Recreation complex fundraising 'almost over the hump'

By Pat Harmel

"We're almost over the hump, coming down the other side of the hill," says Dick Noon of the proposed Island Recreation Complex.

"We have about $74,000-plus and a lot of activities are still being planned to raise more money. We should be able to start construction on the pool as soon as the (County) School Board signs the agreement with the City."

At least another $75,000 must be raised before supporters of the community recreation complex can begin to relax. In the meantime, however, plans are being made for the utilization of the completed project.

"We're not trying to run any kind of competition with the Sanibel Community Center," stressed Noon. "We're planning physical activities and the Center is mostly for passive activities, like meetings and things."

"Physical activities" planned for the complex include rollerskating - for adults and children both, men's, women's and children's basketball, volleyball, shuffleboard, handball, gymnastics, weightlifting and almost anything you can think of that involves perspiring.

Long-range plans for the gymnasium include the possibility of a sauna and whirlpool, mirrored walls for dancers and gymnasts, a stove and refrigerator and maybe even outdoor bar-b-q's.

According to Noon, several firms have bid on the project - including the Atlanta firm that built the University of Florida swimming pool - but a final decision on the contractor has not yet been made.

Fundraising projects are still being planned for the community project, including, an oyster shucking contest at The Timbers Restaurant, a pancake breakfast sponsored by the Rotary and a spaghetti dinner organized by the Kiwanis. All proceeds from the 1981 Island telephone directory, published by the Police Recreation Club, have also been pledged to the complex.

Council appoints Goss to fill Butler's seat

By Pat Harmel

Former Councilman and Mayor Porter Goss was last week unanimously appointed by the Sanibel City Council to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Mayor Zee Butler.

Goss accepted the temporary appointment on the condition that he not be prohibited from running in the special April 28 election.

The winner of that election will serve until November, 1982 - the end of Ms. Butler's term of office.

At an earlier meeting held to accept Ms. Butler's resignation due to ill health, Councilman Fred Valtin had suggested temporarily filling the empty Council seat with "someone not interested in running for the position...like an ex-Councilman."

At last Wednesday's special Council meeting, however, Valtin said he had spoke with both Goss and former Planning Commissioner Betty Robinson. According to Valtin, "Porter Goss told me that he would be glad to serve as the interim appointee if appointed by City Council...but he did not want to be irrevocably committed to not running in the campaign."

Valtin also said that Ms. Robinson "would be a good nominee" and "would most seriously consider running for Zee Butler's seat in the coming election."

Valtin then moved to appoint Goss to the temporary vacancy. There were no other nominations and the motion passed unanimously. Council then took a five-minute break to call Goss and advise him of his appointment.

Goss arrived at MacKenzie Hall shortly after and was met with a standing ovation

Goss accepted the Councilman pro tem position on the condition that he not be prohibited from running in the April election from Council members and audience alike. At the swearing-in ceremony, Goss accepted the appointment with the words, "I accept...It's a great honor and I'm sorry it's under such sad conditions."

National Kraut and Frankfurter week

Help celebrate! Eat a dog today!

By Ellen Mulligan

Would you believe that there is a week set aside in honor of the frank? No, not the West Germans and not the coin, but the good old hot dog.

This is National Kraut and Frankfurter Week (definitely not one of those "holidays invented by greeting card companies!"). From groundhogs to presidents, it seems to be an American pastime to think of things to celebrate. So why shouldn't we celebrate the weiner? After all, it has given generations of Americans something to put sauerkraut on. Think about it. What would we do with sauerkraut if hot dogs had never been invented?

What is the endearing quality of the hot dog that makes it so popular? Is it that as children we were brought up on the notion that hot dogs were as American as apple pie, and that an afternoon at the ballpark wasn't complete without a lukewarm hot dog in a mushy roll covered with fluorescent yellow mustard?

It's hard for me to say when and where I acquired my love for the good ol' frank. I'm not sure whether it was the times I spent at Coney Island (rumor had it that Coney Island had the best hot dogs in the world). Or whether it was at Atlantic City, where my mother took me to the famed "Nathan's - Home of the Hot Dog," and I watched her face in anticipation of the ecstasy of that first bite.

Of course it could have been those times that my grandfather bought me franks from street corner vendors in New York City. He told me I'd never have another hot dog as good as that and the one and only drink to have with my hot dog was an orange soda. Anyway, it's hard to pinpoint the precise time of my addiction but suffice to say, somewhere down the line I have acquired a great liking for the stuffed skins and I don't know why.

Since it is kraut and frank week and since (next to cheeseburgers) franks are one of my favorite foods and since my editor strongly suggested this idea, I decided to do a little investigation into the hot dog.

Now, the average American with a 70-year life span will have consumed 23 hogs during his lifetime. The average market hog weighs 200-300 pounds, and half of that weight will result in hot dogs alone.

So, say 23 hogs multiplied by 250 pounds (average hog weight) will equal 5,750 pounds of pork eaten in one person's lifetime. And half of that weight (2,875 lbs.) is actually eaten as hot dogs. If there are eight hot dogs to one pound, that means that an average person will have consumed 23,000 hot dogs in a lifetime! That makes 328 hot dogs in a year, almost one a day for life!

It isn't really known where the term "hot dog" came from in the first place, it's one of those pieces of trivia that no one has apparently gotten around to recording yet. But the origin of the idea behind the hot dog comes to us from the people of ancient Babylonia, Greece and Rome who were, in many ways, way ahead of their time.

At that time, the slippery skins were surely not known as hot dogs, but rather by another common noun, sausage. And the word sausage did not really refer to the finished product, but rather to the entire process of sausageing.

Sausages were also used by the North American Indians who made their's out of compressed meat and berries so they would not spoil. And during the Middle Ages, many European cities became famous for their own special sausage recipes such as Frankfurt, West Germany; Bologna, Italy; and Romano, Rome.

And so now, the most common, the frankfurter, with its ancestors back in Germany, is our every day dog and one of America's favorite people pleasers.

So, you think you've got troubles!

By Ellen Mulligan

There is a breed among humans who cater to the needs of other human beings. Whenever one is in an awkward predicament, the first one they generally call on is God. "Dear God, help me get out of this one. I'll do you a favor if you do," is a common way of putting it.

And who is the one that shows up? It's either the policeman, the doctor, the plumber, the electrician or the tow truck driver. And, when they do appear, you sigh a "Thank God," as you proceed to get out of your initial problem.

Have you ever been one of those lucky persons who is always having something or other going wrong with your car? Then you must know the wonderful feeling of relief when the gas-station-tow-truck-man shows up. Even when you're stuck in a ditch down some off-beat road, at any hour of the day or night, there is always some gas station man who will come and save you.

James Thomas and his son, Jim, along with co-worker Terry Beerman, drive the tow-truck for the Island Garage. And boy, have they seen some pretty unusual predicaments!

Like the story about the "guy from Miami" who thought he could drive on sand. He was found about 110 yards on to Bowman's Beach the first time. About one week later, he was found in a different car stuck in the same spot. The reason he reportedly kept getting stuck in the same spot was because it was an appropriate place for viewing the once-permitted nude bathers.

Then there was the time that the guys got called in to help some tourists on the Ding Darling Nature Drive. When they alerted the garage, the message was that the car had apparently slipped off the road on the soft shoulder. The tourists claimed it was "barely off the road." When Island Garage arrived two-and-a-half miles into the sanctuary to help, the car was nose first into the water at a 45 degree angle!

Although they are in the car business, James, Jim and Terry, have also rescued several boats. One particular boat blew an engine offshore. The owner called all of the marinas and found out that it would take hours before somebody would be able to come and help, so he called the Island Garage. Within an hour, the boat was on the trailer and there was one relieved sailor. The garage has received other similar calls, which led them to believe that they might be in the wrong business.

The Island Garage rescue service helped one Islander who had some visitors for a week. The visitor had volunteered to cut the grass and, while he was doing so, drove the lawnmower into a canal. And that's the last time that Islander will ever let anyone cut his grass.

Of course, the guys have seen some other strange predicaments; like people going straight into the Bay at the end of Dixie Beach where the road curves - unbeknownst to them. And then there's all of the cars that slip into the water when they are trying to unload their boats instead.

Or people who keep tearing down the fence along the big S-curve on Captiva or if not that, then those who drive straight off of Sanibel-Captiva Road. And those people who run off the road to avoid hitting an alligator or a raccoon crossing the street. Then there are the people who get "hung" on some of the dips on the sandy roads.

