural ventilation system can be created by opening the top of a window, and the lower half by a much smaller degree. The smoke will draw out through the top and fresh air will flow in through the lower opening. Frederick points out that many new buildings have "fixed" windows that do not have an upper and lower half. One's first instinct might be

Don't you dare gig stunned snook!

We are now finding out that the prolonged cold spell has contributed to more fish deaths than had been previously suspected. And "sportsmen" illegally taking fish stunned by the cold are more abundant than in any year I can recall.

It was during the first of the cold days that I mentioned the jack crevalle seemed to be the first to die in any numbers around the Islands. But, this week, perhaps 10 days since the start of the cold weather, other fish, such as sand perch and eels, and some small redfish have also been seen dying.

Fortunately, we haven't seen many dead snook or large redfish, circling at the surface or dead in shallow waters. We always worry about what fish kills will do to the summer fishing, if the big ones are killed the winter before with prolonged cold weather.

Probably the most unfortunate thing about the cold weather is that it slows down fish, making it easier for them to be speared or "gigged" by meat hunters.

The people who gig the snook lying still in canals half frozen from the cold wait for the fish to get into, less than two feet of water then throw a spear at them. A missed fish is usually wounded badly enough so that it gets away, but dies within a short time anyway from loss of blood.

Most giggers like to illegally spear snook and they know the big fish show little fear when they are stunned by the cold water. This week, one fishing guide I know told me he had watched the Florida Marine Patrol helicopter methodically work over the isolated canals and backwaters watching for people gigging fish.

We'll try to get the names of those arrested and what their fines will be for a future column.

I've found that most of those I know of who illegally spear fish don't have the ability to catch them within the law anyway. They are usually the first to say that the Islands are getting "fished out."

There is some good news to all of this cold weather fishing, however, and that is that the redfish seem to be hitting very well at this time. Several boats have got a dozen reds in the 3-4 pound class. That's a great eating size and quite a battler too.

These school reds are taking mostly live shrimp, but lots of us have switched from that to using shrimp imitation plastic-body lures with lead heads. We tip the hook with a tiny amount of shrimp, but that's all you need.

I have found these reds mostly under docks where the water runs deeply near shore. This means fishing on the Sound side of the Islands, for the most part, but I imagine that some fish will show on the beach as the waves and winds allow them to get there.

The run of reds could end when the weather warms, but for now I imagine that many more good reports of redfish catches will be made.

Good fishing and remember to release any reds you catch that are under 12-inches in length. There is no bag limit, or limit on the total number you can legally catch, but we would suggest that you take only what you can eat, or release what fish you don't need.

Conversion table: The above tides are for the lighthouse point of Sanibel only. To convert for Redfish Pass (North tip of Captiva), add 55 minutes to the time shown for every high tide. Subtract two minutes for every low tide.

For Captiva Island Gulf side, subtract 30 minutes for each high tide, and subtract hour and 16 minutes for each low tide.

For Captiva Island, Pine Island Sound (Bay) side, add 1 hour and four minutes for each high tide and add 52 minutes for each low tide.

In between these points, gulf or bay, guesstimate and have good fishing or shelling.

Shelling Tips

Keep an eye on those winds and tides

By Captain Mike Fuery

Certainly you have to be just a bit fanatical to get out at dawn in 20 mile-per-hour winds and temperatures in the low 40s, just to look for shells! But those who do manage to get out early on these cold mornings probably are getting many more "keepers" than the rest of us.

You really should keep in mind the direction of the wind and the time of the low tides at this time of the year, because good shellers know which beaches to work under the right conditions.

Something strange always happens this time of the year when these strong northerly, cold winds come sweeping down and pass over the Islands.

Remember that, for the most part, Sanibel is an east-west positioned Island. What this means to shellers is that on the northern side of the Island, the winds will be strong and the seas stirred up, making shelling particularly difficult. You will notice this along the Causeway and in the Dixie Beach area, both of which look right into the face of that northern wind.

But on the southern side of the Island, let's say from the old steamboat area on up to what is called The Rocks, will be in the lee of the winds. This simply means that it will be virtually out of the way of the strong winds and up close to shore the waters will be much less riled.

This means that if you wanted to get up early and work the beach on the lee side of the winds, say in this instance, off the Tarpon Bay Road, you could probably expect much easier weather conditions.

Now, the next thing you want to combine with your selection of beach, based upon wind direction, is what stage of tide you want. Many shellers want to look only for a low tide. That's fine if you want to get after the live shells. But, selecting a high tide with a little wave action often brings in the more valuable dead shells and you don't have to wade in water measuring 55 degrees!

Either way, try to keep that tide chart handy and you will notice that when there are strong northerly winds, there is usually a more pronounced low tide. That is, the scheduled low tide will be even lower than normal, and better shelling for you - particularly if it falls at dawn.

This coincidence of low tide at dawn and strong winds from the north happens several times each month during the winter season.

Not too many of us want to brave the big winds at 6:30 a.m., so we wait for a little sun and hot coffee to remake us into humans with working eyes, before we venture out onto the beach.

The secret to shelling is to enjoy your time on the beach. If you go out with the attitude that you've got to find a certain sized shell, then you might as well have stayed back at the office where the competition should have been left.

No one ever gathered their outstanding shell collection on one outing, so keep at it and remember to use those winds and tides to get you into good shelling beaches.

(Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 for information.)

to break it, creating an opening which can not be shut. This would allow smoke to come in without a means of stopping it and should be used as a last resort only. All doors and windows should be opened cautiously to test how much smoke might enter.

Frederick feels the Sanibel Fire Department is well-equipped to handle the Islands' potential fires. Its three "pumper" engines each have a 35 foot ladder, roof ladders, attic ladders and 17,000 feet of hose. There are two men on duty at all times who are supported by a 12 person fire squad.

But the importance of practicing good safety measures to prevent fires is stressed most by Frederick. "A very important piece of fire protection is a good smoke detector," he says, but a quality brand should be shopped for, as many inferior brands do not sound off. He recommends that all flammables be kept safely out of danger with good housekeeping steps and that electrical outlets not be overloaded.

Foundation with SCCF guide Mary Wegmuller.

He also tells New Yorkers that despite the fact he "sampled restaurants on and off the Plantation," he could "recommend none for their food - but several were quite attractive physically." The single plaudit goes to Chadwick's even though he declares "the service slow." But then, what can you expect from a man who labels our midwinter Gulf waters "bathtub warm"?

Junior Einsteins abound

It was time for the fifth graders from Sanibel Elementary School to become junior Einsteins, Pasteurs and other great scientists of the world. Questions like "What is a black hole?" "How does a swimming pool get heated with solar hypothesis, a purpose, a procedure and then energy?" and "Are ants effected by the come to a conclusion," explained Mrs. sun?" were just a few of the challenges undertaken by the junior scientists.

A trunk showing of the latest in fashion

California, notorious for trends, has originated one of the hottest fashion items to recently hit the Islands.

The collage jacket pays no regard to fabrics or colors. The more diverse the materials and colors, the better. The jacket is hand sewn from multiple fabrics in multiple colors, features lacey trims and is lined in bright calico prints.

It collage jacket is the latest item for the up-to-date dresser and probably the most colorful coat since Joseph and his coat of many colors. Not only is each jacket a work of art and an heirloom in itself, but it is also an adventure in sewing.

When Betty McGoon from the Nimble

Thimble first discovered this novel sewing project, she hardly slept at night and says that while she was trying to get to sleep, "I made three jackets."

From February 9 through the 14, the Nimble Thimble will be featuring a "trunk showing," that is, several collage jackets from California's Joanne Stack collection will be on exhibit.

"They're here simply for show and tell," Betty explains of her desire to show Islanders something new in sewing. "People can get an idea of how they might want to construct one," she adds.

Elementary business

"You just couldn't get bored!" was the general consensus of the fifth grade proprietors who manage the Sanibel Elementary School Store.

The supply store, a before-school venture open from 7:55 to 8:10 in the morning, was created as a "convenience for the children," says the administrative secretary for the school. The earnings go into a general fund for the students and the cigar box which holds the profits is mostly open - to make change in pennies!

According to the students, it is something of a privilege to be able to work in the store. "Things like good grades and not talking in class," are given as prerequisites by student Joy Cramer.

The supplies the store will stock are decided upon by each class getting together and compiling a list of what they would like sold. Crayons, pencils, pens, notebooks, glue, metric and standard rulers, scissors and tissues are only a few of the items available to the students. The prices range from $3.25 for a kindermat, the most expensive item to 12 cents for 10 sheets of paper.

"September was really busy," explains Store Manager David Muench. The students themselves set up the store out of three chairs placed in the doorway of the General Room. Business has slowed slightly, but student Scott Lewis is cited as "our best customer," and the managers say there is still a demand for scribble pads!

New gallery-shop opens in Periwinkle Place

"Everything is hand-crafted by American craftspeople, and everything is a limited edition," says Lynne Stern of the art featured in The Limited Edition Gallery, a recently opened "gallery-shop" in Periwinkle Place.

Each piece of craftwork is unique and can not be restocked. "I'd like people to realize that when something is gone, it's gone. Each piece is signed, numbered, and irreplaceable," stresses Lynne as she explains how the works might be recreated by the artisan but not reproduced.

Resumé is credited to each artisan whose work is in the gallery. It lists the exhibitions, showings and placings of the works. This helps Lynne determine the credibility of the art and select those artists she sees as "the very best craftspeople in their field, from all over the United States." Jewelry pieces have been crafted in New York, brass and silver work is brought in from Texas, pieces of blown glass come from California showing the geographical range in the shop's selection. One of the shop's glassblowers exhibited in the Table Top Exhibit at the American Craft Museum in New York and the Rockefeller Collection currently contains wall-hangings of another artisan whose work will soon be in the gallery.

Lynne imparts a sense of respect for the objects' authenticity and draws attention to each one's uniqueness. Intricate miniature ceramic houses and shops, which are "registered, go for about $100." She invites people to browse through the gallery, "looking at the works as art, as you would in any art gallery. It's just creativity in another medium." She further explains that the more expensive items should be bought as investments. But prices in the gallery vary, with a wood inlaid box going for $300 and "critters" being as inexpensive as $2.

Other crafts represented in the gallery are the "wearable-art" of fibers and weavings, soft-sculpture mobiles of multi-colored dancers, hand-welded skillets, batiks and wooden toys. And this is only a sampling of what is currently on exhibit at The Limited Edition Gallery!

The Timbers piano bar

Islanders have had a new piano lounge opened in their midst.

