Project initiated to monitor Sanibel's fresh water quality

By Barbara Brundage

An on-going program to monitor the quality of fresh water on Sanibel got underway last week when 24 testing locations were staked out Island-wide.

Dr. Ken Preston, chairman of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Research Committee, and city of Sanibel Public Works Director Gary Price placed wooden stakes with the top two feet above the water level in lakes and ponds and along the Sanibel River from one end of the Island to the other.

The project, a joint venture of the SCCF and the city, has been in the works for two years, Price said.

The SCCF Research Committee will provide the personnel to collect samples of water every three months, and the foundation will donate the use of a room at the Conservation Center as a laboratory.

Dr. Herb Rhinesmith, a chemistry professor at Allegheny College for 40 years and a member of the Research Committee, will analyze the water samples.

The city's primary role will be to provide funds to pay for approximately $700 to $800 in chemicals needed for the project each year, Price said.

Surface and drinking water on Sanibel has been tested periodically for several years by outside sources, he said, but the cost has become so prohibitive the city finds it no longer economically feasible.

With the volunteer help from the Foundation committee, a regular testing program can be maintained, Price said.

Price said he had not yet presented the proposal to the City Council but it was by council directive that work was begun two years ago to establish a water quality monitoring program on the Island.

By staking out specific locations, water samples can be taken from the same spot in each testing period, which will make possible a better comparison.

Water levels during different seasons can also be checked by measuring from the two-foot mark on each stake, Price added.

Rhinesmith said six tests will be made on each water sample. One will be to measure the total of dissolved solids. Good water has less than 500 parts per million, he said. Water from the aquifer contains 2,000 parts per million until it has been treated at the Island Water Association Reverse Osmosis Plant, he said.

The samples will be tested for chlorides to determine their salinity, and the PH test will be applied to measure the acidity and alkalinity of the water.

The amount of nitrates will indicate the organic content of the water and the presence of effluent from a sewer treatment or septic tank system.

Commuter lane opens at toll booth

By Cindy Chalmers

Commuters and Island residents who use ticket books to cross the Causeway now have their own lane at the toll booth, Lee County Bridge Facilities Manager Fred Lescher said last week.

The inside lane next to the Causeway office was designated for commuter traffic in an effort to help heavy winter traffic flow smoothly, Lescher said. Commuters, who Lescher said "know where they are going and don't have to look for $3," won't be held up anymore by visitors who need directions or change at the toll booth.

"Tourists usually have questions about one thing or another when they get to the toll booth," Lescher said. "Of course they ask the toll collector." Trucks will also use the "tourist" lane at the toll booth.

Lescher said bridge traffic this year is up approximately 9 percent over last year's traffic. Between July and December in 1980, 714,190 cars crossed the Causeway. During the same period in 1981, 771,257 cars crossed from the mainland to the Islands.

"We've been thinking about this for some time," Lescher said about the commuter lane. "We think it's going to help the traffic situation and the toll collectors, too."

"We figured anything we could do that might help was at least worth trying."

County takes responsibility for Captiva Road

By Cindy Chalmers

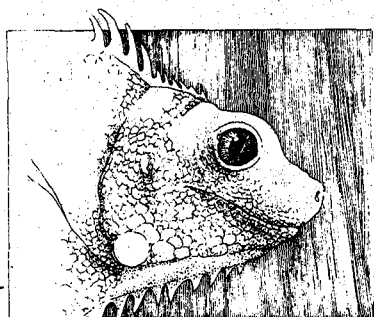

The Lee County Department of Transportation has taken over full responsibility for restoring Captiva Road in connection with the new water main installed on Captiva Island.

Under previous terms, the Island Water Association was required to resurface the excavated pavement after installation of the water main.

Last week, however, IWA officials said they transferred to Lee County all of the funds they had set aside for the pavement restoration. County officials said the funds totaled approximately $100,000.

The transfer of funds was made after the county decided to rebuild Captiva Road and take over full responsibility for maintenance of the excavated portion of the heavily travelled road.

Communication:

Throat dry? Knees knocking? Try painless public speaking

"You can't just throw a switch and become a good public speaker. It takes time."

By Cindy Chalmers

Dr. Abne Eisenberg maintains public speaking is the number one fear in America. In his latest book, Painless Public Speaking, Eisenberg maintains anyone can overcome that fear, or at least learn to keep the fear in check adequately enough to address a group of peers without panic.

While vacationing on Sanibel last week, Eisenberg elaborated (painlessly) on his new book in particular and on his approach to small group communication in general.

Fear of public speaking is more irrational than any other fear, Eisenberg said, because most of the things the speaker fears never even happen.

"How many times have you seen an audience laugh at or walk out on the speaker?" he asked. "The audience is not your enemy.

"Most audiences are very sympathetic and empathetic toward the speaker," he added. "They are probably saying, 'There but for the grace of God go I.'"

Speaking anxiety is highest when the speaker address his peers and tends to lessen considerably when the audience is either very young or very old, Eisenberg said.

Sometimes the thought of being watched by an audience throws the speaker into an uncomfortable, anxious state. "The speaker feels like he is a microbe on a slide for everyone's examination," he says.

When that happens to students in Eisenberg's classes, he instructs the audience to turn away from the speaker, leaving the speaker to address his peers' backs. "You'd be surprised how much of the anxiety disappears," he said. "Then we can work on speaking to their faces."

Eisenberg is a member of the faculty of the Speech and Theatre Department of the Herbert H. Lehman College of the City University of New York.

Eisenberg said he tells his beginning speech students two things: 1. It is normal to be afraid in front of an audience, and 2. It is a bit too ambitious to expect to completely rid yourself of speaking anxiety.

But, he said, the negative energy the nervous speaker spends on a racing heart, sweating palms, knocking knees and a pasty mouth can be turned into positive energy to help make the speech more effective and less painful.

Painless Public Speaking tells you how in chapters under such various titles as "Choosing Your Topic," "How to Get Your Audience to Believe You," and "The Silent Side of Public Speaking."

The book offers simple advice such as, for the tortoise speechmaker, "Constantly think of yourself as being late for wherever you are going," and, for the hare speechmaker, "Think of yourself as the star of a slow-motion picture."

Eisenberg's sense of humor pervades his book but does not take away the seriousness of what he recommends. A sense of humor is as necessary for a speechmaker as it is for a professor, he says. "Funny is the flip side of living. I would be very suspicious of anyone who didn't have a sense of humor."

Eisenberg's interest in small group communication began when he was a chiropractor and was on a debating team that argued the advantages of chiropractic care with medical doctors.

To increase his effectiveness, Eisenberg studied debate and communications at the City University of New York. "I was hooked," he said about the classes in small group communications. "I left chiropractic in 1963 - my being on the debate team was the fork in the road."

Eisenberg is a pioneer in non-verbal communication as well as an expert in verbal communications. He wrote the first book on body language and now has seven books to his credit, including Job Talk, Living Communication and Argument: An Alternative to Violence.

He said increased awareness for the need for effective communication has led to more classes such as the ones he teaches in colleges and universities around the country.

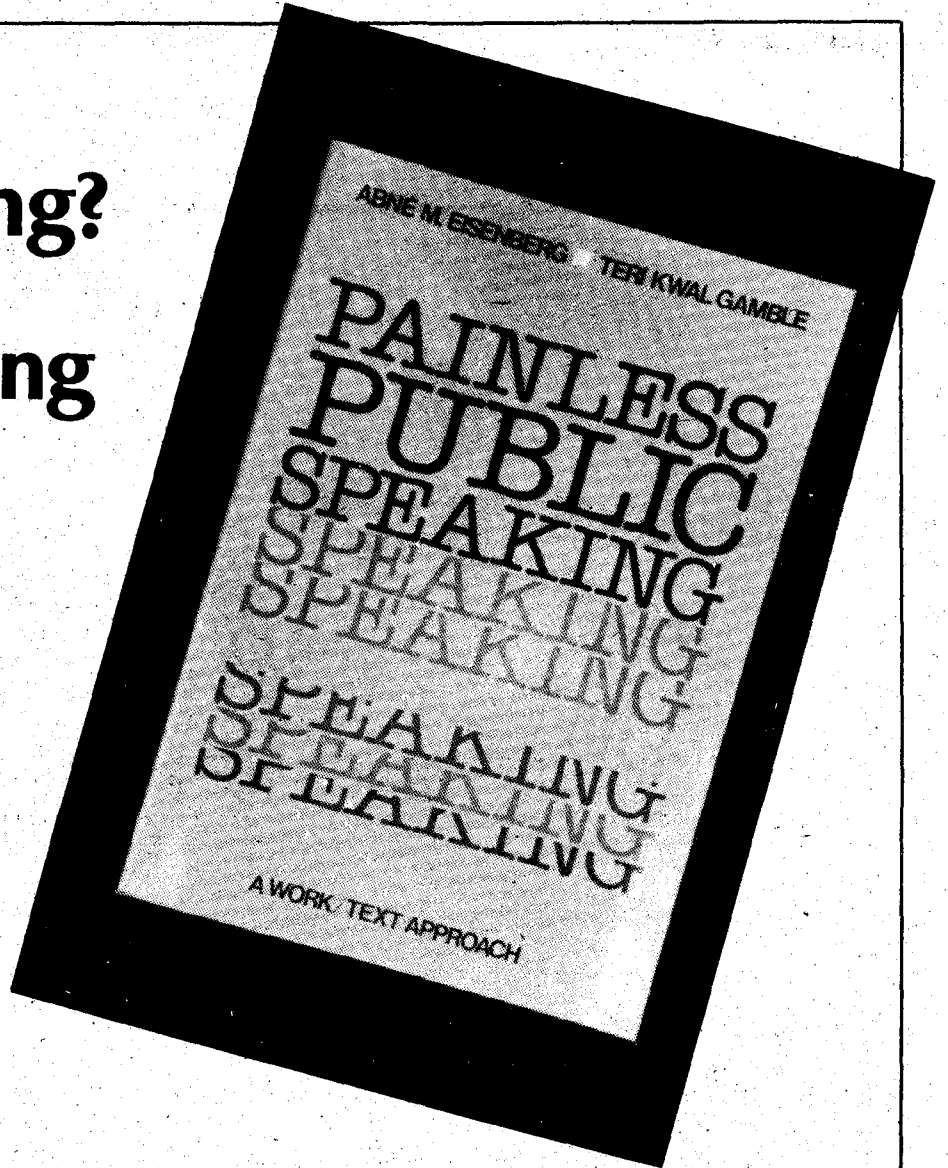

"There is a trend toward insuring the general public that when people come out of school they will be able to speak and write effectively," he said.

As business people become more concerned with proper, effective communication, Eisenberg finds himself invited to be a guest lecturer at business schools and management seminars.

He said accountants are surprisingly interested in communication. "I guess it's because they have to have good communication with their clients, especially at tax time," he theorized. "Accountants are the liaison between their clients' financial records and their sanity."

Whether you are acting as a parent, a boss or an employee, Eisenberg said, communication is the glue that will hold the relationship together.

"Unfortunately," he added, "It is a bridge that is too often seen as a wall."

Dr. Abne Eisenberg

"The audience is not your enemy. Most people in the audience probably empathize, 'There but for the grace of God go I.'"