Whatever the predicament, for the guys at the Island Garage, it's all in a day's work. They like to be available and they like to be of service for they must know how terrible it is to be on vacation and have something go wrong with your car and not know who to turn to for help. The one common denominator for all of these stories is, as James says, "They're very glad to see someone show up."

Fish & Wildlife establish new wetlands classification system

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has developed a new wetlands classification system that it hopes will be adopted for use by other Federal and State agencies concerned with the protection of these vital areas.

Once thought of as wastelands, wetland areas today are recognized for their value in maintaining groundwater supplies, purifying water, preventing shoreline and bank erosion, and temporarily storing floodwaters. In addition, biologists have long realized the critical importance of this habitat to the continued existence of fish and wildlife species.

A standardized system of classifying wetlands will enable improved resource management decisions by the public agencies that are responsible for their protection. Such a new system is profiled in a recent publication by the Fish and Wildlife Service entitled Classification of Wetlands and Deepwater Habitats of the United States, developed in conjunction with the U.S. Geological Survey, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the University of Rhode Island.

In defining the biological boundaries of wetlands, the new system allows Federal and State agencies, as well as the private sector to describe and categorize these types of habitat. This information is essential in the early planning stages of any project and may prevent costly and unexpected delays during the construction stage.

Once a developer contemplates a project within or adjacent to a wetland, the classification system provides the information necessary to gauge the habitats' characteristics. The appropriate local, State, or Federal agencies can then advise whether it may fall under their jurisdiction and determine what, if any, regulations might apply to modifications of that area. In the design of this system, however, there is no attempt to establish the boundaries of the regulatory programs of local, State, and Federal agencies.

Wetlands are recognized as the most biologically productive types of ecosystems in the world. They include a variety of diverse types, among them marine (open ocean and associated coastlines), estuarine (salt marshes and brackish tidal waters), riverine (rivers, creeks, and streams), lacustrine (lakes and deep ponds), and palustrine (small ponds, prairie potholes, marshes, swamps, and bogs).

Wetlands are economically important -- two-thirds of the commercially important fish and shellfish harvested along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts depend on coastal estuaries and wetlands for food, spawning grounds, or nurseries for their young; for the Pacific coast, that figure is nearly one-half.

The Service's new classification system replaces an earlier one, in use since 1954, whose original purpose was to assess the amount of waterfowl habitat on the basis of 20 different types of wetlands. Presented in a document known as Circular 39, this had been one of the most commonly used systems in the effort to preserve valuable, but diminishing, wetlands throughout the United States. The new classification scheme is broader and more inclusive in the types of information it presents.

"The classification system we've developed now gives a lot more attention to wetlands that have other values, not just wetlands that have value as waterfowl habitat," says Lynn Greenwalt, Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service. "Such factors as dominant animal and plant life, soil type and water chemistry are all now incorporated in the way we look at, define, and group wetlands."

The new system is designed to meet four main objectives:

1. To describe areas that have similar natural attributes;
2. To arrange these areas in a system that will enable better resource management decisions to be made;
3. To convert these areas into a format for inventory and mapping; and,
4. To provide a uniform classification system and terminology.

Already the State of Michigan has adopted the Service's new classification system as its method of classifying wetlands, and the new system is being used by the Fish and Wildlife Service as the basis for its National Wetlands Inventory.

Classification of Wetlands and Deepwater Habitats of the United States is available for $4.25 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 (stock No. 024-010-00524-6).

Quote

A copy of the following letter was given to the Islander for publication. Copies were also sent to the State Attorney General and State Insurance Commissioner.

Sanibel, Florida 33957

RE: Iowa National Mutual Ins., Co.

Mr. Barham:

Several weeks ago, you asked our office to give you some information on how the Sanibel Land Use Plan would affect a loss on your homeowners (policy).

My interpretation of Sec. 3.3.11 of the Sanibel Land Use Plan is that a home which is destroyed 51 percent or more must be rebuilt using current building codes and flood regulations.

Your homeowners policy is currently written on an all risk basis with replacement cost for that portion of the dwelling that may be damaged or destroyed. If 51 percent of your dwelling is destroyed, there is 49 percent of that building that must be torn down or in some way changed to comply with the Sanibel Land Use Plan. Your homeowners policy will not pay for any of the 49 percent that was not damaged and this becomes your loss.

I have contacted Iowa National Mutual, and the coverage for contingent liability, demolition costs or increased cost of construction due to the operation of building laws or local ordinances is not available at this particular time.

If you need further information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Cordially,
Mann-Webb Insurance Agency, Inc.
Tom Brickhouse

Dear Editor,

The article in your 2-3-81 edition by Martha Bishop concerning fire was excellent.

However, I would like to add:

1. If you discover a fire do not assume that someone else has called the Fire Department to report the fire.

2. After you have notified the Fire Department yourself, you should then notify the management of the fire so that they will be aware of the situation and can initiate their emergency plan.

3. In your survey of the exit route, doors should not be blocked and have panic hardware, look for manual pull fire alarm stations (similar to those found in schools). Providing that the management has not sounded the alarm, pull the alarm box yourself, on the way out, so that the other patrons can start evacuating the building.

To The Islander:

Please let me take this opportunity to thank all the wonderful men and women who served as hostesses and hosts at this year's Sanibel Public Library Arts and Crafts Fair.

Believe me, your kind response and dedicated service were most appreciated and did so much to make the fair the great success it was. Again, on behalf of the library and especially myself, my most humble thanks and appreciation. May God bless you all.

Margaret Krueger

In your opinion

To the Editor:

The success of the Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair held last weekend was due entirely to the hard work of a great many able and dedicated people who spent long hours in preparing for and carrying out their assignments. An event of such magnitude would not be possible without the complete and willing cooperation of the over 300 persons involved. Our special thanks to:

Bob Haynie for guidance and policy decisions.

Howard Hulsman for his very effective publicity.

George and Nancy Vernay and all their helpers who conducted the quilt raffle.