It is just to the left of The Timbers and manager Matt Asen says, "It is for quiet before or after dinner drinks, where people can talk and be romantic."

Piano music is the featured entertainment at the new lounge and savories are light with oysters, raw vegetables, soup and chili among the items suggested by Matt. The bar seats 20 with additional table seating bringing the total to "about 56."

Clean, light wood and abundant greenery creates the ambience of a tropical garden. Attire is casual but proper.

Opening right as the season starts, Matt stresses the new piano bar is "for Islanders, too. Maybe after the season we'll have a grand opening for the Islanders," he adds.

Robert Dugger

Age: 74

Height: 5' 7"

Roots: "I was born in Texas but I went to Arizona very young."

Pleasures: "Dancing, ceramics and my poetry."

Mentor: "I never aspired to be like any other dancer - I tried to learn something from all of them."

Last Book Read: "I read articles and literary digests when I take my mother-in-law to the doctor."

Wish: "I'd like to have a literary agent get me a good publishing house and get national coverage for my new book."

Words of Wisdom: "Whenever you do something and you do develop it enough to an artistic degree - it's art."

By Ellen Mulligan

At 74, Robert Dugger, affectionately known to his Island friends as "Dugger," can still do a smooth soft shoe.

"I don't need music," Dugger says as he shuffles his feet in preparation for a little number. "I have a song running through my head. I instinctively hear uum-pa-pa's."

And so, with a smile a mile wide and his dancing feet as limber as ever, Dugger instinctively taps out a dance so slick that it could have put Bing Crosby or Donald O'Connor to shame in their heyday.

"I was a little guy and I'm a ham at heart," Dugger explains of his search for a personally fulfilling occupation, adding, "I had to find something I could excel at - and tap dancing was it!"

Forsaking the University of Arizona to seek out his tapping career, Dugger was lured to California because, as he explains today, "When I wanted to dance, I had to go where the market was." His choices were limited to New York or Los Angeles and Dugger soon found himself on the L.A. show business circuit.

It was during the "talkie" movie era that Dugger began his tapping profession. He refers to himself at that time as a "vaudeville hooper" and he tapped his heart out in 14 to 16 different musical pictures.

Dugger danced beside such movie greats as the black-face comic Al Jolson in "Mammy" as well as performing with Bing Crosby in "Too Much Harmony." People tend to think show business is very glamorous, Dugger says, but even though he really enjoyed the experience he found it far from glamorous.

"It was fun to work in the movies but you do one or two movies a year," Dugger explains, adding that the rest of the time he was scrounging around to make ends meet. "It was the height of the depression - show business was dead. And with spot bookings you'd just get by, you don't make a living."

Longing for a job which assured a weekly paycheck, Dugger gravitated to St. Louis where he started a long-lived career as a dancing teacher. He joined forces with Fanchon and Marco, a brother and sister team who had a "big theatrical corporation."

Dugger was responsible for instruction in several departments within the theatre school including ballroom dance, tap, vocal and acrobatics. It was in St. Louis where Dugger met "Cookie" who would soon become his wife and his invaluable partner at the dance school.

Fanchon eventually dropped the business into Dugger's lap and with the addition of his wife as ballet teacher, the school began to boom. Together the Duggers developed under their toe the largest dancing school in existence in America from 1945 to 1955 - with over 1200 students seeking their dancing expertise.

Often vacationing in Florida during the early 50's and being avid shellers, the Duggers tripped upon the beaches of St. Petersburg where the shells they found and identified were described in textbooks as "found in profusion on Sanibel Island."

With that discovery, the Duggers became passengers on the ferryboat to Sanibel two or three times a year for shelling rendezvous. A quirkish event at an auto show back in St. Louis, however, was to change the direction of the Duggers' future.

While eyeing cars for possible purchase, they hit upon a Lincoln Mark and Dugger asked Cookie whether she would like him to buy it for her. But Cookie took him by surprise and said, "No, I want a lot on Sanibel."

Within a week, Dugger found himself back on Sanibel and soon after he purchased a lot from "Priscilla." "One hundred feet of front footage on the Gulf of Mexico, four blocks deep - that's the kind of property they sold in the early 50's," Dugger laughs.

While continuing on with their dancing lessons in St. Louis until 1971, the Duggers also began building on their Sanibel property with the thought of retirement. During those years; they picked up a new hobby and became master craftsmen in the art of china painting and ceramics, a hobby which was to develop into a career for them once on Sanibel.

Upon their eventual retirement, the Duggers finally moved to their shell haven on Sanibel. Once here they opened up several beach cottages, more commonly known as Dugger's Tropical Village. They also started a combination giftshop and ceramic and china painting school which was aptly named Duggers of Sanibel.

Occupying their time with the motel and giftshop business, with equal time devoted to ceramics and china painting, the Duggers really came to love Island life. "I love Sanibel to pieces," Dugger says today, adding, "there's no place I like better. I enjoy life here, the only way I'd like it any better is if Cookie was around."

Dugger lost Cookie about a year ago when she failed to survive an operation. But he still immerses himself in their favorite hobbies.

His home and hobby shop are somewhat of a museum, what with cases full of their award winning china and ceramic pieces displayed with pride. Back in his ceramic workshop, jam packed with unfinished ceramic items, Dugger spends a great deal of time painting Sanibel shells and wildlife on his ceramic pieces.

