City accepts Lighthouse terms

By Barbara Brundage

The city of Sanibel Monday assumed management of the Sanibel Lighthouse property from the U.S. Coast Guard under an interim agreement unanimously approved by the City Council at a specially-called meeting last Friday afternoon.

The property has been used for several years by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as its headquarters, but its personnel moved last week to the recently completed Visitor's Center at the J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge.

City Manager Bernie Murphy has been actively negotiating with the Coast Guard since last November for a management agreement that would insure continued public access to the Point Ybel recreational beach area at the eastern tip of the Island. The city will take over the operation and maintenance of the two buildings on the property that with the Lighthouse itself are listed in the National Register of Historic Sites. The takeover will be on an interim basis until a 10-year lease agreement is finalized, probably in a month or six weeks, Murphy said.

Council approves plans for Paulsen shopping center

By Barbara Brundage

Finding itself "between a rock and a hard place," the City Council last Tuesday approved a compromise agreement that will permit Jerry Paulsen to build a 41,000-square-foot shopping center on Periwinkle Way near Casa Ybel Road. The shopping center at that location has "community-wide opposition."

The center will include a 25,000-square-foot grocery store with the remainder of the space occupied by resident-oriented retail shops.

"It is not a happy choice," Mayor Porter Goss commented after the council voted 3-1 to accept a Fact Finding Committee's recommendation for the out-of-court settlement of the Paulsen lawsuit against the city.

"It's a choice between two unhappinesses," he added.

Paulsen's original plans called for a 53,000-square-foot center and were twice denied by the Planning Commission on the grounds that the project was of too great a magnitude for the Island's human support system to maintain.

Grassroots opposition based on the belief that Sanibel does not need another shopping center culminated in a petition of protest signed by 1,000 island residents.

Last April the council denied Paulsen's specific amendment calling for clarification of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and a determination if his plans for the center were in compliance.

Councilman Fred Valtin, who voted against accepting the recommendation, said he was "saddened" that Paulsen had persisted "in the face of community opposition." He acknowledged, however, that the Minnesota developer, a part time resident of Sanibel, had "every right to do so."

Valtin said he was as firmly convinced as ever that, "This is the wrong location for a project of this size and intensity of use."

Councilman Francis Bailey, owner of Bailey's General Store, abstained from voting because of a conflict of interest.

Paulsen, who was present with architect Ray Fenton and attorney William Haverfield last Tuesday when former Planning Commissioner Betty Robinson presented the committee's report to the council, said he had agreed to the 16 conditions of the settlement.

The city planning staff did not support the inclusion of 12 Below Market Rate Housing units, some to be reserved for employee

Kayakers set worldly goal, plan for 10-year paddle

By David Meardon

If the plans of kayakers Chris Rubino and Donnie Craig are realized, a book on their adventures could be titled Around the World in 3,650 Days.

That is the goal of these two sportsmen, who have set out to conquer the world by kayak, a task they expect to take all of 10 years.

Rubino and Craig have spent the last week exploring Sanibel and attempting to enlist sponsor support for their ambitious venture.

Starting in Charleston, S.C. on Sept. 21, the pair already has 675 miles behind them. At an average of about 20 miles a day, their place in the Guinness Book of World Records

Shell Fair

Despite heavy rains that dampened both weekend days of the 1982 Sanibel Shell Show, shell scientists and artists and admirers from around the country flocked to the Community Association for the show.

More than 20,000 visitors arrived on the Island for the 45th annual fair between Thursday, March 4, and Sunday, March 7. Many of the visitors took advantage of regular trolley rides to the fair from the Chamber of Commerce. Even so, traffic along Periwinkle Way was slow at best during most of the fair.

This year's Sanibel Shell Show was chaired by Sue Stephens. Workshops at which shell craft items were made for the show were led by Art and Kay Ford. Helen Jans coordinated the live shell exhibit that was outside the Community Association hall.

Peggy Bennett picked up a blue ribbon for her display of shells on coral.

Criticizing parking as deterrent for tourists

To the Editor
The Islander

"Sanibel" — the Island where cares are forgotten.

As a regular "visitor" or "tourist" to your precious Island, I find the natives are very restless. Parking at public entrances is no longer public. Permits are required even of permanent residents.

Sanibel does not own the Gulf or the right of way on the roads, although (the city) can petition off certain areas where Public Access is available to the general public (as long as they reside here).

It seems the "City Fathers" are unaware of the means of their continued existence! No tourists — no income — and the people who frequent the Island are the ones who make it possible for the Island to exist (financially).

When "we" quit coming to this "place apart," how are you going to be able to meet your budget? You are literally cutting off our water.

Federal Courts may take a different interpretation of your so-called protection of residents.

Personally, I feel you are driving us all away. We have never obstructed traffic (not half as much as your marked off "places").

I don't understand your thinking on this matter.

Suggesting alternate for Summerlin Parkway

To the Editor
The Islander

Please don't let the Lee County Commission saddle yours and my Road 869 with the name Jake Summerlin S.W. Parkway. Mr. Summerlin did stay in Punta Rassa at intervals to buy, sell and ship cattle to Cuba. His home and family were in Polk County.

Capt. F.A. Hendry of Fort Myers and LaBelle built those shipping pens and let others ship there also. The fee was $10 per head. In 1878 he sold his interest to Jacob Summerlin for $10,000. Five years later it was said Summerlin retired at his Polk County home and died there in 1893.

Yes, Mr. Summerlin did have a large house built on stilts for cattlemen and buyers to meet at and rest up while waiting for the boats to arrive, but so many others did so much more for that trade.

Why don't we use Commissioner Roland Roberts' suggestion and call the road 869 S.E. Parkway?

As you may know the International Ocean Telegraph Co. (often called the Cuban Cable Co.) really did more by coming in after our barracks were moved farther up the river.

Sincerely
Paul Duke

HOWE NOW!

By Paul Howe

One who regularly observes the obvious legal posturings at Sanibel's MacKenzie hall cannot but wonder whether our city officials are overly prone to bulldozing by adroit land developers.

The growing number of "out-of-court" settlements of disputes involving the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan is frightening. Such dispositions may be a more economical and expeditious way to stem the rising tide of lawsuits; but they do little to clearly and finally establish the city's right to adopt and properly administer Florida's most unique land use plan.

It is paradoxical for the city to continue year after year to spend a substantial portion of its mounting budget in preparing to defend its CLUP decisions in the courtroom and then turn to "fact finding" negotiations to avoid the bar of justice.

Somehow it seems incongruous that our city fathers should tolerate the threats of objectors to our best laid plan; and then, at great expense (shared by the voluntary contributions from concerned citizens), keep in the wings the prestigious Chicago law firm that supplied the legal underpinning for Florida's land use planning laws.

One the other hand, are we sure that some of our more zealous city officials are not naively making Sanibel vulnerable to charges of engaging in what our local Circuit Court recently identified as unconstitutional contract zoning by the county? That practice, akin to "Simony" in canonical law, consists of requiring a developer to do something not required of others similarly situated so that he may obtain approval of his project. There have been sub-rosa expressions of fear for such vulnerability that should be heeded.

Regretfully, it would be a tragic disaster for Sanibel's CLUP to founder on either of the twin sins of litigious strongarming and contract zoning. A prompt review of their game plan seems in order for our city fathers. Good luck to them!

1982 Sanibel directories go on sale

Sanibel's 1982 city phone directories are off the presses and available from various Island merchants. The books arrived last Thursday at the Sanibel Police Department and went on sale Monday. The Police Recreation Club volunteered the time and manpower to put the directory together.

This year's directory, which is longer than the 1981 directory, boasts a sketch of the ill-fated Algiers steamboat on the cover. The drawing is by Sgt. Lew Phillips.

Islanders can purchase the up-dated phone books at local stores for $5. All proceeds from the sale of the directories will go to the city's new Recreation Complex.

Commissioner Roeder attends council meeting, intergovernmental communication beginning

Lee County Commissioner Mike Roeder paid a visit to the Sanibel City Council last week the first step in opening the line of communication between the two governmental entities.

Mayor Porter Goss, who has long advocated establishment of an intergovernmental policy mechanism to facilitate orderly planning countywide, was pleased with the county's first response to the need.

Roeder, who represents Sanibel's interests on the County Commission, was on hand to discuss a proposed county Reciprocal Land Use agreement that promises to provide advance notice to Sanibel and the other cities within the county of any changes in land use or development proposed by the county.

Under the agreement the cities will be permitted to review and comment, but it was emphasized that the review would be only "advisory in nature."

Roeder pointed out that the agreement in its current form is "not the last word."

After a lengthy discussion of Sanibel's primary concern - overdevelopment of the McGregor corridor that is increasing traffic problems and is a threat to Sanibel's evacuation route - the council agreed to support the agreement.

The document with staff comments will be returned to County Administrator Lavon Wisner.

Roeder said the county is setting up a new development code and the commission will defer any action on rezoning along the new 869 highway until it is completed.

Goss said traffic problems and evacuation are not the only areas of Sanibel's concern. He said he would like Sanibel to have input on any project that might impact the Island.

As examples he cited the new regional jetport and the problem of sewage disposal in the Caloosahatchee River.