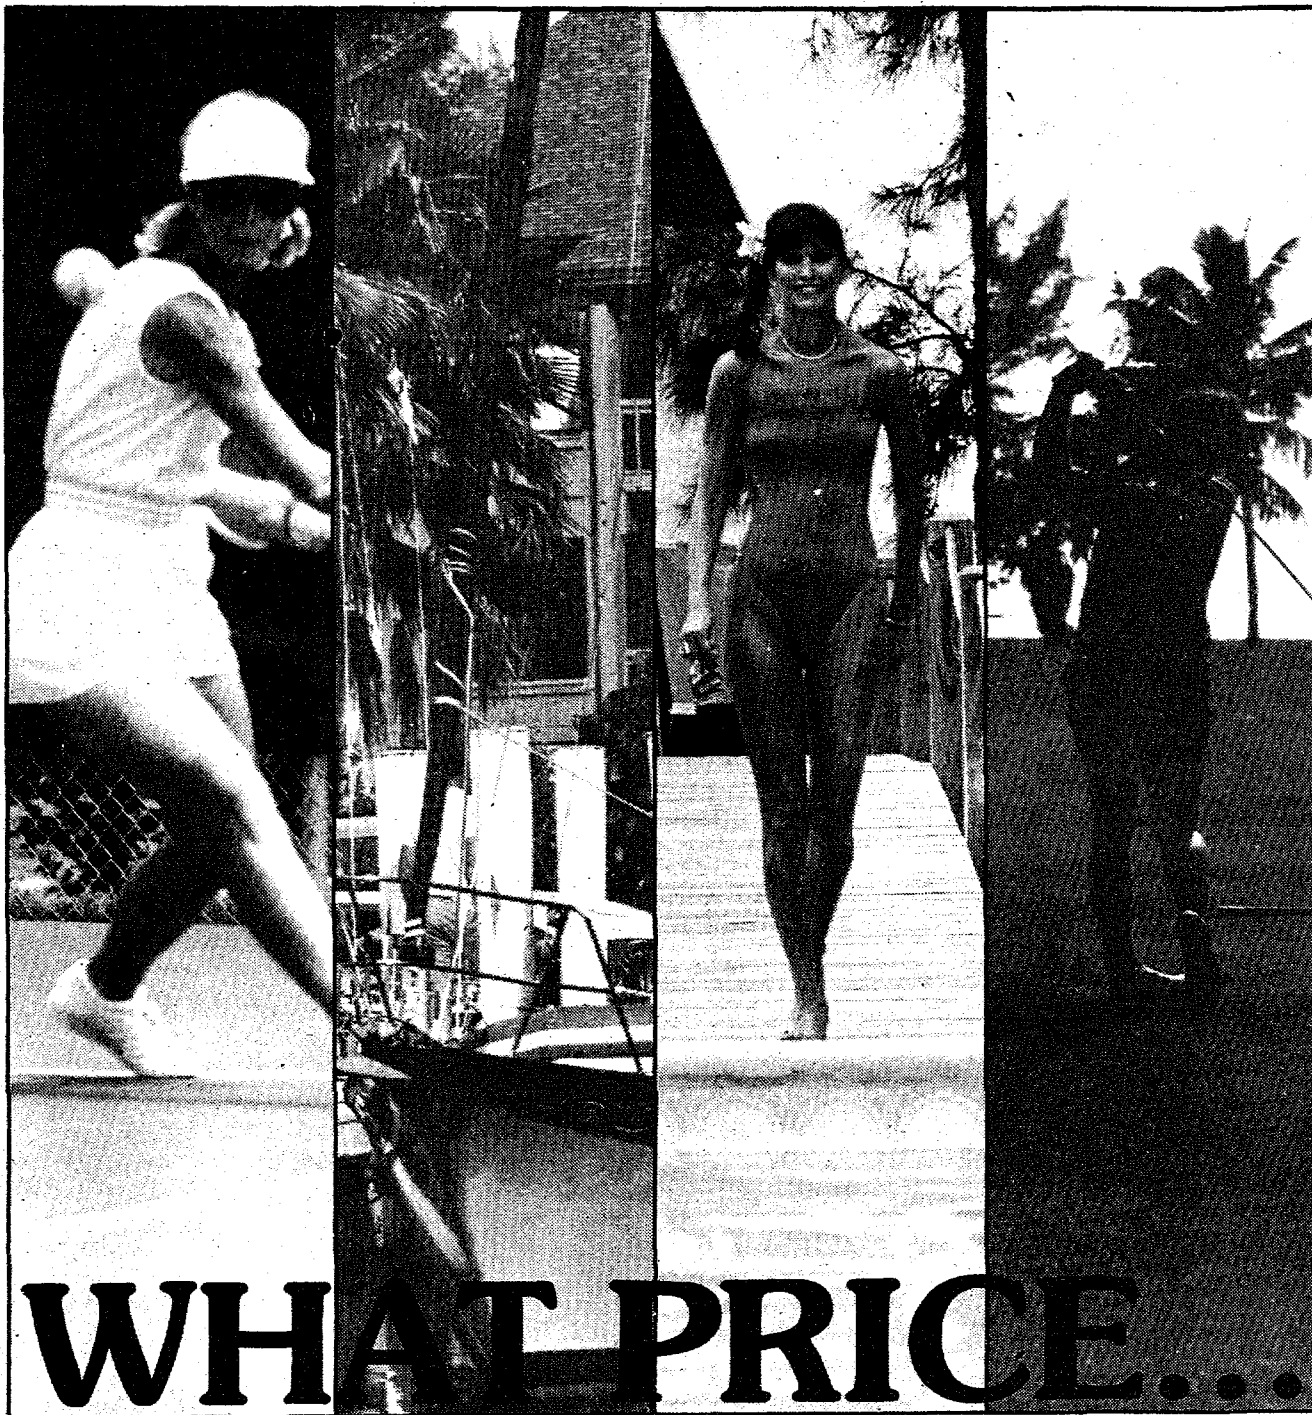

Vera Swanson Graham, Shirley Evans and the 21 other wonderful women who created the beautiful Sanibel quilt.

Art Johnson and Larry Snell, our tireless and meticulous treasurers and their force of efficient cashiers.

Don Cooperrider, Ken Preston and all the able chefs for a grand job in the Galley operation.

Patsy Simmons and her gracious Donation Jar hosts and hostesses.

Audubon members awed by 'Nature Trail 70-80'

By Ellen Mulligan

Nationally known nature photographer, Lee Canfield, had his audience oohing and aahing during his "Nature Trail 70-80" slide show at last week's Audubon Society's entertainment program.

Just prior to the show, local Audubon Society president, Bird Westall, assisted those without a seat, joking to the full house, "For those of you who are looking for a seat, there's a couple of them left up here and they're going for $20." Needless to say, there were plenty of bird and nature lovers who came to see Lee Canfield's presentation.

Canfield became interested in photography through his career in advertising. He was one of those advertisers who liked taking his own photographs. Many years ago he became interested in photographing birds and wildlife that came to feed in the backyard of his Ohio home.

Taking his pictures out of the realm of the hand of man, Canfield set up a "mini sanctuary" in his backyard where he placed hidden cameras to photograph the birds in a natural environment.

Canfield's numerous cameras and various lenses have made these photographs appear to have been taken only inches away when sometimes the subject was, in reality, hundreds of yards away.

Besides photographing nature in his mini sanctuary, Canfield has also been traveling coast to coast in his mobile home for the past six to seven years. He has been "roaming around" photographing birds and wildlife in some of the country's greatest wildlife sanctuaries, refuges and state and national parks.

Each breathtaking photograph in his slide show was more beautiful than the one before, and the audience almost didn't believe their eyes. Not only were the rare birds a treat, but the exquisite color and composition of each photograph made one appreciate it all the more.

This Thursday, the Sanibel-Captiva

Audubon Society will feature "The East African Adventure" presented by Alvah Sanborn retired Director of Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary of Massachusetts Audubon Society. The program will begin at 8 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Center. All are invited to attend, and you may want to bring a lawn chair in case of another full house like last week.

Dredging workshop slated

The Army Corps of Engineers will sponsor a dredging conference March 11-13 at the Tampa Hilton Inn in Tampa, Fla., in an effort to determine methods of reducing impacts of the dredging process, according to Jacksonville District Engineer Col. James W. R. Adams.

"The purpose of this conference," Adams said, "is to bring together the professional planners, engineers, environmentalists, economists, government administrators, business representatives and all interested individuals to participate in discussions of the leading issues of present-day dredging procedures. We hope that, through these discussions of dredging and dredged material disposal, we will reach a better understanding of the interrelationships of the environmental, socio-economic, engineering and regulatory decisions involved in the construction and maintenance of Florida's ports and waterways, renourishment of its beaches, development and modification of water dependent businesses, mining, residential development and other dredging operations."

Two discussion sessions have been planned, covering such topics as the need for and purposes of dredging, the present state of the art in dredging technology, the results of environmental monitoring programs associated with several dredging projects, and how the significant adverse effects of dredging can be predicted and possibly avoided.

Registration for the conference must be made directly with the Jacksonville District. Point of contact is Joe Joyce, Army Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 4970, Jacksonville, FL 32232, telephone (904) 791-2215.

Lions News

By D.E. Cooperrider

The Southwest Regional Lions meeting was held at Lehigh Acres on February 8, with five members and two Lions Auxiliary members in attendance. Reports were given to those present on all phases and the status of regional and statewide projects in support of the Lions' charities. The Auxiliary members attended a special session during which the programs supported by them were covered in detail.

The highlight of the presentation by the Florida Lions Eye Bank was information discussed by the Director of the Bascom Palmer Eye Institute, which is supported in part by donations of Lions and which supplies the eye wills that are the source of material for transplants, research and assistance in all phases of the Institute eye program. In addition, a local area lady who had been aided by the bank over the past 16 years was present to thank the Lions assembled for their assistance in furnishing the material and financial assistance for six corneal transplants during that time. She has had sight difficulties for the last few years since she attained the age of twenty-four. She said that the Lions Clubs had made it possible for her to see well enough to rear and educate her daughter and become self-sufficient after two years of complete blindness. This was all accomplished through the Florida Lions Foundation for the Blind and the Florida Lions Eye Bank.

The Sanibel-Captiva Sight Chairman, Bob Dormer, presented the Eye Glass Collection Program with 166 pairs of used glasses, 86 eye glass cases and 25 pairs of lenses and, additionally, presented the Lions Foundation with a check for $1500 which represented part of the receipts from the local Christmas tree sale. The Lions Club gives all credit for this presentation to the people of Sanibel and Captiva for their support of Lions Club projects.

On the water

By Captain Mike Fuery

Ever have this happen to you? One afternoon you are fishing a quiet spot you have never tried before, and on the first cast, you hook and land a nice sized trout, or redfish or some other desirable fish. You can't wait to get back the next day, but you bring your friend from down the street. Now the two of you are knocking them dead and you get ready to plan another trip to the ole fishin' hole the next afternoon.