Thanks for police, fire departments

To the Editor
The Islander

On behalf of the Skehan family and employees of Huxter's Market and Deli, I wish to extend our gratitude and appreciation for the fine professional service the Fire and Police departments of Sanibel provided to us.

The Fire Department acted swiftly to extinguish the fire thus leaving most of the structure intact. The interior of the store suffered intense smoke and heat damage that will render the market out of business for a few weeks.

Although the devastation of our losses is disheartening and unfortunate, we feel proud to be a member of a community where the volunteer firemen, off duty police personnel and neighboring business associates render assistance in such an exemplary capacity as was shown in the early morning hours on Saturday, Jan. 9, 1982.

Urging support for Equal Rights Amendment

To the Editor
The Islander

The Feminization of Poverty.

I recently attended a meeting at the Sanibel Community Center on the E.R.A. and was pleased to see men and women of all ages attending.

People realize more than ever that the E.R.A. is not just a feminist issue but a people issue. E.R.A. means equality for people regardless of sex.

It is a two edged sword, however because women tend to be more victimized than men. Older women are often condemned to poverty in their final years instead of enjoying the dignity and security that should be theirs in the final years for the valuable contribution they have made to society.

While one out of every 18 male headed households is in poverty, one out of every three female headed households is so affected. According to the National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity, at the present rate, by the year 2000, the poor will be made up entirely of women. This is referred to as the Feminization of Poverty.

Adding insult to injury - women are barely tokens in the public policy decision making process. In Congress, for example, women make up three per cent of the lawmakers and in the State Legislatures, the figure is eight per cent.

Equality in jobs, educations and pay will remain an elusive dream without the strength of a Constitutional Amendment.

I am urging citizens everywhere to write to our Florida Legislators and urge them to support the E.R.A.

Now more than ever women want... and deserve legal equality!

Thanks for returning turtle tag

A copy of the following letter was given to The Islander for publication.

Mrs. Isabella E. Ross
1130 Seagrape Lane
Sanibel, FL 33957

Dear Mrs. Ross,

Many thanks for returning tag number FL0013, placed on a loggerhead sea turtle nesting at Cape Canaveral National Seashore on July 10, 1978 and again on July 22, 1978.

This turtle has not been seen since then.

although she might have returned without her tag and we would never have known. My guess is that this turtle last her tag at some previous date in the vicinity of Sanibel and the tag washed ashore along with the many shells for which the Island is famous. The abrasion on the tag indicates that it remained with the turtle for at least two years.

I enclose our standard reward of $5 for a returned tag or tag record. Thanks again.

Sincerely yours,

James I. Richardson, Director

Poetry for library crafts show

The Library Show

Each year in the crescent shaped city Of Sanibel out in the Gulf, The artists and craftsmen maneuver To show off their very best stuff.

For this yearly extravaganza They trot out the cream of the crop. They give it that little bit extra And skim from right off of the top.

Those artists of extra perception With talented creative flairs Donate of their time and their talents To proffer their pieces and wares.

Now these precious prizes and pieces Of art are destine to go To reflect the intents and emotions Of those who display in the show.

An object of art is a treasure When it can produce and portray Some beauty of purpose and pleasure. En route on life's happy highway.

The cause that inspires all this effort Is healthy and kind and benign. A gesture that implements culture Is truly of epic design.

So let's all go to the Library Show. With will and desire and some clout. Let's purchase a treasure for pleasure. Let's buy and let's try to help out.

Dr. Kenneth Preston drives a wooden stake in a pond near the Sanibel River. Photo By David Meardon.

The ortho phosphate test will reveal phosphoric acid content, an indication of pollution from fertilizers or insect sprays.

The final test will reveal the coliform count or the amount of bacterial action in the water.

Dr. Bill Webb, a member of the Research Committee who has been involved in water quality projects for many years, said the testing program will serve as a benchmark to determine trends.

"But it will probably be two or three years before we will have any notion of trends," he added.

"A barrier island is like a leaky boat," Webb said. "Good water is extremely important to us."

The testing program will give the city a means of comparison from year to year, he said. If the tests show a deterioration in the quality of water the city can immediately begin to look for the reasons, he added.

Other members of the Research Committee who will participate in the project are George Campbell, Al Lloyd, Abbott Byfield, Robert Byers, Councilman Mike Klein and Gary Price, Preston said.

"We may have to increase the number of volunteers as the project progresses," Preston added.

Public hearing continues today on commercial development

By Barbara Brundage

After another full day of deliberations last Friday the City Council arrived at a consensus on most of the controversial issues generated by the proposed plan for Sanibel's future commercial development.

The public hearing was continued until 5:01 p.m. today, but a final draft of the implementing ordinance that will be a general amendment to the Comprehensive Land Use Plan will not be ready for council vote at that time, Mayor Porter Goss said late Friday.

"The Planning staff will not be able to complete revisions including changes made Friday and those that have evolved through the public hearing process that began on Dec. 15," Goss said.

A special council meeting will be called for a vote on the final draft sometime between now and Feb. 1, the absolute deadline the council set for the adoption of the new standards and regulations for commercial development, he added.

The city's commercial moratorium is destined to expire on Feb. 1 or upon the adoption of the proposed new commercial plan, whichever comes first.

At Friday's morning session the council informally approved the establishment of a new Commercial Institutional District, proposed by the staff as a solution for some of the lawfully existing properties such as the Chamber of Commerce information center and the Community Association Center.

The council agreed that only non-profit establishments would be eligible for the new designation including churches, schools, government offices, information centers, service clubs and community assembly halls.

A "floating district," originally labeled "Non-Office, Non-Retail" but renamed Service Commercial District, would accommodate some of the other lawfully existing uses such as the Wegryn Clinic and Sanibel's three marinas.

Businesses that offer services benefiting the community would be eligible for the Service Commercial designation. Council approval would be required on a case by case basis.

The Service Commercial District designation could be applied Island-wide.

Council approval would also be required for shopping centers of more than 12,000 square feet under the Conditional Use designation, Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane said.

Uses permitted in the primary office and retail commercial district and the general office and retail commercial district originally labeled "Use by Right" have been redesignated "Permitted Uses" by the planning staff to conform with the nomenclature of CLUP.

Regulation of the combination of commercial and residential uses in a designated Commercial District has been modified to permit the two uses in the same building but with a separate entrance for the residential use and the "best possible soundproofing."

Commercial activity on the site was originally required to cease at 6 p.m., but the time limit has been extended to "evening hours."

The proposed new regulation that requires 60 square feet of retail space for each restaurant seat was deleted from the plan.

Councilman Fred Valtin argued on the side of the restaurant owners who objected to the "conversion formula" because it would prevent expansion by many of the existing restaurants.

Valtin said the parking requirements and other performance standards for restaurants already in use provide enough controls to prevent an unacceptable increase in intensity of use on the site.

Valtin said he would "like to do away with the formula."

Bafalis sees no problems in keeping Lighthouse public

After discussing the issue with U.S. Coast Guard officials, U.S. Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis said last week he sees no major problem in keeping the beach and other recreational areas at the Sanibel Lighthouse public.

In a letter to Charlotte White, chairman of the city's Historical Preservation Committee, Bafalis said the Coast Guard's plans to set up an Aids to Navigation team at the Lighthouse are in the "earliest stages."

"It's a long range project and has not yet been submitted to Washington for approval," he added.

The Coast Guard's main concern is that the navigational team would have easy access to the facilities, Bafalis said.

The Historical Preservation Committee is vitally interested in preserving the Lighthouse and its accessory buildings that have been named to the National Register of Historic Sites and possibly using them as a museum of Island history.

Mrs. White had written Bafalis and U.S. Senators Paula Hawkins and Lawton Chiles expressing her concern that the Lighthouse property, beach and fishing pier remain open to the public.

Her letter reinforced the city's position that to close that recreation area to the public would cause a dislocation and shift of people that would seriously overburden Sanibel's other existing public areas.

Since the Coast Guard announced its plans last April to house an Aids to Navigation team on its Sanibel Lighthouse property, the city has explored ways to insure continued public use of the surrounding beach area.

Last November after the Coast Guard removed the Lighthouse property from the "disposal list" of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, City Manager Bernie Murphy was authorized by the City Council to discuss with Coast Guard officials the possibility of joint management of the site.

Murphy is scheduled to make a report on the Lighthouse property at this morning's council meeting.

Frey donates balance of original fine to Sanibel library

In gratitude for the City Council's "apparent reconstruction attitude" in reducing a $422.18 penalty to $25 for failure to request a piling inspection before a building permit expiration deadline, Sanibel building contractor Bill Frey has donated $400 to the Sanibel Public Library.

Frey also paid the $25 penalty to the city. Frey had appealed to the council for relief, saying the punishment didn't fit the crime and called the fine "unnecessarily punitive."

Though Frey admitted Sanibel Homes had failed to call the Building Department for an inspection, construction on the project began well in advance of the Nov. 24 deadline and proceeded on schedule until the omission was discovered in early December.

Mayor Porter Goss in a letter thanked Frey for his generosity and assured him his suggestion of graduated fines for failure to begin construction before building permits expire will be given consideration.

Burger Emporium expansion approved

The Planning Commission last week approved Lou Martelli's application to enlarge his Burger Emporium restaurant by developing the porch area. Commissioner Bill Hagerup cast the only dissenting vote.

The new portion of the restaurant will use all of the 690-foot-square porch and will increase the seating capacity of the restaurant from 86 to 100.

The planning staff recommended that consideration of Martelli's request be delayed until the new commercial ordinance goes into effect, but Martelli said further expansion would probably be impossible under the new rules.

The motion that was passed included the provisions that vegetation buffers at the restaurant be improved and subject to approval by the Vegetation Committee; no new entrances be created; there be no outside signs; and the retail shop selling the postcards and souvenirs be operated as a part of the restaurant business.

Commissioner Roeder to meet with council

Lee County Commissioner Mike Roeder and Bill Hammond, director of the county's Division of Community Services, are scheduled to discuss with the Sanibel City Council at its Feb. 2 meeting the users' fee that is contemplated when Bowman's Beach becomes a county-wide park.

The city in a joint venture with Lee County has begun improvement of Bowman's Beach.

The city and the county have each contributed $50,000 to fund the first phase of the project - the construction of a new bridge linking the parking area to the beach.

The existing bridge is owned by the Blind Pass Condominium Association and is not maintained by the county nor will it be in the future, according to Assistant City Manager Gary Price.

The council had expressed concern that beachgoers would be tempted to use the existing bridge after the new one is completed to avoid paying the users' fee.

But Price said if the fee is assessed by the "car full" and not individually such a problem may not materialize.

Algiers demolition okayed

The Planning Commissioners last week granted Public Works Director Gary Price permission to destroy the Algiers steamboat.

The boat, which was brought to the Island and restored in the late '50s by wealthy shipping heiress Helen Hooper Brown and her husband, Lathrop, will be demolished by Contractor Dale Schneider at a cost of approximately $14,000.

A parking lot holding 25 cars will be created out of the area the ship is presently on, which is at the end of Southwinds Drive, providing beach access for tourists and residents.

A restroom has already been completed at the site, and Sanibel Policewoman Betty Weir, who lives adjacent to the area, will assume responsibility for keeping an eye on the area.

A suggestion that the new park be named "Algiers Memorial Park" because of the nostalgia and attachment many residents felt for the boat was rejected by the commission.

"It's not a steamship. It's an old converted car ferry," Commission Chairwoman Ann Winterbotham said.