Through the door of his workshop is a startling shell museum, matched only perhaps by Elsie Malone. "Every shell in here was picked up individually on our trips to Sanibel," Dugger explains of the collection dating back to the early 50's.

Lately Dugger has been diligently working on two very important enterprises. He has been turning out pieces upon pieces of ceramic objects for the upcoming Library Arts and Crafts Fair for which he has been an exhibitor for the past nine years.

Another creative outlet that Dugger has cultivated over the years is the art of poetry. "I'm the poet laureate of Sanibel and I'm trafficking in rhythm," he says of his poetic dabblings. A few years ago, Dugger put out a book of humorous poems entitled "Poems of Florida and Sanibel."

But his latest poetic endeavor has been a "rhythmic recapping of the Revolution." Dugger has been composing rhymes about the Boston Tea Party, Ben Franklin, Paul Revere and other historic people and events that he puts into a laughable light. He hopes that this book will have a wider national appeal and the poems certainly elicit quite a chuckle.

Exercising every morning, riding his bicycle five miles every day, playing around with his tropical garden, spending sleepless nights in his ceramic workshop, catching some shut-eye when he's tired, whipping up a poem when the words strike him, teaching ceramics to Islanders and still able to "do a soft-shoe and boogie-woogie," Dugger is quite a man, to say the least.

"I've got the home I've always wanted and the nicest friends you could hope for," Dugger says today, and the fact that he lives on Sanibel keeps a perennial tap in his toe.

Our Town

Native Islander and Cypress Lake football star Kelvin Gavin accepted a four year football scholarship to Alabama State College in Montgomery, Alabama this week.

The possibility of Gavin going to Alabama State has been in the wind for some time now. Gavin's coaches sent up game films to Alabama head coach George James, and Kelvin visited the campus for five days over Christmas break.

But Kelvin wasn't sure of the scholarship until he was told by his defensive coach Chuck Thomas. Kelvin's reaction? "I was surprised. I was glad to hear the news."

At Cypress Lake Kelvin played cornerback on defensive, wide receiver and running back on offense, and returned kick-offs. According to Kelvin, Alabama State is interested in his ability as a running back.

The Library Show

Each year in the crescent shaped city
Of Sanibel out in the Gulf
The artists and craftsmen maneuver
To show off their very best stuff.

For this yearly extravaganza
They trot out the cream of the crop.
They give it that little bit extra
And skim from right off of the top.

Those artists of extra perception
With talented creative flairs
Donate of their time and their talents
To proffer their pieces and wares.

Now these precious prizes and pieces
Of art are destined to go
To reflect the intents and emotions
Of those who display in the show.

An object of art is a treasure
When it can produce and portray
Some beauty of purpose and pleasure
En route on life's happy highway.

The cause that inspires all this effort
Is healthy and kind and benign.
A gesture that implements culture
Is truly of epic design.

So let's all go to the Library Show
With will and desire and some clout.
Let's purchase a treasure for pleasure.
Let's buy and let's try to help out.

ABC Sale set for 28th

Circle February 28 on your calendar! That's ABC Day on Captiva when the Island's fabled annual crowd-pleasing fun raiser is held at the Civic Association.

The "Attic, Basement and Closet Sale" will open at 8:30 a.m. and continue until 1 p.m. with the Civic Association and the Captiva Memorial Library the beneficiaries. Ed and Alice Olling are co-chairmen.

The storage shed behind the center is already crammed with sale items donated by residents and merchants. This year additional space has been readied at the former fire station adjacent to the center.

Items include new and used furniture, clothing, appliances, jewelry, baked goods, books, Island beach shells and plants.

Those who wish to contribute to the sale, which promises to be Captiva's biggest and most profitable yet, may contact Dr. and Mrs. Olling at 472-1432. The larger and more unwieldy items may be picked up at your home or business.

Highlight of the sale will be an auction of special items, including an aluminum skiff. DeWitt Jones, perennial auctioneer, will ring the starting bell at 12 o'clock noon.

Early browsers, before 8:30 a.m., will be able to look over many items on display outside the center and buy coffee and donuts to sustain them for a chance at the goodies ahead.

Tickets for a raffle may be purchased during the sale preceding the auction for the tempting goods and services given by Captiva merchants. Specialties donated by some Sanibel merchants will be sold at separate booths at bargain prices. Last year's event raised almost $9,000.

Resource Center students study the art of photography

By Ellen Mulligan

The students at the Sanibel Resources Center were introduced to the basic elements of photography last week during three different photography seminars.

Jim Pickens from Photo-Sanibel was on hand to offer his photographic expertise to the students first. He explained the rudiments of composition, stressing verticals, the law of "thirds," curves, and other pointers which he illustrated with photographic examples.

During another part of photography week, SRC students took a trip to Edison Community College where they viewed the work of master photographer Ansel Adams. The students explored the exhibit on their own to pick out the composition elements they had learned the day before and Margarite McDonald, SRC art teacher, reviewed the famed photographs with them.

Then, during a trip to the Photographers' Gallery, SRC students eyed the "minimal" photographic style of Leslie Allen Burch to understand yet another approach to this versatile art.

"I think they gained a greater appreciation for photography," said SRC teacher Linda Wassum. That, however, may be more evident after this week. The students at SRC will be taking a nature trip and those with cameras will have the opportunity to try their hand at painting with light on silver-coated plastic.

Audubon school?