Only thing is, on the next day when you round the mangrove point, right there, in your very own, newly-discovered honey-spot, sits not one, but four fishing boats. With four people in each boat. And they are all catching fish. Your fish! And they are so tightly anchored that there is no way you can get a line in the water. Ever have that occur?

You have just learned a new lesson in "How to keep the hand over the mouth when the fishing rod finds the fish."

I always get tickled when someone from around the Islands tells me he has "his" spot where he can count on catching fish. And it's never long before he comes grumbling back to the dock, mumbling about how there's no respect for a man's secret hole or something like that when he finds his exclusive spot is shared many times over.

Some of the old timers, and they aren't always very old in age, (we're talking about experience) often feel they have some rights to a secret spot they have worked for years. Most are generous about sharing it, if someone gets there first. More likely, they just move on and come back when the select spot is vacant. I remember a fella coming back to the docks one day and telling everyone about a very, very secret spot for redfish he had "discovered." He was so excited he mouthed off just where the spot was. One of the guides, without hearing much of the story, casually remarked, "Oh, yeah. You must of been fishing in the old redfish hole on the third point over on the other side of Buck Key." The other fella's jaw about broke the dock planks.

There's a couple of tricks that some of the better fishermen use to try and insure they don't get too much attention and pinpoint where their hot spot for the day might be.

One thing you never do is show off in front of a passing boat when you have a fish hooked. This is like painting an arrow on the water for passing boaters out looking for some fishing action. I've seen people with nice sized fish on the line stop reeling and carefully lay down the rod until the boat has passed. Works too!

One thing to remember in fishing is that you are in no way obligated to tell the truth. I try to regard myself as a person who doesn't tell lies, but that's not when I'm fishing. I'll be darn when I'm catching fish and a boat load of prospectors pulls near and yells, "You catching any, here?" that I'm going to say, "Yes."

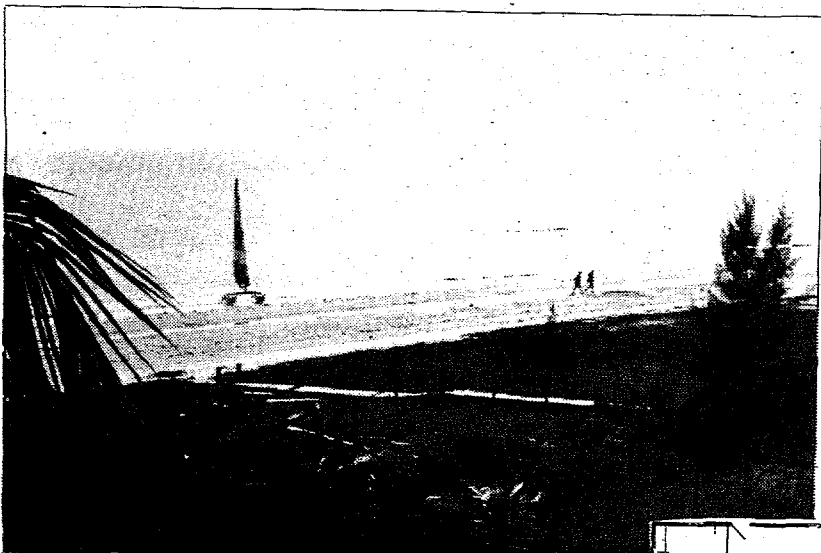

I'm liable to say, "Nothing yet." Or, "They haven't hit here all year. Just killing time, looks like." Or, "Wife's painting the house, had to get out for the afternoon."

But what if I say instead, "God Almighty! The fish are about pulling me out of the boat." Or, "We only got 50 today, but we did better everyday for the past six." Then you know there is going to be someone in your spot before you get there the next day.

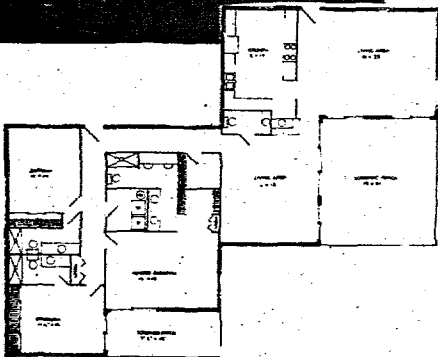

Sometimes it's hard to remember that fishing is a hobby. Often it sounds like a strategy game. There's plenty of fish for everyone, maybe not always in the numbers you think you've got coming to you, but then it is a sport, isn't it? Enjoy the water this week and remember to polish up on your fish lies.

Looking for lots of room?
How about 2,650 sq. feet with a fantastic view of the Gulf?

Probably twice the size of any other condominium you've been looking at, with all the luxuries including that beautiful gulf view. Priced at $375,000. Just compare the price per square foot to see what a value it is. Stretch out and enjoy.

Shelling Tips

By Captain Mike Fuery

I don't usually like those things people call shell scoops. That's because I have always felt the main reason a person brings one along on one of my trips is because they are secretly afraid of something they will encounter while in the water.

The stores quit giving those scoops away a long time ago, as you might have noticed if you have checked prices lately. So, besides not seeing much use for them, I feel they were just another expense beginning shellers don't need to buy.

However, there is a time of the year when the various scoops are helpful. That's when the water is icy cold, like it is now. The last time I looked, it was around 54 degrees. Now, lots of people from Maine call this "July fourth weather" as well I know, from being up there one hot summer day when the water temp was in the 40's.

The problem with shelling at this time of the year is that the better shells are often just out of arm's length under the surface, and reaching down with an arm covered in shirt, sweater and coat means living with a soggy sleeve or worse.

So, that's where the long-handled scoops come in just right, when the weather is cold and the water too deep. You might have noticed that this winter the water has been particularly clear. This happens when winds and tides are right, but no matter the reason, the result is that you can see down deeper and further out from the shore. I think I have seen more good, large (dead) shells taken this year than in the past couple of years.

Buying the shell scoop probably grates on the nerves of visitors, though. They have paid a lot of money to get here, and more to stay, and now, someone tells them if they want shells on the beach, they need to buy something else. No end to it, right? Well, not completely.

I have some very good friends from Kentucky who are studious shellers. They find things on trips even I can't identify and the oldest gentleman has made his own shell scoop. It's better than the store bought variety, too.

Basically, he's taken a long stick and fastened a plastic drinking cup to the end. This way, when he sees something awash in the surf, he reaches down and scoops it up. The water runs out of the holes in the bottom of the cup and because the cup is clear, without having to sort through the shells, he can just look to see if he got the shell he was after.

With an old stick or discarded broom handle and tape for the cup, you should be able to fashion your own shell scoop in a minute or so. You can get fancy, too, and buy a dowel rod and a plastic glass, then drill holes and screw the cup to the rod. But then, vacation time is kind of precious and maybe the shorter method is best for you.

There is very little to be afraid of in the water at this time of the year, so there is no need to buy or make a scoop for "protection." The rays have left the shallow waters and won't be back until spring. There are big jellyfish around the beaches, but they won't bother you either. I touch them all the time, and have never had a sting or rash from them. You might get a different reaction, but I doubt it.

Crabs don't go out of their way to chase you while you wade for shells and, if one more person tells me they are afraid to shell because of the sharks, I'm going to strangle them on the spot. No sharks, no rays and no man eating clams, so don't buy a scoop to fend yourself off from them.

(Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling and fishing trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 after 6 p.m. for information.)

STRONG TEETH

Lack of calcium in the diet is responsible for jawbone erosion and its resultant loss of teeth, report Cornell University scientists. A pilot study with added calcium in the diet produced significant increases in density of jawbone. "Because of decreasing consumption of milk" they report, "the U.S. diet does not provide sufficient calcium to maintain healthy bone structure and teeth." Calcium supplements are available from your pharmacist.

Island Golf

The Dunes Men's Golf Association played a team four-ball points contest last week.

Winning at plus-four were Dick Light, Allan Mainard, Jim Minor, and Henry McKee.

In second place, at plus-three, was the team of Scott VanDerbeck, Fred Graessle, John Seabrooke, and Bill Gibney.

The Dunes Women played a Bingle Bangle game last week.

In first place was Martha Kildow at minus-12. A three-way tie for second place at minus-11 was shared by Helen Uhrich, Pat Maloney, and Dot Seabrooke.

There were two hole-in-ones at the Dunes recently. On February 4, Ruth Helebrant hit her 131-yard perfect shot with a three wood on the fifth hole. And, on February 7, Maurice Betts hit a five iron on the sixth hole for a 150 yard hole-in-one.