Commission holds final discussion on ROGO changes

If the City Council follows a Planning Commission recommendation, recreational vehicle campsites, tent platforms and houseboats will be considered dwelling units and will be subject to the Rate of Growth allocation process.

"If a hotel or motel unit is a dwelling unit under the plan (CLUP), then any other unit on the ground requiring water and other city services is a dwelling unit and should be under ROGO," Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham reasoned.

"The purpose of ROGO is to keep services and development at an even pace," she added.

Her fellow commissioners agreed and passed the motion to fold these three new development categories into ROGO by a 7-0 vote.

In a final discussion last week of proposed changes to the Rate of Growth ordinance, the commissioners also voted unanimously to recommend deletion of the provision that gives priority ratings to multi-family projects that agree to phased development (four units each year).

"The number of units to be built each year on individual sites can best be addressed during the development permit process," Planning Director Bruce Rogers advised the commission.

The commission also decided to recommend that the annual reserves be divided in thirds with one-third of the number assigned in each category applied in each four-month ROGO period.

For example, 15 of the 45 multi-family units, 33 of the 100-unit single-family reserve and seven of the 20 Below Market Rate Housing units would be allocated in each of the three allocation periods.

If the new combined commercial-residential development in commercial districts is adopted by the council, the commission suggested that these residential units be given preferential treatment under ROGO.

This would provide an additional incentive for businesses to use some of their retail commercial space for employee housing, the commissioners explained.

They declined to recommend adding a definition of "a single-family unit" to the ordinance but did approve a change in the definition of a multi-family unit.

The commissioners found acceptable language suggested by Ray Pavelka, director of development for Mariner Properties.

The new definition is in three parts:

A multi-family unit is (1) a structure of three or more single-family units, (2) a parcel of land with three or more single-family units and (3) a parcel of land with two or more duplexes including those developed under the zero lot line concept.

Other recommended changes include: increasing the time period from seven to 10 days after allocations are made in which applicants can request a hearing before the City Council to determine if ROGO regulations were properly applied by the Planning Commission; and that the the meeting in which the council can exercise its right to call up the allocations for review must be more than 10 days after the Planning Commission has made the allocations. Currently that time period need be only seven days.

In last week's three-hour session the commissioners clarified and restated some of their policies for interpreting the ordinance.

In a redevelopment project when a dwelling unit is to be moved to make way for new construction, does that dwelling unit have to go through ROGO or does it stay with the land or go with the structure?

The commission decided to remain flexible and leave the way open on a case-by-case basis to use either interpretation.

The commissioners agreed they had the discretion to either award all available dwelling units to the highest scoring application ("winner take all") under the point system or to award the dwelling units on a pro rata basis based on the point totals of other high scorers.

It was commission consensus that the "no beneficial use" priority can be applied only one time to any project.

The commission turned down Commissioner Louise Johnson's proposal to rank applications scored under the point system to give equal weight to the totals of both low scoring and high scoring commissioners.

Pavelka told the commission he had applied the ranking system to the November applications for multi-family units and found it made little difference in the final outcome.

"At most it only made a change of one or two places with the applicants with the most points still finishing on top," Pavelka said.

Another motion by Johnson to give a five-point advantage to single-family applications that comply with all minimum building standards that remained in the allocation system for more than one four-month period was supported only by the maker and new Commissioner Emily Barefield.

"Do we want to escalate values just for being there?" Commissioner Al Edwards asked.

Commissioner Bill Hagerup expressed a fear that this priority would encourage speculators and result in homes of only minimum quality.

Ad hoc city charter review committee expected

The City Council is expected to pass a resolution at today's meeting to establish an Ad Hoc Charter Review Advisory Committee.

Proposed to be composed of two council members, two members of the Planning Commission and three citizens at large, the committee will be authorized to study and recommend changes to the City Charter that would be put to a referendum of Sanibel voters at next November's city election.

There are several areas of the charter that are out of synch with state statutes, Councilman Duane White pointed out.

“In his memo of March 1981, City Attorney Neal Bowen pointed out several areas that need change,” White said. He outlined his proposal at the Jan. 5 council meeting.

The Committee of the Islands (COTI) has requested consideration of changing the charter provision that requires council candidates to run in districts.

COTI recommends instead that candidates run at large for the council seats with the highest vote getters declared the winners.

COTI also would like a clarification of the succession of mayor and vice mayor in the event of a vacancy in the mayor's seat.

Councilman Fred Valtin said seven is the “absolute minimum number of committee members,” adding that he would prefer nine or 11.

Mayor Porter Goss said the numbers can be decided later, but he prevailed in his position that the committee be established by resolution with parameters of its responsibility stated clearly.

By a 5-0 vote the council instructed Bowen to draw up a resolution for council consideration at the Jan. 19 meeting.

“This is none too soon to be able to put the changes on the ballot next November,” Valtin commented.

At that same meeting the council made appointments to three standing committees.

Three new members were appointed to the Historical Preservation Committee. Betty Sears, Evelyn Pearson and Jane Valtin will join returning members Charlotte White, Elinore Dormer, Ben Pickens, Anne Marsh, Mary Lee and Paul Howe. Councilman Francis Bailey was renamed as an ex officio member.

Elizabeth Meister's resignation from the Historical Preservation Committee was accepted by the council “with regret.”

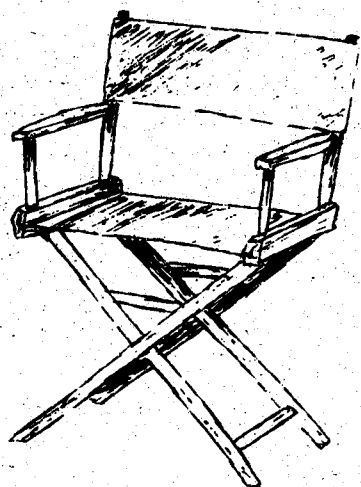

Councilman Fred Valtin was reappointed chairman of the Below Market Rate Housing Committee along with members Ben Fuller, Planning Commissioner Emily Barefield, Kate Aune and Councilman Francis Bailey.

Louise Johnson, who has served on the BMRH committee since its inception several years ago, withdrew. As a member of the Planning Commission she will still have input, she explained.

Charter review committee expected

Stoppelheim, Ted Cole and Herbert Ferguson were reappointed to the Ad Hoc Marine Advisory Committee. Councilman Mike Klein is an ex officio member.

Twenty-two members of the Vegetation Committee, who agreed to serve another year, were approved by a unanimous vote of the council.

The Ad Hoc Electrical Distribution Committee was kept alive at the request of its chairman, Councilman Valtin. Jack Hutchings, Bo Veal, William Hagerup and Conrad Lickel will continue to serve until they determine whether to recommend that underground utilities be made mandatory in the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

White recommended that the council not reappoint the Public Health Committee, which has not met in two years.

Chairman Dr. Louis Weygryn did not respond to White's request to poll committee members on their willingness to serve.

The city's Emergency Preparedness Evacuation Response Team (EPERT) was reappointed, but White said the team would be reorganized to conform to Hazard Mitigation study findings when that report is finalized and adopted. A medical team will be included in the new format, White said.

Reappointment of the Live Shelling Committee was postponed until today's council meeting to give the chairman time to make recommendations.

Conversion to realty office okayed

George Kohlbrenner's request to convert a single-family dwelling into a realty office was unanimously approved by the Planning Commission last week.

The dwelling is on Periwinkle Way between the B-Hive Grocery and the Black Pearl. There was very little discussion of the matter, as the plans complied with all zoning regulations.

There was, however, a discussion of placement of the sign to advertise the office. This matter, according to George Kohlbrenner late Friday, has not yet been satisfactorily resolved.

He said certain problems regarding the placement of the sign. He said he was informed of the various code exceptions in the plans by Code Enforcement Officer Dick Baker after his permit received final approval from the City Council.

Kohlbrenner concluded, "I think I may have to start all over again at square one with this."

Baker was unavailable for comment.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

In any coastal area of Florida, the stage of the tide drastically affects what kind of "luck" you have on your fishing adventures. Let's see if we can take the mystery out of this thing called tides and perhaps increase your fishing pleasure.

We could go on for pages about the how and why of tides and their effect on fishing, but the average occasional fisherman just wants to know, "When is the best time to go fishing?" Simple as that.

So much depends upon what you are fishing for. If you get specialized, for instance fishing for snook in the summer months or tarpon in the spring or red fish in the winter - each fish actively feeds at different stages of the tide.

If you are a "whatever is biting" type of angler, that is if you have fun with anything tugging at the other end of your line, then tides aren't that critical.

If you are patient and observant, you might move out of the casual method of fishing and get down to going for specific types of fish at certain tide stages. But for now let's generalize on our fishing and take the shotgun approach to catching fish.

There are normally two high tides and two low tides around the Island waters. The tide stages are about six hours apart. For example, if it's dead low tide at 6 a.m., then the next tide will be high at around noon. The tide will be low again at 6 p.m., and the final tide of the day will be high at midnight.

That's over simplified, I know, but basically that's the action of the tide. Any local fishing shop will give you a tide chart for free, so take one and study it.

If there is one period in the normal tide cycle I would suggest for the fishermen just beginning to learn the hobby and the waters, then it would be around the high side of the tides.

High tides simply mean more water. Higher water allows the fish to feed closer to mangroves and shore and, especially for shore bound anglers, brings the fish within reach of a good cast.

It would seem that out in the middle of Pine Island Sound, where there's plenty of water, tide stages wouldn't make that much difference. But the fish know by the moving water, and there is usually more feeding activity around a higher tide.

Going back to our tide time example, we said the first high tide would be at noon. It will only remain high for a minute or so before it starts to fall. So I would suggest that you pick a time two hours before to two hours after the high tide so you will have plenty of water to fish in a prime time.

Sure, I know that someone has found a school of big reds in a pocket at dead low tide and cleaned up on them. And I know that sometimes the only time a snook will strike is at low slack tide, but overall stick with the higher stage of the tides when you are starting out.

If your prime high tide happens to fall at sunrise or sunset, then you might even do better, but salt water fish are more attuned to tides than light conditions caused by the sun, or lack of it.

We are all students of fishing, but as you do more and more of it, you will begin to notice feeding patterns. It won't be long before you find that if you are at marker 18 and start catching trout at an hour after high tide, then you probably can repeat the good times if you arrive at the same tide stage, under comparable conditions.

Good fishing, and remember to release any fish which won't be eaten.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

Similarities in shell form and color often lead to misidentification of specimens, and the lowly but strangely shaped ark shells might lead the group of hard-to-name shells on our beaches.

There are perhaps a dozen types of ark shells found in North American waters, but here along the warm, shallow seas of Sanibel and Captiva Islands, only three of the arks come to our attention.

Arks are in the clam family, and like so many other collector shells from that family, they aren't for eating as are the common clams you find on a restaurant menu.

So it's not the table fare, but the shell's unique shape and color that would make you want it for your collection. And that's where two out of three arks found here tend to get mixed up when identification comes into the situation.

One of the most commonly found arks is what most people call the turkey wing. It averages about two inches long, but I've seen them nearly twice that length. As with many shells, the name "turkey wing" does fit the outer design of these shells, because the color and shape do remind one of a turkey's wing -- well, if you squint a bit, it might.