Planner sees need for quick development of plan for 'town center'

It is not yet too late to develop a master plan for a "Town Center" in the Palm Ridge area as recommended in the newly adopted commercial development plan, Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane assured the City Council last week.

"But it will be soon," he said and urged the council to retain Stewart Corporation Architects to design the strategy.

Duane pointed out that precepts for the study include defining incentives to encourage development of the whole Palm Ridge area, east of Tarpon Bay Road and south to Periwinkle Way, by consolidation of ownership of vacant property remaining.

Councilmen Duane White and Mike Klein were concerned that the ownership pattern may already "be too well defined" to permit change.

J. Benton Stewart, architect for the new City Hall, said the proposed master plan will develop a linkage between Palm Ridge and the municipal complex. It will establish a development scenario to coordinate pedestrian, bicycle and vehicular access, public parking and open space as well as set criteria for lighting, signage and general image of the area.

City Council and Planning Commission input would be solicited from the outset and incorporated into the planning process, City Manager Bernie Murphy told the council.

Councilman Francis Bailey expressed enthusiasm for the project. "I'm very much in favor," he said. "It's never too late, and property owners who can see a plan for what's proposed will be more likely to be talked into making changes."

The council voted 5-0 to authorize Murphy to enter into a contract for the master plan study with Stewart Architects for a fee of $4,425.

Pittsfield company awarded contract for bridge construction

A contract to construct a bridge for pedestrian access to Bowman's Beach has been awarded to Pittsfield Construction Inc. of Punta Gorda, which submitted the low bid of $49,800.

The City Council unanimously approved the contract at last week's council meeting.

The cost of the project had been estimated at $74,000 by the city's consulting engineer. Nine bids were received that ranged as high as $87,000, City Manager Bernie Murphy reported to the council last week.

The bridge design will permit use by emergency vehicles including ambulances and maintenance vehicles, Public Works Director Gary Price said.

The bridge is the first phase of a joint project with Lee County for development of Bowman's Beach as a regional park.

Sanibel and the county have each contributed $50,000 for funding improvements that also include upgrading the parking lot and constructing restrooms and a ticket booth.

"This bid, lower than expected, leaves us $50,000 to fund the restrooms and other amenities," Murphy said.

Petition convinces council that boat ramp is wanted

A petition signed by 468 Islanders has convinced the City Council there is interest in a free public boat launching ramp on Sanibel.

The city staff has been instructed to investigate potential sites and costs of construction for a ramp to fill the need for a potential 17.88 launchings per day, according to the petition. The staff will also look into the possibility of applying for boat registration funds available from Lee County to finance the project.

David Owen has been trying to persuade the city fathers since last April that boat owners are entitled to the same consideration as resident bicyclists who have been provided a network of bike paths and swimmers who have a free swimming pool from taxpayers funds.

He told the council last Tuesday that Sanibel is the only city in southwest Florida that does not have a free boat ramp.

Fritz Stoppelbein, a member of Lee County's Marine Advisory Committee, said $120,083.44 is available right now for the project, subject to committee approval.

Long-time Island boater Ralph Woodring suggested that the islands on the Sanibel Causeway would be the best place for the ramp. "The problem with the winds could be solved by having ramps on both sides," Woodring said.

Councilman Francis Bailey pointed out that since Sanibel is an island community a boat ramp would be most appropriate.

"We should proceed forthwith," he said, adding, "There is no way to have complete equity."

Committee organized to negotiate for continued library funding

A committee composed of City Councilman Mike Klein, City Attorney Neal Bowen, City Manager Bernie Murphy and George Tenney representing the Sanibel Public Library has been named by the City Council to negotiate an agreement for Lee County to continue funding the Sanibel Library from county library taxes.

The current interlocal agreement with the county expires Sept. 30, 1982, Murphy told the council last week. Under that agreement in 1981 the city received more than $34,000 from the county for the operation of the library. That sum represents 84 percent of the library taxes collected from Sanibel property owners, Murphy said.

In 1980, before the agreement went into effect, the city received only $15,000 from the county to fund the library.

The city is still seeking a legal means to exempt Sanibel from the county tax levy and permit the city to collect its own library tax, Murphy said.

Tenney told the council the only solution to the double taxation dilemma is through state legislative process.

Last June County Administrator Lavon Wisner notified the city that both the county legal staff and the state Department of Community Affairs questioned the constitutionality of such a move.

In the meantime an interlocal agreement will insure continued library funding from the county, Murphy said.

The council voted unanimously to negotiate the extension of the current agreement for at least another two years.

Wulfert Point trial could be delayed

Should the plaintiffs in the Chianelli law suit turn down the city's offer for a density of one dwelling unit per acre on their 415-acre parcel on Wulfert Point at the western end of Sanibel Island, trial in Lee County Circuit Court will not begin until Aug. 1, City Attorney Neal Bowen informed the City Council last week.

A City Council-appointed Fact Finding Committee has recommended 415 units for the site as a compromise between the 46 units permitted under the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan and the 1,600 units the developers applied for six years ago when plans for developing the tract were initiated.

June 1 was originally set as the date for beginning the trial. Because of the complicated nature of the suit, the trial is expected to last from one month to six weeks.

Bowen said Circuit Judge James Thompson extended the starting date of the trial to give the plaintiffs more time to consider the city's offer.

John Ruth, who with attorney Jim Spiotto represented the six owners of the Wulfert tract during negotiations with the city, perfunctorily said "no" to the 415 unit figure.

But Spiotto said he would discuss the city's proposals with his clients.

Bowen told the council members last Tuesday he wanted them to know at once of the change in the trial date so they could adjust their vacation plans.

The five councilmen, six current planning commissioners and former planning commissioner Judy Workman, all named defendants in the suit, had been alerted to be available during the month of June to testify while the trial was in progress.

Council's denial halts further intrusion of resort use into residential districts

To stop further intrusion of resort use into residential districts, the City Council last week denied on first reading David Kelly's request for a specific amendment to allow residents of two nearby condominiums share the swimming pool and tennis court at a single-family residence north of West Gulf Drive.

Kelly told the council that B.K.L. Partnership holds the White Caps and Duggers' Tropical Village condominiums and the newly built home in common ownership.

White Caps and Tropical Village converted to condominium ownership last year are both lawfully existing resort uses.

Mayor Porter Goss and Councilman Mike Klein were adamant in their opposition to adding to resort use on the north side of Gulf Drive by allowing residents of the 16 condominium units to use a family pool.

Klein's motion to deny passed by a 3-2 vote with Councilmen Francis Bailey and Fred Valtin dissenting.

Municipal Records

City Council sets April 6 for final action on specific amendments requests

The City Council declared first readings on four requests for specific amendments last Tuesday and set April 6 as the date for final action.

James Thomas wants to place a security fence along the back of his Island Garage property on Periwinkle Way less than 20 feet from a mosquito ditch.

All but 25 feet of the proposed fenced-in area is zoned for commercial use. Thomas uses the area to store wrecked cars for the Sanibel Police Department. As a public service he currently allows the trolleys to be parked there when not in use without charge.

But the council was concerned that "commercial use" would spill over into the residentially zoned area if the fence were extended across the rear of the lot.

Thomas invited the council to tour the property before the final hearing in April.

Though applicant Bird Rosen was not present at last Tuesday's hearing, the council declared a first reading on her request for a specific amendment to allow the use of sandbags as an erosion deterrent on her beachfront property in Tahiti Shores.

City Manager Bernie Murphy said he had been told that the application would be withdrawn, but efforts to contact Rosen before the meeting failed.

The Planning Commission had denied the request and suggested the sand bags, which were illegally installed without permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, be punctured.

The council found no problem with Jack Elias' request to enlarge a cement pad to provide easier access to a dumpster at the Coquina Beach condominium on Nerita Street.

The 5x8-foot extension exceeds the impermeable surface permitted at the site.

In the opinion of environmental consultant Dick Workman and coastal engineer David Tackney, rubble revetment and a groin are the best ways to stop erosion at Kenn Keim's property on Bird Lane on the bay.

Keim is seeking a specific amendment to permit the construction of an 880-square foot dock that will extend 140 feet into the bay.

Councilman Mike Klein objected to the length of the dock extending into public waters.

A canal in the nearby Sanibel Harbor subdivision was cited as the cause for continuing erosion of the shoreline.

Workman said that none of Keim's neighbors objected to the project.

"If Ellie Dormer feels it is a proper solution I guess it's o.k.," Klein conceded.

The council will make a final decision on April 6.

Council studies 'problems' with time sharing schemes

Time sharing schemes now being offered on Sanibel Island are "only the tip of the iceberg," Planning Director Bruce Rogers told the City Council last week.

And even though a general amendment to the Comprehensive Land Use Plan unveiled at a first public hearing last Tuesday night broadens the scope of the city's regulatory powers over time sharing to include sale of annual memberships, it is not a panacea for the perceived problems, the council agreed.

If the ordinance is approved on second reading at a public hearing at 5:01 p.m. March 16, a development permit will be required for conversion of dwelling units to individual time share units, and the project will be subject to all the performance standards for units of high impact, Rogers said.

City Attorney Neal Bowen, who drew up the general amendment, explained its original objective was to put Sanibel's time share law in synch with the Florida statute that went into effect last October.

As amended the ordinance folds in memberships in time share complexes that give the buyers the right to use accommodations or facilities for a period of more than three years.