After last week's washout, 14 teams were available to tee-off at this week's Beachview Women's Golf Association match.

The winning team, with a score of plus-14, was Maureen Hawthorne, Nancy Ruedig, Bird Rosen and Louise Ristow. In second place, at plus-nine, were Erna Mikulic, Barbara Fales, Jane Foster and Pat Daniel.

Maureen Hawthorne and Jane Foster both tied for the high individual score at plus five.

ARTS and ARTISTS

lectures

The care and preservation of your art objects will be discussed by G. Theodore Nightwine, conservator of the Ringling Museum at a lecture on February 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Edison Community College auditorium. The program is free and the public is invited to attend.

Highlighting the lecture will be a diagnosis of ailments and preventative treatments that may be used on private and institutional works of art. Nightwine will also touch briefly on the history of conservation and explain the differences between a conservator and a restorer. He will talk about ways of recognizing damage and potential problems, minor first aid procedures and the care of works of art in the home. Slides will be shown to demonstrate examples of his methods. Following the lecture, participants in the audience may submit questions.

Nightwine is the first in-house conservator in the 50 year history of the Ringling Museum. He moved to Sarasota last year from California where he was conservator for the San Francisco Museums. Before that he worked and trained for his profession at the Cincinnati

Art Museum. He holds a degree in fine arts.

The program is co-sponsored by Edison Community College and the Nature Center of Lee County and is presented through the Affiliate Program, a State Service of the John and Mable Ringling Museum of Art.

New gallery opens in Seahorse Shopping Center

Artist, songwriter and children's book author, Rich Westerman has set up shop at the Rooftop Gallery, located in the Seahorse Shopping Center.

The Rooftop Gallery is unique, in that, as Rich explains, "It's the first studio gallery - I paint here." And so, set behind his large nature-covered canvases is a little painting corner where he paints his Island masterpieces and watches visitors browse through the already finished collection.

The theme of Rich's gallery is very Island oriented and reflects Sanibel and Captiva scenes and wildlife. Although many of the paintings displayed are his, the gallery is not exclusively his. He is still looking for local artists, sculptors, and craftsmen who are working within the theme of the Islands to exhibit their work.

Rich has been painting for 25 years now and, although he majored in biology and received his master's degree in environmental sciences, his education has only enhanced his artistic interest in painting the environment. As he explains today, "I'm keenly interested in the environment and I am comfortable painting nature." As Rich explained to one of his customers who questioned him about the diversity of his painting style, "I'm a man of many faces." That is not only true of his paintings, however. Rich says he has always been the type who has wanted to be a lot of things, which is why his other two goals involve writing songs and authoring and illustrating children's books.

The Island flavor of the Rooftop Gallery is a nice new addition to the art scene on the Islands.

ASK YOUR FOOT DOCTOR

Dear Dr. Foot:

Why does my painful "Corn" keep returning?
Mrs. A.Z.G., Immokalee
Dear Mrs. A.Z.G.:

It keeps returning because the cause of the corn has not been eliminated. The cause of a painful corn is simply... friction!

A corn is a thickening of skin produced either by friction of a shoe against a bony enlargement on the top or side of a toe, or by friction of two toes against one another; or by friction of the end of a toe against a toenail or the sole of a shoe. In all instances, the bone beneath the corn produces the interior source of friction, while the exterior source could be a shoe, an adjacent toe, or a thickened toenail.

The use of corn plasters, corn pads, cutting a hole in a shoe over the painful area or trimming of the thickened skin all may provide temporary relief. These palliative actions will certainly not produce a permanent cure. Furthermore, these temporary measures have the potential, under certain circumstances such as Diabetes, to cause harm.

In most instances, removal of the internal source of friction, a small bone spur, should rid a patient of his painful corn. Many methods are available to accomplish this, with varying degrees of disability and discomfort.

Modern techniques now enable us to remove a bone spur through an incision so small it requires no stitches. Therefore, a patient is able to return to his own shoes immediately. He requires no time off work, and the patient rarely needs to take even an aspirin following the procedure.

Yes, we keep coming back to Sanibel, to a different rental every year. Thanks to Executive Services, Inc. We've been booking through Executive Services, Inc. since we discovered Sanibel Island. We actually make our reservations for next season while we're here.

Brown informed local sources that any Florida resident who is 60 years of age or older, and a registered voter, may become a candidate. To be placed on the April ballot, candidates must obtain 100 signatures on an official petition form and submit the form to the Area Agency on Aging in Fort Myers by February 27, for validation.

Petition forms may be obtained at the Area Agency on Aging located at 1402 Jackson Street, Fort Myers.

According to Brown, elected delegates will serve a two-year term and must be willing to spend a full week in Tallahassee. During the summer session, legislators will introduce and take action on proposed legislation.

Corkscrew Swamp offers special programs

National Audubon Society's Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary is planning a sensational program of weekly all-day hikes during the month of February. Now's your chance to explore the northern reaches of the Sanctuary that is not open to the public. We'll be off the boardwalk and on dry trail.

Maureen of many hats

"St. Andrew's ancient and royal golf club started it all!" laughs Maureen of Maureen's Travel Agency, referring to both the game of golf and her collection of hats from all over the world.

"We always try to bring back artifacts typical of an area," she explains, and her hat collection stemmed from this desire, as did her many other collectables from various far off reaches of the world.

A Scottish golf bonnet acquired at St. Andrew's was the beginning of her collection. Knowing that many of her friends and clients enjoyed golf, Maureen says she was prompted to bring back the bonnet. Elegantly hung alongside crossed swords, one thinks of Scottish sword dancing, bag pipes and, naturally, of the birth place of golf, one of the most challenging and intimidating golf courses in the world, the majestic St. Andrews.

A Moroccan fez was her next addition. This is a small, stiff cylinder-shaped hat. "It is worn by the Muslims, particularly the older people. It is a native costume seen all over Egypt, and in Morocco," explains Maureen. The hat is a deep cassia-color with a black tassel.

Santo Domingo in the Caribbean Sea was the locale of the third find. The predominant native headwear was a straw hat, according to Maureen, so it seems reasonable to bring one back from that island to this island!

A Greek fisherman's cap was a special addition to the collection with a specific purpose. "I wanted it for my own personal wear!" says Maureen. While in Greece, she also acquired a cap of the Greek Military dress uniform. It is ornate and maroon and "is worn at the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior in Athens," says Maureen. "The soldiers' dress' are like ballet tutus."

"I thought it would be good law enforcement around the office," Maureen laughs, pointing out her souvenir from London - a "Bobbie" or police helmet. The distinctive officer's helmet sits in her main office, keeping the peace!

A Laotian Mhung tribesman's cap is also part of Maureen's collection and she explains, "It is a ceremonial cap that is worn for birthdays and celebrations."

Also in the collection is a Mexican Sombrero. "It is made of velvet and glitter. The matadors wear them," Maureen says. She speculates that it is decorative for showmanship and points out that it's not like the usual big, floppy, dusty sombrero pictured with a sleepy Mexican gringo looking out from underneath!

"Most recently we've added one hat from China and one hat from Hong Kong," says Maureen. The Hong Kong addition is a small, black circular cap with a black tassel. "It is worn with a black dress and black slippers," she explains.

China revealed something akin to a worker's hat for Maureen. "Just about everyone you see walking in the streets is wearing one. I'm sure they were for warmth. We wore them for warmth!" she says brightly. The hat is a warm-looking fur one with fold down flaps. Just right for on top of the Great Wall!

The hats are displayed in the agency with identifying labels. Also displayed are Maureen's other collected artifacts. A few of these include flags, jewelry, weavings, and fans from the various regions of the world she has visited.

Maureen is overflowing with those many bits of knowledge that seem to be found only in experienced globetrotters. Speaking with her brings the distant reaches a little closer within one's grasp.

The return of the Matsumotos

Popular Island artists Ikki and Polly Matsumoto, who traded the Southwest coast of Florida for the Northwest coast of Oregon last year, are returning to Sanibel.

Ikki outlined their reasons for returning to the Island during a Wednesday evening telephone conversation. "I miss the blue sky, sailing, fishing, and warm weather. And we dearly miss the friends we had," he explained.

Ikki also described his business reasons for returning. "I have been working with a company in New York and started a business in Florida, and decided that it is more convenient to be close."

The Matsumotos decided that their home in Oregon City, located 20 miles south of Portland, wasn't up to their dream and began thinking about moving. "It's depressing here," admitted Ikki. "We thought of moving to California, but we felt that as long as we are moving we might as well move back to Sanibel."