By Martha Bishop

A school of the National Audubon Society? That's what arrived on the Island last week with the specific purpose of studying Sanibel's Comprehensive Land Use Plan as an original concept in the field of conservation.

Conservation Foundation boardmember and former City Councilman Porter Goss spoke with the students about the land use plan. They also studied the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge and made comparisons between the barrier islands from a natural history viewpoint.

The school itself is an innovative concept. Its teachers are natural environs and ecosystems across the country as it launches accredited high school and college travel expeditions. Under the name of "The Audubon Expedition Institute," 22 students and a dog have journeyed down the East coast to Sanibel for their fall semester. Founders and directors for the last decade, Michael and Diana Cohen strive to "develop an educational approach that the country is our campus. The expedition itself becomes the reason for existing."

Direct input by the students concerning where they go and who they speak with is seen as extremely important by the Cohens. As an example, while in Washington studying the threatened areas, it was decided to have the students visit with the congressmen and senators who were sensitive to these issues.

"The goal is to adapt to the environment, not change the environment to adapt to you," says Diana. Thus, the study areas are quite diverse. Typical on-site explorations include: Connecticut hardwood forest communities, New Hampshire alpine zones, Maine coast tide-pool inhabitants, Cape Cod glacial ecology, Pennsylvania Amish community relationships, Smithsonian Institution fossil studies, Atlantic coral reef interrelationships and Everglade-Okefenokee ecology.

Further information can be received by writing to the National Audubon Society Expedition Institute, 950 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y.

WRCC becomes NBC affiliate

The news and commentary of the NBC radio network will be broadcast into this area beginning Sunday, February 1. Local radio station WRCC (103.9) FM, has confirmed the affiliation, according to station management.

Jesse Daniels, Programming Director for the station, said that WRCC will be the only station in the immediate area handling the NBC programs. "WRCC will now be the radio voice of NBC in Southwest Florida," he said.

"Up-to-the minute national news, commentary and special features will be broadcast throughout the listening day. Well known NBC personalities John Chancellor, David Brinkley, Gene Shalit and Dr. Joyce Brothers, among others, will offer their reports on what is important to the listener on a daily basis," he added.

"With our new NBC affiliation, WRCC will offer listeners interesting segments pertinent to every aspect of life, plus all the news as it happens. We are planning to become the major news and information radio station in the area," he said.

The station will present the NBC Radio News every hour on the hour, with special interest features broadcast at various times during the week.

WRCC FM can be heard over most of Lee, Charlotte, and Northern Collier Counties. The station became the property of Southwest Communications, Inc., an affiliated company of the Mariner Group on August 21, 1979.

Section B

At age 17, J.N. "Ding" Darling Refuge Manager Del Pierce quit school, joined the Navy for five years, and went on three overseas tours (during the Korean war), two of them on aircraft carriers and one on a destroyer. This young American tenderfoot steamed into ports in Japan, China, the Philippines and Formosa along with all the other young American tenderfoots who had never been drunk, were virgins, and had what they thought was no money. There, Del saw what real poverty was, and remembers talking one day with an intelligent Japanese man who, while they were talking, spotted part of a sausage in a garbage can, plucked it out, and promptly ate it.

After five years in the Navy, Del decided that "living in cramped little spaces was not for me." He'd grown up in Northern Idaho next to a national forest, with thousands of acres to himself. The nearest town, Sandpoint, was a four-mile walk away. His father worked hard, six days a week; they also raised cows and pigs at home, and his mother traded off her woodburning cookstove for an electric stove as soon as she could.

After his stint in the Navy, Del finished high school in California, went to junior college for a year and a half, then received his degree in wildlife management from Humboldt College in Arcadia, California. During two summers out there he had been a student trainee at the Ruby Lakes National Wildlife Refuge in Nevada and had decided he'd like to make his career within the refuge system. In those days, however, western refuges were "raising ducks for people to shoot. There weren't many bird clubs or people who gave a damn until the 1960's." About then, the refuge management philosophy changed, and the officials in charge "looked a lot harder at the non-game species. It seemed like the birdwatchers gave us all the backing; the hunters did all the bitching."

Del's first job as a manager trainee took him, for about four years, to the Klamath Basin Refuges scattered from Northern California into Oregon. One summer detail was spent at the Aleutian Islands National Wildlife Refuge which was the breeding ground for the Canada Goose. The geese were being gobbled up by Arctic Foxes which had multiplied like crazy after being introduced 40 years before. No one had been on the islands for 20 years. The job of the Fish and Wildlife people was to shoot the foxes. Their pelts weren't prime during the summer, so the carcasses were left on the ground. Fox fur was valueless then. The Fish and Wildlife people were attempting to restore the ecological balance of the islands to the more natural situation that had existed before the foxes had been introduced and had multiplied.

After four years at the Klamath Refuge, Del became assistant manager at the Malheur Refuge in Eastern Oregon for three years. Malheur means "evil hour," but Del thought of the place as an oasis; it had plenty of water, desert, mule deer, and a large variety of birds, even though the refuge manager was running the place as a cattle ranch, feeding 50,000 cows in winter on hay raised and cut there.

Pierce was then sent for two and a half years to western Oregon to manage two refuges in the William Finley complex not too far from Portland: the Ankeny Refuge and the Baskett Slough Refuge, both of which were new refuges being converted from farmland to a wintering waterfowl habitat for the Dusky Canada Goose. This is still the primary wintering area for this species in the United States.