Mayor Porter Goss told the council he has received a great number of complaints about the sales practices of some Island time share companies.

Another potential problem, not specifically addressed in the new ordinance, was raised by Dave Davenport, a member of the Committee of the Islands, which has expressed concern about the trend on Sanibel toward time sharing and beach club conversions.

"I can understand a motel owner wanting to book advance reservations to insure 100 per cent occupancy year around," Davenport said. "But I see the sale of social memberships that will provide beach access and privileges for $10 as a serpent."

Some Island time share organizations are selling use of their beach and other amenities without purchasing a unit, Davenport contended.

"Overuse detracts from the beach and properties on the beach," he said. "We can't build any more beaches."

"I could lease property on the gulf and sell parking spaces," Davenport added.

Goss said he realizes something must be done about the problem, but added, "This is not the document."

"We have to begin measuring the number of people, not the dwelling units on the island (to determine the intensity of use)," Goss said.

The Necklace with a Legend

While the Sand Dollar is one of the most widely known and popular of all shells, few people are aware of the pretty little legend attached to it.

Legend has it that these strange shells tell the story of Christ's suffering and his glory.

The five holes represent the five wounds of Christ. On the front the Easter Lily - its center, a five pointed star representing the Star of Bethlehem which led the shepherds from afar. On the back the outline of the Christmas Poinsettia reminds us of His birthday. When the shell is broken open, five Doves of Peace and Good Will appear.

Because of this religious legend, this fascinating creature of the sea is often referred to as the Holy Ghost shell.

Available in 14kt. gold, vermeil and sterling silver.

Beautiful memories of Sanibel that last a lifetime.

Veteran council secretary plans to join private sector

By Peggy Dailey

Carolyn Smith, secretary to the City Council since 1976, is leaving her City Hall job to become the store manager of Caloosa Canvas on Periwinkle Way.

Smith, who says she applied for the council job in 1976 simply because, "I needed work and I enjoy secretarial work," is the mother of three daughters and one son. Her husband, Peter, is a commercial artist on the Island. She is also a volunteer counselor at the Abuse Counseling and Treatment Center, Inc. in Fort Myers, which is mainly a center for abused wives and their children.

She is a Massachusetts native; her father taught Latin and English in prep schools, "and used to send back my letters from college corrected," she smiles. She took three years of secretarial studies at Ohio University and then married.

"The people I work with (at City Hall) are a very good group. We all work together well," she says. "The councilmen are five great people. One of the best parts of my job was not having to attend the council meetings, though," she admits.

"I would say that the same types of problems keep coming up -- they really haven't changed much over the last six years in terms of the letters we get. People mostly want ordinances explained in more detail," she says.

She and her husband are both interested in art, photography, and feminism.

One of the best things about being on Sanibel during the city's early years was getting in on the ground floor of the Photographer's Gallery, Smith says. "It was an idea that just grew out of people sitting around talking in the evening about what Sanibel didn't have already and what it could use."

She also was instrumental in starting the Barrier Island Group for the Arts and is a well-known "local feminist."

"I don't even see why the ERA should be an issue at all," she explains firmly. "Equal rights for all Americans should be guaranteed. It's simple justice."

"As for the attitudes of 'exceptional women' -- professional women who say, 'I made it without a law and so can you' -- I just don't understand how they can feel that way about someone who maybe didn't get the same breaks they did," she says.

Smith says her "wish" would be that she could be a psychologist. In connection with her volunteer work at the ACT center, she reads a lot of books on criminology, wife-beating and the physical and sexual abuse of children.

"It's incredibly wide-spread," she says, "and in middle-class homes as well as lower-income."

"I continue to have such great admiration of the enormous strengths of women," she says. "Many of them I know at ACT have children, no money, few job skills and very low opinions of themselves because of what they have been subjected to."

"And when they do leave their husbands, they will have to deal with many social service agencies who will treat them in a very degrading way. Yet they do finally go. They are tremendous."

job in the private sector. Smith will manage Caloosa Canvas. Photo by David Meardon.

Gifted fifth graders examine canyons, mummies, solar energy in Elementary School science fair

By David Meardon

From rainbows and volcanos to dinosaurs and mummies, youngsters at Sanibel Elementary School last week were treated to a myriad of scientific displays conceived and created by several fifth graders.

The project was part of the fifth grade gifted program headed by Deryle Peaslee, who encouraged her pupils to come up with a question or hypothesis and create a display that answered or supported each hypothesis through scientific procedure.

Heather Derowitsch was curious to find the effectiveness of different types of insulation. So she placed a light bulb and thermometer inside three identical boxes. One had no insulation, the second was lined with aluminum foil, and the third was insulated with fiberglass.

After 20 minutes, the box with no insulation was heated to 100 degrees, the foil-lined box reached 105 degrees and the fiberglass insulated box was heated to 120 degrees. Conclusion: a house insulated with fiberglass requires less energy to heat or cool, as less air leaks out.

Jill Stern also was interested in efficient use of energy, so she turned to a bountiful source: the sun. In her Light as Energy experiment, she took a solar cell made of specially coated silicon which, when struck by sunlight, produces a chemical reaction which creates an electric current.

Wiring the cell into a small motor that drove a fan, she turned the cell toward the sun. Immediately the fan started turning. Conclusion: sunlight can be harnessed to produce energy. "In the future I am sure this will be a good and inexpensive source of energy," Jill said.

Judged by Doris Morse, the library aide for the school, Jill's exhibit took first prize.

Mike Toomey became interested in canyons last year when he visited the Grand Canyon in Arizona and Utah's Bryce Canyon. His exhibit, which took second place, explained the erosion through rain, wind and water that carved these great canyons. The Colorado River, he explained, was the major force in carving the vast Grand Canyon.

The Tower Bridge at Bryce Canyon was formed about a million years ago when a tree fell and was buried by layers of sediment and finally was eroded back underneath to create the bridge, Toomey said.

A white light passed through a prism, which forms the primary colors, is the basic principle behind the creation of a rainbow, explained Susie Gelberg. Her Rainbows exhibit took third place. A rainbow is simply the combination of sunlight passing through the moisture of a raincloud to create a rainbow, she explained.

Other exhibits included Donna Schultze's explanation of volcanos, Corey Smith's exhibit of mummies of Egypt, Alice Pepe's explanation of the extinction of dinosaurs, and Kathy Magg's display of the different types of dinosaurs that once ruled the earth. Each student explained his or her work to other classes that came to view the exhibits.

Peaslee said the gifted program is "very stimulating. The children come up with some very good ideas."

"We saved the best for last!"

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

You wouldn't have believed it a few years ago, but jet travel is just about ending fishing for many Island visitors. The reason is easy enough -- you can't get a six-foot fishing rod into the first class section and if you could, what would you do with your bait bucket?

That's a problem many occasional anglers come up against, and usually they just say to hell with it and follow their wives, husbands or kids to the shelling beach instead.

One of our friends from St. Louis has a fishing rod and reel combination that folds down into the handle until it's only a foot or so long. You've probably seen these telescoping things. They are strictly light tackle, but there's not much in the waters this time of year they can't handle.

That's one way to travel with your gear. The other is to buy a two-piece rod outfit, pack it with the luggage and hope it doesn't get crunched in the process. You can always pack the reel, but getting that favorite and often expensive rod here and back home safely is enough to make an angler forget the whole idea.

I like to see as many people fishing as possible, and that includes fishing from backyard docks, piers or even along the Causeway. It's a great way to get some sun, get off by yourself and maybe even catch some fish, too. Here's a little bit of advice a friend of mine from Boca Grande passes on to me each time we leave for a fishing charter. It goes like this: "If I want to eat fish for dinner, I go to the market. If I want to have some fun, I go fishing."

So you want to get in an afternoon of angling, but where to start? I've contacted some of the area fishing shops and marinas and nearly all have rod and reel rentals.

Of course they vary in prices, some charge by the day, which could be eight hours (a working day). Others go by the hour.

Down at the Bait Box, a fishing tackle shop on Periwinkle Way near the intersection of Causeway Road on Sanibel, owner Ralph Woodring said they rent rods and reels on a 24-hour basis, ranging from as little as $5 to $10, depending upon the choice of "beginner vs. experienced" tackle.

Up at Tween Waters Marina on Captiva Island, dockmaster Dale Manor said fishing tackle goes for $2.50 per hour and $5 to $8 for half or all-day (eight hours).

Twin Palms Marina, also on Captiva Island, charges $4.50 for a half day and $7 for a full day.

There are several other marinas and bait shops that I could mention, but you can see the prices do vary a little bit. What you want to decide is how long you want to fish, then check to see which shop or marina is the closest to where you are going or staying.

One thing you are going to have to buy, however, is a good bait container. As with all the other things in the shops, there are top-of-the-line and "adequate" containers. If you are only going out once, then take the cheapest container you can find -- you might pay as little as $2. You need something that lets the water in and out so your shrimp, the usual choice for fishermen, stays alive.

There are several places to fish, such as at the free fishing pier at the Lighthouse end of Sanibel or from the beach at Turner's Beach on Captiva Island. If the Gulf of Mexico is smooth along shore and not riled up with suspended sand, then work right there in the surf.

I wish I could guarantee that you'll catch a big one, but you just have to take your chances like the rest of us and hope that the Fish God is smiling down favorably.