The change in scenery has also created a change in Ikki's subject matter. "I am painting more landscapes here," explained Ikki. "Oregon is more three-dimensional than Sanibel."

One aspect of his life that has remained the same, though, is the type of birds. "Amazingly we have the same type of birds here," exclaimed Ikki. "We have herons, cormorants, and white herons. The only thing we don't have is the anhinga. It is quite a contrast to see a blue heron in front of a pine tree instead of a coconut palm or a mangrove!"

Ikki will be returning in April to start "house hunting, surely on Sanibel," and "the rest of the family will come this summer, when the kids (Amy and Tai) are out of school in July," said Ikki.

George Weymouth creates Island environment in wood

In 1975, George Weymouth attended a "huge woodcarving show" in Maryland where he saw works created by some of the top woodcarvers in the country. That, he remembers, "blew my mind."

"I had not been aware of how much detail I lacked in my carvings," George recalls, adding that today he spends weeks and sometimes even months on a single piece alone.

For the past three years George has been carving "seriously," but has only recently discovered the possible full potential of his work. He works a solid 40-hour week when he's carving and uses "thousands" of photographs and real bird specimens as his models.

"It's difficult to create three-dimensional objects that look lifelike," George explains of his carving calling. But there is no doubt that he enjoys the challenge. "I find the most satisfaction, or pleasure, from doing large one piece carvings that are often considered more sculpture than carving," he explains.

George has recently completed a beautiful carving (pictured) for a client in Chicago who commissioned him to do the piece. Several intricately carved birds are entwined in an Island scene carved totally out of a single piece of wood.

Word of George's talents has been getting around and, between his commissioned pieces, his own personal carvings and his Island birding tours, he finds himself an extraordinarily busy man.

George finds his tour work a means of "keeping informed" but his art is closer to his heart.

"I feel as a guide I'll never really strike it rich," he says, "but through art I have one of the best spots for the appreciation of my abilities through carvings and paintings, too."

John Bates

Age: 30

Height: 6'

Roots: "Chicago, but I was really raised in Wisconsin."

Mentor: "They change so often, it's hard to say!"

Last Book Read: "NFA (National Fire Protection Association) Life Safety Code Handbook. It's the new, updated material since the Las Vegas fire."

Pleasures: "Boating, tennis and traveling."

Wish: "A long happy life - especially, being a fireman, you wish for a long life."

Words of Wisdom: "Take every day as it comes."

If John Bates had been asked as a child, "What do you want to be when you grow up," the child-like visions of becoming a heroic fireman hadn't yet entered his head. In fact, it wasn't until he came to Sanibel that the idea appeared and the interest stayed.

And now, just three years later, John has become the first paid fire chief for the Captiva Fire Department and is a happy Captiva resident, at that.

John views his new responsibilities with an eye towards an old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and says today that his job description is "just as much to prevent a fire as to put one out."

Which is why a large amount of John's work lies in alerting Islanders and Island businesses of the importance of proper fire prevention. Fortunately, a typical day at the Captiva Fire Department only involves perhaps, "one medic call or no calls," John says, so much of his available time is spent devoted to fire prevention and the rest is devoted to fire preparedness.

As far as fire preparedness is concerned, John's responsibilities include organizing the new fire department building and staff, obtaining the necessary fire fighting equipment and daily checks on both. John has recently hired three new firefighters who are presently attending firefighting school.

There is much to do in a 40-hour-plus week at a fire station (even one that doesn't have the phone ringing off the hook), like keeping the shiny fire trucks looking like new and washing and waxing them when they get muddy and keeping all of the other fire equipment in tip-top condition as well as keeping in tune with the community.

But John says one of the hardest things is "to wake out of a sound sleep and be in a fire truck (dressed and ready - boots and all) driving out in 40 seconds."

This job has afforded John the opportunity to do something he really likes to do in an environment that he really likes being in. As a second moonlight endeavor, however, he also manages a mini-mart store on Captiva.

"If I have to live in one spot," John contemplates, "this is my favorite spot. It's the combination of the climate and the kind of people who live here - there's a real assortment."

Growing up as a Wisconsin farm boy, John was raised on a dairy and tobacco farm and recalls not only the bitter winters but also the days on the farm and the tedious "handwork" that involved. Everything had to be done by hand when it came to the tobacco crops that don't lend themselves to automation in production.

His first real job during college, however, was still farm-oriented - he became an egg sorter. The farm where he worked raised 10,000 chickens and John watched over the "candling" process - where the eggs ran over a light to reveal cracks, double embryos and other imperfections - and he sorted them out.

After a short break, and having already received his Associate's Degree in psychology from a junior college near Madison, John next got a taste of the cross-country trucker's life from behind the huge steering wheel of a semi.

Although he says now that it was "too much sitting," it was an experience, to say the least. John worked for a manufacturer who made semi-trucks and, for close to a year-and-a-half, John found himself driving state to state to deliver the new trucks to their destination.

But the latter was a single's career and John soon after found himself a wife and, without any arm-twisting, put the trucking life aside. It was during that time that he started his own campground business back in Wisconsin while also working as an assistant store manager for a local grocery.

The frigid Wisconsin winter is enough reason for anyone to seek warmer grounds and John and his wife were no exception. "We wanted to move south," he says, "for the Island and the weather. I was going to change jobs anyway."

John was just a "little apprehensive" when he first came to the Island and found himself working at Bailey's. But soon enough, the Sanibel Fire Department was in the market for a trainee. John got the job and the rest of it is history.

"Everything worked out well," John says modestly, not too surprised at fate's calling. He is one to live day by day anyway.

Since John has been holding down the fort on Captiva until his new firefighters arrive, he hasn't had too much free time. But nevertheless, he does manage to find an empty hour or so. "In my time off," he explains, "I like to go boating on Useppa Island, I enjoy tennis and I love to travel."

Although John says he tries not to be a "typical tourist" (even though on a first trip it's hard to avoid), he has traveled Europe three times now as well as having ventured out west. There is little doubt, too, that he will find himself there once again for, at least once a year, the travel bug hits him. And when that happens, he explains, "I always like to get at least 200 miles away from the Island," and who knows where he may find himself.

When questioned to name the one thing he would like to read about himself in the newspaper he replies, "John Bates has become independently wealthy."

Maybe that's a future story.

Stop while you still can

Here's a stop sign that "can't get no respect."