Del Pierce Refuge Manager

Del then was sent to the Kootenai Refuge in Nevada, 30 miles south of the Canadian line, where he spent seven and a half years. He was then assigned to Sanibel's Ding Darling Refuge. Why? Well, "these jobs come up on the green sheet," says Del. The position was open, and he thought he'd like a change, from a northern habitat to a southern one.

It's impossible for Pierce to make plans for the future. He could be sent to another refuge in two months or he could be kept on here for the next 10 years. On his wall, in green letters, is a sign to himself: "Take your job seriously but do not take yourself seriously."

Out west, this man was considered a rabid environmentalist. After hunters shot 23 hawks just before Christmas near one refuge, he added a personal note to the hunters at the bottom of his refuge report for the local newspapers: "I hope when you got home your mother ran out of the kennel and bit you." He also publicly objected to the "sanctimonious bastards" who ran coyotes down with their snowmobiles and shot them. For these remarks, the local folk raised a stink. The state legislators wanted to do away with the whole refuge but there was a public hearing and the move was defeated. Idaho was putting in a big dam which ruined the salmon spawning grounds and flooded a huge deer and elk wintering range. The elk and deer came down that winter to eat where they'd all been used to coming, and these great hooved animals found themselves spread-eagled on the ice of the huge reservoir which covered their former food crop. The response of the Army Corps of Engineers was to wipe out the coyotes that were eating up the starving deer. Del recommended in his refuge column: "Blow the whole dam thing up," purposely spelling the word "dam" instead of damn. The response? The engineer from the Corps wrote to Del's boss that Del was "advocating a violent act." The regional manager told Del to desist from writing anything except facts. Del had a family to support. He desisted.

Del's flashes occasionally appeared in print when he first got to Sanibel, but his job is dependent on the higher-ups in Jacksonville, in Atlanta, and, ultimately, in Washington, and he leaves the hot remarks to Islanders like George Campbell. "Though we probably agree on most conservation issues, and I consider him a friend," says Del of Campbell, "when I agree with him I find myself tempted to disagree with him because he's so abrasive."

Del feels that Sanibel's officials have done an admirable job of keeping some remnants here of what Sanibel once was; he considers this a victory, though he says sadly "We're losing all the time, just at a slower rate than other places. It's going; I don't know if it'll ever stop." Each month, he says, he gets more and more depressed with the magnitude of the Brazilian Pepper situation. Our West Indian upland habitat of mangroves and buttonwoods, gumbo limbos and cabbage palms is being dominated by this exotic, which he likens to a spreading cancer, and he deplores the lack of any major action by the county or state to counter it.

What it basically comes down to is the green dollar. Sure, he says, it'd be nice to save every local plant and carefully uproot every Brazilian Pepper tree, as the naturalists would like us to do. But the refuge system can not spend the money to do this. Pierce feels he is doing the best he can with the money he's got. Casuarinas, he says, are easier to kill than peppers, "But all we can do is just piddle around with the Brazilian Pepper situation. What we need is 10 people working fulltime with bulldozers for many years, and then we might be able to control it. It's really frustrating to watch this habitat destruction taking place."

There are three possible ways of looking at the situation, Pierce says: "hope for a miracle (some disease or some technological advance that will kill off the invading plant); do what you can; or, be philosophical, see what happens - maybe it'll balance out."

Why is this plant so dangerous? "Because it's tremendously efficient plant," and though it produces seeu

MISUSE OF MEDICINE

Don't keep antibiotics just in case you may feel ill later. By taking medicine on your own - and without doctor's orders - you may mask the symptoms your doctor should know about. Don't misuse medicine by allowing family members to use it because their symptoms "seem the same". Only your doctor can safely diagnose and prescribe medication.

only once a year, the seeds emerge intact from the digestive systems of birds and raccoons and sprout on the spot. "I've seen clumps of small shoots growing up from raccoons' droppings," says Pierce. If just a foot of Brazilian Pepper root is left in the ground after being bulldozed, that part will take root and sprout. The refuge's policy is to uproot the trees, then try to control their spread (on the wildlife drive only, they do this by occasionally spraying with a mixture of 24-D and dicamba). Wild birds and beasts need to eat all year, not just once a year when this plant fruits, and the pepper is driving out the plants that provide food for the year round. If only somebody could find a use for the weed and make some money off of it, as they can with the excellent firewood from the casuarinas. Pierce suggests that people who have peppers growing in their yards cut them down or uproot them and take the stuff to the City's plant recycling center to be chipped up. He'd like to see the City of Sanibel vote in a special "weed tax" and hire people fulltime to eradicate this beast which is "way beyond the state of dabbling," and though he feels Sanibel is sincerely doing what it can to save the Island, "It's only fighting the pimples."

The paving of the refuge drive, a controversial issue, was slated by higher-ups and in the works long before Pierce came to Sanibel. Paving was done in many refuges; it's easy to keep up. Del threw the thought out to Sanibel's citizens in one of his refuge columns, though he didn't have to, and received plenty of feedback against paving. The decision not to pave, he says, was made by his superiors, not only because of public opposition, but because of a lack of funds to do the job. He also recommended against it, he says. The man who made the final decision was Ken Black, (now retired) regional director.