In the meantime, check out those clouds, the birds, the shells, the bikinis and formulate your one-that-gotta-way story for the folks back home.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

It takes a special hardened drill bit to put a hole in a shell to wear for jewelry, but there is a family of small shells in the moon snail family that make their living by drilling such holes in other shells.

The average clam shell is fairly hard, especially those with thicker layered coverings like the sun ray venus or other tellins. It takes some strength to break one, but still the several locally found moon snails feed daily upon clams and other smaller shells by drilling into the host shell and removing the meat.

While their odd way of feeding is not unique in the underwater shell world, their colors and forms are different and well worth searching for as you walk the beaches here on Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

There are really three specific kinds of moon snails that we see. However, there are many more varieties found around the world. All seem to like living on clear sand bottoms, usually in shallow waters. I've often seen live ones with their tell-tale trail in the sand, completely out of the water at a very low tide.

When you find moon snails, you'll probably find live lettered olive shells close by, too. They both like those shallow sand bars either on the sound side of the Islands or right off the beach in shallow areas.

There are three prominent moon snails that are always favorites of the shell tables. The most common is the shark's eye, called that because this shell is somewhat round and is a light grey color with a blue dot of an eye right in the center of the whorl. Hold it in the circle between your first finger and thumb and it does look somewhat like an eye.

The second kind of moon snail found locally is one of my favorites of all the shells. It's the colorful Atlantic natica and just about the most striking of all the shells commonly found on the beaches. It's got a beautiful name, but of course it's the intensity of color that attracts attention. This shell will average smaller than it's cousin, the shark's eye. A large natica might get the size of a walnut, and the finish is always shiny and clear. I've never found or seen a live one.

Our third moon snail is also a big favorite, especially with those who collect the smaller shells that are usually better in clarity anyway. This one is called the baby's ear shell, or the lady's ear shell. It is very unusual in shape because it's nearly flat. It's like one of the other moon snails, but looks as if someone had squeezed it right down.

When clean of live creatures, the baby's ear does look indeed like the outline of a human ear. It is even flesh colored in some instances, but usually is more of a white color.

During the latter part of January when the Islands suffered a combination of heavy storms and red tide, one of my shelling groups picked up over a dozen recently dead baby's ears in one small section of beach. They had been the victims of either the large waves or the red tide, but they did wash in and that's by far the most I've ever found at one outing.

None of the moon snails are rare in the sense that they are worth a great deal of money. Actually very few of our shells would make you even pocket change - that's not what shelling is all about. But, when you do find a good shark's eye, natica or baby's ear, you know that you have added something valuable to your display.

Incidentally, moon snails move over the sea floor on a foot of flesh that nearly resembles a magic carpet. They capture and then drill into the hapless clam, then move on, looking for another meal. Good shelling this week, and look for those moon snails.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Island. Call 472-3459 for information.

We know how islanders like to bank:

not fancy...just friendly.

After all, we've been dealing with islanders since we started so we're used to what they like. First, they like to get their banking done quickly so they get back to enjoying their island. Then they like to know they're getting their money's worth. And most important they like things friendly and relaxed with no big city stuffiness.

That's the way we like things, too. So, if you haven't gotten to know us yet, we hope you'll stop by, relax with us for a few minutes and get acquainted. Then maybe we can do some business.

As Peter Burns begins his career, The Islander portrait is the first time he has been featured in a story wholly about him. But before Burns is through, he may well be written up in Fortune or Forbes or The Wall Street Journal.

The 25-year-old Yankee grew up in New Canaan, Conn. His early interest in business was in part kindled by his father, who was a management executive for two New York advertising agencies, Doyle, Dane, Bernbach, and Ogilvy-Mather.

Burns attended West Point Prep in New Jersey and spent one year at the University of Virginia. While at UVa, Burns undertook a project that was so successful he left school to pursue his project full time.

The project? Island Moped, a bicycle-moped rental agency.

In addition to the Sanibel business on Periwinkle Way, Burns' Island Moped shops are in Nantucket, Mass.; Newport, R.I.; St. Simon's Island, Ga.; and Panama City Beach in northern Florida.

"I'm very pro-business and happy we have another strong leader," the young businessman says, adding that he is "quite Republican. "Sometimes you have to trim the fat so the animal can live. I think that's what's being done."

He says his favorite politician is Vice President George Bush, "because he's a team player." He admires, as well, Sen. Harry Byrd Jr. of Virginia.

Burns maintains the main thing about business is to be creative with ideas. "Once you get the idea, the rest is pretty easy," he says. "I certainly admire raw intelligence in people - creativity, the ability to come up with new ideas.

"I know you it's true that you can't make any money working for other people," he adds. "If you own a business, you don't have to put up with petty office politics and abuse like a wage-earner. You have an entirely different set of problems."

Burns knows how hard it is to find good people to employ; therefore, he wants to treat his employees well so they will stay.

"My least-paid employee makes $5.00 an hour," he explains. "So I really don't have a comment on the minimum wage. I offer my managers a percentage of the gross profits, too."

I want to keep my people," he says. "I know it is as hard to find a good employer as it is to find a good employee." On March 20 Burns will marry Wendy Wood, who is a native of a small town near Dayton, Ohio. Wendy, who is an identical twin, attended the University of Colorado and hopes to eventually open a store selling classic clothing and shoes here on Sanibel.

For their wedding trip the couple plan travels to London, Lake Como in Italy, northward to the Riviera, and ending in Paris.

One of Burns' current projects in the works is "Video Watchguard" -- a service that supplies videotaped records of people's belongings -- all of them, front and back -- for identification purposes in the event the items are stolen. The tapes will help eliminate the difficulty of proving one actually owned the items, Burns says. Another idea, almost fully hatched, is "Military Moped" -- moped rental shops on or near military bases.

Distant future possibilities for Burns include politics. "I've got to pick a state to have as a base," he says. "Of course, I'd run as a Republican."

Burns says money is "only a yardstick. It's mainly valuable for the freedom it gives you to do such things as travel.

"If I were running things," he says, "I'd let small businesses participate in a more vocal manner. So few people realize that even today, small businesses employ 40 percent more people than big business does."

In his spare time, Burns reads business magazines and some novels, "including junk." He likes Harold Robbins and the more literary Jerzy Koszinski.

Burns' future looks, understatedly, bright. "But there is one thing about which I'm at a disadvantage," he concludes. "I'm starting at the top. People look forward to retiring to Sanibel and Captiva all their lives.

"It would take some doing to find a place as beautiful and charming as this. I may not even try."

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

Someone recently suggested that, as a service to our many visitors, I do a series of articles (à la Ferdinand LeBoeuf) on all the Happy Hours in all of Sanibel's lounges.

Alas, my capacity for liquor is not at all commensurate with my predilection for hors d'oeuvres. Thus, I reluctantly concluded that such an undertaking would render me too besotted to compose coherent comments on the subject.

Visitors frequently ask, "Where do the natives go to unwind and have a good time?" If by "natives" our visitors mean Island residents (as opposed to the Calusa Indians,) then many Islanders would recommend Happy Hour at the Coconut Grove lounge.

Every day except Sunday the Coconut Grove lounge offers its faithful patrons and visitors a variety of free hors d'oeuvres coupled with generous chunks of cheese and crackers. The chafing dish may be filled with large meatballs in a sweet and sour sauce, or crisp egg rolls, or mini pizzas, or popcorn shrimp, or fried zucchini, or some other tasty treat. Those who are still hungry, or those who prefer to nibble, can always dip their bowls into the popcorn machine.

Once seated in the lounge, visitors soon realize that this is indeed a favorite Island watering hole. Local customers, rather than the décor, create a warm, friendly atmosphere.

People from all walks of life patronize the lounge, and Happy Hour presents a microcosm of those who live and work on the Island. Bailey's employees, real estate salesmen, local shopkeepers, postal employees, retired citizens, local politicians, the "men's night" tennis buffs, city employees, families with young children in tow, visitors to the Island -- all flock to Happy Hour at the Coconut Grove.

On Friday nights, however, the lounge is the scene of a Happy Hour Extraordinaire. From 4-7, Chef Arthur Leanos presides over a table laden with a hot roast beef (or roast pork, or a ham) mounds of bread, a bowl of cheese chunks, mayonnaise, horseradish and butter. Voracious customers prepare their sandwiches, and Chef Arthur carves generous slices of hot meat for them.

As soon as one roast has been demolished, another immediately appears. Tom Loughney, manager of the Coconut Grove, estimates that on Friday nights the lounge serves some 250-300 customers, who devour at least three or four large roasts.

Chef Arthur is not at all dismayed; on the contrary, he greets everyone and even finds time to deliver plates piled high with food to friends and acquaintances at nearby tables.

Amid all the rather boisterous, but never rowdy, good cheer, the waitresses skillfully maneuver around the tables bearing trays of drinks. They know their regular customers well and remember precisely what each one prefers to imbibe.

The Friday Happy Hour Extraordinaire at the Coconut Grove lounge clearly rates four stars on all counts: food, service, reasonably-priced drinks and local atmosphere. In fact, I have but one complaint. The Coconut Grove restaurant also celebrates "Greek Night" on Fridays. How can anyone possibly cope with Chef Arthur's copious portions in the lounge and still have room for a choice of some half a dozen authentic (and reasonably priced) Greek entrées in the restaurant?