No problem there, except some shellers don't call this shell the turkey wing all the time. It's often referred to as the zebra ark. That's because, although it does look somewhat like a turkey's wing, it has lines of color on it that remind some people of zebra stripes.

So we have a shell that doesn't really look a great deal like a zebra, or a turkey for that matter. And along comes another ark that rarely is properly identified because it looks very much like its bigger cousin, the turkey wing, (or zebra, if you prefer.)

The little fella that never gets his own name is really called the mossy ark. A big mossy ark might reach to two inches. The problem is that the mossy looks very much like the turkey wing. Here's the way to tell the difference -- and I bet if you have a few turkey wings around, you might discover that one or two are really mossy arks.

The way I tell them apart is that the mossy ark, besides being smaller, has a hump on its back that is a much lighter color than the rest of the shell. An immature turkey's wing will look very similar, but you will see that the mossy ark is really a different shell once you have one of each in your hand.

Incidentally, I've only found one set of turkey wings on the beaches, a set being both sides of this bi-valve clam. So look for one or the other of the sides.

I mentioned a third ark, and this one might be one of the funniest looking creatures out there. I say this because someone in my shelling groups usually comes back with one and asks, "Hey, what happened to this shell?"

They ask this because often the shell is covered with a black substance that makes it look as if it were in an oil spill -- and that's exactly what many new shellers figure. Coming from the Atlantic beaches where gobs of oil often wash up makes one think the shell they are holding has been the victim of a spill. Not so.

Actually, the chestnut-sized ponderous ark grows its own black "periostracum" and is unique in the ark family because of it. The ponderous ark is a slow moving shell, and it's not uncommon to find bits of coral attached to a dead shell when it washes upon the beaches.

Arks are just one of the many interesting shells you will find on shore. Each is a distinct individual with special abilities that allow it to take its place in the underwater world. Good shelling this week.

"We live with the threat of erosion. But the blessing of being here is so great, we don't mind."

— Robert Manderscheid

Against an advancing sea, Captivans build a fortress

On a calm day, the sea laps lazily along Captiva's shoreline, subdued and deceptive. When the wind picks up, sending with it a constant barrage of crashing waves, however, erosion resumes and the sea carves into the front yards of beach property.

Beach erosion, inherent to barrier islands, has reached a critical point on Captiva. Where there were four rows of Australian pines and 100 feet of beach in some spots on the Gulf as recently as 20 years ago now lies the ocean, churning and restless, wanting more.

The narrow defeat by Captiva voters in November of the $9 million bond issue for beach renourishment of the southern three miles of the Island has left the Captiva Erosion Prevention District (CEPD) in a holding pattern as it regroupes and attempts to arrive at a suitable finance plan for the costly project.

But the proverbial wolf is at the door of many Gulf front property owners. Threatened by a sea that is less than 20 feet from some homes, a number of homeowners have taken preventive measures to protect their property. And in most cases, the land has been altered radically to stave off the relentless sea.

Emerging as the most widely used barrier to the sea is a sloping rock "rip rap" revetment, a design that calls for heavy limestone boulders to slope up the bank on top of woven polypropylene, which is placed under the sand to impede erosion.

Environmental consultant Dex Bender, who has supervised the construction of more than 1,500 feet of the "rip rap" design on Captiva, calls it "the next best method for dealing with erosion of the bank." Renourishment with good quality sand is preferable, he says.

A backhoe is used to dig a trench about four feet deep at the foot of the beach near the bank, and the woven material is placed at the bottom and sent sloping up the bank. On it first are placed small rocks, and then boulders weighing 1,200 to 1,500 pounds each at a rate of five to six tons per lineal foot.

The sloping rocks dissipate the energy of waves, and water passes through the filter material without taking sand with it. "This is the preferred method that the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) approves," Bender says, adding that it has a design life of 40 years and can handle severe storms.

"It's a marvelous feeling of security for me," says Mrs. Ralph Friedmann, whose property was recently protected by the "rip rap" construction.

Security, however, is not without a price. At $170 per foot, the average Gulf front property owner is paying about $17,000 for this barrier to the sea.

One CEPD estimate put the cost of renourishment at a special assessment of $20,000 and a new yearly tax of $300 to $600 for beachfront owners plus an added annual tax for bayside property owners.

The erosion district recently formed a Finance Committee to set out possible guidelines for financing beach renourishment.

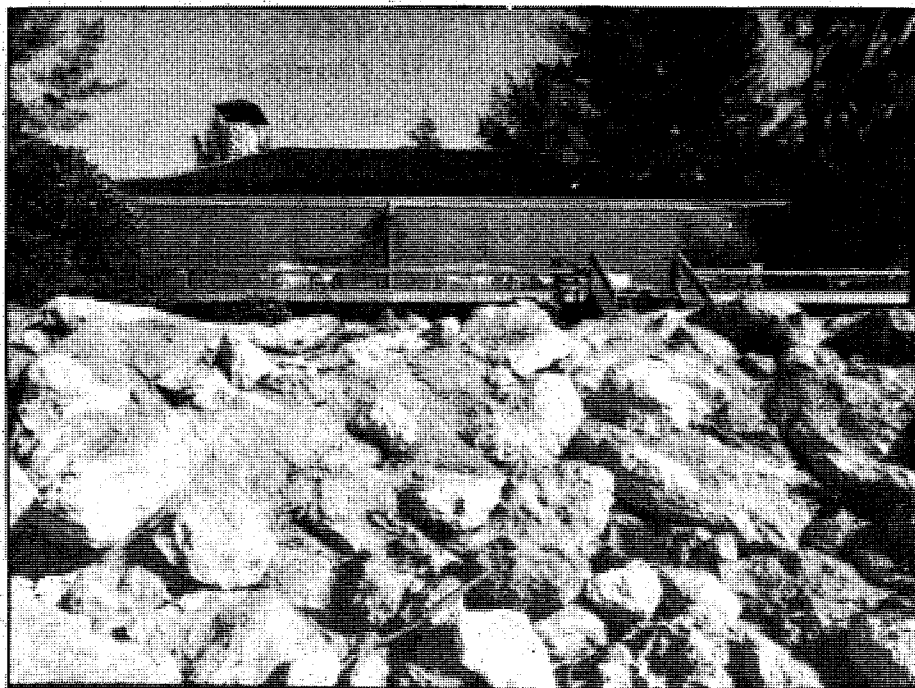

Mrs. Friedmann strongly favors renourishment. "Anything else is suicide," she says. "Granted, there are no guarantees (that the beach will not erode again in time); these barrier islands are vulnerable, and we probably shouldn't be here. But we're here, and we've got a lot of money in it. This is my home."

She says renourishment would increase property values of both shorefront and bayside properties. She cautions that if Captivans cannot finance a renourishment project, the federal government could step in with financing and create public accesses and beaches along the shores.

"If they demanded accesses every two miles it would ruin the Island," she says.

Robert Manderscheid, who also owns a home toward the southern end of Captiva, where erosion is most severe, said his year-old "rip rap" barrier has held up "quite well," even during last week's severe winter storm that slammed seas of up to 10 feet into the shore and sent foam into the air like soap suds.

As the sea creeps shoreward on Captiva Island, photos above, threatened property owners take steps to protect their homes. Rip rap, right, is a common answer to the problem.

Like Mrs. Friedmann, Manderscheid is not keen on the idea of federal financing.

Before purchasing his house on Captiva three years ago, he lived on Treasure Island's Sunset Beach, north of St. Petersburg. His home was protected by a seawall (now generally frowned upon by the DER because constant wave action tends to underming the wall over time).

A federally sponsored renourishment program placed 200 feet of sand over 11 miles of the island. With federal money came public access, and, not surprisingly, more people.

"It didn't take much longer than 18 months before the sand was completely gone," he said. And even without a beach, the people remained -- public access had rendered his seawall a popular meeting place.

For this reason, Manderscheid says, he opposes renourishment on either the federal or local levels. "The pumping of sand is futile," he says. "It was a very expensive boondoggle up there."

Michael Reddy says constructing the "rip rap" barrier along with three of his neighbors was his only alternative, as the sea was virtually knocking on his front door. "We had no choice. We either had to do that or lose the house," he says.

Hudson Holland has seen about 35 feet of beach in front of his Captiva house erode since he purchased his property in 1969. At first he placed large sandbags on the beach with hopes that sand would build up around them.

But the sandbags soon deteriorated, and Holland built a seawall to slow the force of the ocean. But water began undermining the wall, and a section of it had to be rebuilt in 1975. In addition, rocks have been placed in front of the wall, but many have sunk into the sand because of erosion.

As the sea creeps shoreward...

Despite these problems, Holland said without the seawall, "The house would be in the Gulf."

Holly Davies, the head of Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, has run along the Captiva beach daily for the last 4½ years and is quite familiar with the erosion that has taken place over that period. Only a few weeks ago, yet another Australian pine just north of CROW's facilities crashed into the water, the victim of erosion. On some days, felled trees have blocked Ms. Davies' path.

"I used to stroll down the bank. There was a beach," she says. "Now it's a whole different story." She now checks the tide charts and runs only at low tide.

Vicci Dwyer, also of CROW, says she has seen 15-20 feet of erosion over the last two months where she is housesitting, at the Pigott residence. The Pigotts' property and their neighbors' property lie between two "rip rap" seawalls.

"We should let South Seas be the test case."

According to Bender, the Pigotts, now residing in Washington state, were waiting to see whether the bond issue passed before taking measures to halt the erosion. Now they have opted to go with the "rip rap" design, and Bender is waiting for permits to start construction.

Ms. Dwyer said although she opposes renourishment efforts because they go against the nature of unstable barrier islands, she did not vote in the election because of a conflict of interest. A resident but not a landowner, she opted to sit out the election that directly affected the Pigotts, who own land but could not vote on the issue.

Some Captivans, uneasy with the idea of spending big bucks for beach renourishment but more uncomfortable with the thought of losing their homes to the ocean, have adopted a wait-and-see attitude before they commit themselves to renourishment. They are waiting for more conclusive results from South Seas Plantation's $3.6 million, 1.8-mile beach renourishment program that was completed last fall.

"We should let South Seas be the test case," said one Gulf front resident. But he added he does not look forward to the expense of renourishment, which would cost him more than he paid for his house and property in the 1950's.

While the erosion district struggles to come up with a plan to protect the Island (thus far, renourishment is receiving top billing), and come up with a finance plan that Captivans will accept as fair and affordable, the shoreline, in places, is beginning to look like a fortress, holding back the invading sea.

"Barrier islands are always shifting," Manderscheid said. "We live with the threat of erosion. But the blessing of being here is so great, we don't mind."

Environmental consultant Dex Bender, above, oversees the installation of rip rap to protect a beach front home. Bender has supervised the construction of more than 1,500 feet of rip rap design on Captiva and says it is second to renourishment as a way to deal with erosion.

STROKES

The carotid arteries carry blood up both sides of the neck to the brain, and their blockage with fatty deposits often leads to strokes.

Surgery can remove these fatty deposits. Prevention means a low fat diet. Vitamin C also tends to inhibit the fatty deposits and plaque in arteries.

Chemical engineer turned artisan Thomas Sharp spends his retirement crafting and repairing fine furniture. He talks about woods, lacquers and dovetail joints of all kinds with the true love of the born craftsman.

Sharp's small business provides "all the work I want to do" in his Island home, which he came to at the end of one career to start another.