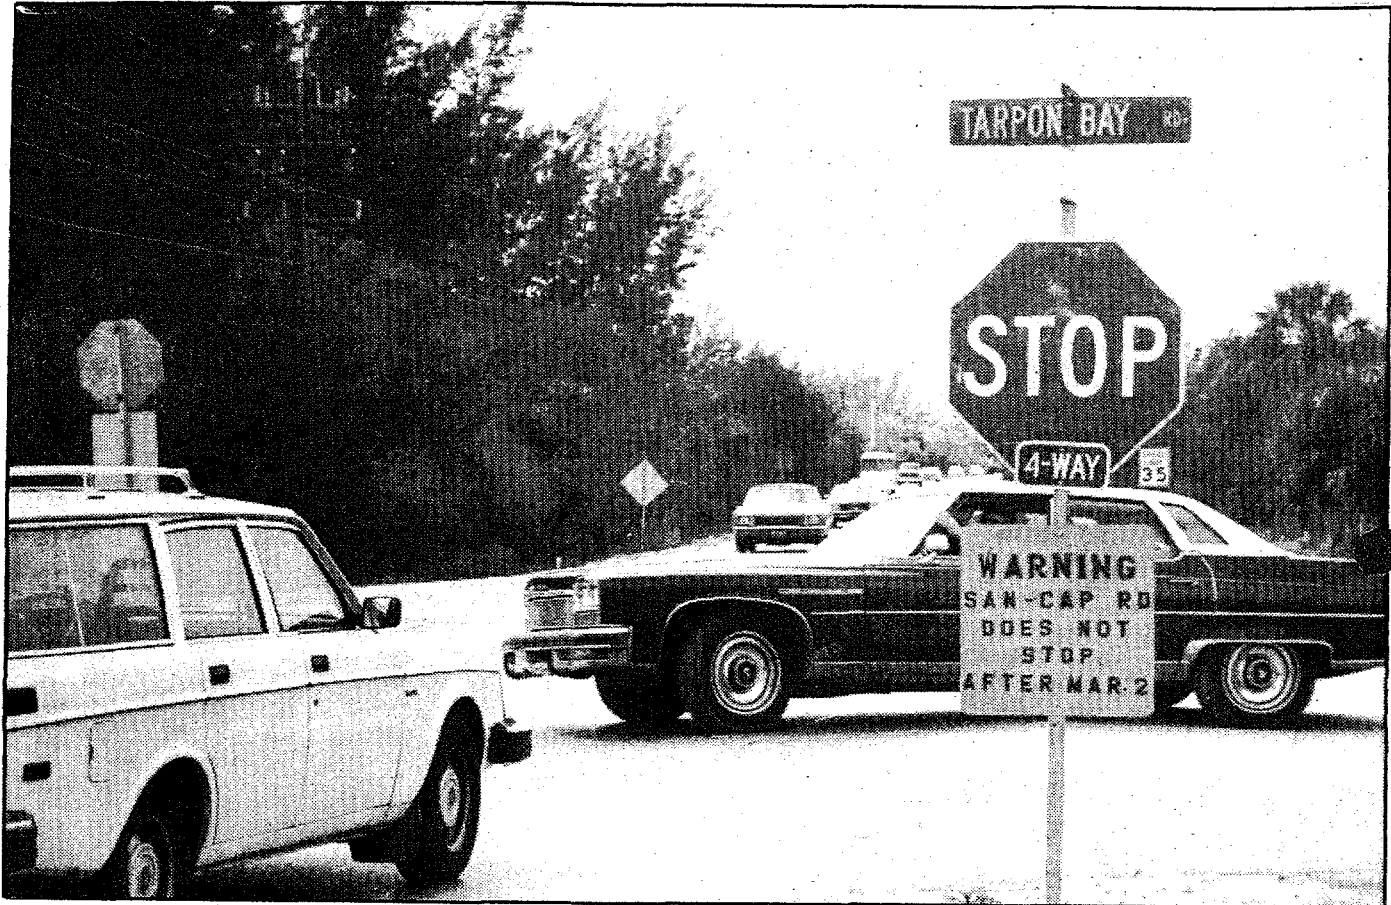

Drivers just won't stop on its demand, so the City is taking it down.

The sign, located at the intersection of Tarpon Bay Road and the San-Cap - Palm Ridge fusion, isn't being noticed, according to Public Works Director Gary Price, "because the intersection is laid out like a through street."

The Sanibel Police Department noticed that the San-Cap - Palm Ridge Road traffic wasn't stopping at the intersection and asked the Public Works Department to paint lines on the street. That prompted Price to take another look at the intersection - an action that resulted in both he and the City's consulting traffic engineers determining that the San-Cap - Palm Ridge section should be a through street. The signs will come down in 13 days on March 2.

This was one issue that Price was sure of before his presentation to the City Council. While standing in back of MacKenzie Hall waiting to submit his case, he turned toward the intersection and watched a full one-third of the 25 cars passing through the intersection ignore the stop sign!

The Captiva Memorial Library has fallen heir to a beautiful collection of Island shells, ideal for identification by amateur shell collectors. These shells were self-collected by Professor and Mrs. C.S. Crouse of Lexington, Kentucky. A beautiful shell cabinet was made by craftsman Joe Beebe of Captiva, and the cabinet and shells were given to the library by Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald of Captiva and Lexington.

The library invites all Islanders of both Sanibel and Captiva to view these shells, and to use them for identification.

Here's a hand played at one of the Winterrowds' regular Friday night duplicate bridge encounters at the Sanibel Community Center.

It continues to amaze this perennial tyro that one set of 52 cards arranged (dealt) in one certain way can produce so many different results in bidding and playing.

This one, played nine times, had seven different scores.

Reasons (or excuses) for the poor (or good) defense (or offense) of any hand are always more or less the same, with the same measure of truth or rationalization.

"The lead made all the difference."

"The defense was unusually sharp."

"We got a gift." Etc. Etc....
If you play duplicate, you know all the inventions.
Can you believe this variety, all on the hand illustrated here? It was played:
twice: 3 No Trump, making 6;
four times: 4 Spades, making 4, 5, 6, and 7!!!

and three times: 6 Spades, making 6 twice, going down 1, once.

Come and see for yourself. If you're not a "regular" on Thursday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. and/or Friday evenings at 7:30 at the Sanibel Community Center duplicate games, WHY NOT?

This week's winners

How much do you know about energy?

By Ellen Mulligan

Energy conservation was the topic of discussion by former Sanibel City Energy Officer, Alex Wadkovsky, at last week's Tuesday at the Center program. In an informal presentation, Wadkovsky threw out some energy questions and answers to his audience.

"How is energy transmitted?" Wadkovsky queried, pleased to find that his audience knew the answers. "Yes. Convection, conduction and radiation," he agreed, and gave a brief definition of each.

Convection is the transfer of heat by the circulation of fluids; conduction is the transfer of heat through a body, say a wire, that is heated at one end and the heat flows through to the other end. Radiation is comparable to the sun and is something which generates energy, Wadkovsky explained.

"Who knows what Btu's are?" was Wadkovsky's next question, but there was more hesitation by the audience on this one. The answer - British thermal units, that is to say, the rise in temperature of one degree (Fahrenheit) or one centigrade (Celsius) would be a rise of one Btu, he explained.

According to Wadkovsky, homes consume energy in the following fashion: air conditioning use 60 percent of the total energy costs; water heating requires 19 percent; heating uses 10 percent; and the remaining 11 percent is divided between other small general home appliances.

Wadkovsky next talked about the energy efficiency ratio of appliances, saying that when the input dial is lowered on some appliances, especially on air conditioners, you can save drastically on energy bills. The average input reading is 7200, but that figure can be reduced to 4000 with a substantial increase in savings, Wadkovsky explained. The difference in cost between these two input readings (from 7200 to 4000) is $500.

Since air conditioners use 60 percent of the home owner's total energy costs, "AC is what you concentrate on if you want to save energy," Wadkovsky said.

To raise the air conditioning thermostat and/or to lower the heating thermostat is an excellent way to conserve on your total energy costs, Wadkovsky said. For each degree you raise the air conditioner you save eight percent of the total energy and each degree you lower your heater you save five percent, Wadkovsky noted.

Wadkovsky had another tip for making your air conditioner more energy efficient and that is to clean the coils at least once a year so that they can function properly. Wadkovsky also said that a ceiling fan is a good parallel effort to use with an air conditioner set at a higher temperature, say 80 degrees. The AC will keep the humidity out of the air while the ceiling fan circulates a breeze to help keep the room cool.

Islanders can also save on air conditioning and heating bills by using home insulation and by checking doors and windows for cracks and leaks to the outside, Wadkovsky explained.

As far as water heating is concerned, Wadkovsky says that solar heaters are "a very effective gimmick," and that the average savings for a family of four is $25 a year. It is simple to install, the government is giving tax cut incentives for using solar energy devices, but most of all, Wadkovsky explained, "it is a chance to save now."

This week Tuesday at the Center has invited Lee Werst, professor of alternate solar uses at Edison Community College, to speak and his topic will be solar uses. Tuesday at the Center will begin at 2 p.m. at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation located on Sanibel-Captiva Road.

Presenting the 1981 Captiva needlepoint rug

The 1981 needlepoint rug, designed and worked by Captiva's artists and needlecrafters, is now on display at the Bank of the Islands five days a week. On Saturdays it will be displayed at Chadwick's and on Sundays at Tween Waters.

The rug, along with a director's chair, will be raffled off for the benefit of the Captiva Civic Association and Captiva Memorial Library.

Tat Hockstader, chairman of the Rug Committee, reports that tickets for the raffle are already on sale on both Islands. Drawings to determine the lucky winners will be at the Captiva Civic Association meeting at the Captiva Community Center at 8 p.m. on March 31.

Tickets are available at the bank where the rug will be displayed until March 1. Thereafter it will be available for inspection at Tahitian Gardens and Bailey's shopping center.

This marks the sixth year Captiva artisans have produced a rug and the sale of chances for the coveted prizes has proven one of the Island's most successful money raisers.

The four-by-five-foot-eight-inch rug has a blue crab motif with a stylized wave pattern border on a beige background. The crabs, a native crustacean, are depicted in subtle tones of blue and green.

The rug is valued at $5,000 and the chair at $600. Winners do not have to be present at the drawing to win. They will be notified by telephone and the prize shipped, if necessary, at no cost.

Police Beat

By Pat Harmel

Two 13-year old Sanibel youths were arrested last week and charged with first-degree misdemeanors for unauthorized use of a motorcycle.