Regular patrons will be sad to learn that, after some 10 years at the Coconut Grove, Chef Arthur will soon be leaving to join the Sanibel police force. (We may note an alteration in the waistlines of Sanibel's finest!)

However, owners John and Bella Kontinos have every intention of continuing the traditions of Happy Hours in the lounge and fine food in the restaurant. 1982 marks the 25th anniversary of the Coconut Grove -- no mean feat on Sanibel Island! May the Kontinos family continue to say, "Kalos Orisate!" (Welcome!) to their guests for at least another 25 years.

LIBRARY REPORT

By Harriet Howe

Stranger from the Sea by Winston Graham - If you had the feeling the last book of the Poldark Saga had a rather indefinite ending, perhaps the reason was that the saga hadn't ended.

Here is a new Poldark story taking place during the war with the French. Jeremy, now a young man, rescues from the sea Stephen Carrington, a rather enigmatic young man who falls in love with Jeremy's sister, Clowance.

Clowance has other admirers and seems unable to make up her mind. Jeremy, having fallen in love and been rejected, focuses his energies on reopening the Wheal Leisure mine and developing a steamdriven pump. George Warleggan is up to his old tricks; the King becomes permanently insane and Priny becomes Regent.

The characters of the previous books are here and new ones are introduced. This is an engrossing story, and one is convinced at its conclusion that there is more to come.

Caroline and Julie by Clare Darcy - Another of the author's lively tales set in the Regency period. After her mother's death, Caroline Devereaux, of good family but penniless, finds her way to Long to seek help from Julia Daventry, a school-girl friend of her mother.

Julia, widowed and an actress, has a large coterie of admirers, among whom is Neville Devereaux, who turns out to be Caroline's cousin and takes her under his wing. Caroline's Great Uncle Chandos, a very wealthy man, has died but no will can be found. His country estate is in the possession of his greedy sister-in-law and her equally greedy son, Sidney.

There are the usual heroes and villains; the ups and downs of Julia's romance with Neville; the stilted manners of the time, and Caroline's romance with Lord Redvers. A pleasant romantic novel with a refreshing lack of emphasis on sex and violence.

Solo Practice by Elizabeth Morgan, M.D. - In this, her second book, the author after a long apprenticeship is, at 31, an accomplished plastic surgeon and sets about the complexities of setting up in private practice.

She describes in detail her first year as a private practitioner in which she becomes so busy with referrals and emergency room duty (which was required in exchange for the privilege of using the hospital operating room) that she found she was becoming "an overworked, irritable surgeon, too busy to be a good doctor and with no time to be a real person." It is an interesting story and a candid look at medical practice today.

Books about law can be checked out, read at home

By Mildred Chamberlin
Reference Librarian
Sanibel Public Library

Continuing last week's column on law books, this week we will discuss similar books in the circulating collection of the Public Library. These books may be borrowed for a two-week period.

Weinerman, Chester S. Practical Law - A layperson's handbook. Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 1978 (340.0973)

Although this book is not intended to take the place of a lawyer, there is much information helpful to the average person encountering legal problems. Such questions as: Am I negligent if someone slips on a skateboard on my porch and breaks a leg? What can I do if I've been unfairly denied credit because of my sex? What is involved in going to court? are answered in a direct concise manner.

This is a useful ready reference guide. The author is a practicing attorney and lecturer in law in the Boston area.

Striker, John M. & Andrew O. Shapiro. How You Can Sue Without Hiring a Lawyer - A guide to winning in Small Claims Court. Simon & Schuster, N.Y. (347.73)

Such questions as when to be your own lawyer (And when not to be); who and when to sue; how to negotiate a settlement; and how to prepare for trial are answered clearly and in great detail. Situations that are not worth hiring a lawyer for but that are eligible for constructive and profitable action in a small claims court are described. Innumerable cases are cited and step-by-step procedures shown. It gives a person confidence to stand up for his rights and shows him how to do it.

Other Floridians' Handbook - Laws and programs affecting older Floridians. A production of the Florida Justice Institute and the Florida Bar through the special Committee on the Elderly, 1980 (340).

Although this booklet was published to provide useful legal information to those over 60 years of age in Florida, it is not limited to that age group. It is an easy reference source for persons of all ages with emphasis on older Floridians.

The information is general in nature and answers some of the more common questions. It does not replace the advice of an attorney. The broad subject of financial assistance cover such subjects as the food stamp program, social security benefits, pensions and tax relief.

Medicare, Medicaid and nursing homes are treated in the health care area. Such subjects as Landlord-tenant relations, wills and estate planning, real estate transfers, consumer guide and age discrimination in employment are adequately discussed. A detailed list of agencies throughout the state that provide countless services to the elderly is included.

Miller, Arthur R. Miller's Court -- Discover how the law works and what it means for you. Houghton Mifflin, Boston, 1982 (347.3).

The well-known television personality, author of over 25 books and professor of law at Harvard Law School, presents many situations illustrating how the law affects our lives. He successfully clarifies what seems to the layman a complicated subject. Freedoms and rights covering the right of privacy, school prayer, free expression; Law and order covering self-defense, sports violence, the death penalty; agreements and relationships covering job contracts, products liability, living together, landlord and tenant; and life and death covering the right to die, abortion and genetic engineering are among the subjects covered in a stimulating and thought-provoking manner.

Marks, Marlene A. Suing of America: Why and how we take each other to Court. Seaview Books, N. Y. 1981 (347.73).

We sue to protest, to express grief, to effect social and political changes, to gain vindication, to get money and to get even. It is estimated that one out of two Americans will sue someone during his lifetime. This book describes actual cases, some famous, some relatively unknown.

In this age when lawsuits are so prevalent this is an enlightening commentary by a Los Angeles journalist specializing in law, the media and politics.

Johnson passes tests, joins designers society

Carrie Johnson, an associate of the Sanibel interior design firm kappy king cole and associates, was recently notified that she successfully completed testing procedures of the National Council of Interior Design Qualification to join the American Society of Interior Designers.

The first of the two-day testing session was devoted to a three-hour written segment consisting of questions covering technical information, business practices, modern design and the history of architecture and furniture.

The second day covered the practical solution of a complex problem involving the design of the top floor of a 10-story modern multiple use building. The difficulty of the problem lay in the fact that the fictional client was a professional lobbyist for the handicapped and was confined to a wheelchair himself.

Johnson, formerly an ASID associate, passed the test in her initial attempt. She exceeded the American Society of Interior Designers' requirement for eight years of practical design experience prior to application for professional membership.

Johnson is the daughter of Kappy King Cole, ASID, and is married to Stuart Johnson.

Kayakers set worldly goal is 5,427 miles and at least a year away in Baja, Calif.

The journey won't end there, however, as the two plan to continue up the coast of California to the Pacific Northwest, then north to Alaska, across the Bering Strait to Russia, Asia, Japan, China, India, on to Egypt, Africa, Greece, Italy, through the Rhone River of Germany, the Rhine River of Switzerland, on to the English Channel, then north to Norway, crossing the Atlantic Ocean to Iceland, Greenland and back to North America, where they say they'll return to Charleston.

Now, however, "It's one day at a time," says Craig, 23, who enlisted Rubino, 21, in the adventure after his original partner dropped out after 115 miles. "This is the biggest camping trip I've ever been on," said Rubino, a Connecticut native who studied geology at Boston University.

Their present and most pressing concern is to obtain sponsorship necessary to keep the trip afloat. With expenses of about $25 a day plus wear and tear on gear (they've broken two paddles so far), they are hard pressed to meet daily costs. "We run pretty close to broke," Craig said.

As the trip progresses, however, the two hope to pick up more press attention and, hopefully, a big sponsor to help finance the journey. "We're a walking, talking billboard. It's a product," said Craig, who is hoping sponsors will see the seriousness of their quest and get behind them. Right now their biggest sponsor is Folbot Corporation of Charleston, the manufacturer of their boat, which is a cross between a kayak and a canoe and is more seaworthy than either.

Along the way, Craig and Rubino have had a taste of celebrity treatment - they have the keys to the cities of Savannah and Brunswick, Ga.

Both Craig and Rubino find the adventure a challenge against the elements and are wary of the potency of mother nature. "It's a goal, a task, a challenge," Craig said.

Thus far, they say, the most beautiful section of their trip has been the crossing of Lake Okeechobee in central Florida. "It's beautiful there—so serene," Craig said. "It's beautiful here, too," he said about Sanibel. "Except for the traffic."

Craig and Rubino plan to leave Sanibel this week, paddling through Tarpon Bay and Pine Island Sound and onward to Captiva and Boca Grande. By the time they hit the Tampa-St. Petersburg area, they hope to have attracted more attention to the seriousness of their adventure.

But for now, "Every mile that we make is a success in that we've never done it before," Craig said.

Persons wishing to contact the pair may do so by writing to World Wide Expedition, RR 1, Reinbeck, Iowa, 50669.

access to the beach area, nature trails, parking lots and fishing pier will continue.

To provide reasonable security Sanibel police will exercise jurisdiction over the property and Officer Mike Blackmore will occupy the three-bedroom residence.

The restrooms on the property will be kept open at least until the permanent agreement is drawn up, Murphy said.