His father was a lawyer who, Sharp says, "would take any case if he thought you were right." His mother was a former schoolteacher.

Sharp had nine siblings; six of whom survived. All seven children graduated from college, and he is the only one who does not also have an advanced degree.

"And," he says almost apologetically, "I only have two patents."

His oldest sister, Susie, recently retired from her position as Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, the first woman in the history of the United States to hold such an office. She was elected by about a 75 percent majority in November 1974.

Sharp himself graduated Phi Beta Kapa from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1937. He went to work for DuPont in Parlin, N.J., the month after graduation, doing research into paints, varnishes, enamels, lacquers, and adhesives.

In 1941 he married Alice Robinson Carpenter. They have one daughter, Tyrrell LeCocq, 32, who recently married and is a professional horsewoman at a country club in Pennsylvania.

When World War II began, DuPont wanted to transfer

Sharp to its fabrics division for research on raincoats. Instead, Sharp went to Remington Rand (which ultimately became Sperry Univac), where he developed his patents that both concern typewriters.

Next he moved to Norwalk, Conn., and worked with fiberglass and polyester resins, which are widely used on boats today.

After many years in Norwalk, the Sharps moved to Bluebell, Penn., where they lived until his retirement in 1977. They visited friends who had retired on Sanibel and like the Island so much themselves that they abandoned their plans to build a home on the Chesapeake Bay.

Sharp is an avid bird-watcher and member of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society; he also is a mycologist, a mushroom fancier. Alice Sharp grows orchids and has traveled all over the world. She is particularly interested in gourmet cooking and has studied under various famous hotel chefs on the east coast.

"Every night," Sharp says. "We sit down to a four-course dinner by candlelight. My wife knows there are several ways to a man's heart -- and his stomach is one of them."

But Sharp's main avocation is furniture crafting. He received his first carpentry set when he was 7 years old and built, he says, "a lot of birdhouses." He has been buying tools since 1945 and has countless catalogues of antique hardware. He subscribes to Fine Woodworking and Work Bench magazines.

Like everyone else, Sharp is a victim on inflation, and the wood he works with is getting more and more expensive. A lot of good wood comes from the Constantine Company in

New York, but the shipping costs to Florida make it somewhat prohibitive for the Island artisan.

He likes cherrywood, walnut and Honduras mahogany, and says the most expensive wood, which is also rare, is probably Burmese rosewood, which goes for an astounding $6 to $10 a board foot.

Sharp says he doesn't much care what period the furniture is. "What I like to do is what I've never done before," he says. "I'm interested in the joinery of the piece more. I do like genuine French Provincial, though, and I like Chinese -- their joinery is very complicated."

Joinery is a complex part of Sharp's art. There are many kinds of dovetail joints, most of which must be created by hand with a chisel. If a joint dovetails properly, the furniture will stay together even if the glue dries up, he says.

Sharp can copy any piece of antique furniture by looking at a picture of it, he says modestly. "Well, there are books that tell you exactly how to do that," he adds.

Sharp's other hobbies including watching M.A.S.H. and sports -- the pinnacle of television, he says -- and reading bestsellers. He gardens and hunts, too.

Asked what he'd like to be remembered for, Sharp says simply, "I don't have any great desire for recognition as such. I'd like to be remembered as an honest man."

Craftsmanship -- intimate and personal production -- has all but disappeared in many areas of the country. But like many other avocations, it is alive and well on Sanibel in the hands of people like Thomas Sharp.

POLICE BEAT

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

A Rodchester, Mich., resident told police he left his camera equipment under a table at the Sundial restaurant on Thursday evening, Jan. 7. The next day he realized the camera was missing and returned to the restaurant, but the camera, which was valued at $387, was not found.

The man also told police his car was broken into while he was dining at the restaurant.

An East Gulf Drive resident reported her house was broken into early Saturday morning, Jan. 9. The front door was forced open and a small jar of change taken from the bedroom. The incident occurred between 4 p.m. and midnight.

An Ibis Lane resident reported someone drove through his yard and hit a grapefruit tree on Tuesday morning, Jan. 12.

A lamp post and lamp valued at $60 at the Casa Ybel resort was struck by a car travelling at a high rate of speed on Tuesday morning, Jan. 12. The car was leaving the restaurant parking lot when it hit the post near the covered bridge. The driver of the car did not stop.

Brainard Bayou residents reported a prowler outside their house Tuesday night, Jan. 12. The complainants said they heard someone outside and noticed the hood of their van in the driveway was up. Police found no suspicious vehicles or persons in the area.

Police charged a Fort Myers man with driving while intoxicated, attempting to elude an officer, driving with a suspended license and driving with no tag early Wednesday morning, Jan. 13.

William Phillips Jr., 11063 Dublin Circle, attempted to elude police after an officer noticed the expired tags on his car at the Ramada Inn.

Police pursued Phillips around Donax, Pyrula and Oliva streets before he drove onto Periwinkle Way and ultimately stopped at Huxter's.

Two bottles of wine and a bottle of champagne valued at $26 were reported missing from a unit at the Tennisplace on Thursday night, Jan. 14. The resident of the unit told police she was not in the practice of locking her door.

There were no charges filed and no injuries in a two-car accident at the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Beach Road on Saturday, Jan. 9.

Michael Bertotti of Stratford, Conn., struck the right side of a car driven by Richard Howe Gordon of 2477 Periwinkle Way as Gordon turned right off of Periwinkle Way onto Beach Road.

Police estimated $95 damage to Gordon's 1975 Ford. There was no damage to Bertotti's 1975 Volkswagen.

Pickens named Police Auxiliary Lieutenant

By Cindy Chalmers

Long-time Island resident Ben Pickens has been promoted to lieutenant with the Sanibel Police Auxiliary, Police Chief John Butler announced last week.

Since the beginning of the Police Department on the Island seven years ago, Pickens, who owns Photo Sanibel, has contributed free of charge countless man hours as the department's crime photographer and assisted in processing crime scenes for other evidence, Butler said.

Pickens is also a team captain in the city's Emergency Preparedness Evacuation and Relief Team, which is another volunteer job.

In thanking Pickens on behalf of the Police Department, Butler said, "We call on you at all hours of the night and day, and you have never failed to respond. I wish to express our sincere appreciation for your time, professionalism in photography and devotion to duty that you have given the Sanibel Police Department in the past seven years."

Police Auxiliary Lt. Ben Pickens

Off. Case, Lt. Rhodes recognized for actions

Two members of the Sanibel Police Department were commended last week by Police Chief John Butler for actions taken in two recent Island crimes.

Butler recognized Officer Don Case for his part in apprehending a burglar and recovering numerous stolen items in an incident at the Surf Rider condominiums.

The burglary was reported in progress on Sunday night, Jan. 10. Case responded to the report and blocked the exit driveway of the complex, forcing two burglars to flee from the scene. Case apprehended Andrew Parks Jr. of Fort Myers, who was subsequently arrested on charges of burglary and possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

Butler also commended Lt. Ray Rhodes for his actions regarding the burglary of an occupied dwelling at the Lighthouse Resort on Dec. 1, 1981.

Although the burglary suspect escaped police, Rhodes' investigative efforts established the identity of the suspect and resulted in warrants for the arrest of Harold Irving Weinlauf on charges of burglary and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. Police believe Weinlauf is responsible for other burglaries on Sanibel.

Butler congratulated both Case and Rhodes for jobs well done and said they had upheld the best traditions of the Sanibel Police Department.

LIBRARY REPORT

By Harriet Howe

Scenes of Childhood by Sylvia Townsend Warner -- Culled from a series of articles written for The New Yorker between the 1930s and 1970s, these sketches of time and people remembered combine to form a delightful sort of biography.

There is a visit to friends in Wales where the resident nanny assured the children of all the dreadful things that would happen to them if they weren't good. There is the butler who was so faultless that although they didn't like him there was no reason to fire him until he got one of the maids "in trouble."

There is the account of a visit to two quite different village churches and the story of trying to discourage the Hoover salesman

(and in this sketch there is a nice tip -- before she answered the door, Warner put on her hat so that if she didn't wish to entertain the caller, she could say she was just going out). And then there is Miss Viner, who came to tea. These are all told with humor and with poignancy. Perhaps the most touching is the last, Mrs. Damon, who sold peat.

Green Thoughts: A Writer in the Garden by Eleanor Perenyi -- Arranged in alphabetical order, these essays on gardens and gardening offer practical advice, personal opinions and a bit of the history of gardening. From annuals to Woman's Place, they contain a wealth of information gleaned by the author over some 30 years of gardening and collecting garden lore.

James A. Michener's U.S.A. edited by Peter Chaitin -- In this great volume based on the TV series of the same title, James Michener presents a view of the United States and its people, past, present, and future, through personal observation, discussions of important issues with prominent people and conversations with ordinary artisans and tradesmen. Superbly illustrated and with a foreword by Michener, this is a book for every American.

Memory Boy by Victor Channing -- Young Peter Courtney has a phenomenal memory, and his father, partly through pride and partly through greed, has been exploiting his 14-year-old son. Thus they become involved in international espionage, and Frank Courtney finds that he has put his son and himself in mortal danger. A good suspense yarn, but perhaps the breast beating and mea culpa bits are somewhat overdone.

Library provides periodicals, books on investments

Have you considered using the Sanibel Public Library when seeking investment information? To be sure, it is not like the office of your broker, your investment counselor, or your banker, but here is a sample of the publications you can find there.

To start with, the library subscribes to Standard and Poor's Outlook. This is a weekly publication of one of the world's foremost investment advisory services, and is written primarily to fill the needs of the individual investor. Besides a commentary current stock market trends, it offers explicit advice on individual stocks and makes recommendations for several investment objectives.

An outstanding feature is its "Master List of Recommended Issues." This is divided into four groups based on investment objectives: Group 1, Foundation Stocks for Longer Term Gain; Group 2, Stock with Promising Growth Prospects; Group 3, Cyclical-Speculative Stocks; and Group 4, Incomes with Inflation Protection. Within this "Master List" are designations in each group of those stocks considered the best buys at the time of publication.

Because of its frequent publication (weekly) the information is up-to-date and timely, a necessary factor in today's changing financial climate.

Standard and Poor's Stock Market Encyclopedia of the S. & P. "500" is another helpful investment source. This encyclopedia is a comprehensive volume containing reports on the 500 corporations which make up the "S & P 500 Index" is included. Other related information supplements the reports.

Standard & Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives is a comprehensive source of information on over 37,000 nationally-known companies. Information in Volume 1 includes address and phone number of each company, names and titles of top executives, products or services provided, sales volume, number of employees, and other pertinent information. Volume 2 is a biographical volume giving information about over 72,000 executives such as date of birth, education, business and home address, and professional affiliations. Volume 3 includes four indexes: Geographical Index, all companies listed geographically; Standard Industrial Classification Index, companies listed by over 900 industrial codes; New Listings, all new executives appearing for the first time, and Obituary Section, individuals who have died since the last edition.

These publications are in the Reference Room of the Sanibel Public Library. Ask one of the volunteers to help you. They are trained in the use of this material. The Library, located on Palm Ridge Road, next to the Firehouse, is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All this information does not take the place of your broker's office, but it can be helpful for background and supplemental knowledge. Look in the Card Catalog under Investments for general books which may be borrowed for more leisurely reading.