Del cites the effectiveness of one man's efforts as an example of what Sanibel's citizens could do if they wished. The new visitor's center parking lot was slated by the higher-ups to be paved. Del opposed it, felt sand was fine, and recommended sand to his superiors. His memo was disregarded. But, according to Pierce, Bill Webb, then head of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation's board of directors, wrote to the Atlanta regional director: As a result, the parking area will not be paved, only the driveway entrance to it, and Pierce suggests that if people wish a say about the refuge, they write directly to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at the Richard Russell Federal Building, 75 Spring Street S.W., Atlanta, Georgia, 30303, or to the same (but farther-down-the-scale) U.S. Fish and Wildlife outfit at 15 North Laura Street, Jacksonville, Florida, 32202.

Out west, this unusual, outspoken man had to hold his tongue and toe the line to support his family (wife Norma, son Zachary, 15, and daughter Becky, 21). He has always been considered by his superiors as not conservative enough. It seems, however, to this Islander staff member, that Sanibel is very fortunate to have this man for our refuge manager. Could even the outspoken "Ding" Darling himself survive within the refuge system as it is today? Can Del Pierce feel free to speak his thoughts here or will he be warned to hold his tongue again? I think: if given enough support, Islanders just might be surprised to find they had a refuge manager who could out-Campbell Campbell in his love for the unspoiled natural habitat that was once here.

The deadly potential for oil drilling damage

In an attempt to clarify the magnitude of the dangers associated with offshore oil drilling the Islander is presenting a serialized version of a report published by the Environmental Affairs Committee of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. This report, published in the spring of 1980, does not pretend to represent the oil industry's interests. It is, however, a comprehensive environmental research document which reveals many scientific findings that have not been widely circulated to the general public. The warning issued in this report went virtually unheeded and offshore oil exploration has already begun in the Islands' offshore waters by Mobil, Tennaco and Shell oil companies.

Major environmental dangers come from oil spills and these may result from blowouts at the rig, pipeline ruptures or tanker incidents.

Dr. Max Blumer, a senior scientist for the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, Massachusetts, has conducted what is apparently the only in-depth study on the effects of oil pollution on the marine environment. In an unpublished technical manuscript, Dr. Blumer states that toxic hydrocarbons from processed oil remain in marine life indefinitely. Dr. Blumer's study began immediately following an early 1969 grounding of an oil barge on ledges off West Falmouth, Mass., which resulted in an oil spill of 170,000 gallons of fuel oil into Buzzards Bay and surrounding harbors and marsh areas.

The immediate effect of the barge spill was the complete kill of large and small organisms in the immediate area, Blumer said. He pointed out that oil does sink to the bottom, contrary to what oil company environmentalists say.

The long-term outlook in an oil spill area, Dr. Blumer said, is the continuing death of small organisms. The most affected marine life are those that live on the bottom.

In his conclusions, Dr. Blumer said that "Oil from the accident has been incorporated into the sediments of the tidal rivers and marshes and into the offshore sediments down to 42-feet, the greatest water depth in the sea.

"The pollution has been spreading on the sea bottom and now covers at least 5,000 acres offshore and 500 acres of marshes and tidal rivers. This is a much larger area than that affected immediately after the accident."

A study team of University of Oklahoma scientists has concluded that oil spill prevention systems on offshore rig platforms are not as reliable as the oil industry maintains.

After a 20-month study financed by the National Science Foundation, the team concluded that downhole safety devices - generally valves designed to shut off the flow of oil and gas when the materials surge toward the surface at abnormally high pressure - failed up to 40 percent of the time during recent major accidents involving offshore platforms in the Gulf of Mexico.

Drilling so-called relief wells, or wells drilled to intersect the blow-out well below the ocean floor to cut off the flow of oil and gas also takes too long, the experts said.

Alternative control measures, such as additional subsurface and/or above-the-mudline valves, must be developed, the report says.

However, oil companies claim that their technology is reliable and that most oil spills are due to human error. Certainly human error was a major factor in both the Phillips Eco-Fisk blowout in the North Sea (1978) and in the more recent Ixtoc I spill on the Mexican Coast. Equipment is only as good as the personnel that operate it.

The Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), in consolidation with the National Academy of Sciences and appropriate Federal agencies, have undertaken the study of the environmental impact of oil and gas production on the OCS.

The council has, as one of its research documents, a 750-page DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL STATEMENT ON THE PROPOSED 1973 OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF OIL AND GAS GENERAL LEASE SALE, OFFSHORE MISSISSIPPI, ALABAMA AND FLORIDA (OCS Sale No. 32). This massive document describes: (1) information on this lease proposal, (2) the Gulf areas in question, (3) environmental impacts of the proposed sale, (4) mitigating measures possible, (5) unavoidable adverse environmental effects, (6) short-term use vs. long-term productivity, (7) irreversible commitment of resources and (8) alternatives to the proposed action.

But it has been widely criticized because it demonstrates the federal government's lack of information about its offshore resources and about the social, economic and environmental consequences of their development.

The Impact Statement contains no examination of the benefits of deferring OCS development with a view towards possible increases in efficiency of extraction. We need planning and implementation at once of policies that will also stretch our oil supplies over more years.

The important questions of jurisdiction over clean operations, containment of oil spills, liability for damages from turbidity or from oil spills, are not covered at all.

Quote

To the Editor,

Please print this open letter to all Island residents and visitors.