The present sewage treatment plant is not adequate for the volume and, Murphy said, "ultimately will be shut down and a new facility constructed at a new location near the beach parking area."

Council members were shocked to learn that the primary treated effluent is disposed of in open ditches on the property. Mayor

Porter Goss and Councilmen Mike Klein and Fred Valtin urged that improvements to the sewage treatment plant and restroom facility be made as "quickly as possible."

"We can't be a party to continuing such an obvious environmental horror," Goss said.

Murphy said there are no funds currently available to replace the restrooms. "Monies are in the budget for operation and maintenance of the recreational area," he said. "But there is nothing for capital outlay."

In a letter to Murphy outlining temporary arrangements for the city's takeover, Coast Guard Capt. R. C. Nichols emphasized that, "Any dollar or manpower costs associated with the continued operation of the restrooms and sewage plant must be borne by the city."

Murphy said the Coast Guard has agreed to spend $50,000 to put the Lighthouse in first class condition.

All costs associated with keeping the property open to the public including liability for claims arising from theft, loss, injury or death are the city's responsibility and will be covered under a binder by the city's current insurance carrier.

Since 1979 the city of Sanibel has expressed interest in acquiring the Lighthouse property to insure its continued use as a public recreational area.

Murphy said Building Officer George Blain has inspected the fishing pier and judged it in good shape. "Blain estimates that with proper maintenance the pier should have a life of 15 to 20 years," Murphy said.

Signs are being posted to notify the public that the Lighthouse recreational area is now under the city's jurisdiction, Murphy said.

Police Chief John Butler said as of Monday the area would be included in the Police Department's regular patrol.

One of the Coast Guard's major concerns is that the historic buildings on the site are protected from vandalism.

"I feel certain that having a police officer in residence will go a long way toward solving this difficult problem to our mutual satisfaction," Capt. Nichols wrote Murphy.

housing, on the commercial site as recommended in the report.

"To keep in compliance with performance standards, two or three BMRH units may be the maximum that can be accommodated," Planning Director Bruce Rogers said.

But it was council consensus that the opportunity for BMR housing be retained in the Paulsen development with the number of units controlled by performance standards.

City Manager Bernie Murphy pointed out that the $6,000 estimate of the yearly expense to the city to provide traffic control when needed at the Periwinkle Way-Casa Ybel Road intersection was "two years old and archaic."

Fenton said $6,000 annually was the top line that would be acceptable to Paulsen. And the council agreed with Goss that "$6,000 a year forever" should be adequate to keep traffic flowing on Periwinkle Way.

Paulsen also agreed to provide a 1,000-square-foot area, not included in the 41,000-square-foot of shopping center, solely designated as an emergency hurricane refuge and constructed in compliance with specifications for the refuge planned for the new City Hall.

Council-watcher Alice Kylo warned that approval of the center would "set a precedent that will bounce all the way down Periwinkle Way, which will become one continuing black top parking lot."

"There goes our jungle, there goes our forest, there goes our Island," Kylo said.

Sanibel's musical Banyan tree and other Fig tree lore

Strangler fig

Ann Winterbotham

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Growing on the 204-acre Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation's reserve area is a most remarkable tree. It is a Strangler Fig, Ficus aurea, which, demonstrating what I call the Banyan Habit, has employed its adventitious roots to "walk" away from its main trunk.

These harp-string roots can be plucked (carefully, please! Don't pull too hard!), and incredible as it may seem, musical tones are discernable. In wet weather the strings tighten and produce an even better sound.

I can visualize a foundation fund-raiser: the audience is seated in the rain around the tree; accompaniment is provided by bull fiddle and drums; and, of course, there is a harpist to play the tree. We might even make a successful recording. Look what Roger Payne managed with the Whale Songs. Egad! what an idea, and here it is for the plucking.

The details of this remarkable tree, which is here and now named the Harpo Marx Tree (everybody should have a living memorial) is beautifully drawn by Ann Winterbotham and reproduced on this page.

The Strangler Fig fruits abundantly on Sanibel and the figs are really delicious. Eat them when red (almost ripe) or dark reddish-brown or black (fully ripe). They are as good as commercial figs, but smaller of course. They ripen at odd times. One tree can be full of fruit in February, another in May, yet another in September. Microhabitat differences are responsible for this erratic behavior, I believe.

The Strangler Fig usually starts when a bird, having extracted all possible nourishment from a fruit, expels a viable seed into the boot or petiole axil of a Sabal palmetto, the Cabbage Palm, Florida's State Tree.

With luck, the seed will germinate, perhaps one, five, or 10 feet above the ground. The seedling sends roots right down the trunk to the ground, displaying what is called positive geotropism.

The leaf-bearing branch will grow upward, seeking light. In due course the palm may be completely surrounded by fig tissue -- root and stem -- and I believe both benefit from the association, for together they form a durable unit more easily surviving natural extremes such as hurricanes than if they were separate.

Some suggest, and you see this frequently written, that the seedling is a parasite on the palm. This is not true, for it grows on the palm epiphytically, deriving only support. There is no nourishment derived by the seedling fig as would be the case in true parasitism.

An example of the latter is Mistletoe, which penetrates the host plant and has an actual vascular connection with it through which nutrients pass from the host to the Mistletoe. Epiphytic plants such as seedling Strangler Figs (and orchids and bromeliads too) have no such parasitic connection with the host.

Sometimes a Strangler Fig grows so large that it completely engulfs the Sabal palmetto. I have seen such a great Fig tree in the crown of which may be seen a few green palm fronds almost hidden.

Perhaps some of the great freestanding Strangler Figs such as the giant on West Gulf Drive may have, at one time, been associated with a Sabal that has long since died out. I don't feel that recognition of such a possibility contravenes my earlier proposal that the two species in combination both benefit. For after all, such a palm would probably have reached reproductive size and produced a few thousand seeds before being overwhelmed by the Fig -- so its destiny, reproduction, would have been realized.

Thomas A. Edison studied many plants in an effort to free the United States from dependence on foreign rubber. Foreign rubber was of two principal kinds. First, India Rubber, Ficus elastica (the same Rubber Plant you see in your doctor's waiting room); and later, after the British had stolen it from the Brazilians, Hevea brasiliensis, the principal natural rubber grown today.

Among the rubber plants Edison studied was Ficus aurea. Break a leaf and see the latex for yourself. It is great for affixing a glueless stamp.

When synthetic rubber came along, Edison slowed his effort, thinking that the desirability of natural rubber of U.S. origin was now a less important goal. Of course he could not have foreseen a world dominated by OPEC and could not have forecasted the eventuality that petroleum-based synthetic rubber would be as big a balance of payments and strategic problem as was Malayan and Indonesian natural.

Ficus aurea

Ann Winterbotham

This problem is now recognized and Edison's notes are being reviewed and some of his rubber plant experiments are being revived. Who knows? Perhaps his early research on U.S.-grown natural rubber will come to fruition some day soon.

Aside from all other values, Ficus aurea offers many beautiful natural sculptures. As you move about the Island, seek out these exquisite beauties. There are many fine examples -- one of the most intriguing is the giant "hand" on a gracefully-sculptured wrist to be found in front of the Timbers Restaurant, Helmut Schmidt's favorite Sanibel dining place.

Fig reproduction is complex and interesting. It will be the subject of a future discussion of this fascinating group of plants.

Federal officials address crowd at opening of Visitors Center

By Peggy Dailey

Those gathered for the ceremonial ribbon-cutting opening the Ding Darling Center at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge last Tuesday were told by Ray Arnett, the assistant secretary of Fish and Wildlife in the U.S. Department of the Interior, that Darling "taught us an awful lot" and that, "Conservation does work - in theory, in practice and in the power of the American spirit."

The center and the refuge, Arnett said, are for young and old and in-between, for the casual visitor and the seasoned conservationist.

Seventeen original drawings, many of them of ducks, and some cartoons by Ding, together with some of the objects from his office are on display at the new center. Among the original Darling works is the "So long it's been good to know you," cartoon drawn by Ding during his last illness in a St. Paul hospital. The cartoon appeared in The Des Moines Register on Feb. 13, 1962, the morning after Ding's death.

Also in attendance at the ceremony, along with virtually every local elected official

(the City Council adjourned for the dedication) and Sanibel personality, was James Pulliam, regional director of the Southeastern Fish and Wildlife Service and all the southeastern refuges.

Afterwards, Pulliam, who is a personal friend of the controversial Secretary of the Interior James Watt, said he did not think impending budget cuts would hurt refuges.

What the secretary wants, Pulliam said, is a greater balance between environmentalist interests and development interests. As for the recent changes in "threatened" and "endangered" lists, Pulliam said the taking off and adding of names is a constant process.

Arnett said, "Through his pen, Ding made wildlife conservation an issue for the federal government. In and of themselves, these are just buildings. They can't save a plant or animal.

"But they can gently remind us that the life forms we share the planet with are worthy of respect," he added.

A biographical sketch of J.N. "Ding" Darling (1876-1962) follows on this page.

Captivans remember J.N. 'Ding' Darling

By Peggy Dailey

J. Norwood "Ding" Darling, syndicated cartoonist and nature-lover, has been dead for 20 years. He visited Sanibel until at least 1954, and there are many Islanders who still remember him.