From archaeology to quilting, learn it in Community Courses

By Cindy Chalmers

The 1982 winter session of the Sanibel Community Courses gets underway this week offering Islanders the opportunity to learn about everything from archaeology to quilting.

Two of the 12 courses offered this winter are already filled to capacity, however. Those who have not already registered for A Tisket, A Tasket, An Appalachian Basket and Introduction to Contemporary Quilting will have to wait for future sessions, Community Courses Chairman Shirley Evans said last week.

The basket weaving class taught by Islanders Polly Matsumoto and Charles Evans was one of the most popular classes of the fall session and is proving the same this winter.

While the Introduction to Contemporary Quilting Class for beginning quilters is already filled, experienced quilters can still join the Quilting Workshop under the instruction of Vera Graham. The workshop begins today, Jan. 19, and runs every Tuesday until Feb. 25 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Cost of the workshop is $20 plus $7.50 for materials. For more information call Lois Kessler, 472-1772.

Also starting today is Bridge: An Intermediate Class instructed by Bob Osman. The class will emphasize using the finer points to improve bidding and play. Intermediate bridge will meet on Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to noon. Cost of the class is $28. For more information call Ginny Shultz, 472-1176.

This Friday, Jan. 22, is the first meeting of Bridge For Beginners Only, a nine-session course by instructor Jean Scott. Master the fundamentals of learning how to value the hand, bid correctly, respond correctly to bids, lead properly and play the hand. The class will meet from 9 a.m. to noon. Cost is $27. For more information call Alice Anders, 472-6797, or Betty Niemeier, 472-6505.

Also starting this week is An Introduction to Florida Archaeology. Instructor Dr. Charles Wilson will take participants through Florida history from 13,000 years ago to the time of the first European contact in the 16th century.

Particular attention will be given to prehistoric sites in South Florida and to the culture of the historic Calusa Indians.

Wilson, who taught anthropology at Columbia University before coming to Sanibel 10 years ago, will lead two field trips as part of the six-week course. There is no required reading for the course.

"Anybody will enjoy the class," Wilson said last week. "I trust I can make it simple enough for everyone to follow - you don't need any experience in archaeology."

Participants will go on a short, two-hour field trip around Sanibel and Captiva in the third week of the course. The last class meeting will be spent on a longer field trip to Pineland, which Wilson calls "a miniscule town on Pine Island." The area around Pineland was once a major Calusa site, parts of which are now a national historic monument.

Wilson's archaeology course meets for the first time this Thursday, Jan. 21, at the Sanibel Community Center from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Cost of the class is $12. For more information call Carol Davenport, 472-4382, or Kay Schneider, 472-9472.

Next week Backgammon for Beginners and Advanced Backgammon begin sessions under the instruction of Magy Ann Boleman and Hay Foster, respectively. Foster will be assisted by Hup Johnston in the advanced course.

Beginning backgammon players will learn the etiquette, object, preliminaries, opening moves and response to opening moves, general strategy, probabilities and introduction to the doubling cube. Bring your board and buy the paperback book, The Backgammon Book, by Jacoby and Crawford in advance. The four-week class will meet on Tuesdays beginning next week from 1 to 3 p.m. Cost is $8. For more information call Nancy Hanna, 472-4403.

The class for advanced backgammon players will begin next Wednesday, Jan. 27, and will meet for five weeks. Cost of the class is $13. The class is designed for those who know the basic rules and moves and wish to improve their games. For more information call Kay Schultz, 472-1458.

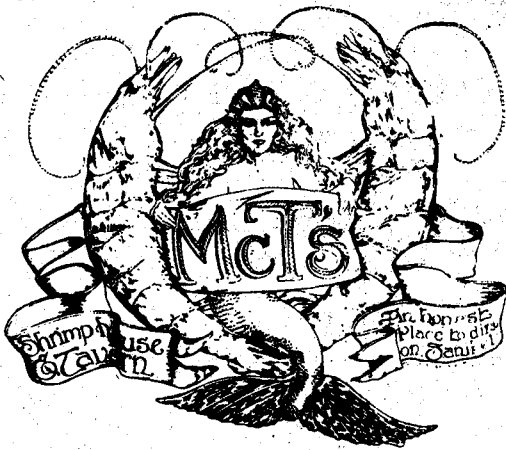

Next week in The Islander read about more Community Courses that will begin later this winter, including Bird Identification, Meet the Masters (music appreciation), and Beginning and Advanced Needlepoint.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

The month of January leaves a great deal to be desired. Those of us who made New Year's resolutions often associate January with the agony and frustration of hasty retreat and ignoble defeat. Those of us who did not make any resolutions at all (having become rather partial to our vices, or else quite inured to them) may still suffer pangs of guilt this month -- simply because we failed to make any effort at self-improvement.

Thus if you tried and failed, or failed to try, January is probably not your favorite month. Even those who made a resolution and have stuck to it (so far) will soon become unhinged by thoughts of the annual income tax.

One good method of coping with the January doldrums is to inveigh against conditions over which one has no control. Any contemplation of the follies of others is bound to be gratifying. Islanders can draw considerable comfort from complaining about a wide range of circumstances over which we have no control. January is clearly the time to write poignant letters to the editor -- or to indulge in the less taxing pastime of wishful thinking.

Plagiarize at will from the following baker's dozen:

1. I do not want to know anything more about interval ownership, time sharing or vacations by the bite, and I most certainly do not want to spend a week in solitary confinement with someone I love -- and will probably end up despising due to unrelenting proximity.

2. I want to know how I can possibly get around a "Rent Me" that is being pedaled most vigorously by two people in two directions -- simultaneously.

3. I do not want any more long-lost friends and blood (very thin) relatives to ask me to pick them up at the airport during the high season. (P.S. I do not want them to stay at my pad, either.)

4. I want a light where my street meets Periwinkle Way so I can at least make an educated guess as to where I live after dark.

5. I do not want the Lee County Tax Assessor to be afflicted with delusions of grandeur when he compares my one-bedroom condo on Sanibel to a private residence in Fort Myers with two bedrooms, two baths, den, two-car garage and a kidney-shaped swimming pool.

6. I want all children to be required to explain the historical significance of Marco Polo before shrieking his name in vain (and ad nauseam) in our swimming pools.

7. I do not want the telephone company to administer the last rites to my phone while I am still on the line.

8. I want the air conditioning to stay on when it's 99 degrees and the No-See-Ums (tiny piranhas with wings) have vengeance on their minute minds.

9. I do not want to increase my car insurance premium in order to make a left turn onto, or off of, Periwinkle Way during the season.

10. I want a Chinese restaurant to locate on Sanibel, serving inexpensive meals, inexpensive carry-out and no fresh grouper or Key lime pie.

11. I do not want anyone to ask me, "What time is it?" "Where are the best shells?" "Where's a good place to eat on the Island?"

12. I desperately want to find a junonia.

13. I do not want visitors to be mad at us because we fine those who park on our lawns, when more free public parking is available now than ever before.

Sanibel exhibit is homecoming for contemporary artist

By David Meardon

Sunday's opening of "In + Out City Limits: 6 Cities' 40" at the Photographer's Gallery was a homecoming for contemporary artist and Captiva resident Robert Rauschenberg.

Nearly two years ago, the first of six "City Limits" series, "In + Out City Limits: Fort Myers, FL," opened at the gallery -- the artist's first photographic show in the United States.

Since then, exhibits of Rauschenberg's photographic impressions of five other American cities -- Charleston, S.C., Boston, Baltimore, Los Angeles, and New York -- have been presented in each respective city. The Sanibel exhibit consists of selected prints from each of the six cities.

"I'm not a studio artist," Rauschenberg said in an interview with the Islander on Saturday. "My work has always been addressed to communities and (their) responses, more than to art books and art history."

Rauschenberg took some of the photographs for the "City Limits" series during a trip from Long Island to Captiva in a 1936 Phaeton Ford. Driving down the coast at a rate of 10-50 miles each day, he would stop to photograph what interested him along the way. Happy to be able to indulge in the luxury of travel with no timetable, Rauschenberg said he returns to Captiva from such trips "totally renourished."

Rauschenberg considers himself a photojournalist "just like I consider myself a painterjournalist. Photography has heightened my sensitivity about painting, which is also about looking," he said.

"I love sharing images. There is something stubbornly permanent about painting. Even at the time you perceive something, it has already changed." With photography, however, "I can share one split second," he said.

While he feels the artist's view through a camera is no more objective than painting, he says with photography, there is "a common language because you are dealing with real images, whereas painting is often so abstract you need additional information to understand it." Of his "City Limits" series, Rauschenberg said some people are skeptical of his ability to capture a city in just one brief visit. Other seasoned city dwellers, however, will look at his images and say: "Where is that? I've lived here all my life and I've never seen that."

Rauschenberg feels his photographs "help people living in the city, after they're bored by it, to see the city fresh again."

Many of Rauschenberg's photographs in the exhibit are as much a study of contrasting moods as they are a view of contrasting forms and textures. A busy criss-cross of telephone wires in front of a clapboard church fails to dominate the simple sign on the steeple, "Jesus Saves." The well-known HOLLYWOOD sign is almost obscured in the background of a clutter of trees, signs, telephone poles, and a fence in the foreground.

A view from a room at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York pits an unmade bed against an architectural landmark, the domed St. Bartholomew's Church and an orderly of-fice-like building in the background.

"I deliberately try to miss the commercial critical cliches," Rauschenberg said of his "City Limits" series.

He counts Aaron Siskind, who studied photography along with him at Black Mountain College, North Carolina, as one of his influences. "He was one of the first to go after the walls and peeling paint and graffiti," Rauschenberg said. "Walker Evans is my favorite photographer," he added.

The exhibit at the Photographers' Gallery continues through Feb. 26. Posters from each exhibit as well as books on Rauschenberg's photography are available at the gallery.

Sanibel-Captiva ABWA endorses ERA

The Sanibel-Captiva Chapter of the American Business Women's Association last week overwhelmingly endorsed ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment following a talk by ERA advocate Catherine Battista.

That decision, rendered at their recent monthly meeting, came on the heels of a double blow last Wednesday, one in Oklahoma and the other in Illinois, where legislative ruling changes critical to ERA failed to gain passage.

In Oklahoma, the State Senate refused by a narrow margin (27-21) to ratify the change. "This is fairly typical," Ms. Battista said. "The last time the ERA was voted on by the Florida Legislature (1979) it was defeated by only three votes."

Despite what the opponents say, local ERA supporters feel the issue is still very much alive and say they will continue to fight.

According to Ms. Battista, "A change in a few key legislators' votes will bring equality to women. We must continue to pour letters into the state capital.

The fact that women earn 59 cents for every dollar a man earns is a century old issue, she said. "The sex segregation of women into low paying jobs goes back to the early 1900's when the industrial revolution produced a permanent factory population.

"During this Golden Age of Inventions," she continued. "The sewing machine was a boon to the housewife, but became a curse to the hired seamstress. The labor that women did for 40 cents an hour was now worth eight cents an hour. But they had no choice but to stay on."

Women working in the airless "sweat shops" with no ventilation or even windows became a bottomless pool of cheap labor. The paternalistic attitude still prevails today toward women in the workforce, she said.

The immigrants who formed the "huddled masses" in the tenements of New York came to escape hunger, poverty and bigotry. They expected to find gold in the streets, but instead found poor sanitation, garbage spilling in doorways, rat bites and vermin.