A statement was made at a recent Sanibel public meeting on Beach Access Parking that the current NO PARKING signs on West Gulf Drive erected by the City are invalid as not conforming to Florida law.

That statement is not based on current Florida Statute 316.002. That law permits such local variances in the official traffic control devices. It unequivocally states: "The Legislature recognizes that there are conditions which require municipalities to pass certain other traffic ordinances in regulation of municipal traffic that are not required to regulate the movement of traffic outside of such municipalities."

The Legislature also recognized Sanibel's unique nature in granting its 1974 Charter. It then characterized the Island as: "an island community known far and wide for its unique atmosphere and unusual natural environment." It also mandated in that Charter that its planning be done "so that these unique and natural characteristics of the Island shall be preserved." Sanibel's City Council in 1976 complied with those mandates by erecting and maintaining those islandy wooden NO PARKING signs along West Gulf Drive.

We residents of the Rocks subdivision are proud of those signs. We also share the aspirations of our fellow Islanders to enjoy our special beach access footpaths to the public Gulf Beach. The developer of our subdivisions generously extended that use to all of you while assessing us for their value in our homesite costs.

In your use of the proposed parking and footpath facilities, therefore, we expect to have your 100-percent cooperation in maintaining the charm and ambience of our affected neighborhood. Together we shall make this parking strategy work. Everyone should obey the parking control signs erected for the benefit of us all. Report to our Police Department any violations.

Thank you.

Cordially,

Paul A. Howe

On behalf of The Salvation Army and the thousands of clients it serves, thank you so much for the wonderful support you and your readers have given to us in the past year and, in particular, with the Christmas Needy Program.

Each year, as the demands for our services grow, it becomes increasingly difficult to meet these needs. In one program, alone - the Christmas Dinner - the Fort Myers Corps fed over 300 persons. ## Shopping

SHOPPING

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual Island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many Island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Tall Australian pines shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health produce fanatics.

you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of Island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several new shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlour, pizza parlour, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the Island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original Island watercolors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooming the back bay...Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, Island shops offer a surprising variety - from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter and of course, for all, shells, shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells...the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

Service with a smile

BEACH ACCESS

Sanibel has miles of public Gulf-front beaches, any one of which is only minutes from your lodging. Lighthouse Point is a stretch of Federal land on the Eastern tip of Sanibel Island, and from there, the Gulf beach is accessible again at the end of Donax Street, at Tarpon Bay Road, at Bowman's Beach Road (off Sanibel-Captiva Road) and Turner's Beach, which is located at Blind Pass, between Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

On Captiva Island, public beach access can be found at Turner Beach (which has public facilities) or further north, just past the entrance to South Seas Plantation.

NOTE: STATE LAW PROHIBITS NUDE SUN-BATHING ON ALL FLORIDA BEACHES. VIOLATORS WILL BE PROSECUTED.

CAMPING

Camping on the beach is prohibited and while everyone enjoys a beach fire, the Sanibel Fire Board has signed into law an ordinance prohibiting open beach fires. Prior to the ordinance, a permit was necessary for a beach bonfire, but as of July 18, 1980, it is now illegal. An exemption to the ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" X 24" X 12" deep with an extruded metal grill) for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit. After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for the cleanup of any debris or litter in your area.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel City limits is not only illegal (violators of the law are subject to a fine of up to $500, or up to 60 days in jail, or both), but can be extremely dangerous. Alligators can run 45 m.p.h., so if you're close enough to feed an alligator, he's close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES.

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you TAKE THEM TO A BANK OR HOTEL VAULT FOR SAFEKEEPING. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

SPEED LIMITS

There are varying speed limits (20-30 m.p.h.) as one comes across the causeway, and there is a very good reason for them...to preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress. This speed limit is strictly enforced with the use of radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department. Driving or parking a motor vehicle or moped on the bike path is strictly prohibited. Violators will be ticketed.

DOGGY DO'S & DON'TS

If you're visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets. Remember: wherever you are, clean up after your pet! The friendly reminder... "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints"...applies to dogs, too. There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

BICYCLE RULES

If you're not used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out for it on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A State law and City Ordinance combine to PROHIBIT PARKING OR DRIVING ON THE BIKE PATH. MOPEDS ARE NOT PERMITTED ON THE BIKE PATHS. Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding. Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Final Phase of Shell Island Beach Club Interval Ownership Condominiums

We're proud to announce that the third phase of Shell Island Beach Club is under construction. Currently we are adding two units, each containing four fully-furnished condominiums.

These two bedroom, two bath condominiums are designed with you in mind and can accommodate up to six persons. Inside, your luxurious condominium has every comfort of home, including: fully equipped kitchen complete with dishwasher, plush linens, even a washing machine and dryer. Outside, enjoy a casual dip in the pool or just bask in the sun. If you enjoy the ease of cooking outdoors you'll find gas grills and picnic tables for your use. All these added touches are reflective of the quality and high standards that have made Captran, Inc. the most respected developer in the industry.

This quiet, prestigious resort can be yours through the sensible concept of Interval Ownership. You buy only the vacation time you can pleasurably use each year. As with any deeded real estate, it is yours to use, rent, loan to friends, exchange to hundreds of worldwide affiliated resorts, even bequeath in your estate.

We've spared nothing for your pleasure. With today's inflation, Interval Ownership makes good sense!