Two of those people are Mr. and Mrs. James Gray of Captiva. The Grays, natives of Stamford, Conn., were kind enough to share their memories of Darling with The Islander.

Darling was born in Michigan in 1876 or 1877 and went to Beloit College in Beloit, Wis.

He worked for a paper in Sioux City, Ia., as a cartoonist, and then switched to the famous Des Moines Register. He was a political liberal and an ecologist before there was ecology. In 1923 and again in 1942, he received the Pulitzer Prize.

He and his wife, Penny, had a daughter, Mary, and a son, John, who spent his life in some type of nursing home. Mary died in the summer of 1981.

"He was here on Captiva staying at Tween Waters when I came here in the summer of 1944," Mrs. Gray remembers. "He always stayed in the front cottage."

Gray remembers Darling as "anything but fake - he was wholly absorbed in nature wherever he found it.

"You know, he belonged to the aristocrats of his field, like Roland Kirby," Gray says. "He would get utterly disgusted when the government would do things like drain a swamp and destroy the living places there and then let the water flood some dry area and kill the animals there, too."

Penny Darling, says Mrs. Gray, "was chubby and chunky and dimply. She was short. She had a kind of reputation as a goofy girl. But she played bridge.

"Ding didn't play," she adds. "But at the first rubber I ever played with Penny, Ding came in with a plate of the most delicious smoked fish. He and Belton Johnson had come up with some kind of machine that smoked one fish at a time. They were very good."

Ding, whom the Grays say never had to worry about money, once built Penny a house on pilings, now called the "Fish House," as a surprise for her birthday.

"She was indeed surprised," Gray remembers. "She went in that night, spent one night there, went out the next morning and never would go back in it. So he eventually sold it.

"As far as I know, they always stayed at Tween Waters. I know they were here in 1952, 1953 and 1954," he adds. "He may have gotten disgusted with the way the Islands were going, but he did not say so.

Darling's wife, according to the Grays, was a "city person" who loved to go shopping in metropolitan areas. She loved clothes and especially shoes.

Ding was not a "nature boy" type in the way he dressed, either, according to his friends. He wore three-piece suits most of the time and had a "dignified aloofness."

"He was certainly not a 'hail fellow well met' type of person," Gray says.

Darling was a voracious reader. The first contact Gray had with Darling was when Darling wrote Gray a fan letter after Gray wrote a book on the history of the University of Minnesota.

He read and wrote for magazines like The Nation and The New Republic, Gray says. "He was very much in earnest - a serious reader."

Darling may have tried to cultivate a reputation as a bon vivant at parties, but his basic nature was serious, according to Gray.

His close friends included Mr. and Mrs. "Pin" Parker Miller, who managed a store he built; Phoebe Peabody, an early real estate dealer who was well into her 90's when she died recently; and Belton Johnson. Mrs. Miller lives at Shell Point Village. Johnson still lives on Captiva.

One day the Grays, the Darlings and a mutual friend, Alice O'Brien, were in northern Florida having dinner at a lumber camp near Cross City.

They were served squirrel stew. The squirrels were considered a great delicacy, but they were served with their heads "whole." "The eyes were all there - they would have been very hard for me to eat," Mrs. Gray remembers. But Ding emptied his plate. However, upon Mrs. Gray's congratulating him in the car afterward at what a "hero" he was, Darling pulled the squirrels, heads and all, out of his pocket, she laughs.

Gray says Darling never mentioned God. "I imagine he just worshipped in his own way - seeing God through nature, in the woods."

The tale of Captiva river otter makes Readers' Digest

By Cindy Chalmers

A year ago in December, Captivans Laura and Bill Riley adopted an orphaned baby river otter. This month, the touching story of the Riley's and "Jenny" appears in Readers' Digest.

First found on the side of the road by Eugenia Loughney (hence, the otter's name), Jenny was not injured but was weak and emaciated and weighed only three pounds. The Riley's immediately rushed the tiny creature to CROW's Holly Davies and Vicci Dwyer.

Holly concocted a stew of fish, cat chow and liquid protein that Jenny eagerly devoured. A few days later she was released to the care of the Riley's, who took her to Catbird Landing, their winter home on Captiva.

"We were sort of a halfway house for Jenny," Bill Riley said last week from his home. "(Holly and Vicci) didn't feel she needed to be caged for her recuperation, but Jenny wasn't ready to go on her own in the wild, either.

"At our place she had a house in the wild plus someone to watch her" as she gained strength and learned to forage and fend for herself, he said. The pond behind the Riley's cottage became Jenny's own.

Bill and Laura knew the risks of dogs, alligators or eagles attacking their unsuspecting Jenny. But they agreed that if she were ever to survive in the wild, Jenny must become imprinted by her natural surroundings.

"It was tempting to make a pet of her," Laura wrote in her story. "But few things are sadder than to see wild animals condemned to a dispirited half-life as captives. We wanted better for Jenny."

For five months the Riley's watched with amusement and delight as Jenny clearly exhibited the dexterity and cleverness necessary for her survival in the wild. A distinct personality emerged, too.

"Her favorite (toy) was a hawk feather. She nosed it about in the water, took it to her grotto, brought it out and dried it in the sun - after which it floated and tossed to much better effect," Laura wrote.

One day, Laura wrote, Jenny laid the feather at her feet. "I threw it aside, but a few minutes later she brought it back. The message was touchingly clear: 'This is for you.'"

Though she would have loved to do so, Laura took pains not to pick Jenny up or talk to her affectionately.

By the time spring arrived and it was time for Laura and

Bill to return to their summer home near Pittstown, N.J., Jenny had doubled in size and was supporting herself by feeding on insects, minnows and frogs. The Riley's felt sure she could survive on her own.

Two months later, however, the story came to an unhappy ending. Holly Davies found Jenny floating in the pond, dead. An autopsy showed she had been bitten through the neck by a predator, Holly wrote the Riley's.

Should the Riley's have raised Jenny differently, been more cosseting? Laura wondered. No, she concluded, "Wild animals are often fated to die violently. It is the price of freedom in nature."

Laura said the return to Captiva this year was difficult for the Riley's even though they had known for months that Jenny would not be in the pond or under the cottage.

"It hit me when I saw the pond for the first time," she said. "Jenny was quite a memorable experience for us."

Bill Riley agreed with his wife that Jenny was the "most outstanding" of all the creatures they have adopted for one reason for another. "We've had weasels and opossums in New Jersey," he said. "But nothing like Jenny."

Audubon Society sponsors contest for scholarships

Five summer camp scholarships will be awarded to Sanibel-Captiva winners of an environment-oriented essay contest announced this week by Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society President Bud Ryckman.

The scholarships will be provided from a special fund established through private donations to the society. They will give the winners a full week of exploration and tutelage at either the Blackwater River or the Withlacoochee State Forest environmental center operated by the Division of Forestry of the Florida Department of Agriculture.

The essay contest is open to all resident Sanibel-Captiva students who have completed the sixth grade but have not yet entered grade 12.

"The Audubon Society is looking for young people who share our concern for the natural environment," Ryckman said. He added that, "The essay project is only the beginning of a long-range audubon program aimed at preserving the natural treasures of our Islands through enhancing the talents and sharpening the skills of our own young people."

The camps are located in two of Florida's most scenic wilderness areas -- Withlacoochee center is situated about 50 miles north of Tampa west of U.S. 41 in a state forest encompassing 113,000 acres; the Black River center is about 45 miles northeast of Pensacola in the heart of a 183,000-acre state forest noted for its clear streams and unspoiled beauty.

Those campers who are judged to have learned the most from the week's experience will win another free week of advanced study and outdoor living.

The instruction periods will emphasize seven subjects: soil, water, air, plant communities, wildlife, land use planning, water safety and wilderness survival. Any one or more of these subjects would be suitable for the scholarship essays. Entries should not exceed 500 words in length including a simple statement of the contestant's reasons for seeking one of the scholarships.

Entries should be submitted by Monday, March 28, to the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, P.O. Box 957, Sanibel, FL 33957.

Winners of the contest will be announced at the annual meeting of the society at the Sanibel Community Association hall on Thursday, April 1, at 8 p.m.

For additional information, applicants may call Ryckman, 472-2089, or Lorimer Moe, 472-4408.

SCCF plan needs funds to acquire wetlands

By Peggy Dailey

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation's EPIC (Eighties Plan for Island Conservation) committee needs donations to establish an endowment fund and acquire additional wetlands.

The committee includes Chairman Rose Rogers, Vice Chairman Malcolm Beattie, George Tenney, Cal Aurand and Mayor Porter Goss.

"We do keep trying and we need the money to keep on buying," Beattie said last week.

The last acquisition of wetlands was a donation by the Bailey brothers and their aunt, Miss Charlotta Matthews, who donated a 1 1/2-acre parcel along the Sanibel River near Beach Road.

Tenney explained, "The establishment of an endowment fund is to give the SCCF some financial stability in the future."

Goss commented, "Organizations like ours get money from several places -- dues, government grants, and so on. We'll be building a capital asset to earn money so the SCCF can continue to do projects it chooses. It's like working capital."

"And under the present economy drive," Goss continued, "Many educational and cultural and environmental organizations will have more work to do and less money to do it with."

The members said "the catch-all phrase" of their purpose and the purpose of the foundation is "the mitigation of human pollution."