One woman who stands out in this period is Lillian Wald, a registered nurse who was later placed in the Hall of Fame for Great Americans. Miss Wald ran the famed Henry Street Settlement and knew that the number one common enemy was poverty.

Like other women of the era, Miss Wald knew that the only way to bring about social reform was through the political system and through the labor movement.

Miss Wald's name became associated with trade unions because she went into the tenements of New York and as she administered nursing care to the sick, hungry and the poor, encouraging them to organize.

Miss Wald arbitrated in strikes, sat on the Board of Sanitary Control and pleaded for playgrounds and housing reforms.

According to Lillian Wald, "The enemy was strong and the obstacles great," but she said, "We can do a lot if we organize."

Like so many other women of the era, Miss Wald knew that the 14th Amendment wasn't enough to bring about needed social change. They needed the right to vote and legal equality.

Lillian Wald, R.N., evolved into a feminist, working for the right to vote which did not become a reality until 1920.

"So here we are," Ms. Battista said last week, "some 60 odd years later still fighting for legal equality. I think we have earned it!"

Ceil Williams, ABWA president, was authorized to send letters to all Florida representatives in the name of the organization to urge support of the amendment.

Wasson named manager at savings and loan

By Peggy Dailey

Sanibel resident Field K. Wasson Jr. is the new manager of the Island's First Federal Savings and Loan effective Jan. 1.

Wasson, a native of Siloam Springs, Ark., graduated from Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., in 1980, with a bachelor's degree in Economics and Psychology.

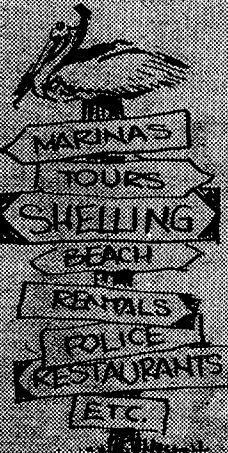

He joined First Federal in Fort Myers in October 1980 and was in a management trainee program until he was appointed to his current position.

He took over the position of Bill Hatcher, who left to join the brokerage firm of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, and Smith in Fort Myers. The rest of the staff of First Federal Sanibel remain the same, according to Wasson.

Wasson is a member of the Lions Club of Sanibel.

This year, Little League play and teams will be Island-only. Registration will begin in a week or two for boys baseball and girls softball (ages 9-13) and Peewee T-ball (ages 6-9).

Anyone interested in participating in Little League should contact Muench at 472-2812.

Goss, however, saw three advantages to including the regulation.

"It will satisfy complaints and let applicants know what's expected, place a further control on the intensity of use, and maintain equity among all types of businesses," Goss said "Its disadvantages are its potential for confusion and do we really need it," he added.

Councilman Duane White said he liked the formula as a means of control.

Councilman Mike Klein said he did not understand "what it will do for us."

"From figures I have seen it will allow for more seats for some restaurants than they have right now," he said.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers acknowledged the formula could be removed and the city would still have reasonable control (of restaurant expansion).

Gail Boyd, half-owner of the Post Office Deli, said if the 60-square-foot rule is passed she will lose 10 seats in her 30-seat restaurant.

"Everyone knows a 20-seat restaurant is economically unfeasible," she said. "My only alternative is to expand my take-out business, which I don't think you will like," she told the council.

The creation of two new Commercial Districts will solve the problems of most of the lawfully existing uses, which under the new regulations would not be able to build back if more than 50 percent destroyed, Goss said.

"But there are still a couple that are causing us problems," he said. "Priscilla Murphy's Realty office on Causeway Road is one. It is completely surrounded by government land. Shell Island Realty is another that troubles me."

But the council agreed to permit a 10-year grace period for the properties remaining as lawfully existing uses and maintain the status quo until the new rules go into effect in 1990.

The Boxing Day Monster:

Sanibel's
uncommon
Common
Iguana

Iguana iguana

Iguana iguana

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

In this series we have often commented about exotics — those alien animals and plants that people have moved from where they are native to this much-abused little Island. Most exotics spell trouble, but the exciting creature I saw on Boxing Day at the Bailey Tract really is not troublesome at all and is, in fact, a fascinating faunal frosting on Sanibel's wildlife cake.

At dawn the day after Christmas, Barbara Thompson, who often stays at the Island Inn, called to say that there was a four-foot-long Green Iguana at the second Bailey Tract pond, lying on the shore near the Red Mangrove prop root reticulum. Mrs. Thompson had tried to call on Christmas when she first saw the animal, late in the day, but was only able to convey the news next morning. Thus I had little hope of sighting the rare animal but about 8 a.m. I went to the Bailey Tract to try.

The beast proved very easy to find. All I did was follow Barbara's clear directions and sure enough, the stout, four-foot green monster with armored claws and dragon-like dorsal fringe on top was lying on the mini-beach. The day was already warm, but foggy, for as you will recall the weather was mild, muggy and damp during the Christmas Calm.

The Iguana was hard to see in the early morning foggy light. He looked as though he wore a collar, but that was an illusion. Barbara's report indicated that he might be in poor health. I couldn't see his eyes clearly enough to make a judgment.

Altogether that Boxing Day I got more than the usual amount of exercise, for I made several trips to get better equipment as well as other people to witness the sighting.

Soon I had Questar on target. Now Questar, my favorite optical instrument, will focus on a bee in a tree at three miles and bring her so close that you fear you will be stung on the nose! So when you need to see something CLEARLY, use Questar.

Questar gave an image of a clear-eyed big lizard, plump and healthy. If you really want to judge a lizard's health, look him straight in the eye. If the eye is clear and bright he is all right; if dull and half-closed with sticky, he has problems.

My opinion of the animal's good condition was further reinforced when John and Barbara Lester showed up and said they had seen the beast in a different place and position on Christmas morning.

I have long studied our small but seemingly durable Green Iguana population. Hundreds of thousands of little ones have been brought into the United States over the years through the port of Miami. Most have been shipped to the pet trade in the north, where the vast majority have died of neglect, chill or poor diet. But some few manage to escape.

Those that escape in the north die with the advent of cold weather. The comparatively small proportion of the total that are retained in South Florida's pet trade have a different story to tell.

Escapees hereabouts can become established and grow to a huge size, and did the Boxing Day Monster, for although South Florida is a lot colder than the jungles of Colombia or Trinidad, the animals do survive and thrive by submerging on cold nights. Water changes temperature more slowly than does air, and hence can be a thermoregulatory haven.

Those Iguanas that are on the eastern end of Sanibel have had to face a different threat — sea walls. Some are known to have drowned, being unable to scale a wall after taking refuge in the walled canals of Shell Harbor. The best known one, Georges, was the pride of Gracie Whitehead. When still a bright green baby, Georges was worn as a corsage to many a Sanibel party. He met his end as a young adult one cold spell a few years ago, trapped by a sea wall.

The Common or Green Iguana, whose proper name is Iguana iguana, grows to be six and one half feet long! Its name belies its present status, for so many babies are shipped and so many adults are eaten by people that in many parts of its natural range it is hard to find a big one the size of the Boxing Day Monster.

Youngsters are bright green or blue gray. Older ones are darker green with darker shoulder bands and also bands on the tail. There is a soft, spiny ridge down the back.

Though these vegetarians are blunt-nosed for grazing, they do not hesitate to bite and can cut your hand clean to the bone.

Immense claws on the hind feet can seriously lacerate your arm if you grasp a big one by the neck. The tail is also a formidable whip. Altogether the Green Iguana has a weapon system to be reckoned with.

The worst possible Iguana situation is the one I found myself in one day at The Bocas in Trinidad. A big six-foot Green Iguana had crashed noisily out of a tree, landing at my feet. I had only an instant to grab, for such a warmed-up, hyperactive beast will take off and crash rapidly away through the jungle if you don't act immediately. I did.

I grabbed for his neck and managed to put a thumb in his mouth. I got my arm badly scratched and my face whipped with the swinging, lashing tail. What's more, when I gave up, he didn't, and still held on to my thumb. To this day it bears the scars.

The Green Iguana belongs to a great lizard family that includes many of the lizards of the Americas. Fourteen genera and 44 species are native to the United States. In all of the Americas there are 60 genera and 628 species. Due to the forces and marvels of plate tectonics, there are representatives also in Fiji and Madagascar. On Sanibel the best-known Iguanids are the Green Anole, Anole carolinensis, and the Brown Anole, Anolis sagrei. The former is native and diminishing in number; the latter is exotic, being native to the Bahamas, Cuba and Jamaica, and is by far the most plentiful lizard on Sanibel.

Iguanids communicate and defend territories by displaying the dewlap (or chin flap), bobbing their heads and by doing "push-ups." Some species threaten each other by gaping the mouth, hissing and making threatening lunges. Color change is a common phenomenon among members of this family.

Usually the St. George who detests and tries to eliminate the alien species, I am a protector of our Sanibel Dragons and delighted that the Boxing Day Monster made an appearance.

Author LeBuff speaks at Conservation Center

By Peggy Dailey

Charles LeBuff, local author and expert on the loggerhead sea turtle, spoke to a large group at the Conservation Center at the Tuesday at the Center program last week.

LeBuff, one of the founders of Caretta, Inc., the Island organization that studies and protects loggerheads said his interest in the large turtles started when he was in high school. He said he was at a beach party one night when a loggerhead turtle crawled out of the water. Some of the rowdy party-goers wanted to kill the reptile, but he talked them out of it.

"There has been a drastic decline in the loggerhead's population," he said. "It is approaching the endangered level."

Loggerheads are found on most areas of the Island, "from old Bailey's to Blind Pass, wherever it may be," he said.

Loggerheads are very large -- the biggest ever weighed on Sanibel was a whopping 952 pounds, he said. The turtles eat some vegetation but mainly thrive on small crabs, especially stone crabs, LeBuff said.

Male loggerheads are distinguished by a spiny projection at the end of their tails. Females are easily frightened and can be scared away by as little as a person lighting a cigarette nearby.

The females cry large tears while laying their eggs, purely for endocrinological reasons. They may nest several times -- the largest recorded series of nests in one season was nine for one single female -- but the eggs are often destroyed by small predators or sea oat roots. The world's record for one season of egg-laying is 917 eggs, LeBuff said.

The largest distance a tagged loggerhead traveled was from Sanibel to Melbourne, Australia, over a period of about two years, LeBuff said.

Further information on the loggerhead sea turtle is available in LeBuff's book, which is one sale at the Conservation Center store.

Today at the center Hal Harrison will speak on Nesting Birds on Sanibel. Next Tuesday Islanders Fritz and Norma Stoppelbein will present a program on fish and fishing.

All Tuesday at the Center programs begin at 2 p.m. at the Conservation Center on San-Cap Road. Admission is free for SCCF members and $1 for others. Seating is limited, so plan to arrive early.

CROW's year a success

By Hollie Davies

Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife

Through the perseverance and hard work of many loyal and dedicated contributors, 1981 proved to be a year of great progress for CROW.

Soon we will move from the Captiva home of Adelaide Cherbonnier, which has served as CROW's temporary home for nearly five years, to our new, just completed facility on Sanibel.

With the acquisition of CROW's new home, our attentions and efforts can more be directed toward the rehabilitation of wildlife, education, research, volunteer and university programs.

In 1981 CROW administered aid to more than 470 wildlife patients. All came to CROW injured, orphaned or ill, and many of their problems were due to man related incidents.