A resident of West Gulf Drive reported vandalism to a residence - an outside water spigot had been broken off, resulting in an estimated $600 water loss.

A visiting New York marine got a bit nasty with Rick Keeler, the singer at Scotty's Pub, last week. When the 42-year old marine requested that Keeler sing the Marine Hymn - and Keeler responded that he didn't know the words - the marine queried whether Keeler "wanted to see God before morning." The Sanibel Police were called and the visitor left - maintaining that the whole thing had just been a joke, anyway.

Illegal campers were removed from both the Blind Pass area and the Timbers parking lot by the SPD last week.

A small, tan puppy was reported found in the Island Inn area without identification last week.

Two cars were removed from ditches along San-Cap Rd. last week and another removed from the Ding Darling Refuge where it had slipped off the road. Another car went off the road at Dixie Beach and Albatross, and yet another went into a ditch near the Signal Inn.

Vandalism was reported to a security light at 1213 Periwinkle Way last week and the Wegryn Clinic reported that its security yard lights had been unscrewed. Several lights were also reported shot out on the Causeway.

There was a car and golf cart accident on East Gulf Drive reported last week and several fender-benders on Periwinkle Way.

A moped accident occurred last Wednesday near the Ding Darling entrance when a 53-year old visitor from New York apparently fell off his vehicle. The visitor was treated by emergency personnel and transported to Fort Myers Community Hospital.

A woman was treated by emergency personnel after stepping on a catfish in front of Pointe Santo.

An electrical fire inside Huxter's and a car on fire at Executive Services were responded to by the Sanibel Fire Department. An electrical fire inside a camper at the Periwinkle Trailer Park was also reported last week.

Juveniles reportedly broke into the Casa Ybel pool bar, took some beer, and were seen swimming naked in the resort pool.

No action was taken by the SPD after Casa Ybel representatives declined to press charges.

Numerous robins were reportedly shot in the Serenity Lane area by someone using either a BB or pellet gun. At least one robin was transported to CROW and the SPD is searching for a resident in that area in possession of such a gun.

A coke machine was vandalized at Signal Inn and approximately $20 taken.

ABC Sale will feature Captiva 'Dough Girls'

They're called "Dough Girls" - the volunteers wearing chef's caps and pretty aprons who will be selling the homemade goodies at Captiva's ABC Sale on February 28.

Traditionally one of the biggest money makers of the annual "Attic, Basement and Closet" fundraiser, the baked-goods will include such delectables as key lime pies, breads, Calamondin and lemon cakes, cookies, candies and take-home specialties such as clam chowder.

The sale itself will be from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Captiva Community Center with an auction of special items at noon. Proceeds go to the Captiva Civic Association and Captiva Memorial Library.

Bargain hunters will find attractions in the variety of sale items such as furniture and household goods, from pot holders to a kitchen sink, some antiques, linens, silver pieces, books, shells and all sorts of bric-a-brac and clothing - including some new and a few "designer dresses."

The offering of a healthy selection of native plants is always a winning addition to the sale. Young Karen Halverson, chairman of the Plant Committee, reports her section will have the usual aloe and air plants in Island-made coconut hangers, among other items.

Shells are all Island beach specimens,

Chairman Phyllis Mount says, and asserts none were taken alive. Among the collection are double yellow tellins and double sun-ray venus', as well as angel wings which may be paired.

COTI initiates City Hall site study

Should the Sanibel City Hall be located on the Causeway site—or not?

In response to the questions of a number of citizens, COTI (Committee of the Islands) has initiated an in-depth study to research both the feelings of the community and the desirability of the Causeway property site and possible alternate sites.

To obtain a better understanding of the problem, the COTI Board of Directors invited Councilmen Duane White and Fred Valtin to separate sessions last Wednesday (February 4). After the discussions, the Board felt that community feelings should be ascertained on such an important and permanent matter as the location of the Sanibel City Hall.

The City Council voted several weeks ago to proceed with City Hall plans on the Causeway site as the most expeditious and economical route. The City is now paying a minimum of $50,000 per year to rent office space. The new City Hall is estimated to carry a price tag of around $600,000; but construction costs are rising rapidly, and delay will quickly increase this figure.

The City Hall complex would utilize up to eight acres of a 27-acre plot by the Causeway Road which was purchased by the City, following referendum approval several years ago. The price of the property was $68,000 per acre, with the Federal Farmers Home Loan Administration backing the loan. The eight-acre portion is primarily covered with casuarina and Brazilian pepper trees. Located south of the Chamber of Commerce Building and north of Periwinkle Way, there is ample acreage for attractive vegetative screening. Access would be from Bailey Road.

Despite the fact that the Causeway property is already owned by the City, questions have arisen regarding the advisability of the site. The City's Ad-Hoc Site Committee of three years ago did not recommend the Causeway property, citing that the location was not central enough, and that the traffic problem could be increased by cars coming to City Hall. It is also pointed out that the site runs counter to possible uses of the Causeway property that are stated in a brochure published before the referendum.

Several of the sites recommended by the Committee, such as the property behind the Palm Ridge mall, may no longer be available. However, it has been reported that the Community Association has offered to sell the City the four to five acres of its property across Periwinkle Way from the Association building for $155,000. This site would involve some mutual use of the parking area by City Hall and the Association, and might cause some traffic confusion. Although the acreage is smaller than the City has quoted, it is centrally located.

The questions being brought to COTI indicate that members of the community feel that, perhaps, other parcels of acceptable land might be found which meet the criteria of the CLUP, location, traffic flow and reasonable cost. By this study and by sampling the opinions of citizens, COTI hopes to help the City in meeting the community's concerns.

Shopping

SHOPPING

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual Island shops join forces to present visitors with everything - and anything - a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and The Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from each other, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers. Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many Island stores, although during the winter season, some are open evenings.

Tall Australian pines shade Periwinkle Way as the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here...the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health produce fanatics.

you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of Island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several new shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlour, pizza parlour, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the Island's only supermarket, dry cleaners and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original Island watercolors and woodcuts. Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan's shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay Marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooming the back bay...Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping, or merely browsing, Island shops offer a surprising variety - from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter and of course, for all, shells, shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells...the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

Service with a smile

BEACH ACCESS

Sanibel has miles of public Gulf-front beaches, any one of which is only minutes from your lodging. Lighthouse Point is a stretch of Federal land on the Eastern tip of Sanibel Island, and from there, the Gulf beach is accessible again at the end of Donax Street, at Tarpon Bay Road, at Bowman's Beach Road (off Sanibel-Captiva Road) and Turner's Beach, which is located at Blind Pass, between Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

On Captiva Island, public beach access can be found at Turner Beach (which has public facilities) or further north, just past the entrance to South Seas Plantation.

NOTE: STATE LAW PROHIBITS NUDE SUN-BATHING ON ALL FLORIDA BEACHES. VIOLATORS WILL BE PROSECUTED.

CAMPING

Camping on the beach is prohibited and while everyone enjoys a beach fire, the Sanibel Fire Board has signed into law an ordinance prohibiting open beach fires. Prior to the ordinance, a permit was necessary for a beach bonfire, but as of July 18, 1980, it is now illegal. An exemption to the ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" X 24" X 12" deep with an extruded metal grill) for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit. After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for the cleanup of any debris or litter in your area.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel City limits is not only illegal (violators of the law are subject to a fine of up to $500, or up to 60 days in jail, or both), but can be extremely dangerous. Alligators can run 45 m.p.h., so if you're close enough to feed an alligator, he's close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES.

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you TAKE THEM TO A BANK OR HOTEL VAULT FOR SAFEKEEPING. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

SPEED LIMITS

There are varying speed limits (20-30 m.p.h.) as one comes across the causeway, and there is a very good reason for them...to preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress. This speed limit is strictly enforced with the use of radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee

County Sheriff's Department.

Driving or parking a motor vehicle or moped on the bike path is strictly prohibited. Violators will be ticketed.

For your information

SHELLING

The City of Sanibel Resolution limiting the taking of live shells to 2 live shells per person per species is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

If you're visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets. Remember: wherever you are, clean up after your pet! The friendly reminder... "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints"...applies to dogs, too. There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

BICYCLER RULES

If you're not used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out for it on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A State law and City Ordinance combine to PROHIBIT PARKING OR DRIVING ON THE BIKE PATH. MOPEDS ARE NOT PERMITTED ON THE BIKE PATHS.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding. Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers. Drive Safely!