Tenney said, "For example, if all the wetlands were paved over, Sanibel would be a desert. They are tanks for freshwater storage."

"Take, for example, Palm Ridge Lake," Goss said. "In 1977 it was rich with shellfish. They're all gone now. Drainage from man's enterprises is a shock to the ecosystem."

Goss also emphasized the importance of education and used mangroves as an example. "For many years there were a lot of people on the Islands who didn't see any value in mangroves at all," he said. "But then people began to see the benefits to our area."

Foskett featured at Photographers' Gallery Friday

Break Your Mold -- The Creative Impulse will be Island photographer Maggie Foskett's subject this Friday, March 12, at The Photographers' Gallery as part of the gallery's Friday night cultural series. Foskett's program will begin at 7 p.m.

"Everyone has a streak of creativity," says Foskett, an oft exhibited photographer. She will display selected images from her ongoing show, Shape and Space, which is at the Florida Federal Savings and Loan in Fort Myers. Foskett will describe how she arrived at both the conceptual images in the exhibition and the actual photograph.

In Shape and Space Foskett turned to figure studies in protest against the current trend in the media to use both male and female forms for the sale of commercial products.

"I feel we have lost the ability to see the simplicity and sculptural power of human anatomy," the photographer says. "Moreover, we are mortal and imperfect, with sweat glands, mosquito bites and hair that does not always bounce."

Other Foskett exhibitions include Color in a Dark Room at The Photographers' Gallery in 1980 and recent exhibitions at The Art Institute of Chicago and the Chicago Public Library.

Master Pieces shown at Gallery

The works of eight internationally known artists who worked mainly in the 1920's, '30's and '40's opened at The Photographers' Gallery on Sunday, Feb. 28.

Master Pieces includes the works of Imogen Cunningham, Berenice Abbott, Lisette Model, Lotte Jacobi, Yousuf Karsh, Wynn Bullock, Walker Evans and Man Ray.

The Photographers' Gallery wishes to thank Harry Lunn, Dayne Bonta and Robert Rauschenberg for their assistance in establishing Master Pieces.

The gallery is a non-profit, educational institution at 1554 Periwinkle Way. Hours are from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Art League plans annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Art League will be held at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 18, at the Sanibel Community Building.

Art League members may exhibit one painting, framed or matted. Please bring exhibit to the Community Building between 8:30 a.m. and noon on March 18. Mary Faulkner will be the speaker at 2 p.m. Come and bring a friend.

Images '82 opens at ECC

IMAGES '82, an exhibition of work by faculty and students at Edison Community College, opened Saturday, March 6, in Gallery E at the college.

The show is an annual exhibition at the college and offers an opportunity to display the most recent works of the ECC students and instructors. The work of several ECC students and faculty was on display in the Capital in Tallahassee celebrating the 25th anniversary of the community college system in Florida.

CableVision prepared for sun outage

Sanibel and Captiva are approaching a sun outage period during which degradation or loss of satellite signal will occur, according to representatives of CableVision of the Islands. Sun outages occur every year in the spring and fall and are beyond anyone's control.

The exact number of days, outage of duration and timing depends on the geographic location of the earth receiving station. The duration and severity of the outages will vary each day but will be minimum at the beginning and the end of the outage period and maximum at mid-span.

This spring's outage period is from six to nine consecutive days between March 1 and 12. The outages will last from one to nine minutes and will occur at 4:05 Eastern Standard Time (plus or minus 15 minutes).

Soprano Niedung, pianist Vanderschaff perform Sunday at Community Center

The Barrier Island Group for the Arts presents Helen Bovbjerg Niedung, soprano, and Dean Vanderschaff, piano, in a concert of arias and songs from opera, operetta and musicals at the Sanibel Community Center at 8 p.m. on Sunday, March 14.

The program will feature varied selections including Mozart's The Magic Flute, Gounod's Faust, Menotti's The Old Man and the Thief, Lehar's The Merry Widow, Romberg's New Moon and Herbert's melodies Sweethearts and Naughty Marietta.

Helen Bovbjerg Niedung was born in Washington, D.C. She began her formal musical training at the Peabody Institute of Music in Baltimore and continued at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where she received bachelor's and master's of music degrees and a performer's certificate in voice.

With a two-year German scholarship, she studied at the Music Conservatory in Stuttgart. This led to opera engagements as leading lyric soprano throughout Germany. Her many honors include receiving two Rockefeller grants for vocal study in Rome, Italy and in Germany; winning the International Voice Competition in Toulouse, France, and most recently, winning the First Annual Oratorio Soloists Competition for sopranos, sponsored by the New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. She will sing three performances of Mozart's Requiem with the orchestra under the baton of Philippe Entremont in May 1982.

In addition to opera and operetta, she has sung numerous concerts and recitals in Germany, Switzerland, Denmark and in the United States. Her many performances in the field of oratorio cover a large repertoire ranging from Bach to Verdi.

Local audiences have heard her in Handel's Messiah and Brahms' Requiem. Upon the death of her husband, Niedung returned to the United States in 1979 with her children, Konstanze and Kirsten. The family now lives with her parents in Cape Coral.

In addition to performing, Niedung teaches voice privately, is on the voice faculty of Edison Community College and is also Director of Music at the Edison Congregational Church, Fort Myers. She is currently serving a second term as president of the Fort Myers Music Teachers Association and vice president of Calusa Musicale of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Dean Vanderschaff is a native of Iowa. He earned a Bachelor of Music degree from Hope College in Holland, Mich., and a Master of Arts degree from the University of Iowa. From 1973 to 1980, he taught piano in the Washington, D. C., area and was the organist at the Unitarian Church of Arlington in Arlington, Va.

Vanderschaff now resides in Cape Coral, where he teaches piano and participates in numerous recitals. He is currently the organist at the Edison Congregational Church, Fort Myers.

Tropical Images, 1982 shown at Rafters

The Gallerie Laurens at the Rafters Mall invites you to view the Mary Ann Field art show Tropic Images, 1982 during regular gallery hours from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday through March 13.

Tropic Images, 1982 is composed of all new abstract expressionistic works that make statements in color and space.

The guests of honor will be Congressmen L.A. "Skip" Bafalis, Bill McCollum, Clay Shaw and Bill Young.

elcome to that special island known as Sanibel. To all of us it represents the best of what nature has to offer. To us it means keeping within the design of nature. At ferry landing we mean to lay man's mark very gently within the existing environment.

To be sure, ferry landing is intended only for those few who truly believe in Sanibel, in its special place in the sun and its extraordinary lifestyle. Simply, those who do not understand what our Island means will not be invited to live at ferry landing.

Created and overseen by Island architect Ray Fenton, the low density hamlet will be exactly that... low density. Less than a score of homes will be erected. It is designed in the style for which Mr. Fenton is noted.

Located on the Bay, within sight of the Lighthouse, ferry landing is being finalized now. And there will not be more than six buyers allowed, per year, to participate in this, the last of Sanibel's Bayfront residential enclaves.

Today would be a perfect day to lay your claim to this special involvement. Call for your appointment today. Tomorrow simply might be too late.

SCCF needs funds

herself," Tenney said. "People can do this in very simple ways. This morning (Monday, March 1) there were 14 dead terns on the Causeway—just because people drove too fast.

"Just the other day I was in the Ding Darling refuge by the end of the road where there is a kind of alligator rookery," he added. "There was a man with his pants legs rolled up and a butterfly net in his hand. He was going to go in the water to catch one of the baby alligators to take back to his grandson up North! There were several baby alligators there. Now, you know their mother wasn't far away. Can you imagine something like that?"

The ongoing battle, Goss said, is between those who want to keep the Islands the way they are and those who want to change them. "And there are plenty of Lauderdals, but there is only one Sanibel," he said.

Information on the EPIC program is available at the Conservation Center on San-

Cap Road. The EPIC fund is in two parts; the EPIC 100 Club in which individuals, businesses or families can pledge a minimum of $5,000 in cash, stocks, land, or other property over five years or by bequest. Fifty percent of the funds will go into the endowment fund, and 50 percent will go toward acquiring environmentally sensitive land.

The EPIC program fund will supplement income from dues and other sources to provide protection and preservation of the Island environment by continuing present programs operating through the center.

All contributions are tax deductible and should be made payable to SCCF EPIC Fund and mailed to SCCF, P.O. Box S, Sanibel, FL 33957.

The SCCF now owns about 700 acres of environmentally sensitive wetlands, and the committee says there is about another 700 acres that they would like to acquire if they can obtain the necessary monies.

Henry W. Block

REASON #3: H&R Block's fair prices.
At H&R Block, our prices are based solely on the complexity of your return. So you can expect to pay less for the 1040A Short Form than for the more complicated 1040 Long Form.

What do you get when we prepare your taxes? A complete interview by a person specially trained in the new tax laws. And a return that's double-checked for accuracy.

How much will your fee be? Call or visit a nearby H&R Block office and we'll be happy to give you an estimate. One thing is certain, H&R Block gives good value. That's why millions of our customers come back year after year.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Limited Edition, American Craft Gallery, 30 Periwinkle Place, (472-6800). Open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along Periwinkle Way. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights. Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy. At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island

Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride at Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" x 24" x 12" deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets. For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.