For instance, thoughtlessly discarded fishing line and plastic six-pack holders caused many injuries, particularly to seabirds like Brown pelicans and gulls. We had one little Screech Owl patient this year from Fort Myers that managed to get monofilament wrapped tightly around its leg.

Some of CROW's patients were hit by cars, others were shot, and some were victims of malicious intent on the part of some people, who for reasons which escape us, apparently get their jollies from throwing rocks and other missiles and the wildlife that inhabit our area. We like to think that this sort of destructive activity can be attributed to a few unenlightened souls, but these incidents occur far more frequently than we care to see.

Fortunately, more than 180 of CROW's patients last year recovered from their injuries to be released back to the wild.

Unfortunately, 140 were sadly too far gone upon arrival at CROW to be treated and were either dead on arrival, died shortly after their arrival or had to be euthanized because their injuries were so extensive.

Nearly 40 other wildlife patients were unable to be released because of their permanently debilitating injuries. Many of these were placed with other state and federally permitted facilities to be used in special breeding programs. Others were placed in nature centers, wildlife parks or zoos in educational exhibits that serve to familiarize and educate many people not only with the beauty of our native Floridian wildlife but with the increasing problems wildlife face in their rapidly changing and disappearing environments.

CROW handled 84 species of wildlife last year including the endangered Southern Bald Eagle, the White pelican, the River Otter, the Florida Shotshell Turtle, the Brown pelican, the White Ibis, the Barn Owl and the Chimney Swift to name just a few.

Well over 1,000 calls were made to CROW in 1981. These were most often calls for help or advice concerning wildlife. CROW also took part in the planning of the "critter crossings" built last summer on the Sanibel-Captiva Road. The crossing were built at five locations where large numbers of road kills have been sighted in the past. These large pipes are placed beneath the road and provide wild animals with a safe path across the road.

Although we at CROW have not personally seen any animal in the process of using the critter crossings, the areas at either end of each of the crossings appear to be trodden as if many small animal feet have passed that

This unique canal home is certainly one of the best investments on this beautiful Island called Sanibel!

Situated on a spacious lot in Shell Harbor, the land is seawalled and has a patio dock, leaving ample room for your own particular choice of swimming pool.

The interesting foyer gives an immediate panoramic view of the large living room on the left and another glance into gracious living to the dining area and family room on the right.

The extended "Michigan" Oakwood Model gives 3" of additional depth to both front bedrooms and the same depth to the bathroom. There is definitely an atmosphere of restfulness in all three of the elegant bedrooms decorated in soft Floridian colors and decor.

way. If anyone should see first hand any wild animal using the critter crossings, we would be happy to hear about it from you.

As our tourist season gets underway, the number of wildlife patients CROW receives naturally increases. CROW's doors are always open to injured wildlife. If you find a wild animal in distress, give CROW a call at 472-3644. We will be happy to direct you to our facility, which at this writing is still on Captiva.

Probably the best way to transport animals to CROW is the common cardboard box. With some air holes cut in it and perhaps some newspaper and an old towel in the bottom, the box affords the ailing animal calming darkness, which helps alleviate stress (for you as well as for the animal).

Boxes are particularly good for carrying injured birds, which usually appear greatly stressed when handled by humans.

If you are prone to finding injured animals or, as in some cases, injured animals are prone to finding you, it might be a good idea to keep a box, a pair of garden gloves and a towel in your car.

On Dec. 31, 1981, Bank of the Island President Jim Hermes drew the winning CROW raffle ticket. This ticket entitles the winner to the 50th week of interval ownership at the Surf Rider Condominiums on Sanibel. Elisha Camp of Sanibel won the prize, which was generously donated to CROW by Captran International.

When Camp was notified that he had won the raffle, in a truly philanthropic act, he announced he would donate his prize to CROW. Camp's support exemplifies the spirit CROW's contributors have mustered to insure that CROW's wildlife work may continue. We thank Camp for his dedication to CROW's progress.

I would like to name here some individuals and businesses that have helped make life easier for us at CROW in the last few months: Drs. Phyllis and Paul Dougless and Dr. Denis Stuppy of the Coral Veterinary Clinic, who donate their time and talents performing needed surgery on many of our wildlife patients; George Tuttle of Captiva, who designed CROW's new energy efficient facility; Bingham-Lee, who built the new center with skill and craftsmanship; K.C. Emerson; John Dickersen; Craig Shumar; Kurt Reznicek of Clock Motors and Kurt's 66 on Sanibel; Florence Fricke; John Goodro; Jane Creagh; Lee Denson; Jamie Levy; Tim Irving or Wings Wildlife T-Shirts; Jeannine and Chuck Wilson of Woody's Health Foods; Quimby's Office Supply; Captran International; Anderson T.V. of Miner's Plaza; and Island artist Ikki Matsumoto.

We thank all of you for helping CROW in many different ways to realize our goals. We ask for your continued support.

If you are not already a friend of CROW's and would like to be, please contact us at P.O. Box 150, Sanibel, FL 33957. Your dues and contributions are tax deductible and greatly appreciated.

Head for the Hills documentary film at South Seas

John Jay, America's Official Olympic Photographer at St. Moritz and raconteur second to none, will personally narrate one of his latest and funniest documentary films, Head For The Hills, at South Seas Plantation on Friday, Jan. 22, at 8 p.m.

The program will be presented in Chadwick's Lindbergh Hall and is open to the public for a $5 admission fee.

The film covers the waterfront and the mountain tops of the winter sports world from the 13,000-foot snow-clad summit Mauna Kea in Hawaii to the snow bowl of the Dark Continent at 12,000 feet in the Atlas Mountains. In between are constantly changing visual and verbal feasts such as skiers on camels in a 1,000-year-old walled city; mile-a-minute iceboats; windsurfers in action and a 20-below winter wonderland at Vail.

For more information on the film and program, contact the information center at South Seas, 472-5111, ext. 3312.

Dedications at ECC

Two special gifts to Edison Community College will be dedicated this Sunday, Jan. 24, and Monday, Jan. 25.

On Sunday, two harpsicords will be dedicated at a 5 p.m. recital in the college auditorium. The instruments are a gift of Mrs. W. Horace Williams of Sarasota in honor of her friends Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd G. Hendry of Fort Myers. Ralph, Tilden, Aileen Cripps and Margaret Pendleton will perform at the recital.

The harpsicords have hand-painted soundboards and are valued at more than $17,000. They were made by Willard Martin of Pennsylvania, an internationally recognized harpsicord builder and will be used by students of keyboard music at ECC.

On Monday, the new photographic laboratory will be officially opened. The laboratory has been made possible through a gift from Mrs. Williams in honor of her friend, wildlife photographers and former Captiva resident Elizabeth Thompson Adler of Sarasota.

The laboratory allows students to work with color and black and white. A credit course is being offered on Monday and Wednesday afternoons from 2 to 4:30 p.m. for three hours of college credit.

Professional photographers and students are invited to meet with photographer Daniel Cauche, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Adler for a tour of the laboratory at 2 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 25.

Poetry reading at Arts Center

The Lee County Alliance of the Arts presents a poetry reading by Sue Douglas at the Lee County Arts Center, 5111 McGregor Blvd., at 8 p.m. this Thursday, Jan. 21.

Ms. Douglas will read from her book, Earth Music, which is a 50-poem collection described by the poet as "a celebration of all that is feminine about the earth and all that is natural about women." The book, which is her first, was released in October and is distributed locally.

Ms. Douglas, poet, journalist, teacher, former newspaper and magazine editor, will talk about the poet and his art. She will autograph copies of Earth Music following the reading.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Beginning photography classes

Two beginning photography classes will be taught at The Photographers' Gallery this month.

One will be taught by veteran instructor Dan Chauche and will feature a disciplined approach to the camera and the darkroom including lectures on technique and style, how to expose film, how to develop film, how to print negatives and print critique.

Chauche's class will be taught on Tuesday evenings, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., for five consecutive weeks.

Fun in Photography will be led by veteran newspaper-photographer Peter Woodard. He will also teach camera and darkroom techniques, but will feature a more relaxed approach with photo projects.

Both classes will cost $50 for five, 2 1/2-hour sessions. Members fees are $40.

To sign up, and for more information, call the Gallery at 472-5777 or visit at 1554 Periwinkle Way.

Robert York exhibit

An exhibition of the latest work of Robert York opened Sunday, Jan. 17, at The Schoolhouse Gallery. The exhibition continues through Jan. 30 daily except Sundays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

York, a native of Virginia who has lived and worked in Florida for the past 10 years, teaches at Edison Community College. His work can be described as abstract although his subjective forms and bright colors are suggestive of the lush landscapes of Southwest Florida. His most recent works are executed in acrylic, watercolor, pen and ink and small welded sculpture.

Musical comedy plays at Exhibition Hall

The Most Happy Fella, the musical adaption by Frank Loesser of the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, They Knew What They Wanted, will be presented at the Fort Myers Exhibition Hall on Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 8:15 p.m.

The show, which contains a record breaking 35 gay and stirring songs, was a Broadway hit for 86 weeks.

The Most Happy Fella was written by Frank Loesser, author of the songs in Guys and Dolls and Where's Charley? and hundreds of other popular ditties such as "Baby, It's Cold Outside" and "I've Got Spurs that Jingle Jangle Jingle."

During its long Broadway run, The Most Happy Fella was particularly applauded as one of the few instances on record of a big musical show having been entirely authored by one man.

Of even more significance, it was believed to be the first real combination of the best features of musical comedy and opera. Utilizing the impishly light touch, the gaiety and tunefulness usually associated with musical comedy, Loesser also put into his score the emotional turbulence and melodic tones of opera - and let his story be told almost entirely in lyrical terms.

The show is a musical all the way through, with hardly any straight spoken dialogue.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights. Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy. At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island

Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

FISHING

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" x 24" x 12" deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights! Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets. For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.

What in the world... can you do on an island?

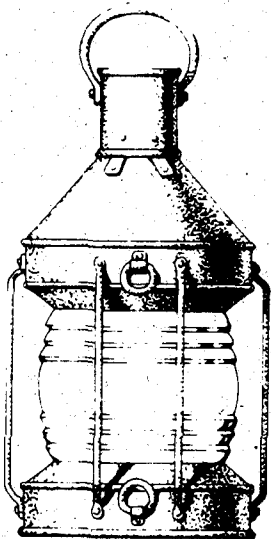

SAFETY HARBOR CLUB

First, you relax — relax as you have never been able to before. Just lay back and enjoy the seclusion that only an out-island can give you.

Then when you do want to do something, deciding may be the hardest part. Swim in the warm Gulf waters, take a sail, look for shells, fish for snook. Just do as you please. Nobody minds. You're on an island.

Safety Harbor Club offers waterfront homesites on the out-island of North Captiva in a setting that is still untrampled by tourists and almost untouched by the outside world.

For boaters, docking facilities will be available and there's easy access to the Gulf of Mexico and the Intercoastal Waterway. Jaunt off to nearby Cabbage Key for dinner if you like. Embarkation points for North Captiva are Captiva Island, Boca Grande or Pine Island.

Safety Harbor Club residents will also enjoy a swimming pool, tennis courts and clubhouse to make the selection of things to do even more varied. Whether you want to be lazy or lively, the decision is yours at Safety Harbor Club.
